All organisations need to fulfil their statutory financial duties which include ensuring that income and expenditure is in balance. Where there are local agreements to create a financial reserve fund, the SHA will also ensure these agreements are fair.

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether guidance has been issued to London health organisations seeking financial support under the financial recovery plan on (a) the actions they must take and (b) the consequences of not complying. [69535]

Andy Burnham: The planning framework for the national health service is set out in National Standards Local Action which was issued in July 2004 and covers the period 2005-06 to 2007-08. The Department has issued specific guidance for 2006-07 called "The Operating Framework for 2006-07" and a follow up letter from the Acting Chief Executive of the NHS was issued on 10 May. There has been no specific guidance to organisations in London from the Department.

Palliative Care

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the future of palliative care services at the Frenchay site of North Bristol NHS Trust. [70985]

Caroline Flint: Avon, Gloucestershire and Wiltshire strategic health authority reports that the plans for the redevelopment of the Frenchay site as a community hospital include the retention of the present unit for palliative care.

Primary care trusts are responsible for commissioning and funding services for their resident population, including palliative care. We have set out in "Our health, our care, our say" a programme of action that will deliver increased choice to all patients at the end of life about where they are cared for. We will be working with key stakeholders in taking this forward.

Patient Packs

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she has taken to establish a means of standardising patient packs; and if she will make a statement. [68040]

Andy Burnham: We are not convinced that it is for the Government to tell manufacturers what pack sizes they should produce. Further, any European Community law implications of such a measure would need to be considered. In any event, standardisation of sizes of packs manufactured in the United Kingdom would not solve the problem of pack size variety, as packs imported from other European Union countries could be of any size.

A consultation on simplification of reimbursement arrangements for national health service dispensing contractors was issued last year. This included measures designed to further promote patient pack dispensing. We are currently considering responses to this consultation.

Pharmacy Contracts

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what (a) support and (b) guidance she has issued to pharmacists in Portsmouth to develop medicine utilisation reviews under the new pharmacy contract; and if she will make a statement. [68472]

Andy Burnham: This is a matter for determination by the local primary care trust (PCT) and I am advised there are a number of local initiatives under way or being developed.

The Department has issued national guidance to all PCTs on medicines use reviews (MURs), which PCTs may use in assisting pharmacists in the development of a successful MUR service. A patient information leaflet about the service has been made available to pharmacies, which will assist pharmacists in explaining the service to their patients.

Premature Births

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much her Department has spent on research into premature births in each year since 1996; and how much she plans to spend in each of the next five years. [62886]

Andy Burnham: The main agency through which the Government support medical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council (MRC). The MRC is an independent body funded by the Department of Trade and Industry via the Office of Science and Innovation.

The Department funds research to support policy and to provide the evidence needed to underpin quality improvement and service development in the national health service. The policy research programme in particular supports the national perinatal epidemiology unit. Much of the unit's work on the compromised foetus and baby focuses on or is linked to preterm birth.

Spend by the MRC on projects related to premature birth and by the Department's national research programmes is shown in the table.

[1]Not available.

Notes:

1. The full cost of several large cohort studies where the premature birth component of the study is relatively small is included in these figures. 2. Total national perinatal epidemiology unit funding and the part (2005-06) cost of one health technology assessment programme project.

In addition, the MRC supports a large portfolio of reproductive tract research and underpinning reproductive medicine and paediatric research.

Over 75 per cent. of the Department's total expenditure on health research is currently devolved to and managed by national health service organisations. Details of individual projects including a number concerned with premature birth are available on the national research register at www.dh.gov.uk/research.

The MRC and the Department plan to continue to invest in this area of research.

Prescription Charges

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements are in place for patients who are unable to pay for prescriptions but are not eligible for free prescriptions. [50449]

Andy Burnham: Those that do have to pay prescription charges may be entitled to help under the NHS Low Income Scheme. They can apply by completing an HC1 form. These are available from Jobcentre Plus offices or by phoning on 0845 850 1166.

Alternatively, people can purchase a four-month prescription pre-payment certificate which will save them money if they anticipate requiring more than five prescription items during the four months. A 12-month certificate is also cost-effective if the patient requires 14 items or more in a year.

Prescription Medicines

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the UK Government will encourage the European Commission to support changes in regulations to enable pharmaceutical companies to provide information directly to patients about prescription medicines; and if she will make a statement. [67953]

Andy Burnham: Clear and relevant information is vital if patients are to use medicines safely and effectively. The provision of information about medicines is a key to increasing appropriate access to, uptake of and safe use of medicines. It is also vital to support people in making informed choices about prescribed medicines with their health professional, which in turn improves patient compliance and health outcomes.

Under current United Kingdom (UK) and European law, pharmaceutical companies may already provide non-promotional information directly to patients and the public about prescription medicines. We do not consider that any changes to regulations are needed to facilitate this in the UK but are working with European colleagues to ensure there is a common understanding and application of European Union law.

Strattera

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research her Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into side effects of the drug Strattera; and if she will make a statement. [69394]

Andy Burnham: Clinical trials data submitted by the marketing authorisation holder (MAH) for Strattera (atomoxetine) was evaluated at the time of licensing to ensure that it met appropriate standards of safety, quality and efficacy to support its use in the treatment of attention deficit hyperactivity disorder (ADHD).

Since the marketing of Strattera, the Independent Scientific Advisory Committee, the Commission on Human Medicines (CHM), and the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) have kept its safety under close review. As new data have emerged, product information for prescribers and patients has been updated and advice has been issued.

In February 2006, the MHRA led a European review of the risks and benefits of Strattera and sought advice from the CHM and an expert working group whose membership included those with expertise in child and adolescent psychiatry and lay representation. Doctors and patients were informed of the following conclusions of this review:

overall the balance of risks and benefits of Strattera in the treatment of ADHD in children and adolescents remains positive;

prescribers should be reminded that Strattera should be initiated only by and under the supervision of a specialist;

warnings on the risk of seizures and electrocardiogram QT prolongation (abnormal heart rhythm) should be included in the product information; and the current warnings in the product information about the risk of liver disorders and suicidal thoughts and behaviour accurately reflect the available data.

Full guidance on prescribing and the use of Strattera, including possible side effects, is provided in the product information for prescribers (the Summary of Product Characteristics) and patients (Patient Information Leaflet).

The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) has recently published a technology appraisal on methylphenidate, atomoxetine and dexamfetamine for the treatment of ADHD. During the development of this appraisal NICE was fully informed about the European review and the available data on the safety and efficacy of atomoxetine in the treatment of ADHD.

The MAH was also requested to put in place a risk management plan for Strattera, which includes the conduct of new research to better characterise and further investigate its safety profile.

A copy of the report on the risks and benefits of Strattera has been placed in the Library.

Waiting Lists/Times

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health from what point in an individual's treatment her Department calculates the waiting time for an NHS in-patient operation. [70897]

Andy Burnham: The waiting time for a national health service in-patient operation is taken from the point at which a consultant decides that the patient needs to be admitted for treatment, to the date upon which the patient is actually admitted to hospital.

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what date she expects the Government to meet their target for nobody to wait more than six months for an in-patient operation in the NHS. [70933]

Andy Burnham: The national health service does now have an operating standard of six months for in-patient admission. Data collected by the Department show that there have been very few breaches of this standard since it was introduced in December 2005. Therefore, it is considered that the Government's in-patient target has been and continues to be achieved.

However, any breaches of the waiting time standards are unacceptable and the Department will continue to work closely to support the small number of NHS organisations where patients are waiting over six months.

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the number of people who are waiting for an NHS in-patient operation and who have been informed they will have to wait more than six months. [70990]

Andy Burnham: The national health service now has a maximum waiting time of six months for in-patient admission. Any breaches of this waiting time standard are unacceptable and the Department will continue to work closely to support each NHS organisation where this is an issue. No estimate has been made of whether the very small number of patients who may at risk of having to wait longer than the standard have been informed.

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people waited more than six months for a hospital appointment in (a) 1997 and (b) 2006 in (i) Swindon and (ii) England. [69043]

Andy Burnham: In March 1997, 283,866 patients were waiting more than six months for hospital admission in England and 4,671 patients were waiting more than six months for hospital admission in the area covered by Wiltshire Health Authority.

In March 2006, 199 patients were waiting more than six months for hospital admission nationally and no patients were waiting more than six months for hospital admission in the area covered by Swindon Primary Care Trust.

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average length of time was for which patients in (a) England and (b) Dorset waited for dialysis during 2005. [68307]

Ms Rosie Winterton: There was no average length of time in England for which patients requiring dialysis waited for treatment in 2005. The national service framework for renal services notes that because the progression of chronic kidney disease is frequently slow clinicians can often predict the point when the person will need to start renal replacement therapy (RRT), which consists of haemodialysis, peritoneal dialysis or transplantation.

Professional consensus is that the optimal time required to prepare a patient and their carers for RRT is around one year. This is why good practice suggests that those with established renal failure requiring dialysis have timely and appropriate surgery for vascular or peritoneal dialysis access to improve outcomes, minimise complications and maximise longevity of the access site. However, research shows that a third of people present less than a month before requiring RRT, and the outcomes for this group are less good than for those who present earlier.

If someone presents as an emergency or it is not possible to establish mature access before dialysis is required an intravenous catheter can be inserted for dialysis at extremely short notice, usually into a vein deep in the patients neck.

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients in England requiring a form of dialysis were not able to obtain that form of dialysis during 2005. [68309]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The national service framework for renal services notes that the total number of people receiving renal replacement therapy (RRT) has been taken as a proxy measure for the prevalence of established renal failure (ERF). However it is generally agreed that in addition there will be people in the general population with ERF which has not been diagnosed and whose need for RRT has not been recognised. People who have been identified as requiring dialysis receive it, on an emergency basis if necessary. Research shows that a third of people present less than a month before requiring RRT.

RRT includes transplantation, haemodialysis and peritoneal dialysis. Data on the numbers of people requiring dialysis are not collected or held centrally. Data from the most recent national survey of renal units, commissioned by the Department from the renal registry of the Renal Association, show that in December 2002, 11,789 patients in England were receiving haemodialysis; 4,605 peritoneal dialysis, and 14,104 people had a transplant in the year ending December 2002.

For some patients with established renal failure, who are suffering from other, terminal, conditions, haemodialysis may not be an appropriate treatment, as it can add to the distress of these patients without extending life. These patients should be presented with the option of a properly managed palliative care plan.

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the effects on kidney patients of being unable to obtain dialysis within a short time after this treatment is recommended by a consultant. [68310]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The national service framework for renal services notes that because the progression of chronic kidney disease is frequently slow clinicians can often predict the point when the person will need to start renal replacement therapy (RRT). Professional consensus is that the optimal time required to prepare a patient and their carers for RRT is around one year. This is why good practice suggests that those with established renal failure requiring dialysis have timely and appropriate surgery for vascular or peritoneal dialysis access to improve outcomes, minimise complications and maximise longevity of the access.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in the Mid Essex Hospital Trust area missed their appointments in the last year for which figures are available; and what the estimated cost was to the Trust of these missed appointments. [69842]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The number of missed first outpatient appointments reported by Mid Essex Hospitals National Health Service Trust in 2004-05 was 5,590 and for the first three quarters of 2005-06, the trust reported 4,646.

Information is not held centrally as to the cost of missed appointments.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in the Mid Essex Hospital Trust area had their appointments cancelled by the Trust (a) once, (b) twice, (c) three times and (d) more than three times in the last year for which figures are available. [69843]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not held centrally.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she plans to publish the principles and definitions which will underpin the delivery of the 18-week patient pathway. [69610]

Andy Burnham: The principles and definitions underpinning the delivery of the 18-week patient pathway were published on 10 May 2006 in the publication, "Tackling Hospital Waiting: The 18-week Patient Pathway." An implementation framework is available in the Library and on the Department's website at:

TREASURY

Consultants

Keith Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the companies which were paid consultancy fees by his Department in 2005-06; how much each was paid; and what each of the companies was used to accomplish. [69699]

John Healey: A table setting out the amounts paid in 2005-06 by the Treasury to companies and partnerships, recorded as consultancy spending, has been placed in the Library of the House. Information on what each supplier was used to accomplish could be provided only at disproportionate cost, and in some cases would be commercially prejudicial.

Departmental Budget

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much of the budget for his Department remained unspent in the 2005-06 financial year. [70550]

John Healey: The Public Expenditure Out-turn White Paper (PEOWP), due to be presented to Parliament before the summer recess in July, will provide provisional out-turn figures for 2005-06 public expenditure for all Departments, including underspends against departmental expenditure limits and administration costs limits. The Treasury's own resource accounts are also due to be presented to Parliament before the summer recess, and will show the audited out-turn against voted expenditure.

Departmental Consultations

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many public consultations his Department undertook in the last 12 months; and what the cost was (a) in total and (b) of each consultation. [70551]

John Healey: A list of the public consultations undertaken by the Treasury since 2000 is available on the Department's website http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/consultations_and_legislation/consult_fullindex.cfm. Seventeen consultations have been launched since 1 April 2005. The Treasury's accounting system does not record the cost of public consultations separately from other administration costs, so the cost of those consultations, either individually or in aggregate, could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many free air miles have been accrued by senior civil servants in his Department on official business in each of the last three years; and how they were used. [70557]

John Healey: I refer to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Lewes (Norman Baker) on 17 October 2005, Official Report, column 717W.

Electorate (Wales)

Chris Ruane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many electors there were in each ward of (a) the Vale of Clwyd and (b) Denbighshire in each of the last 10 years. [70191]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, 15 May 2006:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your question regarding the number of electors in each ward in (a) the Vale of Clwyd and (b) Denbighshire in each of the last 10 years. (70191)

The latest available Welsh ward electorate counts are for December 2005, and the electorate counts for the last available 10 years (1996 to 2005) are shown in the attached tables. Table 1 includes wards within the parliamentary constituency of the Vale of Clwyd. Table 2 for the local authority of Denbighshire, includes wards for the whole of the parliamentary constituency of the Vale of Clwyd (as included in Table 1) and also wards which are within part of the parliamentary constituencies of Clwyd South and Clwyd West.

The ward electorate counts are for parliamentary electors, including attainers. Local government electorate counts are not available at ward level. Thus the figures in Table 1 and Table 2 do not sum to the combined count of Parliamentary or local electors referred to as 'total electorate', for Vale of Clwyd and Denbighshire in reply to your previous parliamentary question Official Report [illegible] 49, column 450 of 11 May 2006.

It should be noted that the number of people eligible to vote is not the same as the resident population aged 18 and over. There are numerous reasons for this. For example not everyone who is usually resident is entitled to vote (foreign citizens from outside of the EU and Commonwealth, prisoners, etc. are not eligible), some people do not register to vote and people who have more than one address may register in more than one place. Further, there is inevitably some double counting of the registered electorate as electoral registration officers vary in how quickly they remove people from the registers after they have moved away from an area or after they have died. These factors have a differential impact from area to area.

Office for National Statistics

EU Budget

Mr. Brady: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether it is his Department's policy to veto any proposed EU tax arising from the 2008-09 review of the EU budget. [71128]

Ed Balls: The Government believe that taxation is a matter for member states to determine at a national level. The UK has made clear that there are absolutely no plans to impose a harmonised tax on its citizens.

Portland PR

Lynne Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what meetings officials in his Department have had with representatives of the public relations company Portland PR; what contracts Portland PR has with his Department and agencies for which he has responsibility; and what the nature of the contract is in each case. [70046]

John Healey: According to our records, there have been no meetings between Treasury officials and representatives of Portland PR in the past year. Neither the Treasury nor its agencies have any contracts with Portland PR.

Valuation Office Agency

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes have been made since 1997 to the Valuation Office Agency's (a) powers and (b) policy on revaluing, re-assessing or re-classifying a domestic hereditament or composite hereditament after a material change to a property. [62285]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

The powers of a listing officer or valuation officer, employed by the Valuation Office Agency, to revalue, re-assess or re-classify a domestic hereditament following a material change to a property have not changed since 1997.

The alteration of non-domestic rating lists by valuation officers is subject to regulatory control. The powers of valuation officers to alter rating lists, including the non-domestic parts of composite hereditaments, were amended with effect from 1 April 2000 by the Non-Domestic Rating (Alteration of Lists and Appeals)(Amendment)(England) Regulations 2000 and the Non-Domestic Rating (Alteration of Lists and Appeals)(Amendment)(Wales) Regulations 2000, which restricted the effective date of list alterations in respect of material changes of circumstance. Further amendment of valuation officers' powers has been made by the Non-Domestic Rating (Alteration of Lists and Appeals)(England) Regulations 2005 and the Non-Domestic Rating (Alteration of Lists and Appeals)(Wales) Regulations 2005 and the Non-Domestic Rating (Material Day for List Alterations)(Amendment)(England) Regulations 2005 in respect of rating lists compiled on or after 1 April 2005 which allow valuation officers to alter rating lists, including in entries for composite hereditaments, in respect of material changes of circumstances with effect from the day the circumstances changed.

The interpretation of the power of a listing officer to increase the council tax band applicable to a dwelling following a material increase and a relevant transaction of the dwelling was changed in July 2002 in the light of two Scottish Court of Session decisions that the sale of a part share in a dwelling is not a relevant transaction. .

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) VO 7746 and (b) VO 7747 letters were issued by the Valuation Office Agency in (i) England and (ii) Wales in the most recent year for which figures are available. [62286]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

No record is kept of the number of these letters issued.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many domestic properties in England have photographs allocated to the address by the Valuation Office Agency as part of their council tax valuation records. [62288]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

Of the 22 million domestic property records in England, some 2.5 per cent. (549,000) have a photograph or photographs attached.

Voter Registration

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate the Office for National Statistics has made of the level of voter registration for local elections in England in each year since 1997. [70689]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the national statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 15 May 2006:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your question about what estimates the Office for National Statistics has made of the level of voter registration for local elections in England in each year since 1997. (70689)

I refer you to the Official Report No. 149 column 450 of 11 May 2006. The answer provided here gives the 'proportion of the estimated usual resident population who have registered to vote'; this is the closest possible approximation to the information you have requested.

MINISTER FOR WOMEN

Domestic Violence

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what discussions she has had with ministerial colleagues on improving the services offered to women seeking refuge from domestic violence in Kingston upon Hull North. [69757]

Meg Munn: As Deputy Minister for Women and Equality, I sit on the inter-ministerial group for domestic violence (chaired by my hon. Friend Baroness Scotland of Ashtal) which performance-manages the cross-Government National Domestic Violence Delivery Plan by reviewing progress at quarterly meetings. This is the mechanism for improving the services offered to women seeking refuge from domestic violence nationally.

The Government office for Yorkshire and the Humber ensures that the National Domestic Violence Delivery Plan is disseminated and considered by all regional and local stakeholders.

Hull Domestic Abuse Partnership is a new multi-agency team including representatives from the police, health, housing and social services. It provides a one-stop service for women in the city seeking refuge from domestic violence and is working to improve services to victims.

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of services available to children who have been involved in domestic violence in Kingston upon Hull North. [69758]

Meg Munn: As Deputy Minister for Women and Equality, I sit on the inter-ministerial group for domestic violence (chaired by my hon. Friend Baroness Scotland of Ashtal), which performance-manages the cross-Government National Domestic Violence Delivery Plan by reviewing progress at quarterly meetings. This is the mechanism for improving the services available to children who have been involved in domestic violence.

The Government office for Yorkshire and the Humber ensures that the National Domestic Violence Delivery Plan is disseminated and considered by all regional and local stakeholders.

Currently, services available to children who have been involved in domestic violence (DV) in Kingston upon Hull include:

Generic provision, support and access to information is available through the Children's Services Family Resource Centres and the council's internet service.

Hull pilot for the early identification of risk indicators of DV in private and public law proceedings is an initiative in a response to Section 120 of the Adoption and Children Act 2002. Its purpose is to alert the court, in cases of DV, at the earliest opportunity in order that an early assessment of risk indicators can be made and developed. The Hull Domestic Abuse Project (DAP) will carry out these assessments. It is the intention to roll the pilot out across the courts in the Humber region.

Hull children's fund provides resources for direct work with young children who are resident in the Women's Aid refuge and also on an outreach basis.

NSPCC specialist staff are working with young males who have experienced or witnessed DV.

The NSPCC, NCH, Barnados and Women's Centres across Hull are also providing support services to affected children.

Women's Aid and the women's services also carry out work within the local primary and secondary schools raising awareness and discussing safety issues around DV.

Women's Aid provides refuge facilities for families.

The Hull DAP also carries out Multi-Agency Risk Assessment Conferences (MARAC's) on a six-weekly basis. This serves the purpose of identifying high-risk victims and enables the sharing of information within a multi-agency setting to take place in order to give further support.

Pay Reviews

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality for what reasons the Government have adopted a voluntary approach to pay reviews. [69853]

Meg Munn: We believe that the voluntary approach is the best way to achieve lasting change through working alongside the business community, employers, trade unions and the Equal Opportunities Commission (EOC) to promote equal pay reviews. We supported Opportunity Now's recent Benchmarking Report which contains case studies, advice, action plans and recommendations on how employers can address gender equality and diversity in the workplace, including tackling the gender pay gap. We also support an equal pay panel of experts, led by the TUC.

The Women and Work Commission's independent report 'Shaping a Fairer Future', recently examined the merits of mandatory equal pay reviews in addressing the gender pay gap but did not recommend a regulatory approach.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

EU Market Abuse Directive

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the effect on the costs to British industry of the replacement of the existing anti-market abuse legislation with the EU market abuse directive. [69927]

John Healey: I have been asked to reply.

The market abuse directive (MAD) provides for a common approach to market abuse issues in an increasingly integrated financial services market in Europe. The Treasury published a regulatory impact assessment together with the regulations implementing the MAD. Copies of the assessment were placed in the Library of the House and it is available on the EU financial services section of HM Treasury's website.

CABINET OFFICE

Voluntary and Community Organisations

Tom Levitt: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what steps she is taking to support the work of voluntary and community organisations. [70204]

Edward Miliband: I have been appointed as Minister for the Third Sector by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister to focus on developing stronger policy, support and investment in the Third Sector.

There are increased numbers of volunteers and there are also increased levels of Government investment in the promotion of both volunteering and charitable giving. On 8 May my right hon. Friend the Chancellor and I launched "V", a charity to encourage young people into volunteering.

Today the Government launched a Cross-Cutting Policy Review which will look at how we can ensure the role of Third Sector organisations in contributing to the social and economic regeneration of the country.

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Ministerial Visits (Accommodation)

David Simpson: To ask the Leader of the House on how many occasions (a) civil servants and (b) special advisers in his office stayed overnight in (i) five star, (ii) four star and (iii) three star hotels in each of the last three years. [69642]

Mr. Straw: The Office of the Leader of the House does not regularly hold information on the star rating of each individual hotel.

Since 1999 the Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year; this information includes accommodation costs. This information can be found on the Cabinet Office website at:

http://www.cabinetoffice.gov.uk/propriety_and_ethics/ministers/

David Simpson: To ask the Leader of the House what discounts are available in relation to hotel accommodation used by (a) civil servants and (b) special advisers in his office. [69644]

Mr. Straw: No special discounts are available to civil servants and special advisers within the Office of the Leader of the House of Commons, other than the 'HM Government Hotel Programme' from Intercontinental Hotels Group, open to all Government Departments.

Accommodation used by my staff is booked on need and a best value for money basis.

Personal Computers

Mr. Vaizey: To ask the Leader of the House how many personal computers are allocated to hon. Members. [69436]

Mr. Straw: Members are entitled to a combination of up to five loaned PCs and laptops. If aggregated therefore, Members could request up to 3,230 PCs and laptops. Not all Members request their full allowance. To date, Members have requested and received 2,206 PCs and 642 laptops. For those Members who require more equipment, they can purchase additional equipment of the same make via Parliament with Parliament's own software pre-configured and installed.

Private Office Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Leader of the House how much has been paid in (a) salary, (b) travelling expenses, (c) subsistence allowance and (d) removal expenses to special advisers in his private office in each of the last five years. [69149]

Nigel Griffiths: Since 2003, the Government have published on an annual basis the names and overall cost of special advisers and the number in each pay band. Information on special advisers prior to 2003 was provided at regular intervals and this information is available in the Library of the House.

No removal expenses have been paid to special advisers in the Office of the Leader of the House of Commons during the last five years.

Details on travel and subsistence costs for special advisers is set out in the table.

	Travel	£ Subsistence

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Child Protection Checks

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what child protection checks a teacher is expected to undergo; and what procedure is used for such checks in the case of an individual who is working (a) in a number of different schools, (b) in different local authorities, (c) in the private as well as public sector and (d) in another occupation or vocation with children or vulnerable adults. [70263]

Mr. Dhanda: The Department's guidance, "Child Protection: Preventing Unsuitable People from Working with Children and Young Persons", provides comprehensive advice on the pre-appointment checks employers should undertake on teachers and other prospective employees. This includes previous employment checks, criminal record bureau (CRB) checks, a List 99 check and, for people who are to be employed as teachers, checks to confirm their teaching status.

For individuals working in a number of schools where the local authority is the same, and it is the local authority who is the employer, as long as checks were carried out at the time of the first appointment and there is no gap in employment, further checks should not be necessary. Where employers are different or a gap has occurred each employer must satisfy themselves of an individual's suitability by conducting new checks.

Under the new vetting and barring scheme, legislation for which is currently before Parliament in the Safeguarding Vulnerable Groups Bill, a person or organisation who employs a teacher will be required to check that the teacher is subject to monitoring in relation to their work with children by the scheme, and is not barred from working with children. The duty on the employer to check applies regardless of whether the teacher is working in an independent or maintained school and regardless of whether another employer has already made a check. An employer can fulfil their duty to check by obtaining written confirmation from a supply agency that the agency has made the check.

For a non-teaching position, working with children or vulnerable adults in a registered setting, a CRB check is also required. As part of this the Protection of Children Act (PoCA) and Protection of Vulnerable Adults (PoVA) lists will be checked and it will record if an individual is barred from this type of work.

Children's Database

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the timetable is for the completion of the national children's database. [69350]

Beverley Hughes: The information sharing index will aid more effective prevention and early intervention as a tool to support practitioners to improve outcomes for children, and is therefore a key element of the Every Child Matters programme. The planned timetable for the implementation of the index ensures that it will be delivered in a practical and realistic way. The key elements are:

From the summer of 2006, local authorities will begin a readiness assessment process, involving all relevant local partners. This assessment process will ensure that local areas will be ready to receive the index when it is made available to them. At that time, we will also have the results of the data matching trials which will inform our data sourcing and deployment plans and provide better information about the quality of key data sources and the nature of the task, both locally and nationally, to best ensure that the index data will be of good quality.

During the summer and autumn of 2006, there will be a public consultation on draft regulations and statutory guidance to be made under section 12 of the Children Act 2004, which will govern the operation of the index.

Subject to the will of Parliament, we expect regulations to be in force by early 2007.

From late spring or early summer of 2007, we will have created initial records for each child in England, drawn from key national data sources.

The first index release, which will include those initial records, will be deployed to a first wave of local authorities by the summer of 2007.

The index will be rolled out progressively so that, by the end of 2008, it will be available in all local authorities in England.

We will provide funding and support to local authorities for them to manage local implementation of the index.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what funding his Department has allocated to the establishment of a national data list for all children in the UK; and how much has been spent to date. [69349]

Beverley Hughes: On 8 December 2005, I announced the Government's plan to implement a fully operational information sharing index in all areas of England by the end of 2008. This will enable practitioners delivering services to children to identify and contact one another easily and quickly, so they can share relevant information about children who need services.

The estimated set-up costs are £224 million over the next three years. This includes the costs of adapting existing systems that will supply the data to the index and ensuring that data are accurate; adapting the day-to-day systems used by practitioners so they can access the index from those systems; introducing robust arrangements to ensure security, and training staff to use the index properly.

Estimated operating costs, thereafter, will be £41 million per year. Most of this will pay for the additional staff needed to ensure the ongoing security, accuracy and audit of the index.

To date, approximately £8.5 million has been spent since the start of the feasibility phase of the index project in February 2004.

Departmental Campaigns

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the cost was of each information campaign run by his Department since 1997. [69524]

Bill Rammell: Expenditure details from the Department's central advertising and public budget, are not held by specific information campaign; however the total advertising and promotional work is shown in the following table:

	Expenditure (£ million)
1997-98	11.0
1998-99	13.4
1999-2000	9.9
2000-01	14.6
2001-02	11.7
2002-03	14.1
2003-04	15.5
2005-06[1]	9.4

[1] Final accounts for this financial year have still to be closed and this is our total expenditure so far.

Financial information for any other advertising and promotional work from outside of the central marketing team could be provided only at a disproportionate cost.

Departmental Publications

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will list the departmental publications sent to teachers since May 1997; and what the cost was in each case. [68625]

Jim Knight: A list of departmental publications sent automatically to schools between 2002 and 2005 is detailed in the following table. Where a publication has been sent to all primary and all secondary schools it will appear in the table for both primary and secondary schools. The Department does not keep distribution lists of publications sent to all schools prior to 2002.

The cost of distribution for publications automatically sent to all schools was c. £300,000 per annum. However, the Department ceased automatic mailings of publications to schools in England on a phased basis between April and December 2004. Discussions with head teachers, and detailed research, showed that schools wanted to be able to choose the printed publications they needed, when they needed them, and to be able to order multiple copies.

The online ordering system enables schools to choose whether to download electronic copies or order the paper-based publications they need at the right time for them and in the multiples they require. This system is linked directly to the fulfilment service and an existing telephone ordering line. A fortnightly email service to schools informs them of new and important publications.

This has resulted in schools being able to order a wider variety of publications from the Department, putting schools in direct control of what they receive, and when they receive it.

Departmental Staff (Post-Retirement Age)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what opportunities exist for people to work beyond retirement age in his Department. [69040]

Mr. Dhanda: In the Department, people outside the senior civil service who continue to meet the normal standards of fitness and efficiency can choose to retire at any time from age 60-65. We currently do not allow anyone to stay on beyond age 65. However, we are reviewing our age retirement arrangements in line with the provisions of the Employment Equality (Age) Regulations 2006 that came into effect from 1 October. A small project board is considering more fully the implications and opportunities offered by the regulations, before a decision is taken on the extent to which our age retirement arrangements can become more flexible, without impacting adversely on our operational and business needs.

Education and Inspections Bill

Ms Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which organisation conducted the racial equality impact assessment of the Education and Inspections Bill; and if he will make the assessment available on his Department's website. [70360]

Jim Knight: The Race Equality Impact Assessment on the Schools White Paper, "Higher Standards, Better Schools for All", and the subsequent Education and Inspections Bill was carried out by relevant officials within the Department for Education and Skills, which is in accordance with guidance from the Commission for Racial Equality.

The assessment was published on the Department's website on 28 February, the day of Bill introduction, and can be found at http://www.dfes.gov.uk/publications/educationandinspectionsbill/

EU Students (Loan Default)

Mr. Boris Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate he has made of the number of EU-domiciled students who may receive loans for study at a UK higher education institution and then default on repayment of those loans. [65275]

Bill Rammell: We estimate that around 42,000[1,2] EU students studying at English HEIs will be eligible for loans for fees. Because these loans are new, there are no historic data to help model behaviour, but—based on the propensity of home students to take out maintenance loans—we have assumed that 80 per cent. of EU students will take out a fee loan.

The rate of repayment of loans depends on graduates' income, and the cost to Government of making the loans is dominated by a subsidy of the rate of interest. The notion of arrears is different from a commercial loan where repayments are predetermined in value and made to a fixed timetable. Nevertheless, the cost, which for EU loans is estimated to be around £30 million [2,3], includes a factor which reflects late payment.

The SLC has well-established mechanisms for recovering loans from students who move abroad and we are confident that these will enable us to effectively collect repayments from EU students from April 2007.

We are continuing to ensure that all students are fully aware that the Student Loans Company (SLC) has the power to trace them and enforce their debt in other countries. The SLC will use this power as necessary to ensure that all students repay what they owe.

Euro (UK Entry)

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what measures have been taken by his Department as part of preparations to UK entry to the euro; and what the cost was. [68626]

Bill Rammell: The Department has established a Project Board to oversee preparations within the Department for a possible future changeover to the euro. It also maintains regular links with the HM Treasury Euro Preparations Unit. In line with central guidance, the requirement to consider euro compatibility is built into all major programmes and projects, although any costs relating to meeting this requirement are not separately identified.

European Parliament Recommendation

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what his policy is on implementing European Parliament Recommendation 2006/143/EC, on further European Co-operation in Quality Assurance in Higher Education. [68635]

Bill Rammell: There is much good work concerning higher education quality assurance being undertaken under the auspices of the intergovernmental Bologna Process, which involves 45 countries with the objective of creating a European higher education area. I welcome the recommendation as a contribution towards closer European cooperation in this field, for which primary responsibility rests with higher education institutions themselves in this country. We are working with others as part of the Bologna Process to consider the practicalities of implementing a register of quality assurance agencies in Europe.

Exclusion (Black Children)

Ms Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether safeguards have been adopted to ensure that black children will not be disproportionately affected by the exclusion policies in her Department's White Paper. [68736]

Jim Knight: The White Paper commitments are being implemented largely through provisions in the Education and Inspections Bill, which were subject to a full Race Equality Impact Assessment. A copy of this is available in the Library. Guidance on exclusion also emphasises the importance of race equality awareness throughout the exclusion process.

Although exclusion of Black children fell by half between 1997/98 and 2003/04, they are still excluded at around twice the rate for White children. We have an action plan in place to address these disproportionate levels of exclusion, which will also have an impact on Black children and parents affected by the White Paper proposals. This plan includes: ensuring that equality issues are embedded in key policy areas; sharing good practice with local authorities and recommending that they take specific actions, such as analysing exclusions data and taking remedial action if appropriate; and targeting individual local authorities where data show particularly high disproportionality, with support to reduce it.

The reasons for the existing over-representation of some minority ethnic groups in the exclusions figures are complex. We are currently undertaking a Priority Review to establish the reasons for this disparity and what further can be done to reduce it.

Faith Schools

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many maintained faith schools have been closed in each year since 1997, broken down by faith. [70859]

Jim Knight: The information is given in the following table.

Year closed	Church of England	Catholic	Church of England/ Catholic	Church of England/ Methodist	Methodist	Jewish	Congregational Church	Total
1998	7	14	—	—	—	—	—	21
1999	15	12	—	3	—	—	—	30
2000	26	7	—	—	—	—	—	33
2001	20	21	—	—	—	1	—	42
2002	24	19	—	—	1	—	—	44
2003	31	6	1	—	1	—	1	40
2004	27	14	—	—	—	—	—	41
2005	33	18	—	—	—	1	—	52
2006	4	1	—	—	—	—	—	5
Totals	211	120	2	3	3	2	1	342

These include cases where the closed school was directly replaced by another school, sometimes on the same site. This might occur where, for example, a school was replaced by an Academy or a school with different religious character or none; and where two or more schools amalgamated to form a single school (such as infant and junior schools amalgamating to form primary schools, or as part of a wider reorganisation).

Financial Education Initiatives

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what initiatives her Department and its non-departmental bodies support to promote (a) financial education, (b) financial advice, (c) financial inclusion and (d) financial capability; which organisations are involved in delivering each initiative; and how much funding is provided to each by (i) her Department and its non-departmental public bodies, (ii) other Government Departments, (iii) the private sector and (iv) the voluntary sector. [66580]

Bill Rammell: The Department is strengthening financial education as part of our 14-19 reforms. Financial capability education will be taught more explicitly in the new functional mathematics component of GCSE mathematics. Functional mathematics will also form part of the core of the new 14-19 specialised Diplomas. These initiatives support existing opportunities in Personal, Social and Health Education (PSHE), Citizenship, Business Studies and Careers Education for improving young people's understanding of financial issues. We have worked with QCA to offer schools new units of work to support financial capability education, available at www.qca.org.uk/pshe.

The Department's "Skills for Life" Strategy has provided in excess of £3 million since 2001 to fund a financial literacy programme, which is run on behalf of the Government by the Basic Skills Agency (BSA). We have allocated £60 million a year for the three academic years from September 2005 to support a new focus on enterprise education in all secondary schools in England. We work with the Personal Finance Education Group (PREG) to develop and disseminate resources materials to support teachers in the classroom. The Department is also working closely with the Financial Services Authority (FSA) to ensure that its work supports the educational aspects of the National Strategy for Financial Capability.

Foreign Language Teaching

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps his Department is taking to promote co-operation in foreign language teaching between secondary and primary schools. [70877]

Jim Knight: Many secondary schools support language learning in primary schools by sharing teacher expertise, resource and use of facilities. In April 2006 the Department provided additional funding of £30,000 to every existing Specialist Language College and suggested a proportion of the funding be used to support the development and delivery of language learning programmes in primary schools. In addition £49.5 million will be distributed among all local authorities during the financial years 2006-07 and 2007-08 to support the implementation of languages at Key Stage 2. The Department suggested part of this funding could be used to develop links between primary and secondary schools to support programmes. In October 2005 the Department launched the Key Stage 2 Framework for Languages which contains guidance for schools on progression of language learning within Key Stage 2 and into Key Stage 3.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of students at primary school are being taught foreign languages. [70878]

Jim Knight: The Department does not collect data on the proportion of pupils studying a language in primary schools. However, a "Headspace" survey undertaken by Education Guardian and EdComs in 2005 indicated that 56 per cent. of primary schools are now planning or already implementing primary language learning programmes, compared with 46 per cent. in an earlier "Headspace" survey.

Information Provision

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to her answer of 23 March 2006, Official Report, column 543W, what estimate she has made of the cost of providing the information. [68755]

Bill Rammell: The Department does not hold this information centrally and to compile the information from over 100 business units would incur costs well in excess of the disproportionate cost threshold.

Key Worker Funding

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what criteria are used to determine the eligibility of teachers for key worker funding for affordable homes. [66039]

Jim Knight: The Department for Communities and Local Government has overall responsibility for setting the criteria individuals must satisfy in order to qualify for funding for affordable homes. Within those criteria, Sponsor Government Departments select the eligible groups for individual sectors. For the education sector, the Department for Education and Skills recommends that teachers with Qualified Teacher Status working in the maintained sector can apply for assistance. Full details of qualifying criteria can be found in Annex B of the Capital Funding Guide on the Housing Corporation's website www.housingcorp.gov.uk.

Lecturers (Salaries)

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average salary was for a lecturer in further education in (a) 1997 and (b) the latest year for which information is available. [66874]

Bill Rammell: The average salary for full-time further education lecturers in England was £23,770 in March 1997 and £29,640 in March 2004, the latest information available. This represents a 24.7 per cent. increase compared to a cumulative inflation rate of 15 per cent. for the same period.

Muslim Colleges

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether his Department issues guidance to Muslim colleges in England on content of courses for those who wish to become imams; and if he will make a statement. [65770]

Bill Rammell [holding answer 25 April 2006]: For courses provided in publicly-funded Further Education Colleges and Higher Education Institutions, quality and standards are assured through independent inspection. With our support, the HE sector's Equality Challenge Unit has issued guidance to institutions on dealing with hate crimes and intolerance on campus. The Centre for Excellence in Leadership (CEL) for the FE system has also published the Faith Community Tool Kit. This provides an excellent source of information and advice to help leaders across the learning and skills sector to engage effectively with learners and staff from multi-faith communities. It draws out the valuable contribution people's beliefs can bring to their work, workplace or learning.

Nursery Places

Mr. Kemp: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many nursery and crèche places are provided for people working in his Department; what charges are made for the provision of such services; and what other facilities are provided for the children of employees of his Department. [67360]

Mr. Dhanda: The Department is committed to quality child care support for staff and provides a range of options which consists of the following:

Fifty nursery places on its Runcorn and Sheffield sites. In Runcorn; parents pay £16.90 per day and receive a departmental subsidy of £6.80 per day. In Sheffield, parents pay £16.50 and receive a departmental subsidy of £6.50 per day;

Pre-school age child care vouchers which are payable for 48 weeks per year and are valued at £20 per week for Runcorn, Sheffield and Darlington staff and £30 per week for London staff. These amounts are pro-rated for part-time staff. Currently, 154 parents received these vouchers;

School age vouchers, introduced from 1 May 2006, which replaced departmental play scheme subsidy previously paid to staff, on all sites. These vouchers are paid monthly, London staff receive £38 per month and staff on other sites receive £32 per month, pro-rated for part-time staff. These vouchers offer parents greater flexibility and choice. Responses to a recent child care survey indicate that the introduction of the new school age voucher will provide financial support for over 350 school age children. This compares favourably to the 130 children previously supported under the subsidised play scheme arrangements; and

In addition, a Childcare Salary Sacrifice scheme was introduced on 1 May 2006. This will enable staff to make savings on tax and national insurance contributions related to child care costs. As the scheme is new, applications are currently being processed and take-up figures are currently unavailable.

Oxbridge Students

Patrick Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of students attending (a) Oxford and (b) Cambridge universities in the last year for which figures are available previously attended a (i) state grammar school and (ii) maintained school. [62709]

Bill Rammell: The latest available information from the Universities and Colleges Admissions Service (UCAS) showing the previous school type of students obtaining places in 2005 is shown in the table. The figures are limited to students who applied to full-time undergraduate courses via UCAS, so they do not therefore cover part-time students or those full-time students who apply directly to Oxbridge.

Playing Fields Disposal

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate has been made of the likely total capital receipts from disposal of playing fields associated with private finance schemes in the secondary school sector in England at 2006 prices; what the total area of such playing fields is; and if he will make a statement. [70802]

Jim Knight: There have been seven applications approved that involve the sale of school playing fields which are capable of forming at least a small sports pitch, and which are associated with private finance schemes in the secondary school sector in England. The total area of these fields amount to 115,575 square metres and the expected capital receipt is around £24.5 million. Other proceeds from disposals, if approved, will depend on the value of the land at the time the application is made.

Prison Education

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many of the recommendations of the Seventh Report from the Education and Skills Committee for Session 2004-05 on Prison Education have (a) been met, (b) had no action taken in respect of them and (c) been rejected; and if he will make a statement. [66549]

Phil Hope: In June 2005, the Government responded comprehensively to the Education and Skills Select Committee report.

The Government already had substantial plans to take action on many of the recommendations contained in the Select Committee's report, and many of these would fall into a category 'action taken in response'. Our most recent analysis shows that action is being taken in response to 27 of the recommendations; 18 have been met; and there were four where the Committee's recommendation did not call for any action. For six of the recommendations the necessary action is under way but long-term, making the term 'met' less easy to measure.

The Government made clear in their response that they did not agree with six of the recommendations. We rejected the Committee's assertion (recommendation 6) that no over-arching strategy was in place, although we have since published the Green Paper "Reducing Re-Offending Through Skills and Employment" on which we are still consulting; although we agree that offenders with special needs should be supported, we do not necessarily agree that the introduction of special educational needs coordinators and learning support assistants to every adult prison is the right solution (recommendations 11 and 12); we see no case for guaranteeing prisoners an entitlement to learning and skills that is greater than the entitlements available for the general population (recommendation 14); progress made in recent years in improving learning and skills in prisons addresses the Committee's points in recommendation 20; and, although the Government did not believe at the time of their response that the proposal to equalise pay across all activities was practical, we are consulting on this matter through the Green Paper (recommendation 47).

Recruitment

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much (a) his Department and (b) its agencies spent on recruitment, search and selection agencies in each of the last five years. [68342]

Mr. Dhanda: The information requested is not collected centrally in the format requested and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Any external recruitment campaign within the Department is based on business need and each case is considered separately. Where the services of search and selection agencies are required, agreed criteria and support delivery are drawn from the Cabinet Office Central Framework Agreement.

Redundancies

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) teachers and (b) support staff in (i) primary and (ii) secondary schools he estimates will be made redundant in (A) 2006-07 and (B) 2007-08 as a result of falling rolls; and if he will make a statement. [67405]

Jim Knight [holding answer 2 May 2006]: The number of teachers needed over time will vary from one area to another and schools and local authorities will need to decide how they manage numbers of teacher and support staff posts on the basis of anticipated local needs. In many cases there will be no need for redundancies because natural wastage and reduced numbers of newly-qualified teachers will play an important part in managing staff numbers.

To help schools and local authorities who will need to manage the effects of falling rolls we have published a web-based toolkit which offers a range of practical advice and guidance. The toolkit can be found at www.teachernet.gov.uk/fallingrolls.

As far as teachers are concerned, the Department's supply modelling has allowed for falling rolls by reducing the number of teacher training places in 2005/06 for both primary and secondary teaching. However, overall judgments on the number of teachers required also depend on other factors such as those leaving and returning to the profession and this will vary from one area to another. Because of these factors and local variations, teacher numbers have continued to rise. On a full time equivalent basis, their numbers rose by 3,500 to 435,400 in England in January 2006.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much has been spent on redundancy costs in his Department and its agencies in each year since 1997. [70500]

Mr. Dhanda: There have been no redundancies in the Department but we have run a series of voluntary early release schemes. The total costs to my Department arising from the provisions of the Civil Service Compensation Scheme since 1997 were as follows:

Financial year	Total cost to DfES (£ million)
1997-98	5.145
1998-99	2.73
1999-2000	4.237
2000-01	4.06
2001-02	6.142
2002-03	5.57
2003-04	2.54
2004-05	18.95
2005-06	14.95
Total	64.324

School Drinks

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what criteria his Department uses to assess the suitability of drinks for sale in schools; and what drinks have been assessed as unsuitable in the last three years. [69810]

Jim Knight: Later this month we intend to announce, in response to recommendations from the School Meals Review Panel and the School Food Trust, a full suite of new standards, which will incorporate standards for drinks available at lunch and other times of the day. The School Food Trust plans to publish good practice guidance to assist with the implementation of the standards.

The 'Healthy School Lunches' guidance, published by DfES, contains the Secretary of State's expectation that drinking water should be made available to all pupils every day, free of charge. In addition the 'Healthy Living Blueprint' includes guidance on both the importance of drinking water and how schools can increase their pupils' consumption.

School Statistics

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many and what percentage of children (a) are in receipt of free school meals, (b) have special educational needs and (c) are from ethnic minority families in each local authority. [68783]

Jim Knight [holding answer 10 May 2006]: The information requested has been placed in the House Libraries.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many governing boards of failing schools have (a) resigned and (b) been asked to resign in the last five years. [69801]

Jim Knight: The Department does not collect information on resignations by the governing bodies of failing schools. However, proposals to replace a governing body by a temporary interim executive board require the Secretary of State's approval. Such approval has been given for 32 schools since the relevant legislation came into force in September 2002.

Sex Education Packs

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what guidance the Department issued to schools on the use of the teachers' sex education packs (a) Beyond a Phase and (b) Taking Sex Seriously; and how many (i) secondary and (ii) primary schools are using such packs, broken down by local education authority area. [70418]

Mr. Dhanda: These resources are not funded or endorsed by the Department for Education and Skills and we do not collect data on the use of materials by schools.

The Department issued guidance in 2000 which outlined the statutory responsibility on head teachers and governors to protect their pupils from inappropriate teaching and materials. The guidance advises governors and head teachers to discuss with parents and take on board any concerns raised on sensitive materials to be used within the classroom.

Staff Discipline

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many people in his Department have been (a) disciplined and (b) dismissed for (i) inappropriate use of the internet while at work and (ii) using work telephones to access premium rate numbers in each of the last five years. [67999]

Mr. Dhanda: The Department allows personal use of the internet and e-mail outside normal working hours. Staff are warned that internet access may be monitored and misuse may lead to disciplinary action. Staff are also reminded of the policy each time they log on to the Department's network and must indicate that they accept the policy before log-in can be completed.

New monitoring software, introduced in 2003, prevents staff from accessing any inappropriate site, and records any attempted access. All access to premium rate numbers are barred.

The information requested over the last five calendar years is as follows:

	Internet abuse		Premium rate numbers
	Disciplined	Dismissed	Disciplined	Dismissed
2005	4	1	?	?
2004	1	1	?	?
2003	3	?	?	?
2002	5	3	?	?
2001	19	5	?	1

Student Internet Access

Jim Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps he is taking to increase the use of internet access by students in their homes using high speed mobile technology following the recent Budget announcement; and if he will make a statement. [70518]

Phil Hope [holding answer 12 May 2006]: Budget 2006 announced £10 million revenue funding over 2006-08 specifically to provide internet connectivity to supplement the £50 million capital announced in Budget 2005 to put computers into the homes of the most disadvantaged secondary school pupils. This £60 million funding will support around 100,000 families and we expect the funding to be allocated shortly.

Student Loans

Nick Herbert: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether interest has always accrued on a student loan from the moment the loan is paid out. [70092]

Bill Rammell: Yes.

Teachers

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of teachers completed training but did not enter the profession in each of the last five years. [68603]

Jim Knight: The following table shows the number of teachers known to have completed training in England for each of the last five years for which data are available from the Teachers Pension Scheme. It also shows the proportion of qualifiers who had not entered teaching in England or Wales by March of the following year and the proportion of qualifiers with no known teaching service to March 2004.

Year of qualification	Qualifiers recorded on Teachers Pension Scheme	Percentage who had not entered teaching by March of the following year	Percentage without any teaching service by March 2004
2001	21,810	20	8
2002	23,040	20	11
2003	25,180	20	20

Figures exclude those qualifying through employment-based routes.

Since 1990, the pattern for entry to teaching has been that about 20 per cent. do not enter in the year after they qualify. This falls substantially in the second year with between 8 and 10 per cent. not entering teaching service in the long term; the figures for the 2003 qualifiers are expected to follow this historical pattern and fall to a similar level.

These statistics take account only of teachers who are part of the Teachers Pension Scheme. While the coverage is good in the maintained sector, it is patchier in, for example, independent schools and further or higher education. Therefore the true proportion of qualified teachers with no service is expected to be lower.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of teachers left the profession before retirement age in each of the last five years. [68604]

Jim Knight: There is no set retirement age for teachers. Many teachers retire at age 60 but some retire earlier, for example on actuarially reduced terms, and some choose to retire later.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent assessment he has made of the quality of the teaching of (a) science and (b) mathematics in secondary schools. [68641]

Bill Rammell: The Annual Report of Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools 2004/05 states that the teaching of science is good or better in nearly three quarters of secondary schools, and that the teaching of mathematics is good in two thirds of lessons in secondary schools.

Telephone Advice Lines

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many telephone advice lines his Department and its non-departmental public bodies support; how many telephone advisers each employs; and how much funding is provided by (a) his Department and its non-departmental public bodies, (b) other Government departments, (c) the private sector and (d) the voluntary sector. [66585]

Mr. Dhanda: The Department for Education and Skills does not have the requested information readily available and therefore an answer to this question could be given only at disproportionate cost.

Temporary Classrooms

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) primary and (b) secondary schools are using temporary mobile classroom accommodation in each region; and if he will make a statement. [67404]

Jim Knight [holding answer 2 May 2006]: Data supplied to the Department by local education authorities in 2003 showed the following numbers of primary and secondary schools using temporary mobile classrooms:

	Primary	Secondary
East Midlands	639	175
East of England	911	194
London	475	139
North East	119	42
North West	357	138
South East	1,128	323
South West	891	184
West Midlands	668	202
Yorkshire and The Humber	470	122

Central Government capital support for investment in schools has increased from under £700 million in 1996-97 to £5.8 billion this year and will rise further to over £6.3 billion by 2007-08. Progress is being made year by year in improving the quality of the school building stock. The bulk of schools capital is now allocated by formula to authorities and schools so that they can address their local priorities, including the replacement of decayed temporary accommodation, on which we have set a high priority. Given the high levels of funding, authorities have the opportunity to replace temporary classrooms where they are considered to be unsuitable.

Modern, high quality mobile or demountable classrooms provide a good environment for teaching and learning where there is short-term need. They might, for instance, be needed to cope with a short-term increase in pupil numbers, or where extensive remodelling or rebuilding of permanent accommodation means providing temporary accommodation on the school site, rather than transporting children elsewhere.

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pupils he expects to be taught in temporary classrooms in Milton Keynes at the start of the 2006-07 academic year. [68139]

Jim Knight: The local authority advises that a total of 450 pupils are expected to be housed in temporary classrooms at schools in Milton Keynes at the start of the 2006-07 academic year.

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pupils are being taught in temporary classrooms in Milton Keynes, broken down by school. [68140]

Jim Knight: The Milton Keynes local authority advises that a total of 450 pupils are currently housed in temporary classrooms at the following schools:

	Number
Bradwell Village	50
Caroline Haslett	50
Green Park	50
Olney Infants	50
Lord Grey	100
The Walnuts	20
White Spire	30
Sir Frank Markham	100

Not all of the pupils' time during the school day will be spent in these classrooms.

Transient Homes

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent steps he has taken to improve cross-border co-operation between the Department and the Welsh Assembly Government in tracking children from transient homes; and if she will make a statement. [66939]

Beverley Hughes: We recognise the importance of effective mechanisms for ensuring that appropriate information can follow children with additional needs when they move between England and Wales.

To this end, my officials are working with the Welsh Assembly Government on the establishment of data standards to support appropriate information transfer between English and Welsh local authorities.

The ability of agencies in England to receive, store and transfer such information will also be enhanced by the information sharing index to be established under section 12 of the Children Act 2004, following my announcement of 8 December 2005. The index will provide an important tool to support better communication and closer working among practitioners working in children's services by enabling them to identify who else is involved with a child. It will help ensure continuity of support when children and families move from one area to another by enabling services in their new area to identify which services they were receiving in their old area. My officials will continue to liaise with officials of the Welsh Assembly Government as the index is implemented.

In relation to children on the child protection register, when such a child moves to another local authority area in England and Wales, the authority where the child has been living must notify the receiving local authority of the child's move. The receiving local authority should convene a child protection conference within 15 working days of being notified of the move.

University Degrees

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many people gained a doctorate in (a) 2004 and (b) 2005, broken down by subject; and what each figure is as a percentage change from the equivalent figures in 1995. [69576]

Bill Rammell [holding answer 11 May 2006]: The latest information is given in the following tables. A new method of allocating students to subjects was introduced in 2002/03, which means that figures for this and later years are not comparable with those for earlier years. The tables therefore show 1994/95 compared with 2001/02, and 2002/03 compared with later years.

[1] Dormant students are those who are not actively following a course of study in the year in which they are awarded their qualification. [2] In 2002/03, the method used to allocate students to subject categories was changed, the main effect of which was to increase the number of students who were allocated to specific subject groups and decrease those who were allocated to the combined subject category. For 2002/03 and later years dormant students have been allocated to specific subjects rather than classified separately. Note: Figures are rounded to the nearest 5. ? indicates greater than 0 and less than 3. Source: Higher Education Statistics Agency (HESA)

University Education

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many people went to university, broken down by (a) sex and (b) age, in each year since 1976. [66040]

Bill Rammell: The latest available information is given in the following table. Comparable figures for earlier years are not available centrally.

University Maintenance Grants

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many nationals from other EU countries he expects to be eligible to claim university maintenance grants when directive 2004/38/EC comes into force; and if he will make a statement. [66134]

Bill Rammell: We estimate that around 6,000 EU nationals studying full-time in English institutions, who have not satisfied the existing provisions as migrant workers or self-employed persons, could in principle be eligible to claim maintenance support (consisting of loans and grants) in the 2006/07 academic year as a result of changes we have made following the ECJ ruling in the Bidar case. It is therefore expected that the majority of additional EU nationals who will be eligible to claim maintenance support in 2006/07 would have been eligible even if directive 2004/38 had not come into force. We anticipate the directive will add a small number of people to those who are already eligible to claim maintenance support.

Vulnerable Children

Helen Southworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps his Department is taking to address the issue of children (a) in local authority care and (b) on the Child Protection Register going missing; and what information his Department collects from local authorities to assist in the work in each case. [68794]

Mr. Dhanda: The Department of Health published "Children Missing from Care and Home—a guide to good practice" in November 2002. This was issued, along with Circular LAC (2002)17 under Section 7 of the Local Authority Social Services Act 1970, making the guidance a requirement for local authorities. This guidance includes information about responding to individual children who have been missing from their care placement and about the need for services in each area to follow a strategic approach to ensure consistent management of missing from care incidents.

Information about children missing from their agreed placement for more than 24 hours by local authority may be found on the Department's website at: http://www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/DB/VOL/v000646/index.shtml

The revision of "Working Together to Safeguard Children" was published in April 2006. Section 11.64 of this document includes advice about the steps to be followed where children who are the subjects of child protection plans go missing. This document may be found at http://www.everychildmatters.gov.uk/socialcare/safeguarding/workingtogether/

Information about children subject to child protection plans who go missing is not collected centrally.

White Papers

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many White Papers were published by his Department in 2005; and if he will make a statement. [68246]

Mr. Dhanda: 14 White Papers were published within the Command Papers series in 2005. These are detailed in the following list:

Command number	Title
6452	Parental Separation: Children's Needs and Parents' Responsibilities
6462	Draft Children (Contact) and Adoption Bill
6476	14-19 Education and Skills
6483	21st Century Skills: Achievement and Challenge
6522	Departmental Report
6562	The Government's Response to the Seventh Report from Education and Skills Committee of Session 2004-05

Command number	Title
6583	The Government Reply to the Report from the Joint Committee on the Draft Children (Contact) and Adoption Bill
6594	The Government's Response to the Environmental Audit Committee's Report on Environmental Education
6599	The Government's Response to the House of Commons Education and Skills Committee Report—National Skills Strategy: 14-19
6610	The Government's Response to the House of Commons Education and Skills Committee Ninth Report Session 2004-05

Working Together

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will place in the Library the responses to his Department's public consultation on Working Together to safeguard children; if he will list responses which sought the rejection of the Bichard Inquiry recommendation regarding disclosure of details of sexual activity by minors when coming into contact with health professionals; and if he will make a statement. [66908]

Mr. Dhanda: The Department published an analysis of the responses to the public consultation on 'Working Together to Safeguard Children' and the Government's response on 22 March. I will arrange for copies to be placed in the Library.

There was overwhelming support from respondents for the Government to issue new, clearer guidance for professionals on when to share information with social services and the police to protect sexually active children from harm and abuse, in line with the recommendation in the Bichard Inquiry Report.

Nine out of 245 respondents to the consultation disagreed or strongly disagreed that the Government should attempt to set out a clearer policy for professionals including the health service and youth workers on when to share information with social services and the police to protect sexually active children from harm and abuse, and 23 out of 235 respondents disagreed that there was a case for information (including confidential information) always being shared in some circumstances.

The guidance contained in 'Working Together' on sharing information about underage sexual activity recognises professionals' need to balance their duty of confidentiality to young people who access sexual services with the need to safeguard sexually active under-16-year-olds. 'Working Together' sets out a framework to help professionals judge when to share information on this issue.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Beacon Scheme

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment she has made of the impact of the Beacon Scheme. [70090]

Mr. Woolas: The Beacon Scheme plays an important role in recognising excellent public service and in helping organisations to improve.

Research on the impact of the Beacon Scheme has been carried out since the first round of the scheme by Warwick Business School. Full details of published research can be found on the Department for Communities and Local Government (DCLG) website at: www.odpm.gov.uk/index.asp?id=1137250.

A recent review of the scheme was also carried out by the independent advisory panel on Beacon Councils at the request of Ministers in October 2004. The Government's response to their recommendations was published in July 2005 and can be found on the DCLG website at: www.odpm.gov.uk/beaconcouncils.

Over the last year 90 per cent. of authorities have either applied for beacon status or sought to learn from a beacon and research by Warwick found that over the first five rounds, 79 per cent. of those attending beacon open days made positive changes as a result.

Business Rates

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much the (a) average business rates bill in England and (b) total net revenue from business rates in England was in each year since 1997-98; and what his estimate is for (i) 2005-06 and (ii) 2006-07. [66446]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

The average business rates bill in England and total net revenue from business rates in England in each year from 1997-98 to 2004-05, and estimates for 2005-06 and 2006-07, are shown in the following table.

	Total net revenue (£ million)	Average business rates (£)
1997-98	11,030	6,796
1998-99	11,342	7,016
1999-2000	11,315	6,998
2000-01	13,430	8,264
2001-02	14,223	8,714
2002-03	14,857	9,071
2003-04	15,000	9,137
2004-05	15,319	9,301
2005-06	16,505	9,997
2006-07	17,629	10,601

Churches (Planning)

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether churches require planning permission to erect a cross within the curtilage of their church property. [60131]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

Notices and other forms of advertisement which relate to any religious institution or religious event are permitted, subject to certain conditions and limitations. Whether the erection of a religious symbol such as a cross in the grounds of a church comes within the scope of the Town and Country Planning (Control of Advertisement) Regulations 1992 depends on its size. Memorials are exempt from control.

Civic Forums

Mike Penning: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the total annual budget is of regional government's civic forums; if he will list the civic forums that have been established; and if he will make a statement. [68501]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

The Government have not established any regional civic forums, nor am I aware of any being established by the voluntary regional assemblies that have been designated to undertake certain specific tasks.

Code of Conduct (Parish Councils)

Mike Penning: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate he has made of the number of parish councillors who have resigned in response to the introduction of the code of conduct; and how many seats are vacant. [68505]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

We have made no such estimate. There is no evidence to suggest that parish councillors resigned over the introduction of the code of conduct, which the National Association of Local Councils supports. Information is not held centrally on the number of vacant parish council seats.

Colchester Borough Council

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether the National Audit Office has calculated a final liability for Colchester borough council for its investigation into the 2003-04 accounts; when Colchester borough council will be charged for this amount; and if he will make a statement. [68907]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

This is an operational matter for the Audit Commission. I shall ask the chief executive to write to the hon. Member and to ensure the answer is made available in the Library of the House.

Community Land Trusts

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what measures the Government are taking to encourage the development of community land trusts; and if she will make a statement. [69749]

Yvette Cooper: We are always interested in new initiatives that help encourage active citizenship and that deliver more affordable housing where it is needed. English Partnerships is currently developing a pilot Community Land Trust to deliver affordable housing on public sector land at Cashes Green, Stroud. We will closely monitor developments there to help determine whether this model is effective and good value for money.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what opportunities exist for people to work beyond retirement age in his Department. [69056]

Angela E. Smith: I have been asked to reply

The normal retirement age for staff is 60. Staff below the senior civil service have the right to work up to the age of 65. Staff in the SCS may seek agreement to work up to the age of 65. In exceptional circumstances the Department may invite staff to work beyond 65, up to a maximum age of 70, to meet a particular business need.

Discrimination

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what discussions she has had with ministerial colleagues on ensuring that measures to prevent discrimination on grounds of sexual orientation in the provision of goods and services are consistent with laws preventing religious discrimination. [68785]

Meg Munn [holding answer 12 May 2006]: Discussions are ongoing about the interaction between the proposed new regulations and the provisions in part 2 of the Equality Act and the Employment Equality (Religion or Belief) Regulations 2003, both in terms of the current consultation paper 'Getting Equal: Proposals to Outlaw Sexual Orientation Discrimination in the Provision of Goods and Services' and the wider Discrimination Law Review.

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what steps she is taking to ensure that future measures to prevent discrimination on the grounds of sexual orientation will not prevent (a) bed and breakfast and (b) other accommodation providers from providing accommodation only for married couples. [68786]

Meg Munn [holding answer 12 May 2006]: A consultation paper 'Getting Equal: Proposals to Outlaw Sexual Orientation Discrimination in the Provision of Goods and Services' was published on 13 March, setting out the Government's proposal for the regulations and seeking the views of interested parties on their proposed shape and coverage. As set out in the consultation, we are proposing that the regulations would apply to providers of bed and breakfast and other accommodation, so the providers of such accommodation would not be able to offer accommodation only to married couples.

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what measures to prevent discrimination in the provision of goods and services on grounds of sexuality are being considered by her Department. [68787]

Meg Munn [holding answer 12 May 2006]: A consultation paper 'Getting Equal: Proposals to Outlaw Sexual Orientation Discrimination in the Provision of Goods and Services' was published on 13 March, setting out the Government's proposal for regulations and seeking the views of interested parties on their proposed shape and coverage. As set out in the consultation, the Government propose to lay regulations that will be subject to affirmative resolution after the summer recess.

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what representations she has received from Christian (a) bed and breakfast and (b) other residential establishments on possible future measures to prevent discrimination on the grounds of sexuality in the provision of goods and services. [68951]

Meg Munn [holding answer 12 May 2006]: A consultation paper 'Getting Equal: Proposals to Outlaw Sexual Orientation Discrimination in the Provision of Goods and Services' was published on 13 March, and has already elicited responses on a variety of questions. All views submitted in response to the consultation will be considered so that these can be taken into account when the regulations are drafted. The consultation period will close on 5 June 2006 and in line with Cabinet Office guidelines the Government aim to publish a formal response to the consultation within 12 weeks of this date. This response will include a list of the non-confidential responses received and a summary of the views expressed in these responses.

Energy Efficient Homes

Ed Balls: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many people in (a) England and (b) West Yorkshire are receiving council tax rebates for improving the energy efficiency of their homes. [69467]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

English Regional Chambers

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how much the Government have allocated to the English regional chambers in relation to the transfer of responsibilities from the regional housing boards. [70653]

Yvette Cooper: We have set aside up to £850,000 additional grant in 2006-07 to support the regional chambers in carrying out the regional housing secretariat functions they have inherited from the regional housing boards. We expect other regional partners (for example, the Housing Corporation) to continue to contribute—whether financially or in kind—to the process.

EU Directive 2002/91/EC

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will publish a regulatory impact assessment for the implementation of EU directive 2002/91/EC. [70651]

Yvette Cooper: The technical provisions in Articles 3 to 6 of EU directive 2002/91/EC, the Energy Performance of Buildings Directive, have been implemented through an amendment of the Building Regulations. I have placed a copy of the final Regulatory Impact Assessment associated with this amendment in the Libraries of both Houses of Parliament.

There is a three-year derogation period within the Directive to apply fully the procedural provisions in Articles 7 to 10. We are developing a phased programme of implementation and a Regulatory Impact Assessment for this which will be published in due course.

Fire Safety

Ms Barlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if the Minister with responsibility for the fire service will meet the fire service, representatives of the business community and the insurance industry to discuss fire safety and prevention. [70280]

Angela E. Smith: Yes, it is my intention to meet with all key stakeholders, both internal and external, as and when appropriate. I understand that my predecessor met with representatives of the business community and the insurance industry at a meeting of the Business and Community Safety Forum on 3 May 2006.

Fire Service

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many hoax telephone calls were made to the fire brigade in (a) England, (b) the North East and (c) the Tees Valley in each year since 1997. [71091]

Angela E. Smith: The number of hoax telephone calls made to the fire and rescue service (FRS) is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The following table shows the number of malicious false fire alarms attended by the FRS in each year since 1997 in:

(a) England;

(b) North East;

(c) Cleveland FRS (data for areas below FRS level are not available. Tees Valley is within Cleveland FRS area).

Malicious false fire alarm calls attended by the fire and rescue service, 1997 to 2004

	England	North East	Number Cleveland
1997	84,416	8,413	3,377
1998	70,040	7,206	2,764
1999	66,542	5,888	2,423
2000	60,082	4,824	2,237
2001	59,648	4,472	1,757
2002[1]	54,109	3,898	1,568
2003[1]	47,010	2,453	590

Housing

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether the Code for Sustainable Homes will apply to new buildings other than dwellings. [69729]

Yvette Cooper: The Code for Sustainable Homes currently covers only homes, not all buildings. The Government are considering a wider Code for Sustainable Buildings. However, the first priority is to complete the Code for Sustainable Homes in the light of consultation responses.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will make a statement on the provision of affordable housing in Torbay. [69874]

Yvette Cooper: Recognising the need for more affordable housing in Torbay, the Housing Corporation has allocated £11 million from its National Affordable Housing Programme for the Torbay housing market area for 2006-08, a 63 per cent. increase on investment in 2004-06. This is expected to provide around 270 additional affordable homes to rent or buy and demonstrates the Government's commitment to building new affordable homes for the current and next generation in Torbay.

Torbay council is currently consulting on issues and options for its core strategy planning document, the chief document in the local development framework, and we would expect this to include targets for the provision of affordable housing. We continue to encourage local authorities, registered social landlords and other key stakeholders to work together to meet the challenges of high housing need.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the average density is in dwellings per hectare of the average (a) detached property, (b) semi-detached property, (c) terraced property and (d) flat. [70696]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans his Department has to develop an electronic register of (a) licensed private rented stock and (b) licensed houses of multiple occupation. [66316]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

Section 232 of the Housing Act 2004 requires every local authority to establish and maintain a register of licences granted under Parts 2 and 3, temporary exemption notices, and management orders under Part 4.

The information required to be included on the registers is prescribed by the Licensing and Management of Houses in Multiple Occupation and Other Houses (Miscellaneous Provisions) (England) Regulations 2006 (SI Number 373).

As required by the Act, it is up to every local authority to ensure that they establish and maintain a register of the licences granted in their area.

It is not Government's intention to develop an electronic register of (a) licensed private rented stock and (b) licensed houses in multiple occupation. The Government have therefore left the format for the registers up to local authorities' discretion.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many and what proportion of vulnerable people were estimated to be living in non-decent homes according to the English Housing Conditions Survey, in each year since 1990, broken down by (a) owner-occupier, (b) private sector rented, (c) local authority, (d) housing association and (e) other housing. [68563]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

The English House Condition Survey 2004: Headline report (ODPM, 2006) includes details of private sector vulnerable households living in homes that did not meet the decent homes standard in 1996, 2001, 2003 and 2004 (the years the survey was carried out).

The report is available on the ODPM website at www.odpm.gov.uk/ehcs. More detailed data for owner-occupiers, private tenants and social sector tenants (local authority and RSL tenants combined) are provided in the English House Condition Survey Standard Tables (Table VNla) also on the website. The data for Standard Tables currently cover 2001 and 2003 only and will be updated along with the publication of more detailed findings from 2004 later this year.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many people have participated in the key worker housing scheme in (a) Barnet and (b) London over the last five years, broken down by category of employment; and if he will make a statement. [67753]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

(a) 215 key workers have been helped in Barnet through the starter home initiative and key worker living since 2001.

Barnet	Starter home initiative 2001 to 2004	Key worker living 2004 to 2006	Totals by sector

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what categories of employment are eligible as key workers for the purposes of the key worker housing scheme; if he will review the categories; and if he will make a statement. [67754]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

For the purposes of the Key Worker Living (KWL) programme, a key worker is defined as someone employed by the public sector in a frontline role in health, education or community safety delivering an essential public service where there are serious recruitment and retention problems. Within this broad definition, sponsor Government Departments and police and fire authorities specify the groups at which help should be targeted based on recruitment and retention issues in critical frontline services. The sector-specific eligibility criteria can be found in Annex B of the KWL Capital Funding Guide on the Housing Corporation's website (www.housingcorp.gov.uk). This is currently being updated and will be published in due course.

Eligibility for KWL is kept under regular review.

David Howarth: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the impact of negative subsidy on local authority housing revenue accounts; and if he will make a statement. [64171]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

The impact of the positive and negative subsidy system on housing revenue accounts is redistributive. The balance of individual local authority housing revenue accounts is based on assumptions made by central Government, and means that some accounts are in surplus while others are in deficit. These assumptions bear no relationship to local rents or local authority decisions. The subsidy system allows surpluses in some local authorities' housing revenue accounts to be used to support other areas where there are deficits. In addition, the Government provide annually a further net contribution to the system of around £200 million, as total deficits are greater than total surpluses.

Edward Miliband: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many people on average were living in (a) council and (b) housing association properties in (i) 1981, (ii) 1991 and (iii) 2001. [68293]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

Census data show that the following numbers of people in England were living in (a) council and (b) housing association properties:

		Council	Housing Association
(i)	1981	12,866,808	753,110
(ii)	1991	8,545,180	1,154,570
(iii)	2001	5,970,845	2,677,873

Sarah Teather: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much social housing grant has been (a) allocated and (b) spent in each English region in (i) 2004-05 and (ii) to date in 2005-06. [55775]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

The following table shows the amount of social housing grant allocated for each region through Regional Housing Boards. Allocations are approved for each scheme and represent the total grant for the life of a scheme regardless of what year the funds are expended. There is no direct comparison between allocations and spend in a particular year.

Region	Approved allocations 2004-05 (£ million)	Approved allocations to 2005-06 (provisional) (£ million)	2006-08 allocations value
East Midlands	66	68	166

Mr. Scott: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much the study of English housing cost in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [69279]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

The cost of the survey of English housing in each of the last five years was as follows:

	Cost (£)
2001-02	854,360
2002-03	862,643
2003-04	884,858
2004-05	988,953
2005-06	1,030,000

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what funding is available for initiatives to move people from temporary to permanent housing from within the 2006 to 2008 National Affordable Housing Programme in Tamworth; and if he will make a statement. [68369]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

The National Affordable Housing Programme (NAHP) funds provision of affordable housing; 2006-08 funding has now been allocated. Two schemes in Tamworth received the full amount requested of £1,049,540. This will provide 28 new housing units which will assist moves from temporary to permanent accommodation. Two other schemes are expected to proceed under S106 agreements without NAHP funding and expect to provide a further 29 units.

Local Government

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what recent guidance her Department and its predecessor have given to local authorities on modernising local government structures; and if she will make a statement. [69954]

Mr. Woolas: We have not issued any such recent guidance to local authorities. We have been engaged in a wide-ranging debate about local governance, including the future of two-tier arrangements in the shire areas and will finalise our position at about the same time as the publication of the proposed White Paper later in the year.

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether she has assumed the ministerial powers in the Local Government Act 2000 in relation to new arrangements for local governance. [69957]

Mr. Woolas: My right hon. Friend's responsibilities include those for the statutory framework for local governance in England.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the cost was of (a) monitoring, (b) reporting on and (c) collecting from local authorities mid-year updates in respect of the 2005-06 Annual Efficiency Statements efficiency reports. [70082]

Mr. Woolas: We do not hold the data requested for costs incurred by councils and central Government relating to the monitoring and reporting of efficiency statements. The principal work arising from the collection of statements is the review of their contents undertaken by personnel in the DCLG, other Government Departments and the Regional Centres of Excellence. This work helps those organisations to obtain a better understanding of the areas where councils are seeking and achieving efficiency gains, so support to councils can be better targeted.

In terms of collecting efficiency statements, local authorities are required to submit them through an online submission facility: the esd-toolkit. This allows all the data from councils' statements to be collated automatically at the deadline for submissions. For the 2005-06 Mid-Year Update efficiency statements, this was provided at no extra cost as part of an existing contract with the Improvement and Development Agency.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what funds were distributed to each London borough to increase efficiency in local government in each of the last three years. [70089]

Mr. Woolas: Funding to support efficiency in local authorities is distributed to nine Regional Centres of Excellence (RCEs). Each RCE has local governance arrangements reflecting authorities across the region.

Funding for individual projects, many of which operate across local authority boundaries, are decided by the RCE board. Since 2004-05, funding made available to the London RCE in relation to taking forward the Efficiency Agenda is as follows:

Receiving authority—London Regional Centre of Excellence

	Funding
Grant payable (2004-05) (million)	1.25
Grant payable (2005-06) (million)	1.65
Additional core funding (2005-06)	50,000
Workstream specific efficiency support (2005-06)	228,366.25
	100,000

Individual projects supported by the London RCE are listed at: http://www.lcpe.gov.uk/workstream sexemplars/List_of_Current_Projects.asp.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much debt write-off and gap funding for stock transfers has cost since 1997; what provision has been made for each of the next five years; and which budget line this expenditure comes under. [40834]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

Housing debt is funded through the Housing Revenue Account (HRA) subsidy system. Where a local authority transfers its housing to an RSL and the receipt it receives is not sufficient to repay the outstanding debt attributable to the housing, the Office will make a one-off payment where the debt is held with the Public Works Loans Board. The one-off payment is made to discharge the Office's continued liability, through the HRA, to pay subsidy on an authority's housing attributable debt that remains after transfer. Since 1997 the Office has repaid £1.787 billion of local authority debt (including early redemption fees) in this way. There is voted provision of £616 million per year from 2005-06 to 2007-08 for overhanging debt.

To date, the Government have paid £9.11 million as gap funding grant. £182 million has been made available over the 2004 Spending Review period for gap funding.

Overhanging debt is capital AME (Annually Managed Expenditure); gap funding is resource DEL (Departmental Expenditure Limit).

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what funds have been collected from council tax in each London borough in each of the last eight years. [67009]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

The amount of council tax collected, irrespective of the financial year to which it relates, in each London borough in each of the last eight years is shown in the following table.

London Borough of Havering

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what change in funds will result from the Annual Efficiency Statements 2005-06 Mid-Year Update for the London borough of Havering. [70071]

Mr. Woolas: There will be no change in the funding for the London borough of Havering as a result of the 2005-06 Mid-Year Update efficiency statements. One of the key elements of the local government efficiency agenda is that councils retain the resources released from their efficiency gains and can decide how they are to be reallocated.

The 2005-06 Mid-Year Update efficiency statement from Havering showed that it expected to have achieved £9.85 million efficiency gains by the end of 2005-06, which represents the release of real resources that could be used to improve local services or hold down council tax.

Lyons Inquiry

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government when the Lyons Inquiry is next expected to publish (a) its research and (b) thematic reports. [70718]

Mr. Woolas: Sir Michael Lyons is leading an independent inquiry into local government. The timing of the publication of any papers is entirely a matter for him.

To date, the Lyons Inquiry has published two papers: a consultation paper and interim report on 15 December 2005 and a discussion paper on 8 May 2006, "National prosperity, local choice and civic engagement: a new partnership between central and local government for the 21st century".

Sir Michael is due to deliver his final report to Government at the end of this year.

Owner Occupation (Doncaster, North)

Edward Miliband: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many houses in Doncaster North were owner-occupied in (a) 1981, (b) 1991 and (c) 2001; and how many were owner-occupied on the most recent date for which figures are available. [68303]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

Census data show the following number of homes to have been owner-occupied in Doncaster North in:

	Number
(a) 1981	16,865
(b) 1991	20,389
(c) 2001	22,575

2001 is the most recent date for which figures are available at constituency level.

Pensions

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government who is eligible to join the Local Government Pension Scheme whether or not directly employed thereby; and how contributions for these people are funded. [70729]

Mr. Woolas: A person may be a member of the Local Government Pension Scheme (LGPS) in England and Wales, if employed by a scheme employer, such as a county or borough council, or certain other bodies with historic links to local government, including certain schools or transport undertakings. In addition, specified employees of some 2,400 external bodies who are contractually admitted to the LGPS are eligible for membership; many of these as a result of the contracting out of local authority services.

The LGPS is a funded scheme with 89 separately administered funds. The vast majority of employees pay contributions at the rate of 6 per cent. of salary; employers pay contributions at a rate determined by each pension fund actuary. Investment income in 2004/05 totalled £2.3 billion.

Planning

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the planning decisions that he has personally (a) refused and (b) approved during his tenure as the Secretary of State in charge of planning. [66254]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

A list of planning decisions approved and returned by the First Secretary of State since June 2002 has been placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many (a) successful and (b) unsuccessful appeals have been brought against planning decisions made by Tamworth borough council in each year since 1997. [68370]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

Records held by the Planning Inspectorate go back to 2000 only. The following table shows the number of planning appeals (a) successful and (b) unsuccessful and the total number of appeals decided relating to the local authority in each of the last six years. It is not possible to provide data before this date.

Tamworth borough council

	Decided	(a) Allowed/ successful	(b) Dismissed/ unsuccessful
2000	6	4	2
2002	6	5	1
2003	8	2	6

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what estimate the Government have made of the annual revenue to be raised in England from reformed section 106 agreements once planning gain supplement is introduced. [70706]

Yvette Cooper: The Government have proposed in their consultation paper "Planning-gain Supplement" that if a PGS was introduced the existing system of planning obligations would be scaled back to matters related to the development-site environment and affordable housing provision. No estimates can yet be made of the value that would be raised from scaled back obligations. The value of scaled back obligations would be dependent on a number of variables including the final policy, the future state of the land and development markets, the behaviour of developers and transitional arrangements.

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will list the appeals which she has received against local authority refusals of planning applications by (a) J Sainsbury plc, (b) Tesco plc, (c) ASDA Stores Ltd, (d) WM Morrisons Supermarket plc and (e) Safeway plc since June 1997, stating in each case (i) whether the application was allowed on appeal, (ii) whether the decision followed the recommendation of the inquiry inspector, (iii) whether the proposed development was in a residential area, (iv) whether the application included planning permission for new homes and (v) whether lorry deliveries were expressly permitted between 10 pm and 7 am. [70260]

Yvette Cooper: I have placed in the Library of the House a table which lists appeals received against local authority refusals of planning applications by (a) J Sainsbury plc, (b) Tesco plc, (c) ASDA Stores Ltd, (e) Safeway plc. There is no record of appeals by (d) WM Morrisons Supermarket plc. Data are only available from 2000.

The table also shows (i) whether the appeal was allowed or dismissed and (ii) where the appeal was determined by the Secretary of State and whether the decision followed the recommendation of the inspector.

The data requested for:

(iii) whether the proposed development was in a residential area,

(iv) whether the application included planning permission for new homes; and

(v) whether lorry deliveries were expressly permitted between 10 pm and 7 am; are either not available or can be obtained only at a disproportionate cost.

However, the table does include a development description of each appeal and where this appears relevant to request item (iv) has been highlighted. It should be noted that two of these descriptions are incomplete.

The table also indicates the local authority and the appeal decision dates.

Private Office

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government in which building her private office will be located. [70583]

Angela E. Smith: The private office of the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government is located in Eland House, Bressenden Place, London SW1E 5DU.

Regional Fire Control Centres

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the Government's latest estimate is of the cost of setting up the nine regional fire control centres. [70601]

Angela E. Smith: I refer the Hon. Member to the answer given by the Hon. Member for Poplar and Canning Town on 27 March 2006, Official Report, 817W.

Regional Government

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what process exists for dealing with a conflict between a regional development agency regional economic strategy and a regional chamber's regional spatial strategy on (a) housing numbers and (b) airport expansion. [70703]

Yvette Cooper: The regional economic strategy (RES) and regional spatial strategy (RSS) should be mutually reinforcing. They should take account of each other and be based on a common evidence base.

Differences between them may emerge during their preparation and public consultation. In particular, the RSS is also subject to testing by an independent panel who are likely to probe the alignment of the RSS with the RES, as an identified matter of interest.

Government are responsible both for endorsing the RES and for finalising an RSS.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the timetable is for the (a) ratification and (b) drafting of the regional spatial strategies in each region. [70704]

Yvette Cooper: The latest estimated issue dates of the final RSS for revisions currently in process are set out in the following table. It must be stressed that these are indicative dates only.

RSS revision timetable key stages

Register of Home Condition Reports

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans the Government have to consult on the regulations to implement the Register of Home Condition Reports. [66258]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

Consultation was carried out from October 2005 to January 2006 on the principle of establishing the Home Condition Report register, and the requirement that reports become valid only once they are entered on to it. Provisions for the register will be set out in regulations to be made shortly.

Details regarding the operation of the register will be specified in further regulations planned for later in the year. Drafting of these regulations will proceed in consultation with stakeholders.

Right-to-buy Receipts

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much income local authorities received from right-to-buy receipts in each year since 1997; what estimate he has made of income in future years; and how much was (a) retained by local authorities and (b) remitted to the Treasury in each year. [45303]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

The following table shows both the total capital receipts the disposal of all housing assets and from right-to-buy sales of local authority dwellings in England in the years from 1997-98 onwards, net of discount and as reported by local authorities. These are capital receipts and not income into the authority's Housing Revenue Account, which is generated by, for instance, rental income.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not estimate future right-to-buy receipts but does estimate future housing capital receipts. Estimates are subject to a number of volatile factors such as the state of the housing market, lending rates, amounts of disposable income and stock condition, and are kept under constant review.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister collects data on total pooled receipts and total amounts set aside by housing authorities. These figures include the amounts arising from right-to-buy sales alongside amounts relating to other housing capital receipts, but the amounts relating to right-to-buy sales are not separately identified.

The amount of income received by local authorities from the sale of housing assets will not be quite equal to their housing capital receipts less the amount they are obliged to set-aside or pool. Rather, the housing capital receipt, such as a right-to-buy receipt, will first be reduced by, for instance, the administration costs associated with the disposal and any other deduction to the capital receipt the authority may make, such as clawing back the cost of improvement to the asset in previous years. It is the value of this reduced capital receipt that is then used as the basis for the calculation of the set-aside or pooling liability.

As can be seen from the following table, since 1997 the Government have consistently invested more in housing than was received in receipts. In 2004-05 the amount paid to government from all housing receipts (not just right-to-buy) was £1.7 billion. The amount invested in housing was £4.1 billion i.e. almost 2½ times the amount received. The ratio of amount invested to amount received is expected to increase substantially in the future.

£ million

	Total housing capital receipts	Right-to-buy receipts	Set Aside/Pooling	Capital investment	Investment greater than set-aside/pooling by
1997-98	1,438	890	943	1,894	951
1998-99	1,630	907	1,085	2,098	1,013

[1] No data
[2] Estimated pooled housing capital receipts
[3] Programmed expenditure
Note:
Pooling replaced set-aside as the mechanism to invest housing capital receipts in 2004-05

Right-to-buy receipts are extremely volatile and difficult to forecast. They are affected by the rest of the housing market and by the nature of the properties available in particular areas. An extrapolation of current trends suggests:

£ million

	2005-06	2006-07	2007-08
Housing capital receipts	1,120	1,068	1,004
Retained by local authority	280	267	251
To Treasury	788	729	665
To ODPM	52	72	88

In 2004-05 ODPM received £53.9 million from debt free local authorities. Treasury received £1.640 billion from with debt local authorities. The remainder was retained by local authorities.

Section 106 Agreements

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what estimate the Government have made of the annual revenue in cash or in kind from section 106 agreements in England. [70707]

Yvette Cooper: Sheffield university and the Halcrow Group have recently completed a study for the Department for Communities and Local Government (DCLG) "Valuing Planning Obligations in England" which provides estimates on both the number of planning permissions that include planning obligations as well as the value of contributions being negotiated by local authorities for the year 2003-04. The report, based on a national survey of local authorities, will be published shortly.

Previous research undertaken by Sheffield university titled "Planning Obligations and the mediation of development" published in 2001 provided estimates for the average value of planning obligations (including cash and in-kind) but not of annual yield.

Sound Insulation

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many dwellings constructed in each year since 2000 have failed to satisfy the relevant regulations on sound insulation; and if he will make a statement. [65143]

Angela E. Smith: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested is not available, but surveys carried out by the Building Research Establishment have indicated that about 25 per cent. of the party walls and 40 per cent. of the party floors between dwellings failed to meet the standards expected by the 1992 edition of Part E of the Building Regulations, which deals with sound insulation. To improve this situation the ODPM revised Part E in 2003 and the evidence is that compliance rates are now much higher, in excess of 90 per cent.

PRIME MINISTER

BDO Stoy Hayward

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister when he last met BDO Stoy Hayward; and what matters were discussed. [70826]

The Prime Minister: I have had no meetings with BDO Stoy Hayward on Government business.

Connexions

Mr. Amess: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions he has had with Ministers at (a) the Department of Health and (b) the Department for Education and Skills about the Government's Connexions programme; and if he will make a statement. [70390]

The Prime Minister: I have regular meetings and discussions with ministerial colleagues and others on a wide range of subjects. Information relating to internal meetings, discussion and advice is not disclosed as to do so could harm the frankness and candour of internal discussion.

Departmental Structures

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make it his policy to consult Parliament before embarking on changes to departmental structures; and if he will make a statement. [70928]

The Prime Minister: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave him on 15 February, Official Report, columns 2031-32W.

Ministerial Responsibilities

Mr. Amess: To ask the Prime Minister when an updated edition of the List of Ministerial Responsibilities will be published; if he will send a copy to each (a) hon. Member and (b) Member of the House of Lords; and if he will make a statement. [70077]

The Prime Minister: An updated List of Ministerial Responsibilities is currently being compiled and will be published shortly.

Copies will be available for Members of both Houses in the Vote Office and the Printed Paper Office.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister what mechanisms he has in place to enable him to assess the effectiveness of Ministers; and if he will make a statement. [70924]

The Prime Minister: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave the hon. Member for South Suffolk (Mr. Yeo) on 28 November 2002, Official Report, column 442W.

Ministerial Travel

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Southend, West (Mr. Amess) of 2 May 2006, Official Report, column 1385W, on visits, if he will list the mode of transport used for each visit. [70421]

The Prime Minister: I travel making the most efficient and cost-effective arrangements. My travel arrangements are in accordance with the arrangements for official travel set out in chapter 10 of the Ministerial Code, and the accompanying guidance document, "Travel by Ministers".

Mr. Hands: To ask the Prime Minister (1) whether he uses an Oyster Card in fulfilling his official responsibilities; [69913]

(2) whether the Oyster Card he was filmed with for television on 27 April is one he uses in fulfilling his official duties. [69914]

The Prime Minister: I travel making the most efficient and cost-effective arrangements. My travel arrangements are in accordance with the arrangements for official travel set out in Chapter 10 of the Ministerial Code, and the accompanying guidance document, "Travel by Ministers".

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the flights he has taken since 2001; and what measures to offset the carbon emissions were taken for each flight. [68943]

The Prime Minister: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost. All my travel is undertaken in accordance with the "Ministerial Code" and "Travel by Ministers", copies of which are available in the Library. Since 1999, the Government have published on an annual basis a list of all overseas visits by Cabinet Ministers costing in excess of £500. Copies of the lists are available in the Library. Information for 2005-06 is currently being compiled and will be published when it is ready.

All central Government ministerial and official air travel is being offset from 1 April 2006. Departmental aviation emissions are calculated on an annual basis and subsequently offset through payments to a central fund. The fund purchases Certified Emissions Reductions credits from energy efficiency and renewable energy projects with high sustainable development benefits, located in developing countries. In addition, offsetting my flights and those of Ministers in DEFRA has been backdated to 1 April 2005.

Offshore Trusts

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister (1) what his policy is on Ministers having offshore trusts administered (a) directly and (b) by means of a blind trust; [70828]

(2) whether it is his policy that Ministers are required to make declarations to HM Revenue and Customs relating to (a) property, (b) income and (c) any other form of assets held in (i) accounts, (ii) trusts and (iii) other forms of holding outside the UK. [70829]

The Prime Minister: Guidance to Ministers on handling their financial interests is set out in section 5 of the Ministerial Code.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Amess: To ask the Prime Minister when it became his policy to refer hon. Members to his website in replying to Parliamentary Questions; and if he will make a statement. [70078]

The Prime Minister: Where my answer refers to a specific document on the website, copies are made available to the hon. Member asking the question and are also placed in the Libraries of the House.

Party Funding

Mike Penning: To ask the Prime Minister what guidance has been prepared on determining whether party political donors are in breach of regulations governing the grant of peerages in return for financial or other assistance; and if he will make a statement. [68797]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Pendle (Mr. Prentice) on 17 November 2005, Official Report, column 1420W.

Planning

Mr. Hands: To ask the Prime Minister which Minister is responsible for Government decisions as a result of planning inquiries. [69956]

The Prime Minister: Government decisions as a result of planning inquiries will be made by Ministers in the newly created Department for Communities and Local Government.

President Chavez

Mr. Hands: To ask the Prime Minister whether he will be meeting President Hugo Chavez of Venezuela during his visit to the United Kingdom on 15 to 16 May. [69917]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the press briefing given by my Official Spokesman on 12 May, a copy of which is available on the No. 10 website.

Written Records

Mr. Amess: To ask the Prime Minister whether written notes are kept of conversations between himself and foreign heads of Government; and if he will make a statement. [70391]

The Prime Minister: Records are kept in accordance with 'Private Office Records Guidance' prepared by the Cabinet Office and the National Archives. Copies of this guidance are available on the National Archives website.

TRANSPORT

Disabled People

Tom Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on his Department's progress in fulfilling its statutory obligation as a public body of promoting the rights of disabled people. [66009]

Gillian Merron: The Disability Discrimination Act 2005 placed new duties on public authorities to promote equality for disabled people, 'the Disability Equality Duty'.

The Department for Transport is currently assessing its policies in accordance with the duty and the results of this exercise will be included in its Disability Equality Scheme (DES). The DES will set out how the Department intends to meet its duty to promote disability equality including the arrangements in place to assess the impact of its activities together with an action plan outlining how it intends to improve outcomes for disabled people.

The Department for Transport is committed to an accessible public transport system in which disabled people have the same opportunities to travel as other members of society.

A great deal has already been achieved in this area. For example, we have introduced regulations under part 5 of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 (DDA 1995) making all new rail vehicles, buses and coaches accessible. Over 4,400 compliant rail vehicles are already in service and almost half the bus fleet is accessible. These improvements have already had a significant impact on the day-to-day mobility of disabled people.

We are also implementing the transport provisions of the Disability Discrimination Act 2005. The new Act contains measures amending the rail vehicle accessibility regime and will extend part 3 of the DDA 1995 (which deals with access to goods and services) to the operators of all land-based public transport, vehicle hire and breakdown services from 4 December 2006.

Transport infrastructure, such as stations and airports, is already covered by these provisions which require service providers to remove obstacles that mean disabled people find it impossible or unreasonably difficult to access services. Policy initiatives, such as the recently announced "Access for All" fund (a £370 million ring-fenced resource available to improve access to railway stations) will provide further improvements.

Heathrow (Night Flights)

Graham Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what studies he has undertaken into the economic impact of removing the night time restrictions on flights at Heathrow. [68688]

Gillian Merron: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by the then Parliamentary-Under Secretary of State on 28 November 2005, Official Report, columns 1487-88W, to the hon. Member for Richmond Park (Susan Kramer).

Railways

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the threat by GNER trains to take the Rail Regulator to court over the decision to allow Grand Central Railways to run a Sunderland to Teesside to London rail service. [71377]

Derek Twigg: It is for Great North Eastern Railway Ltd. to determine whether or not it has a case to seek a Judicial Review.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much it cost to run (a) Haltwhistle and (b) Cramlington railway station between January 2004 and January 2005. [68878]

Derek Twigg: Northern Rail estimates the running costs of each station to be £35,609 per annum.

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many people travelled by train in the most recent period for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [70996]

Derek Twigg: The Office of Rail Regulation publishes rail usage information quarterly in National Rail Trends. The most recent publication covered quarter 3 2005-06 (October to December 2005) and showed there were 285 million passenger journeys in the quarter.

Road Safety

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what assessment he has made of the effects on road safety of requiring drivers to wear reflective vests when leaving their vehicles at the roadside following a breakdown or accident; and if he will make a statement; [70354]

(2) what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the impact on road safety of requiring drivers to wear reflective vests when leaving their vehicles at the roadside following a breakdown or accident; and if he will make a statement; [70355]

(3) what advice his Department has issued on action to be taken by motorists and their passengers when leaving a vehicle at the roadside in the event of an accident or breakdown on roads which do not have a hard shoulder; [70385]

(4) when his Department last reviewed the advice to motorists provided in the Highway Code on the action to be taken following an accident or breakdown at the roadside; when he expects the consultation process on revising the Highway Code to be completed; and if he will make a statement; [70386]

(5) what assessment he has made of the extent to which motorists follow existing guidance in the Highway Code on the action to be taken following an accident or breakdown at the roadside; and if he will make a statement. [70387]

Dr. Ladyman: We will continue to monitor experience in other countries that introduce legislation requiring drivers to wear reflective vests when leaving their vehicles at the roadside following a breakdown or accident. If clear evidence starts to emerge that it is beneficial, we would look again at the need to legislate.

The Highway Code advises motorists and their passengers what action to take when leaving a vehicle at the roadside in the event of an accident or breakdown. The Department has also produced a leaflet, "A Guide to Safer Motorway Driving", which also covers breakdowns. This advises drivers and their passengers where to stand after a breakdown, so that they are least vulnerable to being hit by other vehicles.

We have reviewed this advice as part of the current major revision of the Highway Code. The public consultation, which began on 15 February and ended on 12 May, includes proposed new advice to motorists in the section on breakdowns, which says

"help other road users see you by wearing light coloured fluorescent clothing in daylight and reflective clothing at night or in poor visibility".

We will now be considering all the responses to the consultation and the revised code should be issued next spring.

No assessment has been made as to whether motorists follow the guidance in the Highway Code on actions to be taken following an accident. Although failure to comply with the non-statutory rules in the code will not, in itself, cause a person to be prosecuted, the code may be used in any court proceedings under the traffic acts to establish liability.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many people have (a) been killed and (b) seriously injured after leaving their vehicles at the roadside following an accident or breakdown on (i) motorways and (ii) other trunk roads in each of the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [70356]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested is not available.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what research his Department (a) has undertaken and (b) plans to undertake into the reasons for trends in the seat belt wearing rate for car drivers between (i) October 1996 and October 1997, (ii) October 2002 and April 2003 and (iii) April and October 2005; and if he will make a statement; [70398]

(2) when he expects the Great Britain car and van seat belt wearing percentage rates for April to be published; if he will place a copy in the Library when published; and if he will make a statement. [70399]

Dr. Ladyman: No such research has been undertaken or is planned.

The table of seat belt wearing rates from the survey in April 2006 will be available soon. When it is published on the Department's website, a copy will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) males and (b) females received an exemption from the requirements of section 14 of the Road Traffic Act 1988 in the last period for which figures are available, broken down by (i) age group and (ii) reason for exemption; and if he will make a statement. [70400]

Dr. Ladyman: This information is not collected.

Mr. Newmark: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the five locations on the A12 in Essex with the highest incidence of traffic accidents in each of the last five years. [70769]

Dr. Ladyman: The Information requested has been placed in the Libraries of the House. In addition, annual safety reports for the A12 are now available on the Highways Agency's website.

Mr. Newmark: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many persons have been (a) killed and (b) seriously injured on the A12 in Essex in each of the past five years; and what the corresponding figure is in 2006 to date. [70770]

Dr. Ladyman: The following table shows the number of people killed and seriously injured on A12 in Essex over the last five years. The Highways Agency does not currently hold full accident details for the first quarter of 2006.

Accidents A12 Essex

	Fatal	Seriously injured
2000	5	41
2001	5	49
2002	4	56
2003	4	40
2004	4	64
2005	7	57
2006	[1]	—

[1] To date.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to publish the revised guidance on speed limits for local authorities. [71194]

Dr. Ladyman: Guidance on setting local speed limits is currently contained in Circular Roads 1/93. The Department has consulted on a draft revision and this guidance will be published shortly.

SPECS Cameras

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Epsom and Ewell (Chris Grayling) of 19 April 2006, Official Report, column 709W, on SPECS cameras, if he will list the 16 core sites; and if he will make a statement. [71001]

Dr. Ladyman: The 16 sites, broken down by safety camera partnership area and location, are shown in the following table.

Partnership name	Site name
Nottinghamshire	A52 / Radcliffe Road / Holme Pierrepont
Nottinghamshire	A52 / Saxondale
Nottinghamshire	A631 / MHI Hill / Gringley on the Hill
Nottinghamshire	A6514 / Ring Road / Nottingham
Nottinghamshire	B6004 / Arnold Road / Nottingham
Nottinghamshire	Edwards Lane / Nottingham
Nottinghamshire	A631 / Scaftworth
Northamptonshire	A43 / Lumbertubs Way / Northampton
Northamptonshire	A428 / Bedford Road (SPECS)
Nottinghamshire	A46 / Cotgrave
Nottinghamshire	A46 / Fosse Road / Farndon
Nottinghamshire	A52 / Bingham
Nottinghamshire	A610 / Bobbers Mil / Nottingham
Nottinghamshire	A52 / Grantham Road / Radcliffe on Trent
South Yorkshire	A616(T) / Stocksbridge Bypass / Barnsley
Strathclyde	A77 / Bogend Toll / Ardwell

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Epsom and Ewell (Chris Grayling) of 19 April 2006, Official Report, column 709W, on SPECS cameras, what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of SPECS cameras in (a) reducing accidents and (b) reducing (i) serious and (ii) minor injuries. [71002]

Dr. Ladyman: No specific assessment has been made of the effectiveness of SPECS time-over-distance cameras. However the independent four-year evaluation report of the national safety camera programme covered any SPECS cameras operating between April 2000 and March 2004. The independent academics concluded that SPECS cameras were equally as effective in reducing collisions and casualties as other fixed and red-light cameras. They also concluded that SPECS cameras have been particularly effective at reducing excessive speeds, which are defined as 15 mph over the speed limit.

Station Security

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the effect of the British Transport Police trial deployment of metal scanners at London stations. [70200]

Derek Twigg: "Operation Shield" was conceived as a high visibility Intelligence led policing tactic to tackle knife related crime and forms part of the British Transport Police's (BTP) strategy to reduce violence against the person. The BTP trialled the use of portable metal detecting scanners at London stations for a period of eight weeks from 6 February 2006. During the eight week trial 1,148 stops were carried out from a total of 9,728 people passing through the scanners. 107 arrests were made, of which 48 were for the possession of offensive weapons. The operation is now being rolled-out nationally, across England, Scotland and Wales. It will be deployed on specific pre-planned intelligence-led operations as and when appropriate.

Traffic Growth

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assumptions of traffic growth up to 2021 for housing expansion in north Northamptonshire are being used by his Department in discussions with the growth areas directorate in the Department for Communities and Local Government. [70190]

Dr. Ladyman: The review of the East Midlands Regional Spatial Strategy provides the overall framework for assessing and planning for housing and other growth in Northamptonshire.

It is for local authorities to develop detailed forecasts of traffic growth. Northamptonshire have commissioned a series of transportation studies to identify a broader package of transport measures to achieve the modal shift required to enable the scale of growth envisaged in Northamptonshire and surrounding areas to be delivered in a sustainable manner.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Private Office Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Solicitor-General what percentage of his private office staff are (a) male, (b) female and (c) disabled. [68988]

The Solicitor-General: My noble Friend the Attorney-General and I share a private office. As of 12 May 2006, expressed as a percentage as requested, the breakdown is 80 per cent. female and 20 per cent. male. None are registered disabled.

David Simpson: To ask the Solicitor-General how much has been paid in (a) salary, (b) travelling expenses, (c) subsistence allowance and (d) removal expenses to special advisers in his private office in each of the last five years. [69012]

The Solicitor-General: The Law Officers have no special advisers.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Early-day Motions

Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission if he will estimate the cost of tabling an early-day motion, including printing and clerical costs. [71096]

Nick Harvey: Costs of processing early-day motions (EDMs) include the time of Clerks in vetting motions, costs of staff entering the data and costs of printing and publishing, which depend on the number of times motions are reprinted. EDMs vary in length and complexity and the number of names to them may be one or many. Processing and printing EDMs is only one of a number of tasks carried out by the staff involved and no realistic disaggregation can be made which can give a cost for all aspects of processing a single EDM. The best estimate available of the overall costs of printing and publishing early-day motions in 2005-06 is £627,000, giving an average printing and publishing cost per EDM of £290.

Line of Route

Mr. Amess: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission how many visitors have been given conducted tours of the line of route, broken down by tours (a) organised by the Central Tours Office, (b) conducted by an hon. Member, (c) conducted by a Member of the House of Lords, (d) conducted by staff of an hon. Member and (e) conducted by staff of either House in the most recent two years for which figures are available. [70403]

Nick Harvey: The numbers of visitors given conducted tours of the visitor route organised by the Central Tours Office (CTO) during the summer opening to the public in 2004-05 was 93,314 and in 2005-06 was 79,170. The numbers of visitors throughout the year on tours organised on behalf of hon. Members of both Houses by the CTO in 2004-05 was 113,815 and in 2005-06 was 108,089, of which approximately 6 per cent. were estimated to be in respect of Members of the House of Lords. Members of both Houses, their staff and staff of both Houses are able to conduct tours themselves for up to six guests at a time without booking; there are no data on the number of visitors under these arrangements.

Telephone Bill

Mr. Amess: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission what the telephone bill for the House of Commons was in each year since 1989. [70402]

Nick Harvey: Details of the cash expenditure incurred on telephone services by the House of Commons is not available prior to 2001. The figures for the last five financial years are:

2001-02	2,145
2002-03	2,558
2003-04	2,979
2004-05	2,668
2005-06	2,342

TREASURY

Corporation Tax

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the use of low profit-making companies incorporated for the purposes of the avoidance of corporation tax. [70796]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 12 May 2006]: The Government are not aware of any self-employed businesses that would incorporate for the purposes of avoiding corporation tax.

The associated companies rules prevent companies that fragment into many lower-profit companies from benefiting from lower rates of corporation tax.

EU (UK Contributions)

Mr. Brady: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the Financial Secretary to the Treasury's statement in the debate on future EU finances and own reserves on 8 May 2006, Official Report, columns 134-5WS, what estimate he has made of the difference in the UK abatement in the new EU financial perspective compared with what it would have been if calculated using the mechanism in place prior to December 2005. [71148]

Ed Balls: As agreed in the December Council Conclusions, the cost to the UK compared to the application of the current Own Resources would be limited to €10.5 billion (£6.9 billion) in 2004 prices.

EU Agriculture Budget

Michael Gove: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of the EU budget will be spent on agriculture in each of the years from 2007 to 2013; and if he will break down the spending between pillar 1 and pillar 2 spending in each year. [70971]

Ed Balls: In its information fiche, dated 11 April, the EU Commission gives an indicative breakdown of expenditure (2004 prices) for 2007 to 2013 in respect of agriculture, as follows:

	2007	2008	2009	2010	2011	2012	2013	Total
Agriculture: direct aids and market support (Pillar 1)
€ billion	43.120	42.697	42.270	41.864	41.453	41.047	40.645	293.105
Share of total EU budget (percentage)	35.7	35.1	34.5	34.0	33.4	32.7	32.0	33.9
Rural Development (Pillar 2)
€ billion	10.710	10.447	10.185	9.955	9.717	9.483	9.253	69.750
Share of total EU budget (percentage)	8.9	8.6	8.3	8.1	7.8	7.6	7.3	8.1

Home Computer Initiative

Peter Luff: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to his answer of 3 May 2006, Official Report, columns 1718-21W, on the Home Computer Initiative, what criteria were used in deciding to group questions from hon. Members on the Home Computer Initiative; and what account was taken of the relevant provisions of the ministerial code in reaching this decision. [69902]

Dawn Primarolo: The questions concerned were grouped to enable a full, substantive statement to be made to the House.

Inheritance Tax

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many written representations he has received since January protesting about inheritance tax; and if he will make a statement; [66657]

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received on the treatment of (a) accumulation and maintenance trusts and (b) interest in possession trusts for the purposes of inheritance tax; [70202]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government have received a number of written representations about the tax system, including inheritance tax and the tax treatment of trusts.

Pensions

Danny Alexander: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what provision has been made for pension fund deficits in privatised utilities where the pension scheme is guaranteed by the Government. [69892]

John Healey: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given to the hon. Member for Eastbourne (Mr. Waterson) on 3 May 2006, Official Report, column 1723W.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the change in the number of pensioners paying income tax since 1997. [69901]

John Healey: Information on the estimated number people paying income tax who are of state pension age can be found in table 2.1 'Number of individual taxpayers' on the HM Revenue and Customs website at:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/income_tax/table2_1.xls

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Burma

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what financial support his Department has provided to pro-democracy groups related to Burma in the last three financial periods. [67609]

Mr. Thomas: DFID has not provided any support directly to pro-democracy groups related to Burma in the last three financial periods. One of our four objectives in Burma is "increased prospects for successful transition to a democratic society". DFID is aiming to achieve this through support to participatory decision-making, constructive dialogue, innovation and other work to build capacity and institutions that will assist Burma's transition by, for example, integrating such approaches into our activities focused on livelihoods, health and education.

Millennium Development Goals

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what progress has been made towards achievement of the Millennium Development Goals. [70171]

Hilary Benn: DFID's public service agreements are based on the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs). Progress was reported in DFID's Departmental Report which was presented to Parliament on 9 May 2006. It is available in the Library of the House of Commons and on the DFID website (www.dfid.gov.uk).

There has been some progress towards the MDGs but not enough. In Africa there has been a reduction in the numbers of people living in poverty and in child deaths, increasing economic growth, and more children getting into school. HIV is also falling or stabilising in some African countries. Much more needs to be done, however, particularly on maternal mortality, girls' education and HIV. In Asia there has been progress in reducing income poverty. The number of children dying before their fifth birthday is decreasing and the number of children being cured of tuberculosis is increasing in many Asian countries. More progress is needed, however, if all the MDGs are to be achieved in Asia, particularly on gender equity.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Avian Influenza

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how long it took from the confirmation of the recent outbreak of avian influenza among poultry to dispose of the carcases; how the carcases were disposed of; and what measures were taken to ensure that the carcases did not enter the food chain. [69754]

Mr. Bradshaw: Poultry on the three premises involved in the recent outbreak of H7N3 avian influenza were slaughtered on suspicion of infection, based on preliminary laboratory results. Killing commenced on all three sites before disease was confirmed and the carcases were transported to off-site disposal facilities in biosecure, leakproof lorries within 24 hours of the culling operation. Disposal was by rendering and incineration. Each load was escorted by the state veterinary service to the disposal facility and destruction was confirmed by an official.

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what arrangements are in place for the mass disposal of carcases in the event of an outbreak of avian influenza; and what estimate the Government have made of (a) the number of birds which would need to be disposed of and (b) the maximum disposal capacity available. [69755]

Mr. Bradshaw: The arrangements for mass disposal of carcases in the event of an outbreak of avian influenza are laid out in our Exotic Animal Disease Generic Contingency Plan. Commercial fixed plant incineration or rendering will be the first options for mass disposal of carcases. If incineration and rendering capacity has been exhausted, it may be necessary to consider the use of approved commercial landfill or on-farm burial. Mass pyres will not be used. My Department has already put in place arrangements with animal incinerator and rendering companies to ensure the minimum delay should there be an outbreak of the disease.

The disease control policies are set out in the Contingency Plan and it is our policy to cull birds only where this is justified and on the basis of sound veterinary, epidemiological and scientific advice. Any estimate of the number of birds which would need to be culled depends on these factors and the nature of this advice at the time. Key factors will include the virus strain, its pathogenicity, the location of the disease outbreak and international developments.

The available incineration and rendering capacity at any time will depend on the location of the outbreak, the time of year, breakdowns and other demands. Some 2,500 tonnes per week (equivalent to approximately 1.25 million chickens) would be available very quickly and a further 10-15,000 tonnes per week could be brought on stream within about two weeks.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the average level of infection has been of (a) the H7 strain of avian influenza, (b) the H5N1 strain of avian influenza and (c) all other strains of avian influenza found in flocks during outbreaks. [69848]

Mr. Bradshaw: The infection rate within a flock will depend on the stage at which infection or disease is detected. The rate of spread and local epidemiology within a poultry population will be dependent on many factors, but once the virus is introduced into a holding its rate of spread within the flock will be strongly influenced by the host species, the virus strain and the production type. These factors are consistent in their impact for rates of infection in terms of different virus serotypes where rates typically approach 100 per cent.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations he has received on the detected infection rates for the H7 strain of avian influenza in (a) the UK and (b) other countries. [69849]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Department has received a range of representations on this subject.

The Veterinary Laboratory Agency (VLA) is world renowned for its avian influenza testing work. As the International Reference Laboratory for avian influenza, the VLA verifies other countries' test results. It is internationally recognised as a centre of excellence in veterinary research.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions he has had with scientists in Scandinavia on the UK's regime for testing for (a) the H7 strain, (b) the H5N1 strain and (c) all other strains of avian influenza. [69882]

Mr. Bradshaw: As an international reference laboratory—and especially as the EU community reference laboratory for avian influenza—the Veterinary Laboratories Agency (VLA) has frequent discussions with its counterparts overseas. The Agency takes a leading role in developing and defining standards and keeps abreast of the latest information.

Recent contact has been made with the relevant national laboratory in Sweden and a private laboratory in Sweden that conducts independent surveillance in wild bird populations. The national laboratory follows EU guidelines in its work to which the VLA makes a significant contribution. The private laboratory uses different sampling regimes which have not been validated to an international standard and lack comparative data with standard regimes.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of other countries' experiences of outbreaks of avian influenza in preparing the UK's (a) testing regime and (b) biosecurity measures; and if he will make a statement. [69889]

Mr. Bradshaw: We have worked very closely with the European Commission and all other member states on both the UK testing regime for avian influenza and the requirement for biosecurity measures for poultry keepers. We have also used the experiences of other countries to inform our assessment of the risk to UK poultry. We will continue to assess and review both testing procedures and biosecurity measures in the light of new developments.

Badger Casualties (Bovine TB)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with the National Assembly for Wales on the analysis of data from roadside casualties of badgers regarding bovine TB studies; and if she will take steps to provide for the results to be jointly collated and issued in a combined report. [68653]

Mr. Bradshaw: My Department holds discussions with the Welsh Assembly on a variety of issues. There are no plans to collate the results of the Road Traffic Accident surveys.

Biotech Products

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when his Department received the documents (a) Comments by the European Communities on the Scientific and Technical Advice to the Panel, Geneva, 28 January 2005 and (b) Further scientific or technical evidence in response to the other parties comments by the European Communities, Geneva, 10 February 2005, relating to the European Communities—Measures Affecting the Approval and Marketing of Biotech Products (DS291, DS292, DS293). [68129]

Ian Pearson: The document entitled "Comments by the European Communities on the Scientific and Technical Advice to the Panel, Geneva, 28 January 2005" was made available to Defra officials on 1 February 2005. The submission "Further scientific or technical evidence in response to other parties comments by the European Communities, Geneva, 10 February 2005" was provided to Defra officials on 11 February 2005.

Chewing Gum

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how the £600,000 provided by the Chewing Gum Action Group will be divided between the pilot areas; and how the pilot areas are dividing their funding between advertising, alternative disposal and enforcement related measures. [68777]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 8 May 2006]: The Chewing Gum Action Group funding provided to the 15 local authority areas is to be used solely to supply the paid advertising element of the campaigns. This will be complemented by local activity, funded by the individual local authorities, which will include enforcement and alternative disposal solutions.

The Chewing Gum Action Group funding has been divided between each local authority based on the advertising space available in the geographical area of the campaign, and the cost of advertising in that specific area.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how the Chewing Gum Action Group pilots in 2006 will differ from the pilot campaigns carried out in 2005 in terms of the techniques employed to reduce gum litter. [68778]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 8 May 2006]: As the Chewing Gum Action Group campaigns in 2006 are based on the successful pilot campaigns in 2005, the techniques employed to reduce gum litter will remain the same and will focus on paid advertising, education and awareness raising, visible enforcement, and alternative disposal solutions.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what criteria will be used to measure success in the Chewing Gum Action Group pilot areas in 2006. [68779]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 8 May 2006]: The success of the campaign, both in terms of reduced levels of gum deposited on the streets and in the effect on attitudes and awareness, will be recorded and analysed. The Chewing Gum Action Group is currently working with a research agency to formulate this analysis. This will be finalised by the end of May 2006.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many staff are employed by her Department in (a) personnel and (b) media, press and public information. [67448]

Barry Gardiner: The number of staff employed on 31 March 2006 by DEFRA in the areas requested was as follows:

(a) Human Resources employed a total of 207 staff (200 full-time equivalents). This included 53 staff (51.4 FTE) employed in Learning and Development, Diversity and Equality and Occupational Support and Advisory teams.

(b) DEFRA's Press Office, which deals with media and press, employed a total of 33 staff (32.4 FTE). This included Press Officers, Planning team, administrative support staff, and senior managers. DEFRA recently set up a Customer Contact Unit to centralise provision of information to the public in response to correspondence, public enquiries, and responses to Parliamentary Questions. This employed 65 staff on 31 March 2006. This figure does not include staff employed on telephone helplines. Staff elsewhere in the Department may also be involved in the provision of public information in specific areas; a figure on the number of staff involved in this respect is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of the staff in his Department is (a) male, (b) female and (c) disabled, broken down by grade. [69089]

Barry Gardiner: The following table outlines the position in DEFRA at 1 April 2006:

DEFRA and Executive Agencies

	Male	Female	Percentage Disabled
SCS	74	26	2
Grade 6	71	29	5
Grade 7	65	35	4

HEO	55	45	6
EO	45	55	7
AO	39	61	8
AA	43	57	11
Total	49	51	7

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what opportunities exist for people to work beyond retirement age in his Department. [69097]

Barry Gardiner: The default retirement age for all staff in DEFRA is 60. However the following provisions apply that allow staff below the senior civil service (SCS) to work beyond 60.

Short Service Concession

This applies to staff who have less than 20 years reckonable service. Staff may be retained until they either reach 65 or attain 20 years service, whichever is sooner, subject to continued satisfactory performance and efficiency.

Elective retirement

Staff may elect to stay beyond 60 to a maximum age of 65 where there is a clear organisational need, and subject to continued satisfactory performance and efficiency.

Short term extensions

Exceptionally, it is possible for staff to be retained for an additional six months having reached retirement age where there is a clear business requirement, and the individual wants to stay.

Senior Civil Service

Heads of departments and Agency chief executives may retain the services of members of the SCS if it is considered to be in the public interest, and they are satisfied with their performance and efficiency.

The retirement provisions are currently under revision to meet the requirements of the Employment Equality (Age) Legislation.

Equal Pay

Ms Katy Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many (a) women and (b) men are employed in the Department; what the average pay was for (i) women and (ii) men in the Department in (A) 1997 and (B) 2006; what women's average pay is as a percentage of men's average pay; and how many (1) women and (2) men the Department employed in each of the last five years, broken down by grade. [67785]

Barry Gardiner: Defra was created on 9 June 2001 and the information given relates to the period since then.

The Cabinet Office collects and publishes annually statistical information on the Civil Service by Department. These include data on the employment of men and women. Information on the numbers of women and men employed in the Civil Service at 31 December 2005 is available in the Library and on the Civil Service website at:

www.civilservice.gov.uk/management/statistics/emplovment/index.asp

The earliest readily available pay data split by gender since the creation of Defra is held in the 2003 Equal Pay Review, which covered staff below the Senior Civil Service in the core Department, the Pesticides Safety Directorate and the Veterinary Medicines Directorate Executive Agencies.

(A) 2002-03 average pay:

(i) Women £20,770

(ii) Men £25,186

Women's average pay as a percentage of men's average pay was 82.5 per cent.

The review found that there were no significant pay gaps within the Department, provided that Defra's multi-year pay settlement was fully rolled out for future years up to and including 2005/2006. The final year of the settlement was rolled out last year and runs until the end of June 2006.

(B) For 2006, the average pay for men and women on core-Department terms and conditions (core-Defra, PSD, VMD, SVS, MFA and GDS–the latter three Agencies were created since the 2003 Equal Pay Review and were previously included within the core-Department) was as follows:

(i) Women £26,194

(ii) Men £30,135

Women's average pay as a percentage of men's average pay was 86.9 per cent.

The average pay for the Veterinary Laboratories Agency was as follows:

(A) 2001 average pay

(i) Women £17,168

(ii) Men £22,421

Women's average pay as a percentage of men's average pay was 76.6 per cent.

(B) 2005 average pay

(i) Women £20,706

(ii) Men £26,195

Women's average pay as a percentage of men's average pay was 79.0 per cent.

The average pay for the Senior Civil Service was as follows:

2005 Average pay

(i) Women £73,403

(ii) Men £75,578

Women's average pay as a percentage of men's average pay was 97.1 per cent.

Data for other years could be obtained only by incurring disproportionate cost.

Average pay figures for the Centre for Environment, Fisheries & Aquaculture Science, the Central Science Laboratory and the Rural Payments Agency are either unavailable or could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The number of women and men employed on a permanent basis in the Department and its Agencies on 1 April of each year since 2002 is shown in the following tables.

Departmental Televisions

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many television sets are in operation in the Department (a) in total, (b) in Minister's private offices and (c) in each office building in the Department; and how many television licences are held by the Department. [62795]

Barry Gardiner: To identify all of the television sets in use across my Department would be very difficult to achieve with such a diverse estate of buildings and locations. I have therefore limited my reply to the major Headquarters sites of London, Guildford and York. The following table summarises the current position.

Location	Quantity
Eastbury House	10
Nobel complex	55
Whitehall Place	11
Guildford	9
York	4
Total	102
Those in use by Minister's Private Offices	14
TV Licenses held	6

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what temperature (a) the heating thermostat is set to in winter and (b) the air conditioning is set to in summer in his Department's main London office. [67447]

Barry Gardiner: The temperature of the heating in the main London office is set at 21 degrees C in the winter.

There is no air-conditioning in the Department's main London office, it is cooled by natural ventilation.

Entry Level Scheme

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many farmers qualified for the Entry Level Scheme; how many of those have (a) applied and (b) qualified for the Higher Level Scheme; how much has been paid out for that scheme; how much is allocated in total; what the timetable is for making such payments; and whether he expects payments to be made on time. [70102]

Barry Gardiner: Entry Level Stewardship (ELS) is open to all farmers and land managers; it is not competitive and acceptance is guaranteed providing scheme requirements can be met. As of 11 May, almost 19,500 agreements have been entered into under Entry Level or the Organic Entry Level strands of Environmental Stewardship.

Higher Level Stewardship (HLS) is a competitive scheme and applicants are required to deliver specific environmental benefits in high priority situations. Entry into ELS or Organic ELS is generally a pre-requisite for a HLS agreement. As at 11 May, there have been 1,172 HLS applications, and there are now 575 HLS agreements up and running.

The first annual payments for HLS agreement holders will not become due until February 2007, though mid-year HLS payments for those agreements that started in February 2006, become due in August 2006. HLS capital claims are due for payment once work has been completed; as at 11 May 2006, six capital claims have been paid with a total value of just over £37,000. Over £3 million has been allocated in 2006-07 to cover the cost of signed agreements. Payments under HLS are expected to be made on time.

Foot and Mouth Disease

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will name the premises designated 'Dangerous Contact 1' during the 2001 Foot and Mouth Disease outbreak; why they were subsequently removed from the list of dangerous contacts; and if he will make a statement. [70803]

Mr. Bradshaw: Premises with animals originally classified as dangerous contacts (DCs) may have been subsequently confirmed as having the disease, either on clinical grounds or from laboratory tests. On confirmation of disease they will have been placed on the published list of Infected Premises.

As a definitive list of DCs was not published, it is unclear which premises the hon. Gentleman is referring to. If he will write to me with further details I will provide him with a fuller response.

Foul Odours

Charlotte Atkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which (a) registration and (b) regulations govern prosecutions for creating a nuisance involving foul odours; and which body is responsible for pursuing such a prosecution. [67613]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 8 May 2006]: Under section 79 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990, local authorities have a duty to check their areas periodically for existing and potential statutory nuisances, and to take reasonably practicable steps to investigate complaints of statutory nuisances, including any dust, steam, smell or other effluvia arising on industrial, trade or business premises and being prejudicial to health or a nuisance. A "premises" may be a dwelling, place of business, land, beach, vessel or sea.

Once satisfied that a statutory nuisance exists, or may occur or recur, a local authority must issue an abatement notice requiring that the nuisance be ceased or abated within a specified timescale. It is an offence to breach or fail to comply with an abatement notice. Upon summary conviction through the courts, fines of up to £5,000 for domestic premises and £20,000 for industrial, trade and industry premises may be issued.

Some plants and processes that have the potential for emissions of offensive odours are regulated under the Pollution Prevention and Control Regulations, which are enforced by either the Environment Agency or local authorities depending on the type of installation. Plants and processes that are covered by these regulations are not subject to the statutory nuisance regime, in order to remove double jeopardy.

Defra recently published the "Code of Practice on Odour Nuisance from Sewage Treatment Work". This aims to provide a framework under the statutory nuisance regime in England and Wales within which the appropriate regulators and sewerage undertakers can operate to minimise the likelihood and nuisance from odours. The code is available on the Defra website.

In addition, Regulation (EC) 1774/2002 (enforced by the Animal By-Products Regulations 2005) lays down the rules for the collection, transport, storage, handling, processing and use or disposal of animal by-products in order to prevent these products from posing a risk to animal and public health. Plants that process material of animal origin are required to be approved by the Secretary of State in accordance with the regulation. The regulation also requires that animal by-products be transported in sealed new packaging or covered leak-proof containers or vehicles and that they be processed without undue delay.

Vehicles on public highways are not "premises" within the statutory nuisance regime on odour. Emissions from new vehicles are regulated by means of the Motor Vehicles (EC Type Approval) Regulations 1998 or the Motor Vehicles (Type Approval for Goods Vehicles) (Great Britain) Regulations 1982. Emissions from in service vehicles are regulated by means of Regulation 61 of the Road Vehicles (Construction and Use) Regulations 1986 as amended.

In addition, vehicles driven in a careless or anti-social manner (that is causing or likely to cause harassment, alarm or distress) may be seized by the police under section 59 of the Police Reform Act 2002.

Hunting Act

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will make it his policy to introduce an Order to vary the exemptions within the Hunting Act 2004; and if he will make a statement. [70730]

Barry Gardiner: The Government have no plans to bring forward proposals to vary the exemptions within the Hunting Act 2004.

Icelandic Fishing

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much was awarded as compensation for the loss of Icelandic fishing, broken down by port of origin of recipient; how many individuals received awards; how much was deducted from compensation payable for exgratia redundancy payments; and how many fishermen were subject to such deductions. [69137]

Mr. Bradshaw: A total of £42.4 million has been paid by DTI in compensation to date. Although the scheme has long since closed, some limited processing of claims remains. The IT system used does not record the port of origin and it is not practical or cost effective to produce this information manually. Some limited information is however available on the basis of beneficiaries' current locations. This gives the following totals:

	£ million
Hull	18.6
Grimsby	6
Cleethorpes	1.7
Fleetwood	3.2

In all, 5,366 payments have been made thus far, with total deductions of £7.4 million in respect of exgratia redundancy payments to some 3,268 fishermen.

Insect Repellents

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the status of insect repellents is under the REACH regulations; and what assessment she has made of the impact of the regulations on manufacturers in the UK, with particular reference to animal testing. [67898]

Ian Pearson: If an active substance of an insect repellent has been assessed and approved for use in either plant protection products or in biocidal products in accordance with existing European Union legislation (Directive 91/414/EEC or Directive 98/8/EC), then the active substance is considered as registered and exempted from authorisation under REACH.

If not exempt, substances on their own or in preparations manufactured in quantities of over 1 tonne per manufacturer per year will have to be registered with the new European Chemicals Agency. Registration requires the submission of basic information on these substances, some of which may be generated through testing on animals if the information is not available elsewhere.

The text of the Political Agreement of December 2005 introduces a number of amendments aimed at minimising the amount of animal testing required and reducing the costs on industry, for example through the incorporation of "One Substance, One Regulation" (OSOR), a UK proposal with strong rules on the mandatory sharing of animal test data by companies.

Low-Frequency Noise

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps he has taken to increase local authority access to means of detecting and locating the source of low-frequency noise. [68866]

Mr. Bradshaw: Detecting and locating the source of low frequency noise can be extremely challenging. Disturbance can occur at levels only slightly higher than the hearing threshold and its effects can therefore vary from one individual to the next.

To help local authorities and environmental health practitioners investigate disturbances caused by low frequency noise, DEFRA commissioned the University of Salford to develop proposed criteria and a methodology for the assessment of low frequency noise complaints.

The University's report, 'Procedure for the assessment of low frequency noise complaints,' was published in February 2005. It is now available on the DEFRA website:http://www.defra.gov.uk/environment/noise/research/lowfrequency/pdf/nanr45-procedure.pdf

Nitrogen Dioxide Emissions

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she is taking in conjunction with local authorities to meet European Union targets on nitrogen dioxide emissions. [67876]

Mr. Bradshaw: The First Air Quality Daughter Directive (1999/30/EC) sets binding limit values for nitrogen dioxide; a one hour mean (200 microgramme/m^3) and an annual mean (40 microgramme/m^3) to be met by 2010.

Action is being taken at international, national and local level to tackle air pollution. We are involved in a number of international and European fora in dealing with air quality issues. We are currently negotiating a new ED Air Quality Directive. We are also currently negotiating further .stringent reductions to European emission standards on nitrogen dioxide and particles (PM_{-10}) for light duty vehicles.

Nationally, we are undertaking a review of the Air Quality Strategy (AQS) to identify potential new additional measures to move us closer to meeting the national air quality objectives, which are similar or tighter than the ED limit and target values, and at the same time generating cost-effective health benefits. An AQS consultation document was published on 5 April 2006 and can be found at http://www.defra.gov.uk/corporate/consult/airqualstrat-review/index.htm. The consultation period finishes on 11 July 2006.

At the local level, local authorities also have a role to play in helping the Government deliver cleaner air. Local authorities have a duty to review and assess the air quality against nationally prescribed air quality objectives for seven main air pollutants. Where local authorities consider that one or more of the air quality objectives is unlikely to be met by the relevant deadline, they must declare an air quality management area (AQMA), covering the area where the problem is expected. These local authorities must then take action, along with other agencies and organisations, to work towards meeting the air quality objectives.

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the nitrogen dioxide emission statistics for (a) Marylebone Road, (b) Brompton Road and (c) Cromwell Road were in each of the last five years. [67877]

Mr. Bradshaw: The following are annual nitrogen dioxide concentration statistics based on automatic air quality measurement data for London Marylebone and Cromwell roads over the period 2001-05. Data for Brompton Road have been provided by the Royal borough of Kensington and Chelsea.

Marylebone Road

Statistic	2001	2002	2003	2004	2005

Number of exceedences of hourly EU limit value[1]	97	154	235	254	288

Data capture > 90 per cent. in each case

[1] 200 micrograms per metre cubed hourly mean limit value not to be exceeded more than 18 times per year

[2] 2005 Knightsbridge data is provisional

Data for London Marylebone and Cromwell roads are available from the National Air Quality Information Archive www.airquality.co.uk and data for Brompton Road are available from the London Air Quality Network website www.londonair.org.uk/london/asp/home.asp.

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on air quality standards in central London, with particular reference to nitrogen oxide emissions. [67875]

Mr. Bradshaw: The national Air Quality Strategy, published in 2000, sets a one hour mean air quality objective for nitrogen dioxide of 200 micrograms per cubic metre not to be exceeded more than 18 times per year and an annual mean of 40 micrograms per cubic metre, both to be achieved by 31 December 2005. These objectives are to be achieved sooner than the equivalent EU limit values which have to be met by 2010.

The Greater London Authority Act 1999 gave the Mayor responsibility for improving air quality in London. The Mayor published his Air Quality Strategy for London in September 2002, setting out his proposals for implementation of the policies in the national Air Quality Strategy and achievement of the objectives prescribed in regulations. London local authorities have to take account of the Mayor's Strategy when carrying out their local air quality management duties.

Under Part IV of the Environment Act 1995, currently 30 out of the 33 London local authorities have declared air quality management areas in respect of nitrogen dioxide mainly relating to road transport emissions.

Perfluorooctane Sulfonate

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what agreements

the Government has entered into with (a) EU and (b) other international organisations on the use of perfluorooctane sulfonate. [70021]

Ian Pearson: On 5 December 2005, the European Commission published a proposal for a Directive (76/769/EC) relating to restrictions on the marketing and use of perfluorooctane sulfonates (PFOSs). While the UK welcomes the proposals we do not feel that they go far enough, and the UK is working to strengthen these proposals.

We have reached agreement with member countries of the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) on the hazard profile of PFOS see www.oecd.org/dataoecd/23/18/2382880.pdf

We are also working to have PFOS agreed as a persistent organic pollutant and subject to international controls under the Stockholm Convention on Persistent Organic Pollutants and the UNECE Protocol on Persistent Organic Pollutants.

Rural Payments Agency

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the cost has been of Rural Payment Agency (RPA) services supplied to the National Fallen Stock Company since it was established; and what assessment she has made of the RPA's relationship with the company. [67343]

Barry Gardiner: The total cost of RPA services supplied to the National Fallen Stock Company to the end of March 2006 was £3,424,798.78. This can be broken down into £2,481,211.10 for scheme set-up costs (including IT development) and £943,587,68 for scheme running costs.

The RPA has provided the company with an efficient day to day administration of the scheme and has played a major role in establishing the scheme in co-operation with the company.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many telephone calls have been made to the Rural Payments Agency's Customer Service Centre in (a) each of the last 12 months and (b) the period commencing 13 April 2006; how many calls in each period have gone unanswered; and if he will make a statement. [68868]

Barry Gardiner: The figures in the table show calls to the main RPA Customer Service Number 0845 603 7777 only. This line is the main customer telephone number for all subsidy and SPS related calls. RPA operate several other call lines.

	Calls offered to 0845 603 7777	Number unanswered	Percentage unanswered
May 2005[1]	93,346	8,705	9.33
June 2005[1]	24,496	267	1.09
July 2005[1]	20,199	247	1.22
August 2005	20,780	218	1.05
September 2005	21,752	249	1.14
October 2005	26,150	317	1.21
November 2005	26,289	1,168	[2]4.44
December 2005	18,725	187	1.00
January 2006	26,628	185	0.69
February 2006	28,322	175	0.62
March 2006	52,748	450	0.85
April 2006	68,684	281	0.41
13 April to 8 May 2006	89,218	338	0.38

[1] May, June and July 2005 figures are an amalgamation of statistics collected from several call centre systems and represent our best estimate.

[2] The November 2005 figure was the result of a high volume of calls and repeat calls on a day during an emergency evacuation of the call centre.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many requests the Rural Payments Agency received (a) before 13 April 2006 and (b) on or since 13 April 2006 for claim forms for the 2006-07 Single Payment Scheme; and if he will make a statement. [68879]

Barry Gardiner: Applicants do not have to request a Single Payment Scheme (SPS) application form, as these are automatically issued to all previous SPS claimants.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate he has made of the number of potential applicants under the 2006-07 Single Payments Scheme to whom the Rural Payments Agency did not send a claim form before 13 April 2006 having been asked to do so; and if he will make a statement. [68881]

Barry Gardiner: 33,902 Single Payment Scheme application forms were issued to potential applicants by the Rural Payments Agency on or since 13 April 2006.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions he has had on deferring of the deadline for applications to the Rural Payments Agency for single farm payments. [68929]

Barry Gardiner: My noble Friend Lord Bach, the former Minister with responsibility for sustainable farming and food has over the last two months met weekly with the Presidents of the National Farmers Union, the Country Landowners Association and the Tenant Farmers Association to discuss Single Payment Scheme (SPS) issues. An outcome of these discussions is that although farmers should continue to aim to meet the 15 May deadline for SPS applications, late claim penalties will not be applied to applications received between 15 and 31 May. Applications submitted between 1 and 9 June will attract the normal 1 per cent. per working day penalty and any applications submitted after 9 June will be rejected.

Single Farm Payments

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions he has had concerning the position of those who are yet to receive their Single Farm Payments but are expected to submit their application forms for the following year by 15 May; and if he will make a statement. [69529]

Barry Gardiner: My noble Friend Lord Bach, the former Parliamentary Under Secretary, had for the last two months met weekly with the Presidents of the National Farmers Union, the Country Landowners Association and the Tenant Farmers Association to discuss Single Payment Scheme (SPS) issues. An outcome of these discussions is that although farmers should continue to aim to meet the 15 May deadline for SPS applications, late claim penalties will not be applied to applications received between 15 and31 May. Applications submitted between 1 and 9 June will attract the normal 1 per cent. per working day penalty and any applications submitted after 9 June will be rejected.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many farms are affected by the delay in payment of single farm payments. [69562]

Barry Gardiner: By close of business on 4 May 2005 58,000 single payment scheme (SPS) claims had received a full payment.

The Secretary of State announced on 9 May that some £730 million would be paid in the next week in the form of a substantial partial payment. Once this sum has been paid there will remain around 31,000 claimants who will not have received a payment. Some 26,000 of these claimants are due to receive a payment amounting to less than €1,000. Making full payments to the 5,000 farmers due to receive more than €1,000 will now be given the highest priority by the Rural Payments Agency.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the cost has been to (a) his Department and (b) IT companies supplying his Department of the IT problems associated with late payments of single farm payments. [69565]

Barry Gardiner: The core IT system to enable the processing of the Single Payment Scheme (SPS) was developed in conjunction with Accenture, the prime contractor, and deployed in phased releases throughout 2005, with the final element being delivered in October 2005. The system is used by Rural Payments Agency (RPA) staff in the processing of SPS claims and is available to them from 6am to 9pm weekdays and 8am to 6pm at weekends. In 2005 RPA implemented a three-shift work pattern to maximise the utilisation of the system and thereby help address the demands of processing the first year of SPS claims.

The overall cost of the Accenture contract is £53.8 million. This includes not only the development of the core SPS processing system but also a Rural Land Register, Customer Register, Customer Service (Call) Centre and Document Management Unit.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the timetable is for making interim single farm payments; and what the latest estimated time scale is for completing all payments. [70093]

Barry Gardiner: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced on 9 May that some £730 million in the form of a substantial partial payment would be paid within a week of that announcement. Once this sum has been paid there will remain around 31,000 claimants who will not have received a payment. Some 26,000 of these claimants are due to receive a payment amounting to less than €1,000. Making full payments to the 5,000 farmers due to receive more than €1,000 will be given the highest priority by the Rural Payments Agency (RPA).

The RPA has not provided a timetable for the completion of outstanding payments, although it is endeavouring to make payment to all 2005 Single Payment Scheme applicants by 30 June.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many information leaflets have been received by each common agricultural policy farmer in (a) England and (b) Northern Ireland regarding the Single Payment Scheme since the mid-term common agricultural policy reform proposals were agreed in 2003; and what the total estimated cost was of compiling, printing and posting these booklets in each country. [66172]

Barry Gardiner: Eighteen information leaflets regarding the Single Payment Scheme have been sent to English farmers since the mid-term common agricultural policy reform proposals were agreed in 2003. Because of the importance of the scheme and the need to register entitlements in the first year, all publications were mailed to every customer on the Defra database.

Subsequent to the development of the Rural Payments Agency's (RPA) own customer data it was not necessary to send all publications to the same circulation. Copies have been available on call off from Defra Publications and RPA's Customer Service Centre.

The total cost of compiling, printing and posting the leaflets to English farmers is £1,846,243.20.

Northern Ireland falls under the remit of its own devolved Administration.

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the (a) lowest, (b) highest, (c) median and (d) mean value was of the claims for the 2005 Single Payment Scheme within each of the three designated payment areas. [66706]

Barry Gardiner: The Rural Payments Agency (RPA) is in the process of paying claims to the 2005 Single Payment Scheme. As such final figures are not available. Based on payments made up to 3 May the information requested is as follows:

Lowest value	0.01
Highest value	357,593.88
Median value	2,885.67
Mean value	9,143.60

The SPS is administered nationally with claims submitted in respect of land held in one or more English regions. It is not possible to provide the number of claims supporting land in each of the three English regions.

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many claims for the 2005 Single Payment Scheme were (a) expected and (b) received in each of the three designated payment areas, broken down by value. [66708]

Barry Gardiner: 120,367 applications were received by the Rural Payments Agency (RPA) for the 2005 Single Payment Scheme (SPS).

The SPS is administered nationally with claims submitted in respect of land held in one or more English regions. It is not possible to provide the number of claims supporting land in each of the three English regions. However the amount of land claimed in each of the three regions is as follows:

	Hectares
Non—SDA	7,325,833
SDA other	578,027
Moorland	452,399

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what progress has been made towards a fully worked up contingency plan to pay partial single farm payments before 30 June 2006. [69850]

Barry Gardiner [holding answer 11 May 2006]: As announced in a written statement by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, on 9 May, after testing the Rural Payments Agency (RPA) has immediately moved to making partial payments.

As a result £730 million has been transferred to the BAGS system or drawn up in payable orders. These payments should reach farmers' bank accounts by the end of the week.

The RPA is still endeavouring to make a full or partial payment to all Single Payment Scheme applicants by 30 June 2006.

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what definition of the middle range of historical claimants is being used for the prioritisation of single farm payments. [64801]

Barry Gardiner [holding answer 24 April 2006]: The intention is for all eligible Single Payment Scheme (SPS) claimants to receive a payment, either in full or substantial part, by the end of June. With respect to the validation of claims leading to full payment by the Rural Payments Agency, the highest priority is being placed on claims of a value of between €50,000 and €100,000, reflecting a wish to disburse the maximum amount of funds to the maximum number of farmers within the shortest possible time frame. Work to validate claims of a value outside this band is also continuing as far as practicable.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what mechanisms were put in place by the Rural Payments Agency to ensure that the despatch of the Customer Registration booklet to farmers for the new financial year did not affect the finalising of 2005 payments; what assessment her Department made of the merits of delaying the despatch of these booklets until after the 2005 payments had been completed; and if she will make a statement. [66173]

Barry Gardiner: RPAs continuing priority task is the processing of 2005 SPS payments and all resources required to ensure payment at the earliest time has been directed to this task.

However, RPA also needs to ensure that 2006 scheme year claims are issued to enable return within the statutory requirements set by the scheme legislation. EU regulations specify that SPS claim forms must be lodged with the Paying Agency by May 15 each year, so delaying the issue of these forms until all 2005 payments had been processed was not an option.

To assist our customers the 2006 claim forms have been prepopulated where possible with all available customer information such as customer registration, scheme entitlements and land registration details.

Warm Home Zones

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what start-up funding is available for new warm home zones; how much such funding is available in North Staffordshire; and if he will make a statement. [69887]

Ian Pearson: An independent evaluation of the three-year Warm Zones pilot period was published earlier this year. The Government are considering the full range of conclusions from the pilot and will continue to work with Warm Zones Ltd. in its ongoing development.

Warm Homes and Energy Conservation Act 2000

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what progress the Government have made during 2006 in meeting the targets of the Warm Homes and Energy Conservation Act 2000; and if he will make a statement; [69153]

(2) if he will make a statement on the operation of (a) section 1 and (b) section 2 of the Warm Homes and Energy Conservation Act 2000; what recent representations he has received on the operation of the Act; if he will place in the Library copies of such representations; and whether he plans (i) to amend and (ii) to repeal this Act. [69154]

Ian Pearson: The UK Fuel Poverty Strategy, published in November 2001, defines fuel poverty as a household that needs to spend more than 10 per cent. of its income on fuel to maintain an adequate standard of warmth (21 degrees in the main living area, and 18 degrees in all other rooms). A comprehensive range of measures has been put in place to tackle the underlying causes of fuel poverty, which are poor, energy inefficient housing, high fuel costs and low incomes. The UK Fuel Poverty Strategy also specifies interim targets to be achieved and target dates for eradicating fuel poverty in the UK.

There have been no recent representations on the operation of the Warm Homes and Energy Conservation Act, and there are no plans to amend or repeal the Act.

The Government report annually on fuel poverty targets. The most recent report was published in July 2005 and showed that, in 2003, there were 1.2 million households in fuel poverty in England, 1.0 million of which were vulnerable households. This report, and further information on the UK Fuel Poverty Strategy, is available at: http://www.dti.gov.uk/energy/fuel-poverty/strategy/index.html.

The figures for 2004 will be published shortly in the Fourth Annual Progress Report.

Whaling

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps he is taking to persuade those states within the International Whaling Commission sympathetic to Japan to vote in favour of whale conservation. [70338]

Mr. Bradshaw: We regularly send lobbying instructions to our posts abroad to seek support from their host countries for the UK's position on whaling. The prominent role we play within the Commission ensures no country can be in any doubt as to the importance we attach to whale conservation.

I have written to new members of the IWC refuting the spurious claims that whales have a detrimental effect on fish stocks an argument often advanced by whaling countries in support of whaling operations. I personally raise the issue of whaling with my international counterparts at every appropriate opportunity. I have also written to fellow UK Ministers with international contact urging them and their officials to take such opportunities as arise to raise the issue of the conservation of cetaceans in appropriate bilateral meetings, or in the margins of meetings.

The U K and its allies have lost no opportunity in trying to persuade new anti-whaling countries to join the IWC?with some success?five have joined in the last two years.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will take steps to encourage all those members of the International Whaling Commission (IWC) in favour of conservation measures to attend the IWC meeting in June. [70422]

Mr. Bradshaw: In January together with Ministers from Australia and New Zealand I wrote to Ministers in all IWC member countries to encourage their participation in the 58th annual IWC meeting in June. Our posts abroad will be lobbying the Governments of anti-whaling IWC members to encourage attendance and to stress the need to ensure that Commissioners' credentials are in proper order.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Corporate Takeovers

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has made to the EU Competition Commissioner about individual EU members introducing unilateral legislation to prevent corporate takeovers. [69928]

Mr. McCartney: Ministers have made no specific representations. We are confident that the European Commission will deal with breaches of Single Market rules and will consider carefully mergers where the purpose may be to block foreign takeovers. The Commission is well aware of the UK position on these issues and knows that it has our support to enforce Single Market rules and merger regulations to the full.

Employment Status Review

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 15 November 2005, Official Report, column 1105W, on employment status review, when he will publish the conclusions of the Employment Act 1999 section 23 Consultations (Employment Status Review). [71436]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Government published their response to the consultation on the current framework and coverage of employment rights (Employment Status Review) at the end of March as part of the policy statement "Success at Work; Protecting Vulnerable Workers, Supporting Good Employers". Copies of this document have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

EU Extremely Large Telescope

Robert Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry where the EU Extremely Large Telescope is expected to be located. [67316]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The main sites under consideration as a possible location for the European Extremely Large Telescope are:

Observatorio Roque de los Muchachos (ORM) La Palma, Canaries

Paranal in the Atacama Desert, Northern Chile

Izafia—in the Moroccan Atlas Mountains

Northwest Argentina—a number of sites

'Dome C'—in the Australian Antarctica Territory

A final decision is not expected to be made until 2008 at the earliest.

European Social Chapter

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which statutory instruments were introduced by his Department to implement the European Social Chapter in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement on the operation of the Chapter. [69632]

Jim Fitzpatrick: In 1991, in what was then the Social Chapter, the EU provided for member states to reach agreement on certain aspects of social policy. The UK exercised its right to 'opt out' from the Social Chapter. In 1997 the UK Government decided it no longer wished to 'opt-out' of provisions in the Social Chapter. As a result the contents of the Social Chapter were incorporated into the Amsterdam treaty, coming into force in May 1999. The Statutory Instruments introduced by the DTI, implementing the four Social Chapter measures already agreed by the other member states prior to the UK ending its 'opt-out', are as follows:

Sex Discrimination (Indirect Discrimination and Burden of Proof) Regulations 2001 (implementing Directive 98/52 which extended to the UK Directive 97/80 on the burden of proof in cases of discrimination based on sex). These provide that once a prima facie case of sex discrimination has been made in an employment tribunal claim, the burden of proof is placed on the defendant (usually the employer) who will need to demonstrate that sex discrimination has not occurred;

The Part-time Workers (Prevention of Less Favourable Treatment) Regulations 2000 (implementing Directive 98/23 which extended to the UK Directive 97/81 on the framework agreement on part-time work). These provide for entitlement of part-time workers to the same pro-rata terms and conditions of employment as full-time workers;

The Maternity and Parental Leave etc. Regulations 1999 (implementing Directive 97/75 which extended to the UK Directive 96/34 on the framework agreement on parental leave). These provide for parents to have the right to 13 weeks unpaid leave for the purposes of caring for a child. The leave must be taken by the child's fifth birthday, or within 5 years of the child's placement for adoption;

The Transnational Information and Consultation of Employees Regulations 1999 (implementing Directive 97/74 which extended to the UK Directive 94/45 on the establishment of European Works Council). These require companies with at least 1,000 employees in total across the member states and at least 150 workers in each of two or more of those member states, to establish structures for consulting workers on issues that affect them.

Since the Treaty of Amsterdam came into force in 1999, further Directives and Regulations have been adopted under Articles 136-139 of Title XI of the EC Treaty, i.e. the "Social Provisions" Chapter.

Job Sharing

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to encourage employers to provide job shares. [69854]

Jim Fitzpatrick: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to him by the Minister for women on 28 February 2006, Official Report, column 658W.

Mobile Telephony

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what percentage of the land area of the UK is covered by third generation mobile telephony. [69868]

Margaret Hodge: The matter raised is the responsibility of the Office of Communications (Ofcom). Ofcom is the Independent Regulator for the communications sector, deriving its main powers and duties directly from statute rather than by delegation from the Secretary of State, and accountable to Parliament in its own right. Accordingly, my officials have asked the chief executive Officer of Ofcom to reply to my hon. friend and to send me a copy of his response. Copies of the chief executive's letter will also be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Post Office Card Account

Mr. Touhig: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the effect on business of local post offices of the ending of the Post Office card account. [70891]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Post Office Ltd. and Department for Work and Pensions are currently discussing various options to help mitigate any impact on post offices resulting from the end of the Post Office card account.

Mr. Touhig: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what average income has accrued to a post office branch from a Post Office card account; [70893]

(2) what the total amount of revenue to a local post office branch from the Post Office card account was in 2005. [70894]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Income received by Post Office Ltd. from a Post Office card account is commercially confidential information.

UK Atomic Energy Authority

Mr. Vaizey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what impact the proposed management buy-out of the UK Atomic Energy Authority will have on the Government's plans for the Harwell Science and Innovation Campus; and if he will make a statement. [70916]

Jim Fitzpatrick: There is no proposed Management Buy Out (MBO) of the UKAEA and the UKAEA is not for sale. However, the Board of UKAEA is overseeing a fundamental restructuring of the organisation in line with Nuclear Decommissioning Authority (NDA)'s published strategy and in accordance with UKAEA's published 2005 Corporate Plan.

UKAEA's Board is now transforming UKAEA into three distinct publicly owned entities. UKAEA will in part, continue as a non-departmental public body (NDPB) responsible for fusion research and development at Culham and the Harwell Science and Innovation Campus (HSIC). Secondly, UKAEA's nuclear sites at Dounreay, Harwell, Winfrith and Windscale will become companies able to be competed by the NDA. Thirdly we are creating a commercial subsidiary, NewCo, which with its Alliance industry partners CH2MHI11 and AMEC will compete in the future decommissioning market.

The UKAEA Board is considering various options for NewCo's continuing commercial development. Any decisions in this regard will not impact on the HSIC which will continue to form part of the ongoing NDPB.

Wireless Telegraphy Act

Mr. Dunne: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) how many successful prosecutions there were for offences under the Wireless Telegraphy Act 1949 in (a) 2002-03, (b) 2003-04, (c) 2004-05 and (d) 2005-06; and how much was collected in fines arising from such prosecutions in each year; [67626]

(2) how many people have been prosecuted in (a) England, (b) Wales, (c) Scotland and (d) Northern Ireland for offences under the Wireless Telegraphy Act 1949 since 1991; [67627]

Margaret Hodge: The matter raised is the responsibility of the Regulator, the Office of Communications (Ofcom) which is accountable to parliament rather than Ministers. Accordingly I have asked the Chief Executive of Ofcom to reply directly to the hon. Member. Copies of the Chief Executive's letter will be placed in the Libraries of Houses.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Digital Switchover Costs

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what research she has commissioned into the likely costs of digital switchover for the BBC. [68071]

Tessa Jowell: Evidence from a variety of different sources, including primary research, will feed into our assessment of the BBC's future funding needs including costs related to digital switchover. This includes work carried out under the Digital Television Action Plan published in March 2005, the BBC's own figures and the financial analysis carried out by PKF and set out in their independent report published on 26 April.

The Government have carried out a variety of research and drawn on other evidence to inform the development of the assistance scheme for households where one person is 75 or over or has a serious disability, the costs of which will form part of the BBC's overall switchover costs. Details of the published research and other relevant reports which have fed into the policy development are in the table.

Licensing Act

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations she has received on amending section 147 of the Licensing Act 2003. [69949]

Mr. Woodward: During the Government's public consultation on "Drinking Responsibly", some trading standards officers expressed the view that it was difficult to secure convictions against corporate bodies under sections 169A and 169B of the Licensing Act 1964. These are the equivalent offence provisions to those provided by sections 146 and 147 of the Licensing Act 2003, which were given effect on 24 November 2005, and which cover the sale of alcohol, and allowing the sale of alcohol, to children.

As a result of these representations, new offence provisions and closure powers relating to the persistent selling of alcohol to children have been included in the Violent Crime Reduction Bill, which is currently being scrutinised by the House of Lords. If the Bill receives Royal Assent, these new provisions would particularly impact on corporate bodies as well as individuals.

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will undertake a review of the implications of licensing costs for village halls and not-for-profit entities; and if she will make a statement. [67302]

Mr. Woodward: An Independent Licensing Fees Review Panel was established by the Government in May last year to consider whether fees had been set at the right level for community groups, businesses and local authorities.

The Panel—which is chaired by Sir Les Elton—published its interim findings on 5 December. This identified a number of areas for more detailed work, including further consideration of the impact of the new regime on not-for-profit organisations and village halls. The full interim report can be accessed on my Department's website at:

http://www.culture.gov.uk/alcohol_and_entertainment/monitoring_and_evaluation/ifreview.htm

The Panel is continuing to work closely with all stakeholders in order to gather the evidence that will inform their final report, which is due to be published in the autumn.

London 2012 Olympics

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions have taken place between her Department and the British Olympic Association regarding the funding required to train athletes to Olympic standard for entry into every event at the 2012 Olympic games. [71097]

Mr. Caborn: There have been no specific discussions between the Department and the British Olympic Association (BOA) on this issue, but the Department has discussed this with UK Sport. UK Sport is the Government's lead agency on elite sport and is responsible for funding high performance sport across the United Kingdom.

Lord Moynihan, chairman BOA, did, however, write to the Secretary of State in November 2005 commenting on UK Sport's submission, developed with the support of the BOA, for additional funding to support our Olympic sports and elite athletes to train and compete at the London 2012 games. In addition, the Secretary of State spoke with Lord Moynihan during the Winter Olympics in Turin.

School Sports

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) how much money provided through the School Sports Policy has been allocated to each project; [71104]

(2) how much money was allocated to the School Sports Policy; and how much of that money has been allocated to sports projects. [71105]

Mr. Caborn: Over £459 million has been invested by the Government to support the delivery of the National School Sport Strategy over the three years 2003-04 to 2005-06. The National School Sport Strategy comprises eight individual but interlinked workstrands. The table sets out details of money allocated to these workstrands:

Budget 2003-04 to 2005-06

Workstrand	£ million
Specialist Sports Colleges programme	115
School Sport Partnerships*	224*
Professional Development programme*	*This is
Gifted and Talented programme*	the Total
QCA PE and School Sport Investigation*	for these
Swimming strategy*	5 workstrands
Step into Sport programme	12
Club Links programme	10
Total	361

In addition to the money allocated to these eight workstrands, funding was also invested in work to enhance Community Club Development (£60 million between 2003-04 and 2005-06), Coaching (£28 million between 2003-04 and 2005-06) and the Sporting Playgrounds programme (£10 million between 2003-04 and 2004-05). All this work is supporting the National School Sport Strategy, and the delivery of the sports public service agreement target.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many (a) individuals and (b) organisations have applied for funding through the School Sports Policy in each year since it was set up; and how many of those applications (i) resulted in an award of funding and (ii) were declined. [71106]

Mr. Caborn: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport, and the Department for Education and Skills, are working together to deliver the National School Sport Strategy. We have allocated funding to a number of strategic partners, which include Sport England, Youth Sport Trust, the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority, and others, to implement the National Strategy programmes.

Between 2003-04 and 2005-06, 306 applications for funding were received to form School Sport Partnerships. All of these were successful, in some cases following further development work on some of the applications.

DEFENCE

Aircraft

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether all UK Hercules aircraft are fitted with anti-explosive foam. [70970]

Mr. Ingram: Explosion suppressant foam is not currently fitted to RAF Hercules aircraft, though we have made the decision to fit some of the fleet. The first Hercules fitted with explosion suppressant foam will be available for operational deployment within the next few months.

Army Exercises

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many soldiers have (a) been killed and (b) seriously injured on exercise in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [58984]

Mr. Ingram: While data relating to soldiers who have died or been seriously injured are recorded centrally, it is not possible within these figures to identify those soldiers who were on exercise at the time of the incident.

Body Armour

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether every serviceman in (a) Iraq and (b) Afghanistan has his or her own body armour. [70241]

Mr. Ingram: All personnel deploying to Iraq and Afghanistan are issued with body armour.

Whether they are wearing it at any time will depend on the security situation in the area they are deployed.

C17s

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the annual cost is of the lease of one C17 from the US; and if he will make a statement on the ownership of the four C17s which are being used by the Royal Air Force. [70274]

Mr. Ingram: The Defence Procurement Agency leases the four C-17 aircraft from The Boeing Company, who own the aircraft.

Information relating to the cost of the lease is classified as commercial-in-confidence between the MOD and the Contractor and therefore cannot be released.

Defence Information Initiative

Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what impact changes to the delivery plan for the Defence Information Initiative will have on the project's time scale and costs. [68381]

Mr. Watson: The roll-out schedule for the Defence Information Infrastructure (Future) (DII(F)) programme was first negotiated during 2004-05 and was re-worked during January 2006. The DII (F) contract was deliberately structured to allow for a level of change as it recognised that the impact of initiatives such as the efficiency review and the Ministry of Defence's own change programme would require a level of flexibility from the DII (F) Deliver Partner, ATLAS Consortium.

MOD and ATLAS are currently discussing the impact of the revised rollout schedule. However, the changes introduced so far are not significant, and we expect that the rollout of the first increment of DII (F) will remain within its financial approval envelope. Both the DII project team and the ATLAS consortium are working hard to meet the originally forecast 'Last User Live' date and are confident that the predicted benefits will be achieved.

The Civilian Level 0 definition reflects all departmental employees including casuals and those not directly funded by the Department such as staff on loan to other government departments or NATO, and staff on career breaks or absent through long term sickness.

Disposal Contractors

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he was first informed of the dispute referred to on 9 February 2004, Official Report, column 1177W; and what the estimated scale of the Government's potential financial liability was at that time. [67839]

Mr. Ingram: My right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State for Defence was briefed in April 2001. At that time there was insufficient information available to estimate the Department's potential liability.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contingent liabilities have been set aside by the Department for final settlement in the case of arbitration referred to on 9 February 2004, Official Report, column 1177W; and where these appear in the Department's appropriation account. [67841]

Mr. Ingram: The total estimated contingent liability for the Department was disclosed in the Department's annual report and accounts for 2003-04. A contingency for the case referred to was included in these accounts. This case was concluded earlier this year, and the settlement is currently confidential between the parties involved; however, it will be reflected in the departmental accounts for 2005-06, which are currently being prepared.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of the staff in his Department is (a) male, (b) female and (c) disabled, broken down by grade. [69118]

Mr. Watson: The following table shows the total number of MOD civilian staff at 1 April 2006, and the proportion of this number who are male and female by pay band.

The proportion of disabled staff at each pay band is based only on staff who have declared their disability status. Declaration of a disability is voluntary.

Disability status is not available for Royal Fleet Auxiliary or locally engaged civilians. Gender of locally engaged civilians is also not available.

Ms Katy Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) women and (b) men are employed in the Department; what the average pay was for (i) women and (ii) men in the Department in (1) 1997 and (2) 2006; what women's average pay is as a percentage of men's average pay; and how many (A) women and (B) men the Department employed in each of the last five years, broken down by grade. [67789]

Mr. Watson: The following table shows the numbers of permanent, non-industrial Ministry of Defence staff by gross salary band, gender and full-time/part-time status as at 1 April 2006, in both headcount and full-time equivalent terms. Comparable data by salary band for 1997 are not available.

Fuel Cell Technology

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether there are plans to adapt the UK armed forces underwater detection capabilities better to detect fuel cell vessels. [70778]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence has a number of platforms coming into service now and over the next few years that incorporate sensors and technology specifically aimed at the emerging threat of small, quiet submarines, including those using Air Independent Propulsion.

Haslar Hospital

Peter Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions have taken place between his Department and Gosport borough council in relation to planning issues at (a) Haslar Hospital and (b) other departmental sites at Haslar. [70952]

Mr. Watson [holding answer 15 May 2006]: No discussions have yet taken place in regard to the future planning options for the sites at either Royal Hospital (RH) Haslar or Fort Blockhouse (the adjacent site). We expect meetings will commence towards the end of this year.

MOD has submitted Circular 18/84 applications to Gosport borough council for the redevelopment of the Joint Services Adventurous Sail Training Centre, at Fort Blockhouse, in support of current operational initiatives. This requires the re-provision of offices, stores and boatshed and the demolition of a number of obsolete buildings. A decision is expected by the end of June.

A further Circular 18/84 application is to be submitted in due course seeking continued permission for the security fence to the rear of Canada and Albert accommodation blocks at RH Haslar.

Telephone Costs

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many minutes of free personal overseas telephone calls officials of the Defence Export Services Organisation are entitled to each week while working abroad; and which budget line covers such expenses. [69673]

Mr. Ingram: Ministry of Defence personnel who are overseas on short business trips can claim a tax-free overnight expenses allowance. This allowance is intended to cover a number of miscellaneous expenses, including a telephone call home. Similarly, where personnel are posted overseas for longer periods of time they receive a cost of living allowance. The allowance reflects the relative costs of a representative basket of goods and services as a means of protecting the spending power of the UK salary in the overseas area. Services include the cost of telephone calls.

Portland PR

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what meetings officials in his Department have had with representatives of the public relations company Portland PR; what contracts Portland PR has with his Department and agencies for which he has responsibility; and what the nature of the contract is in each case. [70135]

Mr. Ingram: While it would incur disproportionate cost to contact every organisation within the Ministry of Defence to determine if any officials have met with Portland PR representatives, I have determined that there have been no dealings with this company by my central Defence Public Relations policy organisation.

We have not found any records of contracts with Portland PR.

RAF Benevolent Trust

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what support his Department has made available to the Royal Air Force Benevolent Trust in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [70197]

Mr. Watson [holding answer 15 May 2006]: The Royal Air Force Benevolent Fund is a charity which exists to provide assistance to those of the extended Royal Air Force family who need support as a consequence of poverty, sickness, disability, accident, infirmity or other adversity. While the Ministry of Defence does not provide any direct financial support, the Royal Air Force encourages personnel to make voluntary contributions through the "give as you earn" scheme. In addition, many volunteers from Royal Air Force stations and units organise and support fund raising events and collect donations to support the Benevolent Fund.

Until January 2005, the MOD provided support to the Royal Air Force Benevolent Fund Development Trust through the provision of manpower, logistics and display assets for events such as the Royal International Air Tattoo. Since January 2005, the newly established Royal Air Force Charitable Trust has taken over the running of such events as the Royal International Air Tattoo.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Assembly Members

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what guidance he has issued to members of the Northern Ireland Assembly on the latest dates by which they are required to provide notice to their staff in the event of salaries and allowances for the Assembly being withdrawn on 25 November 2006. [69265]

Mr. Hain: As the hon. Gentleman will know, I have made clear that should Assembly Members be unable to elect a First Minister, Deputy First Minister and Executive by 24 November, then MLAs' salaries and allowances would be cancelled immediately.

MLAs' staff are, by definition, employed by MLAs themselves. It must therefore be for individual MLAs to decide, with professional advice should they deem it necessary, how best to proceed in terms of each contract of employment. I will remind MLAs of their responsibilities in this area during the summer.

Brownfield Planning

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average percentage of brownfield planning development for new housing has been in Northern Ireland in each of the last three years. [70450]

David Cairns: The average annual rate of brownfield development for new housing in Northern Ireland was 87 per cent. in 2002; 81 per cent. in 2003; and 72 per cent. in 2004. These are the latest years for which information is available.

Causeway Hospital, Coleraine

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many vacancies there are for (a) full and (b) part-time nursing staff in Causeway Hospital, Coleraine. [70419]

Paul Goggins: The information requested is presented in the following table.

Criminal Justice Act

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to implement in Northern Ireland those provisions of the Criminal Justice Act 2003 relating to non-jury trials; and if he will make a statement. [70963]

Mr. Hanson: Sections 43 to 50 of the Criminal Justice Act 2003 provide for trials on indictment to take place without a jury in cases of serious fraud and where there is a suspicion of jury tampering. The provisions extend to Northern Ireland on the face of the Act.

I refer the hon. Lady to the announcement made by the noble Lord, the Attorney-General on 14 March in another place, that the Government's intention is to proceed with these provisions by way of fresh legislation as soon as parliamentary time allows.

At this stage it remains our intention to implement the Criminal Justice Act provisions relating to non-jury trials in line with the introduction of these measures in England and Wales.

Dangerous Dogs (Northern Ireland) Order

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people have been charged under the Dangerous Dogs (Northern Ireland) Order 1991 in each year since its introduction; and what was the penalty imposed in each case. [68548]

David Cairns: The Department of Agriculture and Rural Development only holds information from 1999 on the number of persons charged in respect of offences committed under the Dangerous Dogs (Northern Ireland) Order 1991. This is detailed in the following table. Two of the cases were withdrawn at the last moment following the agreement of the owners to destroy the dogs in question. Of the two cases prosecuted, in the first case the penalty was a £100 fine plus £365 costs and the dog ordered to be destroyed. In the second case the penalty was a £250 fine plus £43 costs and the dog ordered to be destroyed.

Drink Driving

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) police officers and (b) police civilian support staff were convicted of drink driving offences in each of the last five years. [69226]

Paul Goggins: Statistics for the number of police officers convicted of drink driving offences are provided in the table. The Police Service of Northern Ireland do not hold such records for civilian support staff.

Year	Number of Police Officers

2002-03	14

These statistics relate to police officers who were off duty at the time of the offence.

Drug Use (Offenders)

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of crime in each constituency in Northern Ireland in the last two years involved offenders who were using (a) cannabis and (b) other drugs; and if he will make a statement. [69652]

Mr. Hain: The Police Service of Northern Ireland do not keep records in a format that would answer this question.

Cannabis continues to be a first drug of choice for drug users in Northern Ireland, and among the treatment services it is the most commonly reported drug. Over the last three years the partner organisations in the Organised Crime Task Force have seized £36 million of illicit drugs and in 2004-05 the value of cannabis seized was £5.2 million. In the period 2005-06 the police increased the number of seizures by between 10 per cent. to 20 per cent. and the number of persons charged with drug offences by 18 per cent. The Government are not complacent to changes taking place in the drug culture and has noted the rise in cocaine use, from a low base.

On 9 May the Government announced the New Strategic Direction for Alcohol and Drugs for 2006 to 2011. It contains a series of key aims, one of which is to disrupt the availability of illicit drugs being brought into Northern Ireland. The Government will continue to encourage and financially support a range of projects to tackle offenders who use crime to support their drug use.

Education and Library Boards

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what honorariums have been paid to employees of each education and library board in each of the last five years; and at what total cost in each year. [69742]

Farm Animals

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) pigs, (b) beef cattle, (c) hens, (d) sheep, (e) dairy cattle and (f) calves there were on Northern Ireland farms in March in each of the last four years. [71215]

David Cairns: Accurate information is not known for March. The results of a statistical survey of Northern Ireland agriculture conducted annually in June provide the best available estimate.

Livestock type	2002	2003	2004	Number 2005
Pigs	387,714	433,689	424,058	405,093
Beef cattle	422,667	433,544	427,695	428,997

Calves	472,359	471,471	466,718	457,067

Notes:
1. Pigs are defined as breeding and fattening pigs.
2. Beef cattle are defined as cattle over one year old, intended for slaughter.
3. Sheep are defined as breeding and fattening sheep.
4. Dairy cattle are defined as dairy cows and heifers in milk and dairy cows in calf but not in milk.
5. Calves are defined as cattle under one year old.

Farm Subsidies Appeal Panel

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many times the Independent Farm Subsidies Appeal Panel set up by the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development (DARD) has met in the past 12 months; how many decisions have been returned (a) partially and (b) completely in favour of the farmer; how many times the panel's decision has been overturned by DARD; and what the cost of the panel to DARD has been over the last 12 months. [71151]

Maria Eagle: For ease of reference the figures requested have been presented in the following table.

	Number
Number of times panel has met in the last 12 months	[1]89
Recommendations returned by panel	[2]153
Partially upheld by panel	13
Upheld in full by panel	60
Times panel recommendation overturned by DARD	0

[1] Includes 10 occasions where the panel reconvened. Panel to reconvene to complete review of two cases.
[2] Includes 16 cases still under policy consideration.

It should be noted, the Farm Subsidies Appeal Panel do not make decisions. Their remit is to review subsidy-related decisions against the relevant European and UK legislation and to consider whether the Department's decision is consistent with these rules. The panel is asked to reach a conclusion and make a recommendation to the Minister for Agriculture and Rural Development. The Department does not reject the recommendations made by the Independent Panel. The final decision as to whether the panel's recommendation is rejected or accepted rests with the Minister for Agriculture and Rural Development.

The Minister for Agriculture and Rural Development did not accept 29 recommendations made by the panel (of these seven were accepted in part).

During the past 12 months, the Independent Panel's cost to the Department was £257,465. This includes panel fees, travel and subsistence and administrative support/secretariat costs.

Fire Rescue Order

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what financial arrangements have been put in place to enable the Northern Ireland Fire Authority to implement outstanding elements of the Fire Rescue Order (2006). [70494]

Paul Goggins: The provisions in the Fire and Rescue Services (Northern Ireland) Order 2006 will not have any significant bearing on the associated costs of the Fire and Rescue Service. Government already provides resources through the Revenue Support Grant, taking into account a whole range of fire service functions, including responding to road traffic accidents and community safety. Promoting fire safety, for example, is already funded as a key activity of the service and there will be scope for redeployment of resources through a more strategic and risk-based approach.

Some additional funding has already been provided for the New Dimension major emergencies/ catastrophic incidents programme and a bid for further funding is currently under consideration.

Any further funding requests from the Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service, whether arising from the new legislation or otherwise, will be subject to standard businesses case and subsequent scrutiny procedures and, where appropriate, prioritisation of bids against available resources.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the change in the number of households claiming housing benefit has been in each of the last 10 years. [70426]

Mr. Hanson: The number of households claiming housing benefit (HB) over the last 10 years is not available. The table provides the change in the average number of claimants claiming HB in the last 10 financial years.

	Average numbers claiming housing benefit	Change +/-
1995-96	139,600	—
1996-97	140,700	+ 1,100

Kidney Transplants

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many kidney transplants were carried out under NHS procedures in Northern Ireland in 2005. [70427]

Paul Goggins: There were 30 kidney transplants carried out in Northern Ireland under NHS procedures in 2005.

Lesbian, Gay and Bisexual Organisations

Dr. Alasdair McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how much funding was awarded by the Government to lesbian, gay and bisexual organisations in Northern Ireland in 2004-05; and what percentage of funding awarded to all section 75 groups this represented; [59991]

(2) how much financial support has been allocated for lesbian, gay and bisexual organisations for 2006-07. [59994]

Paul Goggins: £643,413 was awarded to lesbian, gay and bisexual organisations in 2004-05. This is approximately 0.9 per cent. of the amount paid by Government to all organizations in the voluntary and community sector.

£531,600 is so far estimated for allocation to support lesbian, gay and bisexual organisations in 2006-07.

Library Fines

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many fines were imposed for the non-return of borrowed books by each library in Northern Ireland in 2005. [70448]

[2] Provisional data.
[3] Rathfriland ward was moved from Newry and Mourne Local Government District to Banbridge Local Government District between 1992 and 1993. There were 31 births in 2005 to mothers resident in Rathfriland ward. The numbers of births in 2005 in the Banbridge and Newry and Mourne LCD areas as they existed in 1975 are estimated as 620 and 1,434 respectively.

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the birth rate was in each district council in Northern Ireland in (a) 2004 and (b) 2005. [71315]

Mr. Hanson: The table below gives birth rates by Local Government District of residence of mother for births registered in 2004 and 2005 respectively.

[3]Provisional Data

Overseas Education

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what programmes his Department has in place to enable young people and students from Northern Ireland to study in the United States. [70447]

Maria Eagle: The Department for Employment and Learning has overall responsibility for the Business Education Initiative (BEI) which aims to provide students with international business and management skills through a one-year placement at a private, church-affiliated university or college in the United States.

The programme is open to pre-final year, full-time EU students studying for a third level (degree/foundation degree/HND) qualification, in any discipline, in a university or college in Northern Ireland. The US colleges and universities waive their normal tuition fees for the students, while the Department pays for costs to bring the students to the USA and provides some further financial support while they are on placement.

Overweight People

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of the percentage of (a) men and (b) women in Northern Ireland who are overweight. [70446]

Paul Goggins: The 1997 Northern Ireland Health and Social Well-being Survey provides the most recent estimate of overweight and obesity levels among adults aged 16+ in Northern Ireland. The survey found that 48 per cent. of men and 32 per cent. of women were overweight, while a further 17 per cent. of men and 20 per cent. of women were obese. When combined, the survey found that 65 per cent. of males and 52 per cent. of females were either overweight or obese.

Physiotherapists

Dr. Alasdair McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what action he is taking to ensure that (a) placements and (b) employment opportunities are available for newly-qualified physiotherapists in Northern Ireland who will complete their training in and after 2006. [70943]

Paul Goggins: Placements for undergraduate students are arranged between the university of Ulster, students and health and social services trusts. All graduating physiotherapy students have undertaken the required clinical placement.

Recruitment is the responsibility of individual health and social services trusts, taking into account service needs and available resources. However, at the overall Northern Ireland level, the balance between physiotherapy supply and demand is monitored through regular DHSSPS work force planning reviews. The Department is currently undertaking a major work force planning review for physiotherapy, the results of which will be published later this year.

Dr. Alasdair McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate his Department has made of the number of student physiotherapists in Northern Ireland due to graduate in 2006 who are likely to find employment within the NHS. [70944]

Paul Goggins: Recruitment is a matter for individual health and social services trusts taking into account service needs and available resources. However, the Department is currently undertaking a major work force planning review of the physiotherapy work force and the destination of new graduates, vacancy levels and related issues will all form part of that review.

Primary School Teachers

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what the change in the numbers of fully qualified primary school teachers has been in (a) the controlled sector and (b) the maintained sector in Northern Ireland in each year between 1995 and 2005; [70431]

(2) what the change in the numbers of fully qualified primary school teachers in (a) the controlled sector and (b) the maintained sector in Northern Ireland was in each year between 1995 and 2005. [71123]

Maria Eagle: The change in the numbers of fully qualified primary school teachers in (a) the controlled sector, and (b) the maintained sector in Northern Ireland in each year between 1995 and 2005 is detailed as follows:

	School management type		Differences from previous year
	Controlled	Maintained	Controlled	Maintained
1995	4,301	4,332	—	—
1996	4,258	4,315	-43	-17
1997	4,211	4,276	-47	-39
1998	4,116	4,132	-95	-144
1999	4,040	4,063	-76	-69
2000	4,051	3,986	+11	-77
2001	3,994	3,946	-57	-40
2002	4,050	3,910	+56	-36
2003	4,055	3,900	+5	-10
2004	4,038	3,842	-17	-58
2005	3,949	3,734	-89	-108

Note:
Teacher numbers are taken as at October of each of the years in question.

Pupil Behaviour

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on how many occasions police have been called to schools in Northern Ireland to deal with (a) drug-related incidents and (b) incidents involving violence during 2005. [70466]

Paul Goggins: The number of occasions when police have been called specifically by schools to deal with a drug related or violent incident is not known. However, according to PSNI records there were 71 drug related offences and 335 violent offences which occurred within the confines of an educational establishment during 2005.

Racial Abuse

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many complaints of racial abuse have been (a) investigated and (b) upheld in (i) each Department in Northern Ireland and (ii) his Department in each of the last five years. [70490]

Mr. Hanson: The information requested is set out in the tables.

It shows the number of formal internal complaints made by staff in the 11 Northern Ireland Departments, the NIO and their respective agencies.

Rates

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what definition his Department uses of a 'site positive' feature in the Computer Assisted Mass Appraisal system used for rates revaluation. [70575]

Mr. Hanson: The definitions of "site positive" features used within the Computer Assisted Mass Appraisal system CAMA are as contained in the table.

Code	Characteristic	Definition
0	None	No positive site characteristic.
1	Sea frontage	Property boundary actually abuts coast (beach/cliff top).
2	Sea view	Substantial view of sea from main accommodation, but property does not abut coast.
3	Sea view limited	Substantial view of sea from main accommodation that is partially blocked by other structures/substantial sea view only visible from limited rooms e.g. bedroom. Property does not abut coast.
4	Water frontage	Property boundary actually abuts water (lough, substantial river).
5	Water view	Substantial view of water from main accommodation, but property does not abut water.
6	Water view limited	Substantial view of water from main accommodation that is partially blocked by other structures/water view only visible from limited rooms e.g. bedroom. Property does not abut water.
7	Other premium view full	Substantial view of feature from main accommodation.
8	Other premium view limited	Partial view of feature from main accommodation or substantial view only visible from limited rooms e.g. bedroom
9	Adjoining parkland	Property abuts well-maintained parkland or stately home e.g. Botanic Gardens, Ormeau Park, Rowallane, Castlewellan Forest Park, Florencecourt, and Stormont Estate.
10	Adjoining golf course	Property abuts golf course.
11	Conservation area	Property located in designated conservation area.
12	Other positive (specify)	Other positive site characteristic.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on what basis water rates will be calculated from April 2007. [70576]

David Cairns: The information is as follows:

Domestic water charges

From April 2007 unmeasured household charges for water and sewerage will be introduced. Both charges will consist of a standing charge (estimated at around £55) and a variable element based on the capital value of each property as determined by the Valuation and Lands Agency (VLA) for the purposes of domestic rating. The Government intend to set the new household charges during the three-year period to 2009-10 to achieve the average level of charges that will apply in England and Wales in 2009-10. There will also be a low-income protection scheme. The Government's broad objective is to ensure that low-income households should not need to spend more than 3 per cent. of their income on water and sewerage charges. To achieve this a new affordability tariff will be available for those households which are eligible. This tariff will be based on income and will be set at a level equivalent to 3 per cent. of the single person's pension credit guarantee as updated by Parliament each year. Additional protection in the form of lower caps will be set for those with properties valued at less than £100,000.

As many as 200,000 households (30 per cent. of all households) in Northern Ireland who presently qualify for rate rebate, housing benefit or the new Northern Ireland Rate Relief Scheme should benefit from this scheme. The affordability tariff will also extend to all 16 to 17-year-old householders and to children leaving care up to the age of 21.

The new charges will be phased in over a three-year period, with households paying one-third of the full charge in 2007-08, two-thirds in 2008-09 and the full amount in 2009-10. The changes to the non-domestic regime will be introduced on the same basis.

Also from April 2007, meters will be available to pensioner households who apply. Meters will also be installed in all new properties and first time connections. Where meters are installed, both water and sewerage charges (where appropriate) will consist of a standing charge and a variable element based on consumption as registered on the water meter. Those households receiving a meter bill will pay a standing charge similar to that of unmeasured householders.

This approach to metering will be subject to a review after two years when the extension of the metering option to further groups will be considered.

Non-domestic water charges

Metered customers

Charges will continue to be made up of a standing charge (currently around £50) and a volumetric charge based on the volume of water consumed. All metered customers connected to the public sewer will receive a new sewerage bill of around the same magnitude as their new water bill (except in the case of trade effluent customers).

Unmeasured customers

Water Service is undertaking a programme of extending metering more widely throughout the non-domestic sector. However for those non-domestic customers who remain on an unmeasured supply, water and sewerage charges will both be made up of a standing charge (at a similar level to unmeasured domestic standing charges) plus a variable element based on the rateable value of the premises.

Trade Effluent Charges

Trade effluent charges will be extended to all businesses which discharge trade effluent. The calculation of these charges will continue to be on the basis of the Mogden formula and will be brought fully into line with practice in GB.

Road Traffic Offences

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people lost their driving licences in Northern Ireland as a result of being convicted of road traffic offences in each year between 1995 and 2005. [69186]

David Cairns: For previous years the information required could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, since 1 May 2005 Driver Vehicle Licensing Northern Ireland (DVLNI) has recorded 7,083 disqualifications and at the 5 May the total number of disqualified drivers recorded on the driver licensing system was 16,386.

Schools

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average amount of funding received by (a) integrated schools and (b) other schools in Northern Ireland has been for each of the last 10 years. [67070]

Maria Eagle: The following table sets out details of the funding for integrated and other schools in Northern Ireland for the last 10 years. It shows average recurrent funding per school in each year and includes amounts made available under Local Management of Schools Formulae (allocated largely on a per pupil basis) and funds held by Boards and the Department which are distributed to schools in the course of the year to meet teacher substitution and other costs funded centrally by funding authorities. The figures exclude funding for special schools and centrally held resources, such as home-to-school transport, school meals and central administration, which are not attributable to individual schools.

Somme Commemorations

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether a Minister from his Department will attend the Somme commemorations in France in the summer of 2006. [70449]

Mr. Hain: As in previous years, a Minister from the Northern Ireland Office will be attending the Somme commemorations in France this year. A Minister will also lay a wreath at the Somme service at Belfast City Hall.

Special Needs

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many children in Northern Ireland were assessed as having special needs in (a) 1995 and (b) 2005. [70437]

Maria Eagle: The number of children with special educational needs at schools in Northern Ireland in 2005-06 is 53,699. The total number of children with special educational needs is not available for 1995-96. However, the number of children with a statement of special educational needs in 1995-96 was 5,718. The number of children with a statement of special educational needs in 2005-06 is 11,968.

Teachers Pay and Pensions Unit

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people are employed in the Teachers Pay and Pensions Unit; and what the implications are for the Unit of the Review of Public Administration. [70946]

Maria Eagle: The Department of Education's Teachers Pay and Pensions Branch employs 124 people. The effect that the Review of Public Administration (RPA) will have on this Branch has yet to be determined. The RPA Consultation document of March 2006 proposed that, generally, DE should no longer undertake the direct delivery of services and made explicit mention of the Department's teachers pay and pensions functions as a part of DE likely to be affected by this proposal. Following on from this, and as announced by the Under-Secretary of State for communities and local government, my hon. Friend the Member for Basildon (Angela E. Smith) in her statement of 22 November 2005, the Department has conducted an Internal Review to establish which of the functions currently performed within the Department would transfer to the Education and Skills Authority, to be established under the RPA in 2008. This review covers all of the Department's current functions. The Review is still going on. The implications of the RPA for DE staff, including Teachers Pay and Pensions Branch, will be made clear when it reports.

Waste Transfers

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he is taking to prevent waste from the Irish Republic being transferred to Northern Ireland. [70444]

David Cairns: The Environment and Heritage Service (EHS) of the Department of the Environment has formed a dedicated Environmental Crime Team to enforce serious breaches of waste legislation, including the illegal transportation and deposition of waste from the Republic of Ireland (ROI) to Northern Ireland (NI).

The legitimate transfer of non-green listed waste is limited, and strictly controlled under the Transfrontier Shipment of Waste Regulations 1994.

EHS sits on a number of cross-border groups, set up to improve communication, intelligence sharing and effective measures to reduce illegal waste disposal in NI.

EHS Officials have given evidence in ROI courts in order to assist the ROI's Environmental Protection Agency in taking action against offenders.

EHS and the PSNI have carried out a large-scale joint operation which has resulted in the removal of a major illegal waste operator from the activity. As a result, court proceedings are expected later this year.

EHS has recently secured its first conviction in Crown court against landowners who were running an illegal landfill site to receive ROI waste in Fermanagh. This case has also been referred to the Assets Recovery Agency. The possibility of remediation costs being awarded to EHS will also be explored. The Fermanagh case is the first example of a prosecution case involving environmental offences being heard at Crown court in NI. It represents a major step in achieving a wider recognition of the seriousness of waste crime.

Wind Farm Proposals (Tunes Plateau)

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 23 January 2006, Official Report, column 1879W, on wind farm proposals (Tunes Plateau), whether an application (a) has been submitted and (b) is in the process of being submitted. [70445]

Maria Eagle: I can confirm that there has been no change in the position reported in the answer of 23 January 2006. No application has yet been made in respect of the proposed development at Tunes Plateau and I am not aware of the developers' timescale for submitting such an application.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Belarus

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations she has made to her Belarussian counterpart on the arrest and imprisonment of opposition leader Mr. Milinkevich; and if she will make a statement. [68384]

Margaret Beckett: Based on the 1997 General Affairs Council Conclusions, the EU suspended ministerial and high-level contacts with Belarus, while offering dialogue and assistance if Belarus addressed reform. Neither my right hon. Friend the Member for Blackburn (Mr. Straw) then Foreign Secretary or my right hon. Friend the Member for then Minister for Europe Parsley and Renfrewshire, South (Mr. Alexander) have therefore made representations direct to their respective counterparts. However, my right hon. Friend the then Minister for Europe made the following statement on Friday 28 April on behalf of the Government:

"I wholeheartedly condemn this action against people who were trying to exercise legitimate rights of freedom of assembly and expression. Once again the Belarusian authorities have demonstrated their lack of tolerance, respect for their people, and adherence to democratic standards.

In line with the statements of the EU Presidency and colleagues in EU member states, I call on the Belarusian authorities to release immediately Mr Milinkevich, those imprisoned with him and all other political detainees imprisoned following the flawed presidential election on 19 March".

Burma

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what her assessment is of the likelihood of restored relations between Burma and North Korea resulting in Pyongyang becoming one of Burma's suppliers of weapons; and if she will make a statement. [68198]

Margaret Beckett: We understand the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK) and the Burmese Government have an existing military and trade relationship which predates the possible establishment of diplomatic relations. The Burmese military purchases weapons from a number of countries. We would be concerned if the DPRK sought to increase its sales of weapons to Burma.

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of whether Burma has agreed to restore diplomatic ties with North Korea; and if she will make a statement. [68199]

Margaret Beckett: Neither the Burmese government nor the Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK) has made an official statement about the resumption of diplomatic relations, but we are aware of credible media reports to this effect. It is too early to assess what the impact would be, if any, on contacts between the two countries. Burma is currently the only Association of South East Asian Nations country which does not have diplomatic relations with the DPRK.

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on how many occasions the UK Government have requested from the Burmese military authorities direct access to Aung San Suu Kyi since her detention in May 2003; what the results were of each such request; and if she will make a statement. [68200]

Margaret Beckett: In 2003 and 2004, our embassy in Rangoon sent five official notes formally requesting the Burmese Government to transmit a request to Daw Aung San Suu Kyi for our ambassador to meet her. This was at a time when the State Peace and Development Council (SPDC) claimed she was not under detention but inaccessible "for security reasons". No official response was forthcoming, but when pressed, Burmese officials claimed that Aung San Suu Kyi had not agreed to a meeting. We believe that the requests were not, in fact, submitted to her. The last formal written request to meet Daw Aung San Suu Kyi was made on 21 September 2004. Again, our embassy was orally informed that a meeting would not be possible. At the end of November 2004, the SPDC clarified that Daw Aung San Suu Kyi had been put under house arrest, citing Section 10(b) of the 1975 State Protection Law. After the SPDC confirmed that she is, in fact, in detention, our embassy has not sought consular access to her, since she is not a British citizen. However, we continue to press for her release and the release of all political prisoners in Burma.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if she will (a) raise the issue of the current Burmese military offensives in Karen state at the UN Security Council and (b) lobby for Security Council resolutions (i) condemning atrocities by the Burmese military against the Karen, Karenni and Shan people and (ii) imposing a global (A) arms and (B) investment embargo on Burma; [71158]

(2) what representations she has made to Burma's military regime following the Burmese army's military offensive in western and northern Karen state; what reference was made during those representations to (a) the killing of Karen civilians and (b) the displacement of people from their homes; and if she will make a statement; [71159]

(3) what steps she (a) is taking and (b) plans to take towards preventing the actions of the Burmese military from causing humanitarian problems in eastern Burma. [71176]

Mr. McCartney: We remain deeply concerned about the political and human rights situation in Burma, including the plight of ethnic groups such as the Karen, Karenni and Shan.

We condemn the attacks carried out by the Burmese army on civilians in northern and western Karen State. We understand that these attacks have resulted in a significant number of internally displaced people (IDPs) and refugees on the Thai/Burma border. The EU issued a statement on 3 May expressing its concern about these recent attacks. The statement was sent to the Burmese Ministries of Information and Foreign Affairs.

The statement can be found on the EU website at: http://www.eu2006.at/en/News/CFSP_Statements/May/0305Myanmar.html?null

The UK, in response to the humanitarian problems caused by the ongoing conflict in Burma, provides support for IDPs through the International Committee of the Red Cross and for refugees through the Thai Burma Border Consortium.

A global arms and investment embargo can only be imposed on a state under a Chapter VII Resolution of the UN Security Council. At present there is no agreement within the Security Council, including among the Permanent Members, to add Burma to the Council's formal agenda, which is a pre-requisite for adopting such a resolution. Our UN mission in New York has regular discussions with the UN and Security Council partners on Burma.

Consultants

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will list the companies which were paid consultancy fees by her Department in 2005-06; how much each was paid; and what each of the companies was used to accomplish. [69697]

Margaret Beckett: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply my right hon. Friend the then Foreign Secretary (Jack Straw) gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell) on 25 May 2005, Official Report, column 134W.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many people in her Department have been (a) disciplined and (b) dismissed for (i) inappropriate use of the internet while at work and (ii) using work telephones to access premium rate numbers in each of the last five years. [67975]

Margaret Beckett: Breaches of IT policy (inappropriate Internet use and misuse of IT systems) have been monitored periodically since April 2003. This table shows the number of staff who have been disciplined in line with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's (FCO) Misconduct Procedure. A copy of the procedure is in the Library of the House.

	Number of staff
	disciplined	dismissed

No staff have been disciplined or dismissed for misuse of premium rate numbers. Staff are told about the FCO's policy on use of emails and the internet when they join the FCO and are reminded about the policy at regular intervals through office notices circulated to all staff (most recently in June 2005).

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what percentage of the staff in her Department is (a) male, (b) female and (c) disabled, broken down by grade. [69078]

Margaret Beckett: The information requested, for Foreign and Commonwealth Office UK based civil servants, as of 1 April 2006 is shown in the following table:

Responsibility level	Male	Female	Percentage Declared disabled
SCS level	83.6	16.4	1.6
Grade 6/7	69.4	30.6	2.4
SEO/HEO	66.6	33.4	2.4
EO	48.0	52.0	2.9
AO/AA	43.5	56.5	5.1

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what opportunities exist for people to work beyond retirement age in her Department. [69076]

Margaret Beckett: Opportunities arise on an ad hoc basis. In normal circumstances we do not expect members of staff to work beyond their normal retirement age. There is provision in our retirement policy for exceptional circumstances where we could agree to re-employing a member of staff at home. For example, there might be operational reasons why we needed to re-employ someone with specialist skills. Normal retirement age for Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) staff is 60 and it is assumed that staff will want to retire at 60 unless they notify the FCO to the contrary six months in advance. However, staff in Band A (clerical or secretarial officers) can choose to retire between the ages of 60 and 65 and staff in Bands B to D (junior and middle managers) between 60 and 63.

Ethiopia

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps are being taken by her Department with the government of Ethiopia to improve prison conditions and to monitor the treatment of prisoners. [70000]

Mr. McCartney: The UK and other donors have visited a number of prisons in Ethiopia to monitor conditions and treatment of prisoners, and have raised our concerns with government officials. Our embassy in Addis Ababa, along with other donors, is supporting projects with the government and local non-governmental organisations to try to improve conditions for prisoners.

In 2005-06 the embassy funded the construction of a dormitory in Kaliti prison, Addis Ababa, for 130 female prisoners. The embassy also funded the construction of a biogas digester, dry pit latrines and shower rooms to improve conditions in Metekel prison in Beneshangul regional state.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations she has received about the trial of prisoners of conscience for treason in Ethiopia. [70001]

Mr. McCartney: We have received numerous representations from hon. Members, Members of the European Union Parliament, the public and non-governmental organisations about the trial of Coalition for Unity and Democracy opposition leaders, media and civil society representatives charged with offences after the unrest that followed the elections in Ethiopia last year. Some have been charged with treason.

We continue to raise our concerns with the Government of Ethiopia at every suitable opportunity.

EU Presidency

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 20 December 2005, Official Report, column 2846W, on the EU Presidency, if she will list the small gifts commissioned. [68743]

Mr. Hoon: Mugs, umbrellas, bags, keyrings, pocket size clocks and radios, watches and logoed desk items usually provided as part of a marketing campaign.

FCO Services

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what (a) administrative and (b) financial changes were required to make FCO Services an executive agency, with particular reference to (i) use of consultants in the process as part of this change and (ii) increases in pay grades of key personnel. [68503]

Margaret Beckett: My right. hon. Friend, the then Foreign Secretary issued a Written Ministerial Statement on 20 March 2006 Official Report, columns 5-6WS, announcing that Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) Services would become an Executive Agency (EA) of the FCO on 1 April 2006. FCO Services' move to EA status is aimed at achieving best value for money both for the FCO and ultimately for the taxpayer.

In order to take forward the administrative and financial changes which were necessary, a project team of FCO and FCO Services staff was set up, supported by a small team of three professional consultants.

The administrative changes have been set out in the Framework Document, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House and I will send a copy to the hon. Member. The financial changes have involved strengthening the FCO Services' Finance team and modifying the FCO's financial management system to enable a proper separation of the Agency's accounts. There have been no increases to the pay grades of key personnel.

Immigration Authorities (Canada)

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make representations to the Canadian embassy regarding the treatment by the Canadian authorities of a Parkinson's disease sufferer from Omagh accused of being a drug addict and returned home following his arrival in Canada from Northern Ireland. [71124]

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 15 May 2006]: With the limited information provided, we are unable to make representations at this stage. If the hon. Member wishes to provide further details of the incident in writing, we will consider taking appropriate action.

International Arms Trade Treaty

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with (a) the Prime Minister and (b) colleagues in the Department of Trade and Industry on a strategy for progress on the International Arms Trade Treaty. [69671]

Mr. McCartney: There are ongoing discussions on the initiative for an international treaty on the trade in all conventional arms including with my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister, all interested Government Departments, Industry and civil society. The commitment to work to secure such a treaty was a pledge in the Labour Party's 2005 General Election manifesto.

Ministerial Visits (Accommodation)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discounts are available in relation to hotel accommodation used by (a) civil servants and (b) special advisers in her Department. [69073]

Margaret Beckett: Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) posts overseas often are able to negotiate special rates with hotels for visitors on official business. Full details of the rates available are set out in the FCO document "Worldwide Subsistence Rates", a copy of which will be sent to the hon. Member and also placed in the Library of the House.

In the UK, Officers undertaking pre-posting training in London can take advantage of corporate rates at a number of central London hotels. A list of these hotels will be sent to the hon. Member and a copy placed in the Library of the House.

Montenegro

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions she has had with his EU counterparts on the forthcoming referendum on Montenegrin independence; and if she will make a statement. [68213]

Margaret Beckett: On 27 February the General Affairs and External Relations Council (GAERC) discussed the referendum on Montenegrin independence and issued conclusions. The EU has made clear that the referendum, scheduled for 21 May, must be held according to the terms of the Constitutional Charter of the State Union of Serbia and Montenegro and subsequent legislation, and that the whole process needs to be transparent, consensual and democratic. The conclusions of the 27 February GAERC can be found at: www.consilium.europa.eu.

Pakistan

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what her policy is on Pakistan's application to join the UN Human Rights Council; and if she will take steps to ensure that Pakistan shows clear progress in implementing international human rights standards, especially in relation to the treatment of women and religious minorities, before its membership is approved. [70902]

Mr. McCartney: Pakistan was elected to the UN Human Rights Council on 9 May, by 149 votes cast in secret ballot, for a term of two years. All members of the Council are expected to uphold the highest standards in the promotion and protection of human rights, to co-operate fully with the Council, and to be reviewed under the universal periodic review mechanism during their term of membership. We expect all members to take seriously the important responsibility they have for the promotion and protection of human rights worldwide, as the UK has committed to do itself. The UK has, and will continue to have, a regular dialogue with Pakistan on its human rights obligations.

Tibet

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps she is taking to ensure that human rights abuses of Tibetan people are raised by the newly-elected UN Human Rights Council. [70969]

Mr. McCartney: The Government are very concerned about human rights in Tibet. We regularly raise these concerns with the Chinese Government, through the UK-China Human Rights Dialogue, ministerial contact and EU mechanisms. With uncertainty over the format of the first meeting of the UN Human Rights Council (HRC) in June, we do not yet know what issues will be raised. Given the election of China to the HRC on 9 May, China is likely to resist any moves to raise Tibet at the HRC. We will continue to look for appropriate opportunities to raise our concerns with the Chinese authorities.

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps she plans to take to raise the human rights of the Tibetan people with the Government of China. [70982]

Mr. McCartney: The Government regularly raises human rights in Tibet with the Chinese Government, including through the UK-China Human Rights Dialogue, ministerial contacts and EU mechanisms. My hon. Friend, the then Minister of State for Trade, Investment and Foreign Affairs, the Member for Dudley, South (Ian Pearson) raised human rights in Tibet with Vice Foreign Minister Zhang Yesui on 7 April. Tibetan individual cases of concern will be raised with the Chinese Government at the next rounds of the UK- and EU-China Human Rights Dialogues later this year. We will continue to raise human rights in Tibet at every appropriate opportunity.

Visas

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what the average time was that an applicant for a visa to the UK waited for a reply at (a) Amman, Jordan and (b) other UK embassies in the Middle East in the latest period for which figures are available; and if she will make a statement; [67356]

(2) how many visas to the UK have been issued in Amman, Jordan (a) within (i) 24 hours and (ii) seven days of application and (b) more than seven days after application in each of the last five years; and if she will make a statement. [67357]

Dr. Howells: UKvisas does not hold statistics on average time scale for reply to visa applications. Visa sections such as that in Amman operate to public service agreement (PSA) targets, which indicate the length of time within which a visa section should aim to resolve an application (issue, refuse, defer or refer for further information). We do not hold these statistics for only those applications which led to a visa being issued. Statistics are compiled and are made publicly available on the UKvisas website to illustrate the performance of individual visa sections against these targets. They may be found at www.ukvisas.gov.uk—'Entry Clearance: facts and figures'.

The Visa Section in Amman has met all of these targets in the last five years.

The targets since April 2005 are as follows:

PSA 1—90 per cent. of straightforward non-settlement visa applications to be processed and available for return to the applicant within 24 hours from the date of receipt by a visa section of the application and all supporting documents including the fee.

PSA 2—90 per cent. of non-settlement applications requiring further inquiries or interview to be decided within 15 working days from the date of receipt by a visa section of the application and all supporting documents including the fee.

PSA 3—90 per cent. of applicants for settlement visas to be interviewed within target times. For all visa sections in the Middle East this is 12 weeks.

We are currently processing statistics for 2005-06 and expect to publish them in June.

At our embassies and consulates in the Middle East, all visa sections met their targets in the last period for which figures are available (financial year April 2004 to March 2005) except for those in Damascus, Jerusalem and Riyadh where some, but not all of the targets, were achieved.

Prior to April 2005, PSA targets were measured as follows:

PSA Tier 1 and 2—90 per cent. of straightforward non-settlement applications to be resolved within 24 hours.

PSA Tier 3—Average waiting time for first interview should be not more than 10 working days.

PSA Tier 4—Average waiting time for settlement interview should not be more than three months.

Statistics for our embassies and consulates in the Middle East for 2004-05 are as follows:

			PSA targets (financial year 2004-05)
	Total applications received	Total visas issued	PSA Tier 1 and 2 (percentage)	PSA Tier 3 (average wait in days)	PSA 3 (average wait in months)

[2] Statistics unavailable

The statistics for Amman for the previous three years are as follows:

			PSA targets (prior to 2005-06)
	Total applications received	Total visas issued	PSA Tiers 1 and 2 (percentage)	PSA Tier 3 (average waiting time in days)	PSA Tier 4 (Average waiting time in months)

[1] Prior to 2001-02, statistics were published by calendar year

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 4 May 2006, Official Report, column 1811W, on visas, if she will define the circumstances under which a visa application would not be straightforward non-settlement; and if she will make a statement. [70471]

Dr. Howells: Straightforward entry clearance applications are defined as those when the decision to issue can be made based on the information immediately available to the Entry Clearance Officer. Non-straightforward applications are those where the Entry Clearance Officer determines that further enquiries need to be made. Non-settlement applications are those categories of entry clearance other than those where the stated purpose of the application is for the applicant to settle in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 4 May 2006, Official Report, column 1809W, on visas, (1) what procedures are followed when an applicant for a visa to enter the UK declares they have been refused protection by the United Nations Commissioner for Refugees; [70732]

(2) what procedures are followed when an applicant for a visa to enter the UK declares they have been refused entry by other countries; and if she will make a statement. [70736]

Dr. Howells: All applications for entry clearance to the United Kingdom are considered on a case-by-case basis under the Immigration Rules. Information on previous refusal of entry by other countries or denial of refugee status by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees will be relevant and will be taken into consideration when a decision on entry clearance is being made.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what her policy is on the issuing of visas to enter the UK to individuals who were closely associated with the previous regime in Iraq. [70739]

Dr. Howells: All applications are assessed on their individual merits and applicants must show that they meet the requirements of the Immigration Rules. Officials will check existing records for all applications and take any information held into consideration when making a decision on the entry clearance application. There is provision in the Immigration Rules for refusal on the grounds that an applicant would be considered not conducive to the public good. The degree to which an individual was associated with the former regime in Iraq could be relevant to this.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Arrest Warrants

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many arrest warrants are outstanding for (a) non-payment of fines and (b) breaching the conditions of a community service order. [69731]

Ms Harman: I have been asked to reply.

In March 2006 (the last month for which data are available for England and Wales) there were 6,904 outstanding warrants issued for breaching the conditions of a community service order. Information on the number of outstanding arrest warrants for non-payment of fines is not collected centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Asylum/Immigration

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent discussions he has had with the UN High Commissioner for Refugees on the safe return of failed asylum seekers. [70113]

Mr. McNulty: The Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND) is in frequent discussion with the UN High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) on a wide range of issues that relate to the position of refugees and asylum seekers (including failed asylum seekers).

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the practice started whereby adult children making representations on immigration-related matters on behalf of their parents through hon. Members are no longer accepted unless the parents themselves have signed a letter authorising it. [70320]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 12 May 2006]: The Secretary of State is required by statute to ensure that an individual's personal information is not unlawfully disclosed to a third party. However, it is not the policy of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND) to routinely refuse to provide information to a Member in the circumstances which my hon. Friend has described and each request is considered on its own merits.

Card Durability Survey

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his answer to Question No. 19869, if he will publish the results of the card durability survey. [23089]

Joan Ryan: The results of the Smartcard Durability Study are available on the Identity and Passport Service website: http://www.identitycards.gov.uk/working-suppliers-publications.asp.

Correspondence

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will answer the letter to him dated 24 March from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Mrs. S. Akhtar. [67487]

Mr. McNulty: The Immigration and Nationality Directorate replied to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton on 2 May 2006.

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will answer the letter to him dated 13 March from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Dr. S. Brooskol. [67488]

Mr. McNulty: The Immigration and Nationality Directorate wrote to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton on 28 April 2006.

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will answer the letter to him dated 13 March from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Mr. Earl Anthony Clarke. [67489]

John Reid: I wrote to my right hon. Friend on 9 May 2006.

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will answer the letter to him dated 6 March from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton, with regard to Mr. Khalid Rashid Malik. [67490]

John Reid: The Immigration and Nationality Directorate replied to my right hon. Friend on 2 May 2006.

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the letter to his predecessor dated 27 March from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton, with regard to Mrs. Asma Asad. [69961]

Mr. McNulty: I wrote to my right hon. Friend on 11 May 2006.

Deportation

Mr. Benton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what (a) reports he has received and (b) assessment he has made of the treatment of Mr. Arif Dar after deportation to Pakistan; and what the evidential basis was for the assurances given to the hon. Member for Bootle as to Mr. Dar's safety. [70763]

Mr. McNulty: Updated advice on the situation in Pakistan was received from the Country of Origin Information Service (COIS), an official government unit which specialises in obtaining country information. COIS is regularly approached for advice by the United Kingdom Immigration Service to assist in the removal process.

There is no evidence to suggest that the alleged treatment that Mr. Dar has received since his return to Pakistan is due to his removal from the UK. We do not routinely monitor the treatment of returnees to any country, we would not remove them if we considered that they were likely to suffer persecution on their return.

Any assurances given regarding this case were based on the up to date information received from COIS concerning Pakistan and the objective opinion of the judiciary who joined the Home Office in believing that Mr. Dar was not likely to suffer persecution should he be returned to Pakistan.

Police

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) full-time police officers and (b) other employees of Cambridgeshire Constabulary have taken early retirement in each year since 1997. [69048]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the likely impact of a merger of the Norfolk constabulary with other forces in terms of (a) police officer and staff redundancies, (b) computer systems, (c) rebranding of uniforms and stationery and (d) officer relocation. [38861]

Mr. Byrne: Options involving Norfolk police force have been rigorously assessed. The options have been assessed for operational and financial viability, which includes IT changes. The case for amalgamation of Norfolk, Suffolk and Cambridgeshire police forces can be found on the Home Office website at http://police.homeoffice.gov.uk/police-reform/Force-restructuring.

Police Officer and staff matters will be an issue for any new force and authority.

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with members of the Norfolk constabulary and the Norfolk police authority regarding the possible creation of strategic forces in the Eastern region. [38864]

Mr. Byrne: Following the former Home Secretary's letter dated 22 September 2005 inviting forces and authorities to develop options for changes Norfolk police force and authority;

(i) In early November 2005 the Home Secretary provided feedback to the initial short list of options developed by the force and authority.

(ii) The Home Secretary met with Norfolk constabulary's chief and chair on 20 March to discuss the findings of assessments undertaken on its Business Case submitted in December 2005.

Norfolk police authority wrote to the Home Secretary on 11 April 2006 requesting voluntary merger with Suffolk and Cambridgeshire police forces.

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he has taken to ensure that the Norfolk Constabulary undertakes consultation with members of the public in Norfolk in relation to proposals to merge the constabulary with other police forces; and whether he has made additional funding available to the constabulary for this purpose. [38867]

Mr. Byrne: When inviting forces and authorities to develop options for change in September 2005, the former Home Secretary requested that they consult and engage all relevant local stakeholders, including local communities, within existing budgets.

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) warranted officers and (b) special constables there are in Waverley borough council; and if he will make a statement. [69559]

Mr. Byrne: Statistics by constituency are not collected centrally. Information by Basic Command Units (BCUs) where Waverley and Guildford form part of the West Surrey BCU, is available. As at 31 March 2005, there were 338 full-time equivalent police officers (including those officers on career breaks or maternity/paternity leave) and 61 (headcount) special constables.

Deployment of police officers in Surrey to basic command units is an operational matter for the Chief Constable.

Secured by Design

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures his Department is adopting to promote the Secured by Design initiative. [69370]

Mr. Byrne: The Home Office supports the Secured By Design initiative which promotes a design-centred approach to crime prevention in the built environment.

The value of Secured By Design in offering practical advice is already recognised in a number of publications. For example, in the joint guide "Safer Places, the planning system and crime prevention" (Office of the Deputy Prime Minister/Home Office, 2004) www.odpm.gov.uk/planning, a number of good practice case studies involving Secured By Design accredited projects in England are highlighted.

Home Office crime prevention materials such as "Your Business, Keep Crime out of it" (Home Office, 2005) www.crimereduction.gov.uk/yourbusiness (a Welsh language version is available from the Welsh Assembly Government in Cardiff) reflects Secured By Design principles and refers people to the Secured by Design website.

The Government seeks to signal the importance of crime prevention through environmental design as widely as possible. In November 2005, through the National Community Safety Plan 2006-2009 (HM Government, 2005) www.crimereduction.gov.uk/ncsp, Government Departments gave an undertaking to ensure that guidance is in place to help local authorities design out crime.

Secured By Design will have a role to play in that.

Terrorism Relief Fund

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the Government's £1 million endowment to the new Terrorism Relief Fund may be spent on those affected by terrorism before the establishment of the fund. [61793]

Tessa Jowell: I have been asked to reply.

Since the Budget we have been working with the Red Cross and victims groups to develop proposals for how the £1 million fund will operate. We will make an announcement soon.

UK Prisoners Abroad

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many UK citizens are detained in overseas gaols, broken down by country. [69364]

Dr. Howells: I have been asked to reply.

On 31 March 2006, British consular officials were aware of 2,255 British Nationals detained in overseas prisons. The breakdown by country is shown as follows. These figures include detainees on remand, as well as those serving sentences.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Churchdown School

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when she will make a decision on the application by Churchdown School, Gloucester, for permission to dispose of school playing fields; and if she will make a statement. [67706]

Jim Knight [holding answer 3 May 2006]: The application by Churchdown School, Gloucester, to dispose of school playing fields is under consideration. Officials are in communication with the school, but it is too soon to say when a decision will be made.

Examination Results

Rob Marris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the (a) GCSE and (b) A-level examination results were in (i) 2002, (ii) 2003, (iii) 2004 and (iv) 2005 of the three non-selective state secondary schools nearest to each of the academies opened in (A) September 2002, (B) September 2003 and (C) September 2004; and what the equivalent results were in each of the three academies. [68113]

Jim Knight: The information requested has been placed in the House Libraries.

School Closures

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the schools where (a) closures and (b) standard number reductions are planned, broken down by parliamentary constituency. [68497]

Jacqui Smith: Where a local authority or governing body plan to close a school they must first consult interested parties, then, after considering views, and if they wish to proceed, must publish statutory proposals. Following publication, and a period for representations, the proposals will be decided by the local authority (if they published the proposals and there are no objections), the local School Organisation Committee (SOC) or the Schools Adjudicator (if the SOC cannot reach a unanimous decision). The Department is not routinely informed of consultations but must be provided with copies of published proposals and the final decisions taken.

I have placed two tables in the House Library. Table A lists the 378 schools for which the Department has been informed statutory proposals for closure have been published and approved. Table B lists the 75 schools for which the Department has been informed statutory proposals for closure have been published but has not yet been informed of a decision.

Both tables include schools that are closing, or have been proposed for closure, for a range of reasons. These include cases where the schools proposed for closure are: to be replaced by another school, sometimes on the same site (for example by an academy or a school with a religious character); amalgamating (for example, infant and junior schools) or are part of another local reorganisation. The tables exclude special school and nursery school closure proposals.

Standard numbers were abolished by the Education Act 2002. They were replaced by a net capacity formula which assesses the capacity of the school and derives an indicated admission number. When setting the admission number for the school, the admission authority must have regard to the indicated admission number however they can set a number that is higher or lower if they wish. If they set a number that is lower, they must publish a notice to inform local parents. The Department does not maintain a central record of proposals to lower admission numbers.

School Fires

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment he has made of the risk to life posed by fires in schools. [69556]

Jim Knight: Of paramount concern is the safety of pupils, teachers and other users of schools, and regulations are in place to ensure the risk to life posed by school fires is low. Regulation 17 of the Education (School Premises) Regulations 1999 requires that every part of a school building, and of the land provided for a school, shall be such that the safe escape of the occupants in case of fire is reasonably assured. Schools are also covered by the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974 and by subsequent related regulations. These include aspects of fire safety.

Since April 2001, all new building work in schools has been subject to approval under the Building Regulations. If a building is designed in accordance with the guidance in Approved Document B (Fire Safety), which accompanies Part B of the Building Regulations, a satisfactory standard of life safety will be achieved.

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent estimate he has made of the annual cost of fire damage to schools. [69557]

Jim Knight: The Office of the Department for Communities and Local Government (DCLG) is the lead Department for fire safety policy. The latest figures we have from DCLG are for 2003-04 and show that 1,359 school fires were attended by local authority fire and rescue services. This is broadly in line with the previous year and a drop of around 130 on 2001-02. Using ODPM's latest Cost of Fire Estimates, published last year, the total cost of property damage due to school fires in 2003-04 amounted to just under £62 million.

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make fire sprinklers obligatory in all new build and refurbished schools. [69558]

Jim Knight: All new building work at schools is subject to approval under the Building Regulations. These regulations do not currently require the installation of sprinklers in schools, but that does not stop local authorities from specifying their use. In our Managing School Facilities Guide 6, "Fire Safety", we give the example of a school in an area of high arson risk as being a suitable candidate for having sprinklers installed (see www.teachernet.gov.uk/fire). However, we recognised the need to provide more detailed guidance than before.

We work closely with colleagues in the new Department for Communities and Local Government (DCLG) and, liaising with them, we produced new draft guidance on fire safety—Building Bulletin (BB) 100, "Designing and Managing Against the Risk of Fire in Schools". It stresses the value of using risk assessments to determine what sort of fire detection and alarm systems should be used in each school, and whether or not sprinklers should be installed. While saying that a building designed in accordance with the guidance in Approved Document B (Fire Safety), which accompanies the Building Regulations, will achieve a satisfactory standard of life safety, it also suggests ways of improving property protection.

Public consultation on the draft BB 100 was completed in November last year, to the same timeframe as DCLG's consultation on its review of the fire safety aspects of the Building Regulations. An analysis of the responses is almost complete and we aim to publish the final version of BB 100 in the autumn.

We are also doing specific work on sprinklers. We have commissioned the Building Research Establishment to carry out a cost benefit analysis of installing sprinklers in schools. Work on this is due to be completed shortly and it should provide robust figures for installation costs, and how these might be partially offset, together with a set of tools to help those carrying out risk assessments.

School Statistics

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of pupils (a) are in receipt of free school meals, (b) have special educational needs and (c) are from ethnic minority families in each secondary school in England that selects (i) wholly and (ii) partly by ability; and what the equivalent percentages are for the local authority in which each school is located. [68784]

Jim Knight [holding answer 10 May 2006]: The available information has been placed in the Library.

Information is given on all grammar schools. It is not possible to identify partially selective schools as they are not designated as such and therefore the Department has no definitive list.

Staff Dispute

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will take steps to ensure that the dispute between the University and Colleges Employees Association and the Association of University Teachers does not adversely affect students taking final examinations this year. [68932]

Bill Rammell [holding answer 8 May 2006]: It is a matter for higher education institutions (HEIs) to consider how best they can minimise the adverse effects on students of the current dispute, including making contingency arrangements for exams and assessment. HEIs, as autonomous bodies, are responsible for determining their own academic and administrative affairs, including deciding what to pay their own staff. Pay and conditions of service are subject to negotiations between employers, their staff and their representative trade union bodies. The Government play no part in this.

While this is a matter for unions and employers, I am disappointed that this has come to industrial action and that students' progress is being threatened by this dispute. The employers have made an offer of 12.6 per cent. over three years, which I believe the academic unions should now formally put to their members with a view to ending this damaging dispute.

Temporary Classrooms (East Riding)

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pupils are being taught in temporary classrooms in each school in the East Riding of Yorkshire; how many pupils he expects to be being taught in such classrooms at the start of the 2006-07 academic year; and if he will make a statement. [69318]

Jim Knight: East Riding of Yorkshire local authority advises that a total of 1,663 pupils are currently housed in temporary classrooms, with 1,628 anticipated at the start of the 2006-07 academic year. The number at each school is as follows:

	Current	September 2006
Beswick and Watton C of E Primary	30	30
Beverley High	74	74
Beverley Minster C of E Primary	165	165
Beverley St. Nicholas Primary	75	75
Boynton Primary	30	30
Bubwith Primary	30	30
Burstwick Community Primary	60	60

	Current	September 2006
Driffield	62	62

Martongate Primary	25	25
Middleton on the Wolds C of E Primary	25	25
Nafferton Primary	15	15
North Frodingham Primary	25	25
Patrington C of E Primary	40	40
Riverside Special	30	30
Sledmere Primary	25	25
South Hunsley	100	100
St. Anne's Special	39	39
St. Mary's RC Primary	6	6
Sutton Upon Derwent C of E Primary	20	0
Swanland Primary	60	60
The Snaith School	50	50
Thorngumbald Infant	20	20
Wetwang C of E Primary	20	20
Withernsea Infant	60	60
Woldgate School and Sixth Form Centre	42	42
Wolfreton	50	50

Not all of the pupils' time during the school day will be spent in these classrooms. The number of temporary classrooms used by the authority is broadly half that used 10 years ago.

Examination Boycott

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what action his Department is taking to address the boycott of assessment and examination activity called for by the Association of University Teachers. [68850]

Bill Rammell: It is a matter for higher education institutions (HEIs) to consider how best they can minimise the adverse effects on students of the current dispute, including making contingency arrangements for exams and assessment. HEIs, as autonomous bodies, are responsible for determining their own academic and administrative affairs, including deciding what to pay their own staff. While this is a matter for unions and employers, I am disappointed that this has come to industrial action and that students' progress is being threatened by this dispute. The employers have made an offer of 12.6 per cent. over three years, which I believe the academic unions should now formally put to their members with a view to ending this damaging dispute.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment his Department has made of the impact of a continued boycott of assessment and examination activity by further and higher education teachers on initiatives to increase the enrolment of overseas students at English universities. [68851]

Bill Rammell: We have made no such assessment. It is a matter for higher education institutions (HEIs) to consider how best they can minimise the adverse effects on students of the current dispute, including assessing any negative impact on the enrolment of students.

The employers have made an offer of 12.6 per cent. over three years, which the Government would encourage the academic unions to formally put to their members with a view to ending this damaging dispute.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what assessment he has made of the impact of strike action by university staff on (a) academic teaching and (b) marking and assessment of university students; [70111]

(2) what estimate he has made of the number of students who will not be able to (a) sit examinations and (b) graduate this year as a result of strike action by university staff. [70128]

Bill Rammell: We have made no such assessment or estimate. It is a matter for higher education institutions (HEIs), as autonomous bodies, to consider how best they can assess and minimise the adverse effects of the current dispute. HEIs are responsible for determining their own academic and administrative affairs, including deciding what to pay their own staff. Pay and conditions of service are subject to negotiations between employers, their staff and their representative trade union bodies. The Government play no part in this.

The employers have made an offer of 12.6 per cent. over three years, which I believe the academic unions should now formally put to their members with a view to ending this damaging dispute.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what action he is taking to ensure that university examination papers are marked and degrees awarded accordingly in the event of industrial action by university teachers in summer 2006; and if he will make a statement. [68430]

Bill Rammell [holding answer 11 May 2006]: It is a matter for higher education institutions (HEIs) to consider how best they can minimise the adverse effects on students of the current dispute, including making contingency arrangements for exams and assessment. CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Debt Collectors

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs whether her Department uses the services of private debt collectors. [71059]

Bridget Prentice: A key responsibility of my Department is to ensure respect for the orders of the courts and this includes through working in partnership (where appropriate) with the private sector. For example:

The Legal Services Commission instructs private debt collection agencies, where appropriate, to seek information as to the whereabouts of the debtor and/or the collection of the debt.

In April 2006, Regional contracts were let to enable HMCS to employ Approved Enforcement Agents for the execution of warrants.

In Greater Manchester a trial has been undertaken whereby old outstanding fines accounts have been given to private sector partners as an additional enforcement tool available to the magistrates courts when they have exhausted all the mechanisms directly available to them. Officials are currently evaluating the outcome of that trial.

Magistrates

Dr. Vis: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many magistrates have been disciplined for discriminatory sentencing in the last ten years. [68123]

Ms Harman: No magistrates have been disciplined for their sentencing decisions in the past 10 years. Like other judicial office holders, magistrates are independent and their decisions as such can only be challenged through the courts, not through a disciplinary process. If a higher court considering an appeal from magistrates was concerned that a sentencing decision appeared to have been reached on an improper basis involving misconduct, whether because of discrimination or for other reasons, it would be possible for the court concerned to refer the conduct of the magistrates, as opposed to their decision, to the Office for Judicial Complaints to be considered on behalf of the Lord Chancellor and Lord Chief Justice. Similarly, if in the course of a case magistrates make discriminatory comments or otherwise behave in a way which suggests that they are acting improperly, it is possible for a complaint about their conduct to be made to the Office for Judicial Complaints.

The Office for Judicial Complaints was created on 3 April 2006. Previously complaints about magistrates' conduct were made to the Lord Chancellor. During 2005, 89 complaints were referred to him, of which he upheld 63.

Small Claims

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what steps are being taken to provide greater assistance to claimants in the small claims court who are not legally represented. [67150]

Ms Harman: All county courts are now accredited by the Legal Services Commission (LSC) as Assisted Information Points, for the Community Legal Service (CLS) Direct Scheme. Unrepresented claimants and defendants who require legal advice are referred to CLS Direct by court staff. CLS Direct can give free advice to those eligible, or can direct people to other sources of free legal advice/assistance in their local area.

The small claims support service being piloted at Reading provides unrepresented litigants with general information and practical assistance on the small claims process. Evaluation of the results will inform the development of departmental plans for offering further help to unrepresented litigants.

In addition, Her Majesty's Courts Service has recently embarked on a study to identify ways in which its website can be made more user friendly to litigants in person who are pursuing small claims. It will consider the means of providing better access to information and assistance through a series of gateways linking to help on different aspects of the court process, relevant court leaflets, and signposts to other agencies and sources of advice.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Action Teams

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many departmental staff are employed in Action Teams in (a) the UK, (b) Scotland and (c) in each Action Team area; and how they will be redeployed when Action Team activity ends in September. [69877]

Mrs. McGuire: There are 472.19 full-time equivalent (FTE) departmental staff undertaking work for or in connection with Action Teams in the UK, of which 45.5 are in Scotland.

The Action Team programme is due to finish in September and Jobcentre Plus district managers are working with human resource teams to plan the re-deployment of staff currently engaged in Action Team activity. This is within the wider context of work force planning across Jobcentre Plus districts. Trade union side have been engaged in these discussions.

Information on the number of FTE staff employed in each Action Team area is in the table.

Department for Work and Pensions staff employed in each Action Team area

Region	District	Number
London	Central London	16.9
	City and East London	10.88

Notes:
1. Data excludes management and administrative activity as confirmed data are not available, however, the assumption is that an additional 13 per cent. FTE staff are engaged in this capacity.
2. Data are clerically collected and are provided through the Jobcentre Plus Activity Based Information system.
3. Data are calculated on full-time equivalent staff and not on individuals.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of Action Teams for Jobs; and if he will make a statement. [69878]

Mrs. McGuire: Action Teams have been successful in helping more than 162,000 people into work. A review of Action Teams for Jobs DWP Research Report 328 'Review of Action Teams for Jobs' was published in March 2006 and is available in the Library.

Carers

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what percentage of applicants has been refused carers' grants on the basis of means-testing in each local authority in each year since the creation of the grant; [70322]

(2) what guidelines his Department issues to local authorities on the means-testing of carers' grants; [70323]

(3) according to what criteria carers' grants are awarded. [70324]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answers 12 May 2006]: I have been asked to reply.

This Government introduced the carers grant in 1999 to support councils in providing breaks and other services for carers in England. The grant is not paid to individuals but paid each year to councils as a specific formula grant. There are no conditions attached. Individual carers have a right to an assessment of their ability to provide and continue to provide care under section 1 of the Carers and Disabled Children Act 2000. Services are not subject to a means test, though local authorities are able to charge for the carers' services they provide. However, carers cannot be charged for community care services provided to people they care for, including the services provided to enable carers to take a break from caring.

Although there are no conditions attached to the carers grant funding for 2006-07 and 2007-08, the Commission for Social Care Inspection's delivery and improvement statement will monitor the provision of services to carers. As a result, the Department issues guidance to councils to remind them that the policy intention behind the grant is to support carers.

Demographics

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what policies his Department is adopting in response to the likely future decrease in the ratio of workers to pensioners. [70055]

James Purnell: The Pensions Commission has made a thorough analysis of the changing demographic position in the UK. Today there are four workers to every pensioner. By 2050, it is expected that there will be only be two workers to every pensioner in the UK.

We are determined to meet the challenge of an ageing population. Any reform we take forward will be guided by five key tests: whether it promotes personal responsibility, is simple, fair, affordable and sustainable.

We have taken steps to build consensus through the National Pensions Debate and will bring forward a White Paper by the end of the month, setting out our proposals for pension reform.

Financial Assistance Scheme

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether his Department will seek an increase in funding of the Financial Assistance Scheme in the next spending review; and if he will make a statement. [69544]

James Purnell: The Prime Minister recently announced to the House of Commons that we will expedite the review of the Financial Assistance Scheme and its funding.

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when former employees of Triplex Components Group Ltd. of Walton, Peterborough will have their cases expedited under the financial assistance scheme; and if he will make a statement. [70434]

James Purnell: The Triplex scheme has been determined to be a qualifying pension scheme. As the scheme is still in the process of winding up, the FAS operational unit will not yet be able to calculate final payments. However, trustees are able to request that the FAS scheme manager make initial payments to eligible survivors, or to those members who have already reached the age of 65 or who are terminally ill.

Mr. Touhig: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the projected funding requirements are of the Financial Assistance Scheme in (a) 2007 to 2010 and (b) 2010 to 2013. [70889]

James Purnell: It will not be possible to provide firm estimates until we have assessed the eligibility of each scheme and its members. Our current estimates in current cash terms, based on data provided by a number of schemes in late 2004, are shown in the following table. The estimates will change in the light of improved information. Over the longer term we estimate expenditure to be broadly in line with £20 million over 20 years.

Pay 80 per cent. to those within three years of Scheme Pension Age

2007-08	15

Financial Capability

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what initiatives his Department and its non-departmental bodies support to promote (a) financial education, (b) financial advice, (c) financial inclusion and (d) financial capability; which organisations are involved in delivering each initiative; and how much funding is provided to each by (i) his Department and its non-departmental public bodies, (ii) other Government Departments, (iii) the private sector and (iv) the voluntary sector. [66578]

Mr. Plaskitt: Through the Pensions Education Fund, the Department for Work and Pensions is undertaking an initiative from January 2006 to March 2008 offering funding to local and national not-for-profit organisations (such as trades unions, charities, trade associations and the voluntary sector), to use innovative ways to increase financial awareness and encourage working people to provide for their retirement. The objective of the fund is to deliver better retirement planning information to individuals in the workplace.

The Department for Work and Pensions is making £5.5 million available to fund initiatives, selected through the Pensions Education Fund bidding process. Projects will be delivered in the period January 2006 to March 2008.

As part of the Government's strategy to increase access to affordable credit, we are introducing the Growth Fund from summer 2006. The Growth Fund will be used to increase the availability of affordable personal loans to financially excluded people, and will be delivered by low cost lenders from the not-for-profit and private sector.

We will also introduce arrangements whereby lenders meeting certain criteria will be able to apply for deductions from a range of income replacement benefits to repay loans in the event of default.

As part of the Government's strategy to increase access to banking, we introduced universal banking and the Payment Modernisation Programme during 2002-05. This resulted in more than 10 million people receiving information from us about the types of account available prior to moving from payment by order book to payment into an account and, importantly, using their account on a regular basis to conduct their business.

Implementation costs of the deductions scheme and the Growth Fund are funded by the Financial Inclusion Fund. Final figures for the deductions scheme are not yet available but we do not expect to spend as much as the £10 million allocated for both initiatives.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what percentage of workers receiving the minimum wage are in receipt of jobseeker's allowance. [70114]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is not recorded centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Kvaerner Pension Fund

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will request the Pensions Regulator to publish details of the background to his decision in the case of the Kvaerner Pension Fund. [68397]

Mr. Timms: I have been asked to reply.

No. This is a matter for the Pensions Regulator. Furthermore to publish these details would breach the confidentiality of information exchanged between the parties and the Regulator.

Pensions

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will ensure that the pension forecasting team states in correspondence with inquirers whether national insurance data has been taken into account when making a pension forecast. [70231]

James Purnell: Customers are advised in their state pension forecasts that the information is based on their national insurance (NI) record. This information is provided to the Department for Work and Pensions (DWP) by Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs (HMRC) and sourced from their national insurance recording system (NIRS).

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he plans to publish the Government's White Paper on pensions reform. [70285]

James Purnell: We plan to publish a White Paper on pensions reform by the end of the month.

WALES

Ministerial Visits (Accommodation)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on how many occasions Ministers of State in his Department stayed overnight in (a) five star, (b) four star and (c) three star hotels on foreign visits in each of the last three years. [68973]

Mr. Hain: In the last three years, there was only one foreign visit by a Wales Office Minister, to China in April 2004. Three five star hotels were used and the booking arrangements were made by the Foreign Commonwealth Office, at a Government negotiated rate, on behalf of the Wales Office.

Since 1999 the Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year, this information includes accommodation costs. Copies are available in the Library.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on how many occasions (a) civil servants and (b) special advisers in his Department have stayed overnight in (i) five star, (ii) four star and (iii) three star hotels in each of the last three years. [68974]

Mr. Hain: Travel and subsistence rules do not require the claim to state the star rating of the accommodation used. Claims are limited under those rules to set maximum values, both in the UK and, under Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) guidance, overseas. Therefore the information is not held by the Wales Office and can be provided only at a disproportionate cost.

In the case of a ministerial visit to China in April 2004 supporting officials and special advisers were accommodated in five star hotels in the three cities visited. These were booked by the FCO, at a Government discounted rate.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what the total cost was of overnight accommodation for (a) civil servants and (b) special advisers in his Department staying overnight in (i) mainland Great Britain, (ii) Northern Ireland, (iii) the Republic of Ireland and (iv) other countries in each of the last three years. [68975]

Mr. Hain: The costs of the Wales Office for overnight accommodation is as follows:

	Great Britain and Northern Ireland	Republic of Ireland	Overseas
2004-05
Special advisers	1,353.85	0	1,037.14
Civil servants	2,740.59	0	2,074.28
2005-06
Special advisers	999.90	0	0
Civil servants	5,175.38	0	0

Expenditure records kept do not differentiate between Great Britain and Northern Ireland, so are given as one sum. Expenditure records kept prior to 2004 did not separate any accommodation costs and this could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Portland PR

Dr. Francis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what meetings officials in his Department have had with representatives of the public relations company Portland PR; what contracts Portland PR has with his Department; and what the nature of the contract is in each case [70056]

Mr. Hain: The Department does not maintain a central list of such meetings. Civil servants meet many people as part of the process of policy development and business delivery. All such meetings are conducted in accordance with the requirements of the Civil Service Code and Guidance for civil servants on contacts with lobbyists and people outside Government. There have been no such contracts.

Private Office Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much has been paid in (a) salary, (b) travelling expenses, (c) subsistence allowance and (d) removal expenses to special advisers in his private office in each of the last five years. [68977]

Mr. Hain: The Wales Office employs two special advisers who are paid in accordance with the Cabinet Office pay scales for special advisers.

Since 2003, the Government have published on an annual basis the names and overall cost of special advisers and the number in each pay band. For information relating to the last financial year I refer the hon. Member to the written ministerial statement made by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 21 July 2005, Official Report, columns 158-61WS.

Information on special advisers for this financial year is currently being collected and will be published in the normal way when it is ready.

In 2004-05 the Wales Office paid £552.96 in subsistence and £613.90 in travelling expenses, and in 2005-06 the Wales Office paid £317.90 in subsistence and £319.80 in travelling expenses to special advisers.

Records kept before 2004 do not separate these costs, and this could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost. All official travel by special advisers is undertaken in accordance with the requirements of the Ministerial Code and the Civil Service Management Code.

From 2004-06 the Wales Office has not paid removal expenses for any special adviser and earlier records could be searched only at disproportionate cost.

Staff Development

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what the total cost was of (a) staff away days and (b) staff team building exercises in his Department in each of the last three years. [68978]

Mr. Hain: The Wales Office held a staff away day in February 2003. Expenditure records for that period do not separate this cost. This could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost. A team-building event was held at the beginning of this financial year, but has not yet been brought to account.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Anhydrite Mines

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate he has made of the number of local authorities where housing has been built on disused anhydrite mines. [64695]

Angela E. Smith: I have been asked to reply.

No estimate of the number of local authorities where housing has been built on disused anhydrite minerals was made by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister.

Audit Commission

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will take steps to cap the audit fees charged by the Audit Commission to parish councils. [71274]

Mr. Woolas: The Audit Commission has fixed its fee scales for the vast majority of non Best Value local (parish and town) councils from 2006 until 2011 following a consultation exercise with the sector.

In addition, a significant number of local councils will see a reduction in fees following the recent amendments to the Accounts and Audit Regulations 2003, which increased the threshold at which local councils are eligible for the limited assurance regime from £500,000 to £1 million. A further reduction in the burden for smaller local councils is achieved by increasing the threshold at which local councils may account on the basis of receipts and payments from £100,000 to £200,000.

We consider that these measures already taken to reduce the impact of audit fees on local councils are sufficient and do not seek to impose a cap.

Community Area Committees

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (1) whether she plans to increase the powers delegated to community area committees; [70070]

(2) if she will make a statement on the role and responsibilities of community area committees. [70091]

Mr. Woolas: Our local government White Paper later this year will set out our plans for devolving powers for local areas and neighbourhoods.

Conferences

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what overseas conferences staff from her Department will attend in the next 12 months; and what conferences staff from the predecessor department attended in the last 12 months. [70578]

Angela E. Smith: Staff from the Department for Communities and Local Government have attended a number of conferences overseas in the last 12 months. However, there is no centrally held record of these and to compile one could be done only at disproportionate cost.

E-Government Partnerships

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will list the regional e-Government partnerships in England; and what the budget was for each in the most recent year for which figures are available. [70646]

Angela E. Smith: There are currently nine e-Government regional partnerships in England:

South West Region
London Connects
North West Electronic Gov Group
West Midlands SMART Region
East of England Region
East Midlands reg. e-Gov Partnership
North East Connects
South East Forum for e-Government
Yorkshire and Humber e-region Partnership.

Each have been allocated £50,000 in 2005-06 to help with sustainability.

Financial Allocations

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how much has been allocated to the (a) North East Regional Smartcard Consortium and (b) North East Trusted Service Infrastructure. [70643]

Angela E. Smith: £250,000 was allocated to the North East Regional Smartcard Consortium in 2002-03. No funds were allocated to the North East Trusted Service Infrastructure.

Fire Service

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (1) how many fire authorities have not (a) prepared and (b) published a race equality scheme; [71423]

(2) how many fire authorities have reviewed their relevant policies and functions in respect of racial equality in accordance with Commission for Racial Equality guidance and published the results. [71424]

Angela E. Smith: This information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, my hon. Friend may be interested to know that in 2004 the Chief Fire Officers Association developed an Equality Impact Assessment Toolkit to support fire and rescue authorities (FRAs) in complying with the requirements of the Race Relation (Amendment) Act 2000 to ensure that all new policies, procedures, plans and practices have been assessed for impact with regard to race. It included a template for review and update of FRA race equality schemes. In 2005 the toolkit was circulated so that all FRAs could carry out equality impact assessments and a number of regional workshops were held to provide training for policy officers and equality and diversity professionals within the service.

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what funding resources have been provided to fire authorities in order to facilitate the implementation of their race equality schemes. [71425]

Angela E. Smith: Under the Provisions of the Race Relations Amendment Act 2000 fire and rescue authorities have a statutory duty to develop and implement race equality schemes for their organisations. Funding for this function is provided through the revenue support grant allocated to each authority.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what rules govern whether the Army may use Fire Service appliances in the event of industrial action. [70722]

Angela E. Smith: When armed forces personnel have provided support they have only been authorised to operate equipment on which they had been trained.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many fire appliances the Army has for providing fire cover; and how old the appliance is in each case. [70723]

Angela E. Smith: The armed forces have no fire appliances for providing emergency fire cover. In accordance with the Fire and Rescue Service National Framework 2006 to 2008, fire and rescue authorities are expected to supply all fire appliances and equipment required to provide emergency fire and rescue cover.

Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether she has received the Fire Brigade Union's alternative proposals for emergency control centres, Regional Controls: National Resilience; and if she will make a statement. [71008]

Angela E. Smith: A copy of proposals was sent to the Deputy Prime Minister at the then Office of the Deputy Prime Minister on 25 January 2005 by FBU General Secretary Matt Wrack. He and my predecessor the hon. Member for Poplar and Canning Town (Jim Fitzpatrick) subsequently met with Mr. Wrack on 7 February to discuss the proposals.

We welcome the FBU's recognition of the need to strengthen national resilience. On the basis of the limited details available in the document, we do not believe that the proposals offer a viable alternative to the FiReControl project. They would not provide a genuinely resilient solution and would be likely to increase costs.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many firemen were killed while on duty in (a) England, (b) the North East and (c) the Tees Valley in each year since 1997. [71090]

Angela E. Smith: The following table shows the number of firefighters killed while attending a fire in each year since 1997 in (a) England, (b) North East, (c) Tees Valley.

Firefighters killed while attending a fire, 1997 to 2005

Housing

Michael Gove: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what discussions he has had with the Commission for Architecture and the Built Environment on the aesthetic quality of homes built under the Government's Sustainable Communities Programme; and if he will make a statement. [64952]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

ODPM Ministers have held a series of meetings with the Commission for Architecture and the Built Environment (CABE) and have invited CABE to wider meetings and events. Matters for discussion have included the quality and design of new homes. CABE representatives are also considering a programme of work on improving design in the Thames Gateway.

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what he expects the average market price of his Department's £60,000 home to be in (a) Milton Keynes and (b) each region when the first homes are made available to the public. [68143]

Yvette Cooper: The Design for Manufacture competition is being run by English Partnerships on behalf of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister. It is anticipated that there will be mixed tenure on each site, with some homes being available for affordable rent, some under shared equity and some for private sale.

The aim of the competition is to demonstrate how to build cost-effectively across a range of housing types without sacrificing quality. The target is for high-quality 76.5 square metre home to be built for a construction cost of £60,000 or less with larger and smaller homes being built at a similar cost-efficiency. Each of the 10 sites chosen for the Design for Manufacture competition by English Partnerships is being sold to the successful developers in the usual way. Developers will be responsible for determining the final sales price for dwellings for full sale. Actual sales costs will be known once the homes are built on site and details finalised in accordance with market conditions at the time. Homes available through shared equity schemes on the first four sites are expected to cost £55,000 to £70,000 for a 50 per cent. share.

Kilmartin Property Group

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will call in the application by Kilmartin Property Group for a retail development in Tweedmouth, Berwick-upon-Tweed, for consideration alongside the other major retail applications in Berwick-upon-Tweed which she has already called in. [68909]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 9 May 2006]: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government, is already giving very careful consideration to whether she should intervene in the application by Kilmartin Property Group for retail development at Ord Road, Tweedmouth.

The local planning authority, Berwick-upon-Tweed borough council, consulted the Secretary of State on 19 April 2006 in accordance with her Shopping Direction. She expects to make a decision in the very near future on whether to intervene, taking her policy on calling-in planning applications into account. In the meantime, the council has been directed not to grant planning permission for the proposed development without further authorisation from the Secretary of State.

I shall ensure that the right hon. Member is notified of the decision.

Local Government

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government when she plans to publish proposals on reforming the legislation on the political restrictions on local government employees. [70633]

Mr. Woolas: Our Discussion Paper, "Standards of Conduct in English Local Government", published on 15 December 2005, included our proposals for changes to the legislation on the political restrictions relating to local government employees.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what obligations the best value regime imposes on local authorities' procurement processes. [70655]

Mr. Woolas: Subject to their legal duties, including the duty of best value and public procurement law, local authorities are responsible for taking their own procurement decisions. The duty of best value as laid down in the Local Government Act 1999 requires authorities to make arrangements to secure continuous improvement in the way in which they exercise their functions, having regard to a combination of economy, efficiency and effectiveness. This includes the duty they are under in relation to procurement.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what information local authority planning departments provide to Ordnance Survey in relation to (a) individual planning and building permissions, (b) change of use, (c) starts and (d) completions. [70656]

Angela E. Smith: Ordnance Survey receives information from many, though not all, local authorities. There is no uniform format or frequency for the provision of such information, and items received vary from copies of planning committee decisions to very detailed site plans. Some information is received electronically although most is in paper form. The information received can include some or all of the categories mentioned in the question.

Ordnance Survey also has a commercial contract with a private sector supplier for regular supply of change intelligence information, some of which is obtained from local authority sources.

The information is used for scheduling survey activities to keep the National Geospatial Database up-to-date.

Local Services (Tendering)

Roger Berry: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the effect on local user-led organisations of local authorities putting services out to competitive tender. [68585]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister had not undertaken any assessment of the impact on user-led organisations of local authorities' competitive tendering practices.

Ordnance Survey

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Meriden (Mrs. Spelman), of 20 January 2006, Official Report, column 1694W, on Ordnance Survey, which external suppliers have provided aerial photographs. [70567]

Angela E. Smith: Aerial photography has been provided under contract to Ordnance Survey by the following external suppliers from April 2001 to March 2006:

Simmons Aerofilms Limited

Getmapping plc

UK Perspectives

BKS Surveys Limited

IGN France International

Kampsax A/S

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether Ordnance Survey has used satellite photography in the last five years. [70600]

Angela E. Smith: Ordnance Survey has not used satellite photography for production purposes in the last five years. However, it has evaluated the potential of satellite imagery to meet current and future business needs. This has included an assessment of data from the Quickbird, Ikonos and Spot5 high resolution satellites for potential use in change detection and feature extraction applications.

Police/Firemen's Pay

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the pay at 2006 prices was of (a) a leading fireman and (b) a police constable in each year since 1976. [70873]

Angela E. Smith: The information requested is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Regeneration Projects

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to the letter of 20 May 2005 from the hon. Member for Sunderland, South and the response from her predecessor of 7 June 2005, what conclusions have been reached by the Local Community Centre Task Force on the future viability of projects whose single regeneration budget funding is coming to an end; and if she will make a statement. [70024]

Angela E. Smith: The Local Community Sector Task Force is expected to put forward its report in the next few weeks.

Security Passes

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many departmental security passes were issued by her Department in the most recent year for which figures are available. [70691]

Angela E. Smith: The Department for Communities and Local Government was formed on 5 May 2006. In the year April 2005 to March 2006 a total of 1,497 new and replacement permanent building passes were issued for staff, contractors and consultants working in the London HQ buildings of its predecessor Department the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister.

Small Business Rate Relief

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the Government's forecast is for the take-up rate of small business rate relief in each of the next three years. [70568]

Mr. Woolas: On the basis of returns completed by local authorities before the start of the current financial year, an estimated £390 million is expected to be claimed in small business rate relief for 2005-06, the first year in which the scheme has been operating. Applications for small business rate relief may be made up to six months after the end of the financial year to which the application relates, or six months from notification of an alteration to a rateable value that makes the hereditament eligible for relief. The amount of small business rate relief estimated for 2006-07 is due to be announced shortly, although no forecast has yet been made for years beyond that.

Standards Board for England

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if the Government will abolish the Standards Board for England. [70587]

Mr. Woolas: The Government have no plans to abolish the Standards Board for England. Our proposals for the future of the local government conduct regime, set out in our Discussion Paper of 15 December 2005, are that the Standards Board should continue to play an important strategic role at the heart of the conduct regime.

Super Output Areas

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many super output areas there are in England in the Index of Multiple Deprivation; and if she will make a statement. [70238]

Mr. Woolas: There are 32,482 Lower Layer Super Output Areas (SOA) in England. Each SOA has an average population of 1,500 people. SOAs are generally smaller than wards (wards vary in size from 800 to 35,000 people) and have been designed to 10 to 20 years. These SOAs allow us to better identify where small pockets of deprivation exist in otherwise affluent areas and therefore permit us to better target our resources to areas with the greatest need.

HEALTH

Herceptin

12. Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on Government policy on the prescription of Herceptin for early stage breast cancer. [70843]

Caroline Flint: It is for individual clinicians, in discussion with patients, to consider whether to prescribe Herceptin. Primary care trusts may need to consider whether to support this decision and supply the drug at NHS expense. We have made clear to primary care trusts that they should not rule out treatments on principle and that they should not refuse to fund Herceptin solely on the grounds of its cost.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how she defines exceptional circumstances with regard to the prescription of Herceptin to patients with early stage breast cancer; and whether she has issued guidelines to primary care trusts on the definition. [67809]

Ms Rosie Winterton: My right. hon. Friend, The Secretary of State confirmed in issue 294 of the Chief Executive's bulletin that primary care trusts (PCTs) should not rule out treatments on principle but consider individual circumstances. How PCTs choose to consider individual circumstances is a matter for local determination. It would not be appropriate for Ministers to dictate, or prejudge, the factors that might properly be taken into account by a PCT in assessing each case, beyond advising against refusals solely on the grounds of cost. My right. hon. Friend has not, and has no plans to, issue further guidance in this matter.

Myalgic Encephalomyelitis

13. Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to improve treatment for sufferers of myalgic encephalopathy. [70844]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The £8.5 million funding for the development of new services we announced in 2002 has secured significant improvements in the care of people with chronic fatigue syndrome/myalgic encephalomyelitis (CFS/ME) in England.

However, it is the responsibility of primary care trusts to ensure that local services continue to meet the needs of people with CFS/ME.

23. Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what support her Department gives to young people with myalgic encephalomyelitis. [70854]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: We recognise that young people can be profoundly affected by chronic fatigue syndrome/ myalgic encephalomyelitis (CFS/ME).

The CFS/ME Exemplar, 'Megan's Journey', we published in 2004, embodies the commitment we made in the children and young people's national service framework, to deliver better services for children and young people, which are tailored to meet their particular needs.

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will prepare contingency plans for circumstances where primary care trusts reduce provision of services for myalgic (a) encephalomyelitis and (b) encephalopathy; [71460]

(2) what support her Department provides for those so severely affected by myalgic (a) encephalomyelitis and (b) encephalopathy they are (i) bed and (ii) house bound. [71470]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: In January 2004, funding of £8.5 million was announced for specialist services for those living with chronic fatigue syndrome/myalgic encephalomyelitis (CFS/ME). This funding was specifically intended to cover the costs of setting-up services where none already existed.

The national service framework for long-term conditions (NSF) sets out a clear vision of how health and social care organisations can improve the quality, consistency and responsiveness of their services and help improve the lives of people with neurological conditions, including CFS/ME. National health service organisations are expected to demonstrate that they are making progress towards achieving the level of service quality described in the NSF.

We have no plans to introduce contingency plans for the provision of CFS/ME services. It is the responsibility of local health bodies to meet the health and social care needs of their local population. The Healthcare Commission and the Commission for Social Care Inspection may undertake performance reviews to assess progress on local implementation of the NSF.

Acute Hospital (West Cumbria)

14. Mr. Jamie Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the plans for a new acute hospital in west Cumbria. [70845]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Following consultation in 2005 the Cumbria and Lancashire strategic health authority gave its approval earlier this year to the North Cumbria Acute Hospitals NHS Trust to develop a strategic outline case for a new build hospital for west Cumbria.

Oculists

15. Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will increase the payment oculists receive for carrying out eye tests to the level paid in Scotland. [70846]

Caroline Flint: Negotiations on the fee for NHS sight tests in England for 2006-07 are under way. The fee for 2006-07 will be announced once these negotiations are concluded.

Dental Services

16. Mr. Goodwill: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on access to dental treatment for patients with severe learning difficulties in (a) Scarborough and Whitby and (b) England. [70847]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Dental care for patients with severe learning difficulties is usually provided by dentists working in the local salaried primary care services. I understand that Scarborough Whitby and Ryedale Primary Care Trust have made provision for this treatment through the salaried dental service covering North Yorkshire.

NHS Staff

17. Emily Thornberry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many front-line staff there were in the NHS in (a) 1997 and (b) 2005; and if she will make a statement. [70848]

Andy Burnham: The number of front-line staff has increased from around 885,000 in 1997 to around 1,144,000 in 2005. This is an increase of around 259,000 or 29 per cent.

This includes an increase of over 33,000 (37 per cent.) doctors, an increase of over 85,000 qualified nurses (27 per cent.) and an increase of over 38,000 (40 per cent.) qualified scientific, therapeutic and technical staff.

Broomfield Hospital PFI

18. Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the Broomfield hospital private finance initiative scheme will be approved. [70849]

Andy Burnham: As the Prime Minister told the hon. Member for West Chelmsford last week, the Department of Health's PFI review team visited the trust recently. Progress has generally been good. There are a number of commercial and contractual issues which the trust and its private sector partner now need to focus on and resolve so that the Department can look at the final fully costed proposals and their long term affordability. We expect this work to take approximately six months.

Life Expectancy (Women)

19. Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the impact of (a) diet and (b) alcohol consumption on life expectancy for women. [70850]

Caroline Flint: Female life expectancy increased from 79.8 years in 1997 to 80.9 years in 2003. We have not made a separate assessment on the impact of diet or alcohol on the life expectancy of women.

It is widely recognised that eating a healthy balanced diet can contribute to a number of positive health outcomes, and eating at least five portions of a variety of fruit and vegetables a day could lead to an estimated reduction of up to 20 per cent. in overall deaths from chronic diseases, such as heart disease, stroke and cancer.

We know that alcohol misuse is associated with between 15,000 and 22,000 deaths each year. In 2001 the number of women dying from illnesses directly attributable to alcohol was 2,170 compared with 3,800 male deaths. The Government published the alcohol harm reduction strategy in March 2004 in order to address alcohol related harm.

Surrey and Sussex Strategic Health Authority

20. Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the financial position of the Surrey and Sussex strategic health authority. [70851]

Caroline Flint: The 2005-06 month six forecast for Surrey and Sussex strategic health authority indicates an £80.7 million overspend. Achieving financial stability is one of the most challenging issues the national health service in Surrey and Sussex faces. To assist financial recovery, turnaround teams have been working with the SHA to help those trusts facing the greatest financial problems.

Communication Aids

21. Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what her Department's policy is on the provision of and funding for spares and replacements for communication aids. [70852]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: It is for local primary care trusts and councils to provide and fund spares and replacements for communication aids through their local arrangements.

University Hospitals of Leicester NHS Trust

22. David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the impact of the private finance initiative on progress in delivering the Pathway project for university hospitals of Leicester NHS trust. [70853]

Andy Burnham: On 10 May, university hospitals of Leicester NHS trust issued a press release announcing revised proposals to their PFI scheme. We welcome these proposals which we understand fully reflect guidance published in January this year requiring all major PFI schemes to revisit their capital costs in the light of the current reforms to the NHS.

These new proposals are expected to be submitted shortly to the Department for formal approval.

Nurses (Child Care Costs)

24. Meg Hillier: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assistance is provided for child care costs for student nurses. [70856]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: In 2004-05, support for child care was extended to national health service students in the form of the NHS bursary child care allowance. The Department of Health provided £7 million in 2004-05, and £17.8 million in 2005-06 to meet the full cost of applications.

Agenda for Change

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what mechanisms are in place to monitor (a) the number of appeals against the implementation of Agenda for Change and (b) the time taken for these appeals to be resolved; how many appeals have (i) been heard and (ii) not yet been resolved, broken down by (A) major staff group and (B) NHS organisation; what proportion of resolved appeals was upheld; and how long on average it has taken for an appeal to be resolved. [67911]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 3 May 2006]: The continued monitoring of the number of reviews under agenda for change is being managed by the NHS Employers organisation and the outcomes are reported to the NHS Staff Council, which has representation from both the management and staff side perspectives. They are currently collecting data on the review position.

Cancer

Sir Malcolm Rifkind: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will issue guidance to primary care trusts that cost should not be the factor that decides whether women with third and fourth stages of cancer should have access to the latest drugs, and that decisions should be based on recommendations of specialists and doctors. [66117]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I have no plans to issue such guidance.

While it is down to individual clinicians, in discussion with a patient, to decide whether or not it is suitable to prescribe a specific drug, primary care trusts (PCTs) may also need to be involved to decide whether to support the clinician's decision and supply the drug at the national health service's expense. PCTs need to take a range of factors into account, including local factors, when considering the funding of drugs and other treatments. It would not be appropriate to dictate, or prejudge, the factors that PCTs might properly take into account.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the planned level of funding is for each of the remaining years of the 2000 10-year Cancer Plan. [71272]

Ms Rosie Winterton: We do not hold information centrally on planned levels of funding on cancer services, however around £3.4 billion was spent on cancer services in 2003-04 and this increased to around £3.8 billion in 2004-05. National health service funding is allocated to primary care trusts to meet the health needs of their local population, who in partnership with strategic health authorities and other local stakeholders determine how best to use their funds to meet national and local priorities for cancer services.

Childhood Diseases

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the number of children with (a) asthma, (b) diabetes, (c) Down's Syndrome, (d) epilepsy, (e) visual impairment, (f) hearing impairment and (g) autism, broken down by ethnic group. [71250]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: We have made no estimates of the number of children, broken down by ethnic group, living with asthma, diabetes, Down's syndrome, epilepsy, visual and hearing impairments, and autism.

The Department, in collaboration with the information centre for health and social care and NHS Employers, issued updated guidance to the national health service on ethnic monitoring in July 2005 that emphasised the importance of collecting, analysing and using data on the ethnic group of both NHS patients and staff.

Children's Health Services

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list school nursing teams which provide drop-in clinics in schools. [67648]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Choose and Book System

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much will (a) a GP and (b) a GP practice be paid for each hospital appointment booked through the new Choose and Book system; [65772]

(2) what payments are made to (a) GPs and (b) GP practices for registering with the Choose and Book system for arranging hospital appointments for their patients; and what financial incentives are offered for using the system; [66996]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answers 25 April and 2 May 2006]: Revisions to the general medical service (GMS) contract from 1 April 2006-07 include a reward for general practitioner (GP) practices, through a directed enhanced service (DES), for utilisation of the choose and book service and for delivering choice to patients. No payments are made to GPs or GP Practices purely for choose and book registration.

The full value of DES is 96p per registered patient and comprises two equal components, one for choice

(48p) and one for choose and book (48p). Half of the choice component, worth 24p will be made as an aspiration payment to those GP practices who make a written commitment to ensure that choice is offered to relevant patients. The remaining half, also worth 24p, will be paid based on the results of a new survey of patient experience.

Half of the choose and book component, worth 24p, will be made as an aspiration payment to those GP practices who make a written commitment to utilising the choose and book system. Practices that make at least 25 per cent. of their referrals to first consultant out-patient appointments through choose and book by the end of June 2006, will be allowed to keep this payment. The other half, also worth 24p, will be payable on a sliding scale if referrals through choose and book reach 50 per cent. in the period 1 September 2006 to 28 February 2007.

Full details of how the DES will be paid are available in "Revisions to the GMS contract 2006/07: Delivering investment in general practice," published by the NHS Employers Organisation and the British Medical Association's general practitioners committee, and is available in the Library and at www.nhsemployers.org.

Demographic Trends

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what account her Department takes of demographic trends in determining local provision of (a) obstetrics and gynaecology, (b) paediatrics and (c) geriatric services. [68395]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: It is the responsibility of health professionals in primary care trusts (PCTs) to commission obstetric and gynaecology, paediatrics and geriatric services locally, taking account of current and forecast need for services and in consultation with stakeholders.

Revenue allocations are made to PCTs on the basis of the relative needs of their populations. The weighted capitation formula is used to determine PCTs' target shares of available resources, to enable them to commission similar levels of health services for populations in similar need.

The components of the formula are used to weight each PCT's crude population according to their relative need (age, and additional need) for healthcare and the unavoidable geographical differences in the cost of providing healthcare.

The age related need adjustments recognise that more elderly populations tend to make more use of health services than the rest of the population. The additional need adjustments identify several socio-economic variables as indicators of need because of their effect on utilisation, including standardised mortality ratios, the proportion of low birthweight babies born and the standardised birth ratio.

Departmental IT

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment she has made of whether her Department is adequately updating its information and communications technology infrastructure in line with the Gershon report's recommendations. [60627]

Caroline Flint: The national programme for information technology, which is being delivered by the NHS Connecting for Health agency, is creating a multi-billion pound information infrastructure that will enable national health service patients to make informed health choices and increase the efficiency and effectiveness of clinicians and other NHS staff, as envisaged in the Gershon report. The foundations have been laid, and the organisational and commercial infrastructure established, to deploy the systems the NHS needs. Implementation has grown substantially in recent months, and its impact is now evident across the NHS.

New systems have already been delivered to thousands of locations in the NHS, and we estimate that over 2 million patients have already received improved and safer care as a result. This figure is increasing every week as the deployment of new systems and services accelerates. For example, a quarter of a million patients have now booked their hospital appointments using the choose and book electronic booking system and three quarters of a million prescriptions have been transmitted using the electronic prescriptions service.

Fingerprints

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether her Department has issued guidance to general practitioners on the use of fingerprints as a compulsory personal identifier for patients; and whether she has taken steps to discourage the use of fingerprints for this purpose. [67399]

Caroline Flint: No guidance on the use of fingerprints has been issued and there are no plans for using fingerprints as compulsory identifiers for patients. The Department is not aware of any general practitioners (GPs) having adopted this practice as a prerequisite for care provision, and would not find this acceptable. Some GPs, do however, provide facilities for patients to review the content of electronic health records and systems that enable this, for example the patient access electronic record system (PAERS), may use fingerprint biometrics to ensure that patients can only access their own records and not those of other patients. While the opportunity to review records in this way is generally welcomed by patients, patients are not compelled to use this sort of service and are legally entitled to be provided with paper copies of their records if they would prefer.

General Practice Boundaries

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether she plans to permit general practices to extend their boundaries so that they cut across (a) primary care trust and (b) local authority social services boundaries. [49554]

Caroline Flint: The existing contractual arrangements for general practice allow practices to extend their areas, including potentially across other administrative boundaries. The White Paper "Our health, our care, our say: a new direction for community services" recognises this and commits us to explore ways of supporting practices who wish to expand, thereby increasing patient choice. This will form part of continuing discussions with the British Medical Association.

Health Treatment Centres

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much and what percentage of the total payment made by the NHS to private sector companies awarded contracts to operate independent sector treatment centres is accounted for by (a) the cost of the operations performed and (b) an additional premium, broken down by (i) company and (ii) centre. [61718]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The amounts paid to independent sector treatment centre (ISTC) providers are to cover the cost of providing all elements of the care pathway defined in the contract.

Value for money has been ensured by running a robust and competitive procurement process, benchmarking procedure prices between contracts and comparing them to those traditionally paid to the national health service and also to estimates of NHS equivalent costs. The premium to NHS equivalent cost is calculated only to provide a benchmark.

The amounts paid to individual independent sector providers are commercially sensitive and so cannot be disclosed. Local primary care trusts do not pay above the estimated NHS equivalent cost for the procedures they commission from ISTCs. Any cost above the NHS equivalent cost is currently met by the Department.

Healthcare Commission

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average waiting time was for a complaint against the NHS to be processed by the Healthcare Commission in the last period for which figures are available; and what the average cost of dealing with a complaint was in that period. [71396]

Andy Burnham: The Healthcare Commission assumed responsibility for the independent review stage of national health service complaints at the end of July 2004. Between then and the end of March 2006 the Commission received 13,400 cases. This compares with about 3,000 a year under the previous NHS system.

The chairman of the Healthcare Commission has informed me that the average time between receipt and closure for cases closed in April 2006 was seven months. The average age of currently open cases is 7.5 months. The chairman of the Commission has also confirmed that its budget for dealing with complaints in 2005-06 was £7.99 million. The Commission resolved 7,400 cases that year at an average cost of £1,079.

Hospital Closures

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the potential impact on patient choice of the closure of local hospitals. [65528]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 25 April 2006]: Primary care trusts (PCTs) commission the menu of four or more providers from which patients may choose, where clinically appropriate, when referred by their general practitioner to planned hospital care. We expect PCTs to discuss the options with patient groups before deciding which to make available. If a local hospital were to close, the PCT must ensure that it has commissioned an appropriate alternative provider to include on its choice menu to ensure that patients are still able to choose from four or more providers when referred.

By 2008, we expect choice of hospital in these communities to be extended to all national health service hospitals. Any closures of local hospitals is likely to have little impact on the availability of alternatives for patient choices.

IT Reviews

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the functions to be delivered by the National Programme for IT; and what the (a) start date, (b) planned completion date, (c) current expected completion date, (d) planned cost and (e) current estimated cost is for each function. [69656]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 9 May 2006]: The national programme was established with four original core components—the NHS care records service (NHS CRS); the electronic booking service, now known as choose and book; electronic transmission of prescriptions, now known as the electronic prescription service (EPS); and the new national network (N3). Delivery now also includes the following additional components: picture archiving and communications systems (PACS); the NHSmail e-mail service; and the quality management and analysis system (QMAS). The objective of the programme is to transform health care in England by the provision of pervasive digital information.

There is no single national start or completion date for individual national programme systems and services. The aim is to achieve substantial integration of health and social care information systems in England under the national programme by 2010. Clearly, systems will need to be upgraded in the light of new technology and new national health service requirements beyond that date. The approach, in line with best practice, is to implement new services incrementally, avoiding a big bang approach, and by providing increasingly richer functionality over time.

The first elements of the NHS care records service, to provide a transaction messaging service, a personal demographics service, a spine directory service and secure access controls via smartcards, went live on time and to budget on 2 July 2004. The software to support choose and book is complete and went live on time and to budget, also on 2 July 2004. The software to introduce QMAS in support of the general medical services contract went live on time and to budget in August 2004 and was fully rolled out within three months, supporting payments to 100 per cent. of general practitioners (GPs) under the quality outcomes framework every month since then. The software to allow electronic prescriptions to be issued went live on time and to budget in February 2005. N3 is ahead of schedule and over 96 per cent. of GPs now have a broadband connection.

The first PACS system under the programme was implemented in April 2005 and 31 systems have been implemented to date with over 25 million digital images stored. In the south of England, the infrastructure is complete and over 50 per cent. of hospitals have PACS systems. NHSmail was implemented on time in October 2004 and currently has over 170,000 registered users sending 500,000 e-mails per day and 70 million to date. The establishment of an accredited software integration environment is complete and has enabled existing system suppliers of GP, hospital, pharmacy and independent sector systems to gain compliance with the new national and local applications.

The values of centrally-funded contracts let for the original core components of the programme are as follows:

	£ million
NHS CRS (including Spine and EPS)	620
Choose and book	64.5
N3	530

Contract values, and actual/current anticipated expenditure for the additional components are:

	£ million
PACS	850
NHSmail[1]	Between 50 and 90[2]
QMAS[3]	4.4

[1] The NHSmail contract value is variable because it is a voluntary service to offer secure, encrypted e-mail with a lifelong e-mail address. The lower amount is based on a reasonable expectation of moderate take-up and is in line with current predictions. The higher figure is the maximum possible take-up by all NHS staff with access to a computer.
[2] Depending on take-up.
[3] QMAS was negotiated as an additional service under the NHS CRS contract. The figure quoted is for the initial version of the application software. Additional releases of the software have been and will continue to be commissioned to reflect further changes in the general medical services contract.

For the avoidance of doubt, none of the relevant budgets managed by the Department's NHS Connecting for Health agency have been exceeded. Anticipated expenditure under these contracts remains at planned levels.

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the pilot programmes that have been set up for the National Programme for IT. [69657]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 9 May 2006]: Extensive work was carried out during the 1990s to pilot electronic patient records through the health infomatics system (HIS) programme. This contributed to the publication, in 1998, of the Department's information for health strategy. Following publication, the Department piloted electronic records at 16 sites across the country under the electronic records demonstrator and implementation programme. Each project had its own focus, for example record sharing and confidentiality, and joint working between health and social care.

A series of outputs, evaluations and guidance reports from these projects, supplemented by lessons learned from projects in other countries, including the European Commission's advanced informatics in medicine programme, contributed to the specification of the NHS Care Records Service. A key purpose of the national programme for information technology (NPfIT) was to enable the benefit from the projects to be shared across the whole country.

During the early stages of the NPfIT procurement process, an electronic patient record pilot study with IBM at Warwick investigated primary care trust-level information gathering and reporting. Also during the procurement phase, detailed technical design studies were carried out and each supplier had to complete a series of proof of solution tests to ensure that they understood the national health service's requirements.

Further trialling of NPfIT systems is always undertaken at user sites and in user-based environments to pilot usability before rollout. Systems are only made available locally after successfully passing through extensive national testing phases. For example, both the quality management and analysis system for general practice, and the system to support payment by results, operated in shadow form for a number of months before going live.

All this activity is in line with the recommendations of the 'Successful IT: Modernising Government in Action', to demonstrate that products work before they are deployed, and to avoid big bang implementations.

Mannitol

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice the Department offers to pharmacists on the purchase and supply of Mannitol; what information the Department has received on its use in the preparation of cocaine; and if she will (a) increase restrictions on its issue and (b) make it a controlled pharmaceutical. [66362]

Andy Burnham [holding answer 27 April 2006]: None. As far as licensed medicinal products are concerned, Mannitol is available as an intravenous infusion and is a prescription only medicine which means that pharmacists may only dispense it against a prescription issued by an appropriate practitioner. Mannitol is also used widely as an excipient, that is an inactive ingredient, by the pharmaceutical industry in the manufacture of other medicinal products.

There is an established mechanism to allow proper consideration of making drugs of misuse controlled. The Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs, the expert body that advises Ministers, is made aware of problems posed by specific drugs, or where they are requested by Ministers to consider a specific drug, they will undertake a detailed assessment of whether or not a substance ought to be controlled and make appropriate recommendations to Ministers.

Adulterants and bulking agents mixed with controlled drugs are not usually considered for control where they are not psychoactive themselves or precursors to psychoactive drugs of misuse.

Mental Health

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many times ambulances attended emergency mental health cases in Coventry South in each of the last five years; and if she will make a statement. [70958]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the status of each of the five former mental hospital sites in Epsom. [69547]

Andy Burnham: Of the five former mental hospitals in Epsom, The Manor, Long Grove and Horton have been sold. They are or have been redeveloped predominantly for housing. The surplus parts of St. Ebba's and West Park Hospitals were included in a portfolio of properties that it has been agreed my Department would transfer to English Partnerships to assist in the Government's sustainable communities programme. Ownership has now transferred and it will be for English Partnerships to release the sites for development.

Neurological Conditions

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to recruit the (a) consultant neurologists, (b) specialist nurses and (c) other staff required to fulfil the national service framework for long-term neurological conditions. [67207]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Each national health service organisation is responsible for determining the work force it requires to implement the national service framework for long-term neurological conditions and for putting in place measures to recruit and develop the necessary staff.

NHS Finance

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the effect on the expenditure of each NHS trust if directly employed staff had been used instead of agency staff in each of the last three years. [67929]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 4 May 2006]: The appropriate use of agency staff and any potential level of saving through using directly employed staff is a matter for local determination. However, the £17 million savings achieved in 2004-05, for nursing staff alone, from reduced use of agencies indicates that the national health service is starting to take advantage of the opportunities available through NHS Professionals and the Purchasing and Supply Agency's agency framework agreements.

We anticipate continuing savings in agency expenditure but recognise that regional variations mean the balance between use of permanent and temporary staff will differ across NHS trusts.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what financial position the Shrewsbury and Telford NHS Trust inherited at its inception. [67249]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Shropshire and Staffordshire strategic health authority has reported that the historic deficit when the Shrewsbury and Telford NHS Trust was established in October 2003 was in the region of £4.1 million. By the start of 2004-05, this had risen to the figure of £7 million following in-year deficits recorded in 2003-04.

Mr. Vaizey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the year-end gross NHS deficit for the 2005-06 financial year. [70855]

Andy Burnham: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Southend, West (Mr. Amess) earlier today.

NHS IT Programme

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the effect on competition between potential and current providers to the NHS information technology programme of local service providers not publishing their application programmer interfaces; and what plans she has to require them to do so. [63926]

Caroline Flint: Technical standards for compliance with the national programme for information technology's systems are made routinely available to existing systems providers, as well as contracted national and local systems providers. This is the basis on which existing suppliers of general practitioner and secondary care systems have achieved compliance for the programme's key components. The same standards will apply to any new suppliers who enter the market, including those supporting the independent care sector.

These arrangements were put in place as part of a commercial and organisational model for the national programme, designed to provide best value for money for the taxpayer. There are no current plans to change them.

Under the terms of their agreements with NHS Connecting for Health, local service providers (LSPs) must meet very specific and exacting quality and delivery standards for their healthcare applications, including high levels of disaster recovery and fault tolerance. These could be put at risk if other providers' systems were able to connect freely to the LSP's applications without reference to the LSP, or without demonstrating compliance through NHS Connecting for Health's national integration centre.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consultation was undertaken before the 2002 launch of the NHS IT programme. [63944]

Caroline Flint: A consultation document, "Delivering 21st Century IT support for the NHS: National Specification for Integrated Care Records Service—consultation draft", issued in July 2002, outlined the requirements for a national patient care records service and the national standards and specification which would underpin it. Its purpose was to provide an initial review of electronic patient records and to describe a direction of travel for the whole range of information technology standards in the national health service. Nearly 200 responses were received from organisations and individuals, and these were taken into account in drawing up the specification for a care record service used in the procurements phase during 2003.

In addition, in early 2002, the NHS Information Authority carried out research into possible new ways of managing the confidentiality of patient health information in the NHS. In conjunction with other data, and in the context of operational experience, the research findings were used as a basis for consultation which sought the views of patients, the wider public and medical professionals. Responses to the consultation were used to inform development of the new information systems.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the (a) progress to date, (b) prospective timetable for completion and (c) value for money of the £30 billion expenditure on the NHS IT programme. [65975]

Caroline Flint: The national health service information technology (IT) programme has already implemented the quality management and analysis system (QMAS) into all 8,800 general practitioner practices; there are 170,000 registered users of the secure NHS e-mail service and 14,269 new national network broadband connections have been delivered that are available to serve around 400,000 NHS staff. Over 216,000 users have been authorised and registered for access to new national IT systems using secure smartcard technology. New IT systems are being implemented every week across the NHS. Progress is ahead of schedule in some areas, and, in the context of a 10-year programme, broadly on track in others. The aim is to achieve substantial integration of health and social care information systems in England by 2010.

The aggregated buying power of the NHS has been demonstrated to purchase IT systems and services from suppliers at substantially more competitive rates than would ever have been possible for individual NHS organisations. Independent analysis suggests savings of over £3.8 billion.

The contracts will cost £6.2 billion over 10 years, not £30 billion.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the contribution of the (a) timetables, (b) progress and (c) benefits of the NHS IT programme in delivering the aims of 'Commissioning a patient-led NHS'. [65987]

Caroline Flint: The national health service information technology programme focuses on improving patient safety, treatment and the patient experience. The new technology will revolutionise the way patient and health information is accessed and shared, making the right information available to the right people at the right time. As it is rolled out, the national programme will also ensure that significantly greater value can be achieved from baseline spending on health care as information begins to follow patients and improve efficiency. This is absolutely in line with the aims, timetable and progress of 'Commissioning a Patient-led NHS'.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the information technology systems for use (a) by GPs and (b) elsewhere in the NHS are predominantly organised in silos of information. [66071]

Caroline Flint: The new systems and services we are putting in place via the national programme for information technology, being delivered by the Department's NHS Connecting for Health agency, will allow information to follow the patient across and between primary and secondary care settings. They will ensure that the right information is available at the right time to the right people to provide treatment at the point of need. This has not been possible with systems previously implemented that were effectively silos of information usually limited to the site where they originated.

For example, for the first time, records will be transferable between general practices; about 10 per cent. of registered patients move from one general practitioner practice to another each year.

NHS Trusts (Senior Executives)

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make it her policy to ensure that the salary bands of the senior executives of all NHS trusts are made publicly available. [68217]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 4 May 2006]: This information is already included in the annual reports and accounts of national health service trusts, which are publicly available.

North West London Strategic Health Authority

Mr. Khabra: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the net change in the numbers of (a) doctors and (b) nurses in the North West London Strategic Health Authority area has been since 1997. [71144]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The table shows the latest figures available for all national health service doctors and qualified nursing, midwifery and health visiting staff including practice nurses employed in the North West London Strategic Health Authority (SHA) area as at 30 September each year from 1997 to 2005. This includes the change in numbers between 1997 and 2005.

All NHS doctors and qualified nursing, midwifery and health visiting staff including practice nurses employed in the North West London Strategic Health Authority area as at 30 September [1] each year

	1997	2005	Change 1997-2005	headcount Percentage change 1997-2005
All doctors[2]	4,422	5,625	1,203	27.2
Qualified nurses including practice nurses	12,602	16,708	4,106	32.6

[1] Practice nurse figures are as at 1 October for 1997 where 1997 data is estimated based on 2002 organisational structure.

[2] Excludes hospital medical hospital practitioners and hospital medical clinical assistants, most of whom are general practitioners (GPs) working part time in hospitals and General Medical Practitioners retainers and registrars.

Obesity

Dr. Desmond Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many and what percentage of children in England are (a) overweight and (b) obese; what the targets are in relation to childhood obesity; and what assessment she has made of the progress made to date in achieving those targets. [67844]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is shown in the following table.

Overweight and obesity prevalence among children aged 2 to 15 by sex in England in 2004

	Boys	Percentage Girls
Overweight	13.9	16.6
Obese	19.2	18.5
Overweight, including obese	33.0	35.1
Bases (weighted)	8833	8228

Health Survey for England, 2004

In July 2004, a public service agreement (PSA) target was set to halt the year-on-year rise in obesity among children under 11 by 2010 in the context of a broader strategy to tackle obesity in the population as a whole. Progress of the PSA on childhood obesity will be monitored through the Health Survey for England.

Patient Care Costs

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average cost of (a) a minor injuries unit patient episode and (b) an urgent care centre patient episode was in 2004-05. [57509]

Caroline Flint: The average cost per attendance in a minor injuries unit in 2004-05 was £37. The average cost per attendance in a non-24 hour accident and emergency department/casualty department in 2004-05 was £32.

Primary Care Trusts

Mrs. Maria Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what approval primary care trusts require from strategic health authorities for (a) the disposal of buildings and land and (b) the use of associated funds; at what stage in the disposal process strategic health authorities become involved; and if she will make a statement; [69681]

(2) whether her Department allows primary care trusts to use the proceeds of disposed assets (a) to fund the rent of additional buildings and (b) for other purposes in connection with delivering healthcare; and if she will make a statement; [69682]

Ms Rosie Winterton: National health service trusts and primary care trusts (PCTs) have delegated limits for capital investment up to which they may make capital investment decisions without seeking approval from their strategic health authority (SHA) or from the Department. These limits vary between £1 million and £10 million, depending on the organisation's turnover from provider activities and performance in the latest star performance ratings.

Purchases of fixed assets and sales of fixed assets such as land and buildings are dealt with in the same way. Beneath its delegated limit, the PCT can sell assets and reinvest the proceeds without the approval of its SHA. Above the delegated limit, the PCT must seek its SHA's approval both for the sale and to reinvest the proceeds. In many instances, SHAs will approve the reinvestment of the sale proceeds by the selling trust or PCT but the SHA retains the discretion to specify another use.

Where the transaction is subject to SHA approval, there will generally be SHA involvement at outline business case, where the main principles and parameters are established and preferred options are chosen, and full business case, where the details of delivering the preferred option are agreed. Even where formal approval by the SHA is not required, NHS trusts and PCTs may wish to draw on their SHA's technical expertise in estate and capital matters.

PCTs are required by statute to operate within resource limits (revenue and capital) set by the Department as part of PCTs funding allocations. PCTs may use their revenue resources for any revenue expenditure permitted in law, including the commissioning of healthcare and community services and payment of rents.

The sale of a fixed asset, such as a building, gives rise to a capital receipt that is a fixed asset financed by capital in the balance sheet is converted to a cash asset financed by capital in the balance sheet. Except to the extent of any profit on disposal, there is no increase in the resources available to the PCT to spend on revenue costs such as rentals.

As a consequence, the sale of a correctly valued fixed asset would not release funds that could be spent on rentals.

For the above reasons, proceeds from the sale of fixed assets are usually reinvested in buying other fixed assets. Where there is no local capital investment requirement, the cash may be repaid to the Department as a repayment of capital.

Respite Care

Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will take steps to encourage care homes and nursing homes to include emergency bed provision for respite care users. [71186]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Councils are responsible for taking the needs and wishes of carers and those they care for into account when planning and commissioning services. If appropriate, councils may arrange for respite care to be provided in a care home, as long as this is in accord with the wishes and needs of service users.

The Government introduced the carers grant in 1999 to support councils in providing breaks and services for carers in England. The grant has increased each year, from £20 million in 1999-2000 to £185 million in 2006-07.

The Carers and Disabled Children's Act 2000 provides local authority social services departments with the option to run short-term break voucher schemes. Short-term break vouchers enable cared for people to make arrangements for the additional support they require when carers need a break.

Sexual Health Services

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps her Department is taking to reduce barriers to access to sexual health services with particular reference to young people. [70744]

Caroline Flint: The Government recognise the disproportionate effect of poor sexual health on young people, and this was highlighted in both the national strategy for sexual health and HIV and the teenage pregnancy strategy, and subsequently highlighted in the 'Choosing Health' White Paper.

Improving access to sexual health has been identified as a top priority for the national health service in the 'NHS in England: the Operating Framework for 2006-07' and all primary care trusts are now working towards providing access to genito-urinary medicine appointments within 48 hours. A national programme of screening for chlamydia, targeting 16 to 24-year-olds, will be rolled-out across the country by April 2007. A range of projects are also underway to inform the development of new models of service provision. These include HIV testing in community settings and one-stop shop services.

The teenage pregnancy strategy encourages all young people to delay sex, but also seeks to ensure that they have access to contraceptive and sexual health advice if they are, or are thinking about becoming sexually active—to protect themselves against unplanned pregnancy and sexually transmitted infections. Efforts to improve access to services focus on making sexual health services more young people-friendly and delivering them in non-traditional settings, such as schools, colleges and Connexions one-stop-shops.

Spinal Cord Injuries

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what (a) National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence guidelines, (b) national service frameworks and (c) NHS care protocols exist for the care and treatment of spinal cord injured people; [70824]

(2) what longitudinal data is collected by her Department on the care and treatment of spinal cord injured people within (a) spinal cord injury centres and (b) general and district facilities. [70825]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 15 May 2006]: The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence has not issued specific guidance on the care and treatment of spinal cord injuries.

The national service framework for long-term conditions is specifically concerned with improving the health and social care needs of those living with long-term neurological conditions, including those with spinal injuries.

The Department does not collect longitudinal data on the care and treatment of spinal cord injuries.

TRANSPORT

A23

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the estimated completion date is for the A23 Warninglid to Handcross road improvements. [71449]

Dr. Ladyman: We are currently considering the south-east region's advice on its priorities for major transport schemes including the A23 Handcross to Warninglid road improvements. An announcement is expected later this year.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the potential impact on the number of accidents on the A23 of a delay to the Handcross to Warninglid improvement scheme. [71467]

Dr. Ladyman: We are currently considering the south-east region's advice on their priorities for major transport projects, which includes the A23 Handcross to Warninglid improvement. An announcement is expected later this year. The Highways Agency and its appointed contractor are continuing to develop the scheme to enable the necessary draft orders and Environmental Statement to be published.

An assessment of the impact of a delay has not been made. However, the three-year average personal injury accident record to the end of 2004 is 15 and the scheme improvement is forecast to reduce this figure to 10.

M6 Toll Road

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to extend the M6 toll road beyond Birmingham; what representations he has received in support of such a proposition; what the timescale involved is; and if he will make a statement. [71427]

Dr. Ladyman: The Government have no plans to extend the M6 toll, i.e. the road operated by Midlands Expressway Ltd. under concession. However, we have been considering options to provide extra capacity between junctions 11A and 19 of the M6, with a tolled off-line route as one of the options under consideration. The response to our initial consultation was summarised in my written statement of 19 July 2005, Official Report, columns 74-5WS.

Since July, the Highways Agency has been engaging with a wide range of representative stakeholder bodies during the development work in order to clarify views on the alternative options for extra capacity in this corridor. A more detailed evaluation will be presented to Ministers shortly.

Motorways

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many road accidents have been reported involving stationary vehicles on motorway hard shoulders in each year since 1980, broken down by motorway; and how many people were (a) injured and (b) killed in each case [71003]

Dr. Ladyman: The number of personal injury road accidents reported to the police involving parked vehicles on motorway hard shoulders and the resulting number of people (a) injured or (b) killed, in each year from 1980 to 2004 (the latest year for which figures are available) is given in the table.

Separate figures for each motorway could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Number of personal injury road accidents, fatalities and injuries involving a vehicle parked on a motorway hard shoulder: 1980-2004

Oyster Cards

Clive Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what contribution he expects his agreement with the Mayor for London on the compatibility of smartcard technology and the Oyster card to make towards the roll out of a national concessionary travel card; and if he will make a statement. [70999]

Derek Twigg: The agreement with the Mayor of London to deliver compatibility between the Oyster card system currently in use in London and the Integrated Transport Smartcard Organisation (ITSO) standard represents an important step towards a national travel card system. There remains much work to be done and the Government are working closely with Transport for London and stakeholders in the transport industry to take forward this agenda. No decision has yet been taken on the implementation of the national bus concessionary fares scheme, announced in the 2006 Budget, although the recent agreement on compatible smartcard technology will be useful if a smartcard option is pursued.

Clive Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which gated mainline rail stations can be upgraded immediately to accommodate pre-pay Oyster cards; and if he will make a statement. [70998]

Derek Twigg: We believe that the process of upgrading most of the gated mainline stations to accept Oyster pay as you go will be straightforward. The identification of the precise numbers and timing is not yet available. The technical scoping to enable integrated smartcard schemes, as well as the necessary commercial arrangements, is part of the work that we are currently undertaking with Transport for London and the train operators.

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he requires new contracts with train operators to include Sundays in drivers' working weeks. [71897]

Derek Twigg: The Department for Transport specifies the minimum pattern of train services and frequencies in new franchise contracts. It does not specify how these are delivered, which is a matter for the Train Operating Companies.

Road Safety

Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the merits of tougher penalties for drivers who cause (a) serious injuries and (b) fatalities whilst driving under the influence of alcohol. [71468]

Dr. Ladyman: The penalties for those who commit alcohol-related driving offences are already very tough, whether or not they result in serious injury or death. For exceeding the legal alcohol limit for drivers, they include up to six months' prison, mandatory disqualification from driving for at least 12 months, and at least three years' disqualification for a second offence in 10 years. For causing death by careless driving when under the influence of alcohol the maximum prison sentence is 14 years, having been raised from 10 years under the Criminal Justice Act 2003. The Government believe that these penalties provide an effective deterrent for the large majority of the motoring public.

The Road Safety Bill, currently before Parliament, contains several provisions that will tighten up drink driving laws, including an enabling power to extend provisions concerning a mandatory re-take of the driving test to apply to drink drivers.

Transport Direct

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the (a) efficiency, (b) effectiveness and (c) future scope of and proposals for the procurement arrangements of the Transport Direct project. [71430]

Dr. Ladyman: As a central Government service the Transport Direct service (http://www.transportdirect.info) is subject to standard Government procurement rules, which aim to ensure efficient and effective procurement.

Transport Direct is operated on behalf of DfT by Atos Origin, under a Design, Build and Operate contract. This contract was awarded following an open and competitive procurement in 2002. The contract was advertised publicly in the Official Journal of the European Union (OJEU), and over 60 initial expressions of interest were received.

The initial award was for three years from January 2003, with an option to extend up to 10 years in total. The contract has been formally extended until 31 March 2007, and further extensions will be considered. Any such extensions will be dependent upon re-evaluation of the commercial merits and value for money provided by the contract. Such exercises would be carried out at the appropriate time.

DEFENCE

Armed Forces (Drug Offences)

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) pursuant to the answer of 3 May 2006, Official Report, column 1574W, on drug testing, what assessment he has made of the reasons for the increase in drug use among junior non-commissioned officers and privates between 2002 and 2005; and what steps he plans to take to reduce this; [70146]

(2) how many people have been dismissed from each of the armed forces for drug offences in each of the past five years, broken down by rank. [70035]

Mr. Watson [holding answer 11 May 2006]: The Directorate of Army Personnel Strategy was commissioned to examine factors which lead to drug use among soldiers who have tested positive for drugs. Work commenced in April this year and is expected to complete within 12 months. The Royal Navy and the Royal Air Force have no current plans to carry out assessments.

Information on the number of people who have been dismissed from the services, either as a result of a positive result following a Compulsory Drugs Test, or following a court martial/summary hearing for drug related offences, is as follows.

Arms Trade Treaty

Willie Rennie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many British defence attachés have raised the international arms trade treaty with their relevant counterparts. [71131]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 15 May 2006]: The Government have undertaken extensive lobbying through a wide-ranging network of overseas posts, which includes British defence attachés where appropriate.

Astute Submarine

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the cost is of each fully-equipped Astute submarine. [70776]

Mr. Ingram: The contract with BAE Systems is for the design and manufacture of three Astute class submarines, the estimated cost of which is £3,492 million.

Consultants

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the companies which were paid consultancy fees by his Department in 2005-06; how much each was paid; and what each of the companies was used to accomplish. [69694]

Mr. Ingram: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

However, I can advise my hon. Friend that summaries of the Ministry of Defence expenditure on external assistance, of which consultancy is a part, are available in the Library of the House for the years 1995-96 to 2004-05.

The figures for 2005-06 will be placed in the Library of the House before the summer recess.

The Defence Analytical Services Agency also publishes annually details of companies that are paid £5 million or more per year by the MOD.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what opportunities exist for people to work beyond retirement age in his Department. [69116]

Mr. Watson: The services do not have standard minimum and maximum retirement ages. Personnel may leave their service at various points dependent on the terms of service for the individual's branch or trade, their length of commission or engagement and the operational requirements facing the services at the particular time.

Where it is thought to be in the interest of the service, officers may be retained beyond their normal retirement date or offered an optional retirement date. Other ranks may be offered continuance to serve beyond their normal retirement date where there is a service requirement.

The Ministry of Defence's normal retirement age for all civilian grades below the senior civil service (SCS) is 65. Individuals both in and below the SCS wishing to work beyond their normal retirement age can ask to remain in service. Such requests are considered on the grounds of business need; this means that provided the individual's post is not scheduled to be disestablished and there are no surpluses at that grade and location (or within daily travel distance) and subject to the individual's continuing health and efficiency they may remain in service for a given period.

Drones

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of drones in combat zones. [69886]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence assesses the effectiveness of uninhabited air vehicles on military operations on a regular basis. Operational analysis and studies are routinely conducted to assess military force structures and equipment capabilities (including uninhabited air vehicles). The Department also captures the lessons from the use of uninhabited air vehicles on operations.

Collectively, these assessments inform the Department's balance of investment and wider decision-making processes.

Eurofighter

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what air-to-ground missile system the Eurofighter employs; and if he will make a statement. [70270]

Mr. Ingram: Integration of air-to-ground missile systems onto RAF Typhoon, including the Storm Shadow cruise missile and the Brimstone air-launched anti-armour weapon, is being considered as part of the Typhoon Future Capability Programme.

Financial Data

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will break down the main estimate Request for Resources 1 non-budget expenditure provision by sub-head in (a) near cash and (b) non-cash terms for financial year 2006-07; [71569]

(2) if he will break down the main estimate Request for Resources (a) 1, (b) 2 and (c) 3 (i) departmental expenditure limit and (ii) annually managed expenditure provision by sub-head in (A) near cash and (B) non-cash terms for financial year 2006-07. [71568]

Mr. Ingram: A full breakdown of the main estimates into near cash and non cash are shown in the following tables.

Fuel Cell Technology

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the Department plans (a) to procure fuel cell technology and (b) to encourage further research into fuel cell technology for submarines. [70777]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence has funded work in fuel cell technology, but no decision has yet been taken regarding its specific application.

Haslar Hospital

Peter Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department has assessed the Aldershot Centre for Health as a model which could be followed at the Royal Hospital Haslar. [70953]

Mr. Watson [holding answer 15 May 2006]: The future use of the Haslar site is a matter for the Hampshire and Isle of Wight strategic health authority, the local primary care trusts and the Portsmouth hospitals. We will of course continue to be engaged with the local health authorities as they develop their plans for the future of healthcare in South East Hampshire.

The Ministry of Defence will be assessing options for innovative partnerships for delivery of primary, tier 2 and intermediate care, particularly in the light of NHS developments and future military basing. However, it would be premature to model another facility on the Aldershot Centre for Health until the functional success of the project has been evaluated and any lessons have been identified.

Joint Strike Fighter

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the variants of the F35 which the UK is involved with; and how many of each the Government is planning to order. [70273]

Mr. Ingram: As a result of the United Kingdom's contribution to the System Development and Demonstration Phase, the UK is involved with all three variants of the F35 programme. These are the conventional take-off and landing, short take-off and vertical landing (STOVL) and the Carrier variants. The STOVL variant was selected in 2001 as the optimum solution to meet the UK requirements, of which variant the UK is intending to buy up to 150.

Meteorological Office

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the locations in the UK for which the Meteorological Office can readily supply information regarding average daily temperatures allowing for a wind chill factor; and if he will make a statement. [70395]

Mr. Watson: The Met Office records data in various ways. The stations listed record hourly temperature and hourly wind speed observations. From the temperature observations, the average daily temperature can be calculated. The wind speed observations can then be used to calculate the apparent temperature felt on exposed skin, known as wind chill.

Military Personnel

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many military personnel have died in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years. [67079]

Mr. Ingram: During the five-year period 2001-05, 34 service personnel died in Northern Ireland who were members of the regular UK armed forces or full-time members of the Home Service Battalions of the Royal Irish Regiment. Details on annual deaths incurred are listed in the following table.

	All deaths	Regular UK armed forces	Home service[1] battalions of the Royal Irish regiment
2003	9	6	3
2004	8	5	3
2005	5	3	2
Total	34	21	13

[1] Full-time members only.

Military Spending

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much was spent on the (a) Army, (b) Royal Air Force and (c) Royal Navy in (i) cash and (ii) real terms in each year since 1997. [71202]

Mr. Ingram: Defence spending is not split by Service. Instead, the Ministry of Defence (MOD) operates a system of delegated authority to Top Level Budget (TLB) holders. Some are single Service but several, for example, the Defence Procurement Agency, the Defence Logistics Organisation and the Chief of Joint Operations support all three Services and their budgets are not broken down by Service.

Information on spending by TLBs can be found in the Government's Expenditure Plans (GEP) 2005-06 to 2007-08 MOD (Cmd6532) a copy of which is available in the Library of the House. This sets out past expenditure and future spending plans. It provides breakdowns of consumption by activity area. This includes the single Service Top Level Budget holders, and in the case of the RAF this shows the Commander-in-Chief Strike and the Commander-in-Chief Personnel and Training Command. More recently, the MOD has published the 2004-05 Annual Report and Accounts, which provides the same breakdown. Figures for 2005-06 will be published in our Annual Report and Accounts, which is planned for publication before the summer recess.

Nuclear Weapons Testing

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what comparative assessment he has made of the National Radiological Protection Board research papers of 1988 and 1993 on the incidence of cancer among men from the UK who participated in the nuclear weapon test programmes. [71446]

Mr. Watson: Assessment of the 1988 report, which examined cancer incidence up to the end of 1983, led to the conclusion that presence at the UK atmospheric nuclear test sites had increased the risk of multiple myeloma and leukaemia (other than chronic lymphatic leukaemia) compared with controls selected from members of the armed forces who had not been present at the tests. This was because the level of these cancers among the control group was lower than would be expected for the general population rather than because it was higher for those who took part in the tests. These findings did not correlate with the risk of exposure from ionising radiation; rather, levels in the controls were inexplicably low. The 1993 analysis extended follow up to the end of 1990. Rates of multiple myeloma and the relevant leukaemias in the additional follow-up years were slightly lower in test participants compared with controls, whose rates were as in the general population. Because the differential increase in incidence of the relevant leukaemias mirrors the likely pattern of radiation-induced leukaemias, it was accepted that a possible slight risk of lymphatic leukaemia (other than chronic leukaemia) in the first 25 years after participation could not be ruled out. The small hazard of multiple myeloma in the 1988 report was not found in 1993 and was considered a chance finding. Both the 1988 and 1993 studies found that presence at the sites had no detectable effect on the risk of developing any other malignancy. A further study, published in 2003, also confirmed these findings.

Paveway IV Missile

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the Paveway IV missile will enter service; and which aircraft will be able to use it. [70275]

Mr. Ingram: Paveway IV was selected as the solution to the requirement (SR(A) 1248) for an all-weather precision guided bombing capability and will enter service on Harrier GR9/9A in mid 2007. The intention is that Paveway IV will also be integrated onto Tornado GR4/4A and Typhoon aircraft.

Regimental Mascots

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 7 May 2006, to question 50244, on regimental mascots, when he will reply to the hon. Member for Pendle on the matter. [70337]

Mr. Ingram: I replied to my hon. Friend on 15 May 2006.

Service Personnel (Commendation)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what means of recognition are available for the commendation of those serving in (a) Iraq and (b) Afghanistan; and what means of recognition is available for those (i) injured and (ii) killed in the line of duty in those operations. [70823]

Mr. Watson: The full range of gallantry and meritorious service awards is available for those serving on operations in Iraq, Afghanistan and elsewhere and may be awarded to those injured or killed while on operations. The only exception is that Orders cannot be conferred posthumously, for example a serviceman killed on operations cannot be appointed to the Order of the British Empire.

Service in Iraq and Afghanistan is also specifically recognised by the award of the Iraq Medal and the Operational Service Medal "Afghanistan" respectively. Should qualifying service be brought to an end before the completion of the specified qualifying period on account of death, wounding or other disability due to operational service, the reduced period shall be sufficient qualification for the award of the medal.

The Government-supported Armed Forces Memorial, which is to be the national memorial dedicated to members of the UK armed forces killed on duty or by terrorist action since the Second World War, will be constructed at the National Memorial Arboretum in Staffordshire and will record the names of almost 16,000 men and women. The trustees hope that construction will commence this summer and plan to unveil the Armed Forces Memorial in October 2007.

Rolls of Honour similar to those kept by the Royal Air Force in the Church of St. Clement Danes in London, which record the names of those who have died while serving in the UK armed forces, will be created for the Royal Navy and for the Army and will be kept in the Church of St. Martin-in-the-Fields and the Royal Hospital Chelsea respectively. A memorial, without names, in Westminster Abbey dedicated to members of the armed forces killed in conflict is also planned.

Tornado Fleet

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how long the (a) Tornado GR and (b) Tornado F3 will remain in service. [70271]

Mr. Ingram: On current plans, the Tornado GR4 will continue to be operated by the RAF until well into the 2020s, and the Tornado F3 will be retired from service around the end of this decade.

Type 45 Destroyers

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 10 May 2006, Question 67918, on Type 45 Destroyers, what assessment the naval staff has made of whether (a) an amphibious task group and (b) a carrier task group can be defended by fewer than two such destroyers. [71178]

Mr. Ingram: As I stated in my answer of 10 May 2006, Official Report, column 290W, it is the capability provided by the ships, rather than their numbers, that determine the level of protection provided.

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Abortion Inquiry

Mr. Amess: To ask the Leader of the House if he will establish a joint House of Commons and House of Lords inquiry into abortion; and if he will make a statement. [70379]

Mr. Straw: The Government have no plans to do so.

Government Bills

Mr. Amess: To ask the Leader of the House what considerations underlie a decision on into which House of Parliament a Government Bill is introduced; and if he will make a statement. [70380]

Mr. Straw: A decision on the appropriate House of introduction is taken according to the circumstances of each Bill. Factors to be taken into account will include the subject matter of the bill and the amount and the nature of the business currently before each House.

More bills, particularly those giving effect to the Government's major policy priorities, will generally be first introduced into the Commons rather than the Lords. Consolidated Fund and Finance Bills, and most other Bills primarily financial in nature, are introduced into the Commons. It is the practice for Consolidation Bills, Law Commission and statute law repeal bills to be introduced into the Lords.

Members (House of Commons)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Leader of the House what the cost was per hon. Member in (a) 2004-05 and (b) each of the previous four years; and if he will make a statement. [70410]

Mr. Straw: I have taken this question to be referring to the total costs of the House of Commons per hon. Member.

Direct costs of the House of Commons are the sum of the Estimates for House of Commons: Administration and House of Commons: Members, though a range of the costs within the Administration Estimate do not relate solely to Members.

Financial year	Total cost[1] (£ million)	Total per Member (659)
2004-05	331.4	0.50
2003-04	312.1	0.47
2002-03	308.5	0.47
2001-02	285.6	0.43
2000-01	308.7	0.47

[1] In accordance with the principles on which the accounts are prepared, the information is in resource rather than cash terms.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Leader of the House how many hon. Members re-elected in 2005 have (a) had their information technology equipment (i) entirely and (ii) partially renewed and (b) not had their information technology renewed; and if he will make a statement. [70316]

Mr. Straw: Of the 646 Members elected in June 2005, 122 were new Members and four have now been or are subject to by-elections. This leaves 520 Members who were re-elected in 2005 who are included in the project to refresh their equipment.

As of 15 May, of the 520 Members, 161 Members have received all of their equipment. For a further 239 Members, the refresh is in progress (i.e. Members have been surveyed, orders placed or installations booked) and for 37 of these the refresh is partially complete. Some 120 Members have yet to submit their order forms. The refresh project is being undertaken in phases, and all Members will have been given an opportunity to refresh their equipment before the summer recess, providing forms are returned and survey and installation dates are agreed as per the guidance issued to Members.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Leader of the House what incentives exist for hon. Members to take less than the full first-class fare for rail tickets to and from their constituencies. [70276]

Mr. Straw: Under the terms of the Resolutions of the House of 10 April 1924 and 4 March 1980, Members are reimbursed for the cost of all travel within the UK on parliamentary business. It is for hon. Members to decide whether they travel first or standard class on any journey. There are no limits on the number of journeys that an hon. Member can make on parliamentary business.

Members may also claim travel allowances for their spouses, civil partners and children. This is limited by Resolution of the House to 15 return journeys per year and is not dependent on the ticket purchased.

The current arrangements are straightforward to administer and well understood by Members, and they provide choice in respect of the class of travel. Changes to the rules on travel are considered by the Advisory Panel on Members' Allowances, which can offer advice to the Members Estimate Committee.

Petitions

Mr. Amess: To ask the Leader of the House how many petitions were presented in Session (a) 2003-04 and (b) 2004-05; how many have been presented in 2005-06; and on how many occasions the responsible Department declined to make any observations. [70405]

Mr. Straw: Petitions statistics for past Sessions are published in the annual Sessional Returns. The following information for 2003-04 and 2004-05 is reproduced from this source. Information for 2005-06 to date has been added.

Session	Petitions presented	Observations tabled	Remainder
2003-04	128	82	46
2004-05	51	38	13
2005-06[1]	212	145	[2]67

[1] To 9 May 2006.
[2] Departments have confirmed that observations will not be tabled in respect of 19 petitions. 48 petitions are still outstanding.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Postage Costs

Mr. Dismore: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission what the postage costs were for each Department of the House in each of the last three years; what percentage of (a) postal costs and (b) quantity of post was (i) first class and (ii) second class for each Department; what the Commission's policy is on when first or second class post should be used; and if he will make a statement. [70281]

Nick Harvey: Prior to April 2006 all official mail posted from the House of Commons was sent under a general Speaker's frank; a breakdown of the postage costs by departments of the House is therefore not available.

Postage costs for the House broken down between first and second class in each of the last two financial years are given below. There are no reliable figures for financial year 2003-04, but it is estimated that the figures for that year would have been broadly similar.

	2004-05		2005-06
	£	Percentage	£	Percentage
Total of which	129,960	—	138,750	—
1st Class	127,105	97.8	134,206	96.7
2nd Class	2,855	2.2	4,545	3.3

From April 2006, identifiers have been introduced on the frank to allow departmental expenditure to be monitored. Much non-urgent departmental correspondence, which used to be sent by second class mail, is now conducted by email. The information provided will be used to encourage greater use of second class postage for appropriate items.

Security Passes

Mr. Amess: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission, how many security passes have been issued which give access to the Palace of Westminster and its associated buildings, broken down by category; and if he will make a statement. [70381]

Nick Harvey: A paper setting out the number of currently valid security passes giving access to the Parliamentary estate, broken down by category, has been placed in the Library of the House.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Asiatic Languages

Mrs. Maria Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many pupils have taken (a) GCSE and (b) A-level examinations in Asiatic languages in each year since 1994; [69861]

(2) how many (a) schools and (b) colleges offer (i) GCSE and (ii) A-level qualifications in Asiatic languages. [69862]

Jim Knight: The information requested can be found in the following tables.

GCSE full course entries[1] in Asiatic languages[2], of 15 year old pupils[3] in all schools, 1994-2005[4]

	Number of entries
2005	15,046

[2] Age at the start of the academic year i.e. 31 August.

Information is not collected on the subjects offered by schools and colleges. However, it is possible to provide figures on the number of schools where at least one pupil has been entered for a particular subject and these are given as follows:

(a) The number of schools where at least one 15 year old pupil was entered for a GCSE full course in an Asiatic language in 2005 was 1,706;

(b) The number of schools/colleges where at least one student was entered for a GCE A-level in an Asiatic language in 2005 was 789.

Mrs. Maria Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many students studied asiatic languages at (a) university and (b) colleges of higher education in each year since 1994. [69863]

Bill Rammell: The available information is given in the following tables:

[2] For 2002/3 onwards, the Joint Academic Coding Scheme (JACS) replaced HESACODE as the coding frame used to identify subject of study. In addition to the coding change, enrolments for 2002/3 onwards are apportioned between all subjects studied whereas figures for 2001/2 and earlier are based upon a headcount of major subject of study. Hence the two sets of figures are not comparable.

Education and Inspections Bill

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent representations he has received on the Education and Inspections Bill. [68640]

Jim Knight: We continue to receive representations regarding the Education and Inspections Bill from a wide range of different people and organisations. We are engaged in ongoing work with our key stakeholders as the Bill progresses through Parliament.

Ms Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what targets he plans to set for the educational achievement of children attending the special schools proposed in the Education and Inspections Bill; and if he will make a statement. [70443]

Jim Knight: The Education and Inspections Bill provides that where new or replacement special schools are needed, they should be set up under the provisions in Clauses 7 to 9. Clause 10 also allows non-maintained and independent special schools to publish proposals to enter the maintained sector.

The Education (School Performance Targets) (England) Regulations 2004 require all special schools to set appropriate targets for improving pupil performance in the same way as mainstream primary and secondary schools, taking account of the differential performance of pupils with Special Educational Needs.

Targets must be set for pupil attainment in the final year of Key Stage 2 and Key Stage 3, and in the last year of compulsory schooling. Where pupil performance is expected to be below the national curriculum levels, special schools can set zero targets. However, governing bodies must set additional appropriate targets for such pupils using the P scales or other performance measures to improve the contribution schools make to the learning of pupils with Special Educational Needs.

The Government remain committed to ensuring that every child, regardless of background or any special educational need they might have, gets the education they need to enable them to fulfil their potential.

E-learning

Jim Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans he has to ensure that the e-learning strategy outlined in the paper, "Harnessing Technology: Transforming learning and children's services" (a) is kept up to date and (b) makes use of the latest information technology, with particular reference to high-speed mobile communications; and if he will make a statement. [70519]

Phil Hope [holding answer 12 May 2006]: The e-strategy is being delivered through a number of themes:

Strategic Technologies - getting the right technology deployed cost-effectively.

E-Maturity - assessing the maturity and effectiveness of our system in use of the technology.

Personalised Content - harnessing multimedia resources to meet the needs and learning styles of users.

Knowledge Architecture - joining up information and identity management across the system and making it learner-centred.

The Department established a technology group in October 2005 to implement the e-strategy across the education and children's services sectors. The Department is supported in this role by the British Educational Communication and Technology Agency (Becta), our key NDPB partner in the delivery of the e-strategy.

The e-strategy is informed by independent research. The Becta Review 2006 (published 28 April) is an assessment of the state of technology in education based on the most recent research, evaluation and survey reports, most of which are produced by independent academic institutions or commissioned or managed by Becta itself. It presents the latest findings and provides a commentary and assessment of what the findings might mean for policy and practice. The review offers assessment of progress, where it can be identified, and highlights issues and challenges that may affect further change in the system. It has identified that mobile technologies are set to play an increasingly important role, with personal ownership of technologies such as laptops, PDAs and mobile phones on the rise in schools.

Independent Children's Homes

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what research the Commission for Social Care Inspection has carried out in the last three years into the effects of clustering of independent children's homes. [69338]

Mr. Dhanda: I understand from the chair of the Commission for Social Care Inspection (CSCI) that the commission has not carried out any research into the effects of clustering of independent children's homes in the last three years.

Looked-after Children

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many looked-after children there were in each year since 2000, broken down by (a) sex and (b) ethnic group. [71224]

Mr. Dhanda: The number of looked-after children by gender is provided in Table A of the Department's Statistical Volume 1 entitled "Children looked after by Local Authorities Year Ending 31 March 2005" which can be accessed on:

http://www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/DB/VOL/v000646/index.shtml.

The number of looked after children by ethnicity is provided in the following tables.

Children looked after in England at 31 March by ethnic origin, 2001-05[1,2,3]

Number

	2001[4]	2002[4]	2003[4]	2004[5]	2005[5]
All Children[1]	58,900	59,700	60,800	61,100	60,900

Black or Black British	3,700	4,000	4,200	4,900	4,900
Other ethnic groups	820	800	870	990	1,100

[1] Figures exclude children looked after under an agreed series of short-term placements.
[2] Historical data may differ from older publications. This is mainly due to the implementation of amendments and corrections sent by some local authorities after the publication date of previous materials.
[3] Information on ethnicity started to be collected in 2001.
[4] Figures are taken from the CLA100 return.
[5] Figures are taken from the SSDA903 return.

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children were taken into local authority care from mothers under the age of (a) 16 and (b) 18 years in each year since 1997. [70909]

Mr. Dhanda: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Medicine Courses

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many students have been admitted to university to read medicine on courses which lead to registration as doctors with (a) less than three Bs at A-level and (b) less than three Cs at A-level in each of the last seven years. [63642]

Bill Rammell: Admission of students to medical, and other, courses is a matter for individual institutions. The main scheme for widening participation is Aimhigher, which aims to raise the attainment levels of young people and their aspirations towards university, and to improve progression. Most activities are not subject-specific, although some local and regional activities are designed to raise awareness of and encourage progression to specific subjects such as medicine. Aimhigher does not include the delivery of degree or other higher education programmes. Information on the pre-entry qualifications of students entering first degree courses in medicine is, however, provided in the following tables.

English domiciled entrants to first degree courses in medicine, by qualifications on entry[1]

Year of entry	Entrants with A levels as highest qualification on entry	of which, those with scores equivalent to: Less than 3 Bs[2]/300 tariff points	Less than 3 Cs[2]/less than 240 tariff points
Based upon A level points score from the student's best three A levels, 1998/9 to 2001/2.
1998/99	2,920	75	30
1999/00	2,835	135	40
2000/01	3,155	160	30
2001/02	3,420	235	60
Based upon UCAS tariff score from A levels from student reporting A level as their highest qualification on entry, 2002/3 to 2004/5.
2002/03[3,4,5]	3,760	170	75
2004/05	4,270	130	55

[1] Figures for 1998/99 to 2001/02 are points-based upon the students' best three A levels. In 2002/03 the UCAS tariff replaced A level scores. The tariff covers a wider range of qualifications though it is possible to identify those students with the tariff equivalent of 3 grade Bs (300 points) or 3 grade Cs (240 points). However, tariff score contains an unlimited number of eligible qualifications, not just the students' best three A levels.
[2] Including students with less than 3 Cs/240 tariff points.
[3] In 2002/03 a new method of coding subject of study was introduced on the student record, though the impact to entrants in medicine is likely to be small.
[4] Figures given for 2002/03 in a previous answer on 14 November 2004 were based upon all students with A level points recorded. This included some students who had a higher qualification on entry (for example a first degree).
[5] Figures for 2002/3 to 2004/5 are based upon students' tariff score from A levels where A levels are their highest qualification on entry.
Note:
Figures are on a snapshot basis as at 1 December and have been rounded to the nearest 5.

Primary Initiatives

Dr. Blackman-Woods: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many education initiatives there have been in primary education since 1997. [71080]

Jim Knight: The Government's reform agenda for primary schools has been set out in successive White papers, key policy documents and Acts of Parliament, as follows:

Key policy documents	Acts of Parliament
Excellence in Schools 1997	Education Act 1997
Schools Achieving Success 2001	Education Schools Act 1997
Every Child Matters 2003	School Standards and Framework Act 1998
Excellence and Enjoyment: a strategy for primary schools 2003	Teaching and Higher Education Act 1998
Every Child Matters 2004	Special Educational Needs and Disability Act 2001
The Five Year Strategy for children and learners 2004	Education Act 2002
Higher Standards Better Schools for all 2005	Education Act 2005
The Rose Review of the Teaching of Early Reading: Final report 2006
Building Primary Schools at the heart of the community

All these documents are available from the House of Commons Library and to the public from the National Stationery Office.

Prison Education

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to recommendation 29 of the Education and Skills Select Committee Report, HC114-1, on Prison Education, what discussions she has had with the Home Secretary about the role of Heads of Learning and Skills in prisons. [65565]

Mr. Sutcliffe: I have been asked to reply.

The former Home Secretary (Charles Clarke) had several meetings with the former Secretary of State for Education and Skills (Ruth Kelly) over the past year, at which a number of issues relating to the offender learning and skills agenda were discussed.

The prime function of Heads of Learning and Skills (HoLS), is to support the delivery of all aspects of education provision in prison, and its integration with education provision in the community. This is set out in the Green Paper "Reducing Re-Offending through Skills and Employment", published at the end of last year. HoLS also ensure that this work is linked into the wider establishment resettlement agenda, including vocational training, and improving links with employers.

The role of individual HoLS is defined by local Prison Service operational priorities.

School Food

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what progress is being made in introducing healthier eating for children in schools. [71384]

Jim Knight: Later this month, we intend to announce, in response to recommendations from the School Meals Review Panel and the School Food Trust, a full suite of new standards for food in schools. The School Food Trust plans to publish good practice guidance to assist with the implementation of the standards.

School Statistics

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many secondary schools are located in villages producing deep mined coal. [69794]

Jim Knight: The Department for Education and Skills does not differentiate between types of coal mines, but can provide data relating to the number of secondary schools in coalfield and former coalfield areas as a whole.

	Number of secondary[1] schools located within coalfield wards in England
Maintained schools	269

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Arts Council

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of Government grant in aid to Arts Council England since 2001-02. [71200]

Mr. Lammy: My Department is currently involved in the Government's comprehensive spending review. This exercise, which is led by HM Treasury, includes a retrospective assessment of how Arts Council England has spent the grant in aid it has received since the last comprehensive spending review. The organisation was also recently the subject of a peer review, the results of which were published in December 2005.

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much money has been allocated to Arts Council England in each year since 1997; and how much this represents per head of population in England. [71048]

Mr. Lammy: Grant in Aid allocations to Arts Council England, population figures for England[1] and per capita spend for 1997-2004 are in the following table. Grant in aid allocation for 2005-06 was £412m but accurate population data are not yet available. These figures do not include the £1,525m funding for the arts from the National Lottery Distribution Fund from 1997-98 to 2004-05.

Year	Grant in Aid (s)	Population	£ Spend per head
1997-98	186,600,000	48,664,800	3.83
1998-99	189,950,000	48,820,600	3.89
1999-00	228,250,000	49,032,900	4.66
2000-01	237,155,000	49,233,300	4.82

BBC Broadcasts

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps are being taken to ensure that all BBC licence payers in the North West continue to receive BBC broadcasts when analogue is switched of in 2009. [71322]

Mr. Woodward: Digital switchover will enable digital terrestrial coverage to match the current 98.5 per cent. analogue level. Switchover for the Granada region and the Yorkshire region will happen in the second half of 2009 and the first half of 2011 respectively.

The Government have confirmed the regional timetable for the switchover to digital television and announced details of a support scheme to help the most vulnerable households to make the switch.

Digital UK, an independent, not-for-profit company, will co-ordinate the implementation of digital switchover and ensure that consumers have timely and accurate information about the switch.

Consultations

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many public consultations her Department undertook in the last 12 months; and what the cost was (a) in total and (b) of each consultation. [70481]

Mr. Lammy: Over 2005, the Department for Culture, Media and Sport undertook 15 formal public consultations in order to inform the Department's policy development. Information on the cost of each consultation and the total cost of all consultations could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Equal Pay

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps are undertaken within her Department to ensure that women are obtaining equal pay to men doing work of equal value. [65852]

Mr. Lammy: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport was one of the first Departments to conduct an equal pay audit and to publish an equal pay action plan. Since then we have taken steps to reduce pay differentials between men and women by shortening pay bands and by increasing the number of women in the more senior grades. The results of these activities are shown in the data contained in the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for North Ayrshire and Arran (Ms Clark) on 8 May 2006, Official Report, columns 45-47. The Department is now conducting a further equal pay review with trade unions and expects to report later this year.

Heritage Lottery Fund

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to the answer of 27 April 2006, Official Report, column 1233W, on Heritage Lottery Fund, how much was awarded to organisations and projects in each (a) constituency and (b) council district in Northern Ireland in each year since 2002. [70488]

Mr. Lammy: Details of grants awarded by the Heritage Lottery Fund to organisations and projects in Northern Ireland in each year since 2002 are set out in the following table. This information is derived from the Department's Lottery award database, searchable at: www.lottery.culture.gov.uk, which uses information supplied by the Lottery distributors.

Ministerial Visits (Accommodation)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the total cost was of overnight accommodation for Ministers of State in her Department on foreign visits in each of the last three years. [69119]

Mr. Lammy: All travel by DCMS Ministers when travelling on official business is undertaken in accordance with the Ministerial Code on Travel by Ministers. Since 1999 the Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year, this information includes accommodation costs. Copies are available in the Libraries of both Houses.

Private Office Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what percentage of her private office staff is (a) male, (b) female and (c) disabled. [69127]

Mr. Lammy: Some 87 per cent. of private office staff are female and 13 per cent. male. At present, there are no disabled members of staff working in the private office.

Promotion Boards

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what promotion boards have been held in her Department in each of the last five years. [70482]

Mr. Lammy: The Department held annual promotion boards for all permanent staff below the senior civil service until 2004. In November 2005, the Department introduced a new selection to post system in which staff may apply in competition for posts either at their current grade or at a higher grade.

Racial Abuse Complaints

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many complaints of racial abuse have been (a) investigated and (b) upheld in her Department in each of the last five years. [70484]

Mr. Lammy: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport has not had any complaints of racial abuse in the last five years.

Staff Surveys

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many staff surveys have been conducted in her Department in each of the last three years. [70485]

Mr. Lammy: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport conducts Staff Opinion Surveys every two years as a way of gathering valuable feedback from staff. In the last three years the Department has conducted two staff surveys, one in June 2003 and one in June 2005.

Television Licence

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she had with the BBC about the role of the Post Office in supplying TV licences prior to the decision to end the contract. [71173]

Mr. Woodward: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has not had any discussions with the BBC on this matter. The award of the contract for over-the-counter sales of television licences is a commercial matter for the BBC as television licensing authority. The Government have no power to intervene in such matters, nor would it be appropriate to comment on the Corporation's decision. DCMS officials were informed by the BBC of the proposal to put the contract out to tender and were notified by the Corporation prior to the announcement of the award of the contract. DCMS liaised with the DTI to keep them informed of developments.

Unspent Budget

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much of the budget for her Department remained unspent in the 2005-06 financial year. [70480]

Mr. Lammy: The accounts for financial year 2005-06 have not yet been finalised. The provisional outturn indicates a total resource under spend of £58 million. This equates to 3.3 per cent. of the total budget.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Ministerial Responsibilities

10. Jeremy Wright: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what he expects the cost to public funds to be of his fulfilment of his new role in each of the next three years. [71288]

The Deputy Prime Minister: As I said earlier, the Prime Minister has today announced the details of my new responsibilities, and these are now available in the Library of the House.

In carrying out this role, I will be supported by a private office, a secretariat and the Cabinet Office as relevant to my responsibilities.

11. Mr Gauke: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what his responsibilities are in his new role. [71289]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the responses I gave the hon. Member for Daventry (Mr. Boswell) and the hon. Member for Bexleyheath and Crayford (Mr. Evennett) today.

Office Staff

13. Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many staff will be working for him in his new office. [71291]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Reading, East (Mr. Wilson) today.

14. Hugh Robertson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether his new office will have a diary secretary. [71292]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Reading, East (Mr. Wilson) today.

15. Peter Viggers: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what criteria staff in his office have to fulfil before they become eligible for fully paid leave. [71293]

The Deputy Prime Minister: Staff management issues are the responsibility of the civil service.

PRIME MINISTER

Social Behaviour

11. [71304] Mr. Allen: To ask the Prime Minister pursuant to his oral answer of 1 February 2006, Official Report, column 316, on social behaviour, if he will meet the hon. Member for Nottingham, North to discuss the teaching of social behaviour in primary schools in areas of educational under-achievement.

The Prime Minister: I met my hon. Friend recently to discuss these issues. I pay tribute to my hon. Friend for the leadership he shows on these issues, and in his constituency. Ministers at the Department for Education and Skills will continue to work closely with him on these issues.

Staffordshire Ambulance Service

12. [71305] Michael Fabricant: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the future of the Staffordshire ambulance service.

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the statement made on 16 May 2006, Official Report, columns 849-51 by my hon. Friend the Minister of State for Health (Andy Burnham).

Deputy Prime Minister

Mr. Amess: To ask the Prime Minister (1) if he will list the official duties of the Deputy Prime Minister; what his annual salary will be; what official accommodation he has been allocated; how many staff he has been allocated; at what grade; what the official office address will be; and if he will make a statement; [70076]

(2) if he will list the Cabinet Committees which are chaired by the Deputy Prime Minister. [70876]

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Prime Minister (1) how many full-time equivalent staff the Deputy Prime Minister will have working for him in his new role; [70664]

(2) where the Deputy Prime Minister's new office will be based; and whether he will retain his offices at 26 Whitehall; [70669]

(3) whether the Deputy Prime Minister will retain his official residences; [70670]

(4) whether the Deputy Prime Minister will have a (a) private parliamentary secretary and (b) junior Ministers assisting his brief; [70671]

(5) To ask the Prime Minister whether the Deputy Prime Minister will appoint a special adviser; [70735]

(6) which Cabinet Committees the Deputy Prime Minister will (a) chair and (b) be a member of. [70740]

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister where the Deputy Prime Minister's office will be located; and how many civil servants will be attached to it, broken down by grade. [70313]

Mrs. May: To ask the Prime Minister under which departmental budget the cost of the Deputy Prime Minister's office will fall; and what estimate he has made of the cost in 2006-07. [71071]

The Prime Minister: The business of Government is by nature cross-departmental and the main way of agreeing policy and driving reform across departmental responsibilities is through Cabinet Committees and sub-Committees.

Like previous holders of the office, the Deputy Prime Minister will act with my full authority in overseeing the delivery of Government business, including delivering key pledges in the 2005 manifesto. He will have a wide-ranging brief across the full range of domestic policy areas, and will continue to deputise for me domestically, including at Prime Minister's Questions, and in his current international role.

Following the reshuffle, the full list of chairs of Cabinet Committees and sub-Committees has today been announced in a written ministerial statement. The Deputy Prime Minister will chair nine Committees, a net addition of four to his previous responsibilities. This includes chairing the Domestic Affairs Committee, which takes decisions across the range of domestic Government business.

The full list of Committees chaired by the Deputy Prime Minister is:

Domestic Affairs (DA)
Public Health (DA/(PH))
Housing and Planning (HP)
Inspection (RB(I))
Post Office Network (MISC33), a new Committee
Ageing Policy (DA(AP))
Local and Regional Government (LRG)
Local Government Strategy and Performance (LRG(P))
Animal Right Activists (MISC13)

In addition, the Deputy Prime Minister will play an active role as my deputy on the following seven Committees:

Anti Social Behaviour (ASB)
Asylum and Migration (AM)
Energy and the Environment (EE)
National Health Service Reform (HSR)
Public Service Reform (PSR)
Schools Policy (SP)
Serious Organised Crime and Drugs (SOC)

The Deputy Prime Minister is also entitled to attend all other Cabinet Committees, as he judges necessary.

The Deputy Prime Minister has also agreed to work with Cabinet colleagues on improving the effectiveness of policy development across Government, and in particular with respect to the major issues which require an effective cross-Government response. He is also looking at our practice in developing policy, and how this can be improved.

Additionally, the Deputy Prime Minister will continue to assist me with my international duties, along with his other international work particularly in respect of the China task force, and, in recognition of his work in delivering the Kyoto treaty, to work with the Foreign Secretary, the Secretary of State for the Environment, and other departments across Government on promoting the Government's post-Kyoto agenda.

The Deputy Prime Minister will continue to have the use of Dorneywood. Under the terms of the Dorneywood Trust, there is no cost to public funds. The Deputy Prime Minister will be supported by a private office and secretariat, allocated from within existing civil service resources. This expenditure will be accounted for and audited in the normal way. In his Cabinet Committee work he will be supported by the Cabinet Office's secretariats, and will draw on the support of officials in other Departments as necessary to fulfil his other responsibilities.

Minister Without Portfolio

Mr. Heald: To ask the Prime Minister what the responsibilities are of the Minister without Portfolio; and what salary is paid to her in respect of these responsibilities. [70010]

The Prime Minister: The Minister without Portfolio is a member of Cabinet and will be a member of a number of Cabinet Committees. A full list of the membership of Cabinet Committees will be published shortly. The salary of the Minister without Portfolio is paid for by the Labour Party.

Ministerial Visits (Accommodation)

David Simpson: To ask the Prime Minister (1) on how many occasions (a) civil servants and (b) special advisers in his Office have stayed overnight in (i) five star, (ii) four star and (iii) three star hotels in each of the last three years; [69246]

(2) what the total cost was of overnight accommodation for (a) civil servants in his Office and (b) special advisers staying overnight in (i) mainland Great Britain, (ii) Northern Ireland, (iii) the Republic of Ireland and (iv) other countries in each of the last three years. [69247]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 8 December 2004, Official Report, column 566W to the hon. Member for Chichester (Mr. Tyrie).

Television Licences

Danny Alexander: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions his Office had with the BBC about the role of the Post Office in supplying TV licences (a) prior to and (b) since the decision to end the Post Office's contract for this work. [71175]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Leader of the House (Jack Straw) on 11 May 2006, Official Report, columns 517-18 to the hon. Member for Orkney and Shetland (Mr. Carmichael).

CABINET OFFICE

Social Exclusion

9. Mr. Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what support has been made available since 1997 to tackle social exclusion in the most deprived areas of the United Kingdom, with particular reference to rural areas. [71287]

Hilary Armstrong: Tackling social exclusion is one of this Government's most ambitious and important goals. The Social Exclusion Unit aims to explore the rural dimension in all its work. Furthermore, the Neighbourhood Renewal Fund was established in 2001 and £45 million of NRF funding is currently allocated to 16 rural areas. DEFRA provides £73 million per annum to RDA budgets and is committed to establishing the Commission for Rural Communities.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what contracts the Cabinet Office has awarded to (a) Geronimo Communications and (b) Tribal Communications since 1997; for what purpose each contract was issued; and what the cost was of each contract. [70711]

Hilary Armstrong: The Cabinet Office has not let any contracts to Geronimo Communications or Tribal Communications since 1997.

Ministerial Tenure

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what the average length of time in office has been for (a) Cabinet Ministers, (b) Ministers of State and (c) Parliamentary Under-Secretaries of State since 1976. [70123]

Hilary Armstrong: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Northcote-Trevelyan Report

Mark Pritchard: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether the Government plan to review the conclusions of the Northcote-Trevelyan Report on the civil service. [71290]

Mr. McFadden: The Government remain committed to a permanent impartial civil service with appointment on merit on the basis of fair and open competition. These principles have been confirmed in the new Civil Service Code which was launched for consultation on 27 January 2006.

Portland PR

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what meetings officials in her Department have had with representatives of the public relations company Portland PR; what contracts Portland PR has with her Department and agencies for which she has responsibility; and what the nature of the contract is in each case. [70041]

Hilary Armstrong: The Cabinet Office has not awarded any contracts to Portland PR.

The Department does not maintain a central list of such meetings. Civil servants meet many people as part of the process of policy development and business delivery. All such meetings are conducted in accordance with the requirements of the Civil Service Code and Guidance for civil servants on contacts with lobbyists and people outside Government.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

"Sustainable Communities: Homes for All"

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the cost was of printing the "Sustainable Communities: Homes for All" revision. [67016]

Angela E. Smith: I have been asked to reply.

In order to replenish stocks, 2,000 further copies of Cm 6424 "Sustainable Communities: Homes for all" were printed in March 2005 at a cost of £3,950.

Anti-Semitism

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what steps the Government are taking to reduce anti-Semitism; and what dedicated funds are available for this. [69741]

Meg Munn: The Government celebrate and value the contribution made by the Jewish community. The Government deplore all forms of racism and are committed to tackling anti-Semitism wherever it exists.

We believe that the best way to do this is through the effective implementation of strong legislation against racial and religious discrimination and racially and religiously motivated crime, underpinned by policies and strategies to increase racial equality and community cohesion.

Our laws therefore do not distinguish between particular racial groups or particular forms of racism. We therefore treat anti-Semitic incidents as racist incidents.

In recent years the Government have strengthened both the legal framework against race discrimination and the criminal penalties for offences such as incitement to racial hatred and for racially or religiously aggravated assault and criminal damage.

We have robust police and crime prosecution service policies. Additionally, crime and disorder reduction partnerships are required to consider all crime including hate crime and their local areas when determining their strategies. Tackling hate crime is an essential element of ensuring safer communities.

The Government are fully committed to engaging with faith communities at all levels and this forms a crucial part of our overall strategy of building a more inclusive, tolerant and cohesive society. Since the publication and subsequent implementation of the recommendations of the "Working Together: Co-operation between Government and faith communities" Report (2004) there has been substantial progress in consulting and involving faith communities in policy development across Whitehall.

We are teaching young people through the National Curriculum about citizenship and there is a statutory requirement on schools to teach about the Holocaust. Government also support the annual commemoration of Holocaust Memorial Day to reinforce the message that racism and prejudice can have catastrophic consequences.

In keeping with the approach towards tackling hate crime as outlined above we deliberately do not have dedicated funds to tackle anti-Semitism.

However, the Home Office established the Holocaust Memorial Day Trust in 2005 to take over the responsibility for organising a national commemoration. The Government support the Trust with an annual amount of £500,000 to meet the costs of the commemoration.

Departmental Re-branding

Mr. Rogerson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how much has been allocated in connection with the setting-up of her new Department for (a) the design and production of new logos, (b) modifications to buildings and furnishings, (c) stationery, (d) online media design, (e) re-branding and (f) other costs; and from what budgets the resources will be drawn. [71587]

Angela E. Smith: The Department will bear down on all costs involved in setting up the Department for Communities and Local Government and have allocated a budget of £8,000 to £12,000 from the Department's corporate communications budget.

To date the costs for this exercise are as follows:

(a) the design and production of a new logotype £2,200,

(b) the modifications to buildings and furnishings, approximately £5,000,

(c) stationery, approximately £2,500.

(d) online media design £600

For (e) re-branding and (f) other costs, the Department will draw down on the allocated corporate communications budget.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how much her Department is expecting to spend on departmental re-branding. [70588]

Angela E. Smith: The Department will bear down on the necessary costs arising from the establishment of the Department for Communities and Local Government and at all times will look to achieve best value for money for the complete exercise. Where appropriate the Department will continue to use existing Office of the Deputy Prime Minister branded materials while these stocks last.

A budget of £8,000 to £12,000 has been allocated for this exercise, of which approximately £2,200 has been spent on the design, production and introduction of a departmental logotype.

The remainder of the budget will be used for implementation over time.

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what estimate she has made of the cost of transferring the responsibilities of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister to her Department. [69856]

Angela E. Smith [holding answer 11 May 2006]: There will be no additional public expenditure as a consequence of the Machinery of Government (MOG) changes transferring the responsibilities of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister and other Departments to the new Department for Communities and Local Government.

The MOG changes will be reflected in adjustments to Departmental budgets which will be cost-neutral in overall public terms.

Any costs of establishing the new Department for Communities and Local Government, such as relocation of incoming staff from other Departments' buildings, changes to signage and stationery, will be met from existing budgets.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government which communities and civic renewal functions have been transferred to her Department from the Home Office. [70580]

Angela E. Smith: As set out by the Prime Minister in his letter of 9 May, responsibilities for communities, race, faith, and equalities will be brought together with the existing responsibilities of the Department for Communities and Local Government.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what percentage of the staff in his Department is (a) male, (b) female and (c) disabled, broken down by grade. [69058]

Angela E. Smith: I have been asked to reply.

The following table sets out the percentage of staff within DCLG as at 31 December 2005.

Percentage

Responsibility level	Male	Female	Declared disabled
SCS level	61	39	2
Grades 6/7	60	40	2
SEO/HEO	54	46	2
EO	48	52	3
Total	53	47	2

Departmental records of disabled staff are solely based on voluntary declaration of disability under the Disability Discrimination Act and not connected in any way to formal register of disability.

Fire Service

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how fire cover will be provided if firefighters take strike action; and what contingency planning the Government have taken in the event of strike action. [70725]

Angela E. Smith: The Civil Contingencies Act 2004 imposes a duty on fire and rescue authorities to put in place business continuity management arrangements to ensure that they can continue to exercise their functions in the event of an emergency as far as reasonably practicable. This includes industrial action.

National contingency planning arrangements for industrial action in the fire and rescue service are kept under constant review.

Gershon Review

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what steps her Department has taken as a result of the Gershon initiative. [70692]

Mr. Woolas: Following the Gershon efficiency review, the Spending Review 2004 set the Department (as ODPM) a target to achieve at least £620 million annual efficiency gains by 2008. We have established a central efficiency programme which includes registered social landlord housing, regional development agencies, fire modernisation, homelessness, Departmental work force reduction and administration. Some £244 million in gains have been made to date and we are forecast to exceed our target. The Department's Annual Report to be published shortly will cover the latest progress.

DCLG also has responsibility for overseeing delivery of the Local Government target of £6.45 billion efficiencies from local authorities, schools and police by 2008. Councils' contribution to this is at least £3 billion. They are on track to meet and indeed exceed it. Information on activities and progress can be seen in the "Efficiency—One Year On" document (www.rce.gov.uk/rce/aio/16537).

Housing

Lynne Jones: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many households there were on (a) council and (b) registered social landlord waiting lists in each of the last 20 years. [42223]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

(a) The number of households on councils' housing waiting lists in England for the period 1986-2005 is shown in the following table:

As at 1 April:	Number of households on the housing waiting list
1986	1,351,300
1987	1,289,500
1988	1,273,500
1989	1,250,000
1990	1,255,500
1991	1,282,500
1992	1,296,700
1993	1,208,800
1994	1,121,500
1995	1,087,100
1996	1,062,200
1997	1,021,100
1998	1,022,800
1999	1,035,800
2000	1,038,700
2001	1,039,300
2002	1,093,300
2003	1,266,300
2004	1,427,700
2005	1,546,900

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's Housing Strategy Statistical Appendix return (HSSA) from 2000 onwards; ODPM's Housing Investment Programme (HIP) return before 2000.

Local authorities (LAs) in England report the numbers of households on their housing waiting list as at 1 April in their annual Housing Strategy Statistical Appendix returns. Where the local authority maintains a common waiting list with Registered Social Landlords (RSLs) in their district, the list will also include households placed on the list by RSLs.

(b) The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not collect information on households on individual RSL waiting lists. However, as stated above the figures for LA waiting lists will include some households on RSL waiting lists where they operate a common list.

Not everyone on the waiting list is necessarily in urgent housing need. The waiting list also includes those who consider social housing as their preferred or one of a number of housing options, and those who decide to get onto the waiting list ladder before they need or want to move house—particularly where the priority system is heavily based on waiting time.

Planning Gain Supplement

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what estimate the Government has made of the annual revenue to be raised from planning gain supplement. [70705]

John Healey: I have been asked to reply.

The amount of revenue from a planning-gain supplement (PGS) will depend on final decisions on its rate and scope. PGS will be set at a modest rate to help finance additional infrastructure whilst preserving incentives to bring land forward for development.

Power Stations

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what plans she has to exclude power stations from rateable value growth targets as part of the end of year one review of the local authority business growth incentive scheme. [70973]

Mr. Woolas: The Local Authority Business Growth Incentive scheme's (LABGI) end of year one review is considering feedback received following the scheme's first year in operation (2005-06) including consideration of power stations. The review's conclusions will have implications for the details of the scheme in years' two and three, and Ministers will be announcing their conclusions in due course.

Regional Centres of Excellence

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the cost has been of the regional centres of excellence. [70728]

Mr. Woolas: Since 2004-05, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister, the predecessor to the Department for Communities and Local Government, has provided direct funding of the order of £30.8 million to the regional centres of excellence (RCEs).

SCOTLAND

Departmental Expenditure

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much was spent on advertising by his Department in each of the last three years. [70625]

David Cairns: Nothing.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of his private office staff are (a) male, (b) female and (c) disabled. [69107]

David Cairns: Some 67 per cent. of staff in private office are male and 33 per cent. are female; in the interests of privacy, we do not publish the figures on disabled staff where these are less than five.

Home Working

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people in his Department have been enabled to work from home in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [67988]

David Cairns: All the staff in the Scotland Office are on loan from the Scottish Executive or the Department for Constitutional Affairs (DCA). Although no staff in the Scotland Office have formally worked from home in the last three years, both the Scottish Executive and the DCA are committed to achieving a work-life balance for all staff.

Ministerial Visits (Accommodation)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on how many occasions (a) civil servants and (b) special advisers in his Department have stayed overnight in (i) five star, (ii) four star and (iii) three star hotels in each of the last three years. [69101]

David Cairns: The Scotland Office does not hold this information.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the total cost was of overnight accommodation for (a) civil servants and (b) special advisers in his Department staying overnight in (i) mainland Great Britain, (ii) Northern Ireland, (iii) the Republic of Ireland and (iv) other countries in each of the last three years. [69102]

David Cairns: The Scotland Office does not hold this information in the form requested.

Public Consultations

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many public consultations his Department undertook in the last 12 months; and what the cost was (a) in total and (b) of each consultation. [70623]

David Cairns: The Scotland Office has undertaken no public consultations in the last year.

Racial Abuse

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many complaints of racial abuse have been (a) investigated and (b) upheld in his Department in each of the last five years. [70626]

David Cairns: There have been no complaints of racial abuse in the last five years.

Staff Surveys

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many staff surveys have been conducted in his Department in each of the last three years. [70627]

David Cairns: Over the last three years, staff in the Scotland Office have been able to participate in two staff surveys by the Department for Constitutional Affairs and three staff surveys by the Scottish Executive.

Unspent Budget

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much of the budget for his Department remained unspent in the 2005-06 financial year. [70622]

David Cairns: It is estimated that the Scotland Office will underspend its provision for 2005-06 by £0.59 million.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Advertising

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much was spent on advertising by her Department in each of the last three years. [70536]

Margaret Beckett: The total spent on advertising in each of the last three years was:

2003-04	368,818.96
2004-05	151,560.75
2005-06	233,797.34

Air Miles

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many free air miles have been accrued by senior civil servants in her Department on official business in each of the last three years; and how they were used. [70540]

Margaret Beckett: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) does not record the number of air miles earned by members of its staff travelling on official business.

The FCO follows Cabinet Office rules, which do not permit staff to use air miles, which they have accumulated through official travel, for personal journeys. We encourage staff to make use of these air miles to reduce the cost of future official travel. If they are unable to do so, and the air miles are transferable, they may pass them to their resource manager to use for official travel by others. If the air miles are not transferable, staff may donate them to a charity of the travel operator's choice.

Basra

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of progress in implementing the agreement to restart cooperation with the local government in Basra in Iraq since 12 March 2006; and if she will make a statement. [65730]

Margaret Beckett: We have been working hard since my hon. Friend the Minister of State for the Middle East, Kim Howells, visited Iraq in March to secure a resumption of co-operation with the Basra Provincial Council. This was finally achieved on 7 May, when the Chairman of the Council announced a formal end to the boycott he and his colleagues had earlier imposed. This welcome development opens the way to restoration of full co-operation between us and the Basra local authorities.

Departmental Credit Cards

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what facility is available for senior civil servants in her Department to use credit cards supplied by the Department. [70539]

Margaret Beckett: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) issues a corporate credit card to UK-based staff for use on official travel. The card may be used in the UK and overseas to pay for items such as hotel accommodation, rail tickets and taxi fares. Officers travelling overseas may also use the card to withdraw foreign currency, up to a limit of £325 per week.

The corporate credit cards are issued to UK-based staff who travel regularly and are not restricted only to senior civil servants. Each officer holding a card is given guidance on its use and their attention is drawn to what may and may not be purchased with the card. At present, there are nearly 600 UK-based card holders, who made over 2,500 individual transactions in the first quarter of 2006.

Some overseas posts also issue their own corporate credit cards, in line with guidance issued by Finance Directorate. These cards are issued locally and, although Finance Directorate are aware of the posts that have issued cards, the Directorate does not hold information about the cardholders, or how frequently they are used. Finance Directorate guidance is that cards are issued to officers according to need, rather than according to grade.

Iran

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations she has made (a) unilaterally and (b) through the EU to the Iranian government in response to reports of renewed persecution of those of the Baha'i faith in Iran; and what representations she has received on the matter. [70885]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and I are seriously concerned at the situation faced by the Baha'i community in Iran. Recent reports that Iran's Supreme Leader has instructed the Iranian authorities and armed forces to identify Baha'is and monitor their activities are deeply disturbing. We expect Iran to uphold freedom of religion and belief in accordance with its international obligations under Article 18 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights.

Ministers and officials have pressed the Iranian authorities on many occasions to take action to address the intimidation and discrimination suffered by Iranian Baha'is. At our suggestion, the EU conveyed its serious concern to the Iranian authorities on 31 January and again on 11 April. On 10 April, EU Foreign Ministers underlined their "continued concerns about the human rights situation in Iran, in particular regarding the situation of Baha'is".

We have also taken action at the UN. All EU countries co-sponsored a UN General Assembly resolution on human rights in Iran in December last year. This expressed serious concern at, inter alia,

"the escalation and increased frequency of discrimination and other human rights violations against the Baha'i, including cases of arbitrary arrest and detention, the denial of freedom of religion or of publicly carrying out communal affairs, the disregard of property rights, the destruction of sites of religious importance, the suspension of social, educational and community-related activities and the denial of access to higher education, employment, pensions, adequate housing and other benefits".

The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has received several representations from the National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of the UK on this issue.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of (a) the likelihood of and (b) the time scale for Iran developing nuclear weapons. [70929]

Dr. Howells: The Iranian Government have stated on a number of occasions that it does not wish to develop nuclear weapons. However, Iran's documented record of deception over the last two decades gives serious grounds for concern about the real intentions of its nuclear programme. There is documented evidence that Iran used a clandestine international procurement network. The International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) has also reported that Iran has in its possession a document describing the procedures for the reduction of UF6 to uranium metal in small quantities, and the casting of enriched and depleted uranium metal into hemispheres, related to the fabrication of nuclear weapon components. The IAEA has indicated that the existence of this document is a matter of concern. Information has also been made available to the IAEA concerning possible Iranian work on the design of a missile re-entry vehicle which could have a military nuclear dimension. Iran has refused to discuss this information with the IAEA.

IAEA Director General, Dr. el-Baradei, in his report on 2 September 2005 noted that after "two and a half years of intensive inspections and investigation, Iran's full transparency is essential and long-overdue".

The IAEA is still unable to conclude that there are no undeclared nuclear materials or activities in Iran. At a press conference in Algeria, on 17 February, my right hon. Friend the then Foreign Secretary (Mr. Straw) said:

"There are strong suspicions internationally that Iran may be seeking to use its nuclear programme in order to develop a nuclear weapons capability.... but we do not have absolute proof".

Estimates of the time Iran might require to develop a nuclear weapon vary, depending on assumptions made.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of Iran's threat to withdraw from all or part of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty. [71459]

Dr. Howells: Iran's leaders have said on a number of occasions in recent weeks that Iran might consider withdrawing from the nuclear non-proliferation treaty (NPT) in certain circumstances. For example, President Ahmadinejad said on 24 April,

'working in the framework of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty and the (International Atomic Energy) agency (IAEA) is our concrete policy, but if we see that they are violating our rights, or they don't want to accept (our rights), well, we will revise'.

On 7 May, 160 Majlis deputies issued a statement saying that if the United Nations Security Council adopted a Resolution on Iran under Chapter VII of the UN Charter, the Majlis would oblige the Iranian government to consider withdrawing from the NPT.

Such comments are hard to reconcile with President Ahmadinejad's claim at the UN General Assembly in September 2005 that "continued interaction and technical and legal co-operation with the IAEA will be the centrepiece of our nuclear policy", and with the commitment of Iran's Ambassador to the IAEA in August 2005 that Iran would "never" leave the NPT. They have presumably been made to influence Security Council deliberations presently under way. As the IAEA Board and the Security Council have made clear, Iran needs to build confidence that its nuclear programme is for exclusively peaceful purposes, including by reinstating a full suspension of all enrichment-related and reprocessing activity and increasing transparency with the IAEA. Threats to withdraw from the NPT have the opposite effect, undermining international confidence still further.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations she has made to Iran concerning the filling of the post of Iranian ambassador to London. [71495]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has made no such representations.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make a statement on Iranian accession to the World Trade Organisation. [69176]

Dr. Howells: The World Trade Organisation (WTO) General Council accepted Iran's application to begin the process of accession to the WTO on 26 May 2005. This process normally takes several years. The next steps will be to establish a working party of WTO members that indicate an interest, and for Iran to submit a memorandum on foreign trade describing its current trading regime and setting out the reforms it intends to make in order to ensure that this regime is compatible with WTO norms. The European Union has traditionally supported the principle of Iran's accession to the WTO, which should promote economic reform, liberalisation, transparency and respect for property rights, and reduce discriminatory trade practices. As part of the accession process, Iran must agree acceptable terms and complete bilateral negotiations with all interested WTO parties before it could finally join.

Iraq

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations she has received from within Iraq on behalf of the International Tax and Investment Center in Iraq since January 2005; and if she will make a statement. [68560]

Dr. Howells: We have not received any representations from within Iraq on behalf of the International Tax and Investment Center since January 2005.

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many British civilians have been killed in Iraq since March 2003. [70266]

Dr. Howells: Our consular records show that at least 36 British civilians have died in Iraq since March 2003. This number includes deaths from natural causes, but is not a definitive figure as records include only those cases where consular assistance has been sought. The figure does not include British dual nationals.

Israel

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether representations have been made to the Israeli authorities to cease withholding Palestinian tax revenues by (a) the UK and (b) the EU; and what assessment has been made of the feasibility of channelling those tax revenues via the EU. [71378]

Dr. Howells: The UK and the EU have consistently called on the Government of Israel to ensure that the tax revenues it collects on behalf of the Palestinian Authority (PA) reach the Palestinian people. We welcome the move by Israel to use the revenues to pay utilities bills that the PA has accrued with Israeli companies from those revenues. We also welcome Foreign Minister Livni's announcement that withheld revenues could be used for humanitarian purposes. Channelling funds through the EU mechanism would be a further positive move.

Leonard Hardy

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what (a) discussions and (b) correspondence there has been between her Department and the German authorities on the case of Leonard Hardy; and whether an agreement was reached between the Government and German authorities in relation to this case. [66821]

Margaret Beckett: Leonard Hardy was arrested in Spain on 17 August 2005 for the bombing of the Osnabruck barracks, Germany, in 1996.

There were discussions between our embassy in Berlin and the German authorities about the UK's policy in relation to dealing with terrorist suspects "on the run". These focused, in particular, on the implications of the document entitled "Proposals in Relation to On the Runs (OTRs)" published in May 2003 and the subsequent draft legislation, the Northern Ireland (Offences) Bill, and their potential relevance to the cases of individuals suspected of offences committed in Germany.

That legislation was withdrawn on 11 January 2006. The Government had no role in Hardy's extradition from Spain to Germany, which we understand took place under the European Convention on Extradition 1957 and the relevant German and Spanish legislation, and subsequent prosecution. No agreement was made between the Government and the German authorities in relation to this case.

Ministerial Visits (Accommodation)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on how many occasions (a) civil servants and (b) special advisers in her Department have stayed overnight in (i) five star, (ii) four star and (iii) three star hotels in each of the last three years. [69071]

Margaret Beckett: There is no centrally held record of the number of nights civil servants or special advisers have been accommodated in hotels over the last three years, nor the standard of those hotels. To answer this question officials would need to contact every post worldwide and ask them to let us know specifically the number of nights and the standard of accommodation civil servants or special advisers stayed in. To collate this information would therefore incur disproportionate cost.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the total cost was of overnight accommodation for (a) civil servants and (b) special advisers in her Department staying overnight in (i) mainland Great Britain, (ii) Northern Ireland, (iii) the Republic of Ireland and (iv) other countries in each of the last three years. [69072]

Margaret Beckett: There is no centrally held record of the cost of overnight accommodation for civil servants or special advisers over the last three years. To answer this question staff from my Department would need to contact every post worldwide and ask them to let us know specifically the cost of accommodation in which civil servants or special advisers stayed. To collate this information would therefore incur disproportionate cost.

Officials' Phone Calls

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many minutes of free personal overseas telephone calls officials in her Department are entitled to each week while posted overseas. [69672]

Margaret Beckett: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office allows staff on detached duty overseas to claim reimbursement for up to five minutes of calls back to the UK a week. In addition, staff on substantive postings overseas receive an element in their overseas allowances to cover up to 60 minutes a month of calls back to the UK at local rates.

Palestine

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much aid the EU plans to channel to the Palestinian territories; and what the value is of the tax revenue due to the Palestinian Authority which has been withheld by Israel. [71387]

Dr. Howells: The EU was tasked by the Quartet on 9 May to develop a temporary international funding mechanism to ensure assistance reaches the Palestinian people. The modalities of the mechanism, and the amounts that could be channelled through it, are being worked on urgently. The UK will of course want to play its part. Israel collects around US$50 million per month in tax revenues, part of which has been used to pay utilities bills.

Private Office Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what percentage of her private office staff is (a) male, (b) female and (c) disabled. [69077]

Margaret Beckett: Some 36 per cent. of staff in my private office are male, 64 per cent. female and none registered disabled.

Promotion Boards

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many promotion boards have been held in her Department in each of the last five years. [70535]

Margaret Beckett: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has held the following number of promotion boards over the past five years:

	Boards held
2001	35
2002	32
2003	32
2004	36
2005	22
2006	[1]13

[1]boards held to date, a further 17 planned this year

Racial Abuse

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many complaints of racial abuse have been (a) investigated and (b) upheld in her Department in each of the last five years. [70537]

Margaret Beckett: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) does not keep a categorised record of formal complaint types (grievances), as grievances are often complex and can arise from a number of different issues so such categorisation is misleading.

I refer the hon. Member to the reply my hon. Friend the then Minister of State for Trade, Investment and Foreign Affairs (Ian Pearson) gave to him on 18 April, Official Report, column 537W. FCO records date back to 2003 only.

Staff Development

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the total cost was of (a) staff away days and (b) staff team building exercises in her Department in each of the last three years. [69075]

Margaret Beckett: There is no centrally held record or costing of staff away days and team building exercises. To answer this question would involve staff contacting every Foreign and Commonwealth Office Department and post worldwide to collate this information. This would therefore incur disproportionate costs.

Staff Surveys

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many staff surveys have been conducted in her Department in each of the last three years. [70538]

Margaret Beckett: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) has conducted three staff surveys since 2003:

2004 Employee attitude survey

2005 FCO Services "Your Say" survey

2006 "Feedback" staff engagement survey

The results of the feedback survey are available on the FCO website at the following address: http://www.fco.gov.uk.

UK Waters

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on how many occasions UK waters around Northern Ireland have been illegally entered in each of the last 10 years. [70453]

Mr. McCartney: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to him today (UIN 70532). In international law there is no distinction made between Northern Ireland waters and UK waters. We do not hold any figures relating specifically to waters around Northern Ireland.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on how many occasions UK waters have been illegally entered in each of the last 10 years. [70532]

Mr. McCartney: The UK claims a 12 nautical mile territorial sea. Under Article 17 of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea (UNCLOS) ships of all States enjoy the right of innocent passage through the territorial sea.

Article 19(1) of UNCLOS provides that passage is innocent so long as it is not prejudicial to the peace, good order or security of the coastal State. Passage of a foreign ship shall be considered prejudicial to the peace, good order and security of the coastal State, provided the coastal State has not consented to the activity, if the ship engages in any of the activities listed in Article 19(2) of UNCLOS. These activities range from fishing activities to wilful pollution to exercise or practice with weapons of any kind.

The act of a foreign flagged vessel entering the UK territorial sea is not in itself illegal, but the activity in which the ship engages once inside the territorial sea may be contrary to UNCLOS.

We do not hold data on illegal activities carried out in UK waters, although individual Government Departments may be able to provide statistics on specific areas relating to their responsibilities, e.g. illegal fishing.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Pensions

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people have made claims for pension credit via (a) post, (b) telephone and (c) a home visit in each of the last three years. [64504]

James Purnell: The information requested is not available.

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many claimants of pension credit have (a) requested and (b) received home visits to assist with a claim in each of the last three years. [64505]

James Purnell: The information is available in the following table.

	Requests for visit for pension credit claim completion	Visits completed for pension credit claim
2004-05	167,000	162,000
2005-06	82,000	84,000

Notes:
1. Local Service became a nationally led business unit within the Pension Service in April 2004. There are no data available for 2003-04 as there was no national collation of data prior to this restructure.
2. Figures show a higher number of cleared than received requests during 2005-06. This is due to the carry over of appointments into financial year 2005.

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners have received (a) telephone calls and (b) letters from agencies for which his Department is responsible, inviting them to explore the possibility that they may be eligible for pension credit since October 2004, broken down by parliamentary constituency. [64508]

James Purnell: The information is not available in the format requested.

Since October 2004, the Pension Service has successfully contacted approximately 462,000 pensioners by telephone to discuss their eligibility for pension credit. It is not possible to provide a breakdown of this figure by parliamentary constituency.

From October 2004 to March 2006 approximately 2.83 million pensioners received a letter from the Pension Service inviting them to explore their eligibility for pension credit. I have placed a breakdown of this figure by parliamentary constituency in the Library.

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners having been invited to explore the possibility that they may be eligible for pension credit via an unsolicited call from (a) the Pension Service and (b) another agency for which his Department is responsible went on to make (i) a successful and (ii) an unsuccessful application for pension credit, broken down by parliamentary constituency; and how many did not respond. [64521]

James Purnell: The available information is in the following table.

April 2005-March 2006	Number
Telephone calls[1]	162,000
Pension credit applications generated as a result of the above telephone calls	19,000
Local Service visits[2]	509,000
Pension credit applications generated as a result of the above Local Service visits	87,000

[1] This is the number of outbound calls made by pension credit application line staff where they have been successful in contacting the customer to discuss their eligibility for pension credit.
[2] These are effective visits following direct approach made by Local Service staff to provide the customer with a full benefit entitlement check (which includes pension credit). Initial contact to customers by Local Service staff was made by invitation letter or telephone call to discuss entitlement to financial benefits including pension credit.

All figures are rounded to the nearest thousand. Local Service data show combined invitation letters and telephone calls.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his latest estimate is of the take-up rate of (a) savings credit only, (b) guarantee credit and savings credit and (c) all pension credit; and if he will make a statement. [70290]

James Purnell: The latest information on the take-up of pension credit, including estimates for the separate elements of pension credit, is available in the DWP report entitled: "Pension Credit Estimates of Take-Up in 2004/2005". A copy of the report is held in the Library.

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many telephone calls the Pension Service has made since September 2004 to invite pensioners to explore the possibility that they may be eligible for pension credit (a) after 6.30 pm on weekdays and (b) at weekends, broken down by parliamentary constituency. [64507]

James Purnell: Between September 2003 and March 2006, a total of 14,000 calls have been made to customers from the Pension Service inviting them to apply for pension credit on Saturday morning. No calls were made on Sunday.

Information on calls made after 6.30 pm on weekdays is not available.

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many telephone calls have been made by the Pension Service informing pensioners of the possibility that they were eligible for pension credit in each month since October 2003. [64520]

James Purnell: The information requested is in the following table.

Month	Total successful calls
October 2003	0
November 2003	180
December 2003	22,000
January 2004	34,000
February 2004	28,000

November 2005	4,000
December 2005	11,000
January 2006	16,000
February 2006	31,000
March 2006	15,000
Total	738,000

Notes:
1. Pension credit was introduced from October 2003.
2. Data relate to the number of successful calls the Pension Service made by telephone, in order to discuss eligibility for pension credit with the customer.
3. A successful call is when the Pension Service has been able to get in touch with the customer by telephone.
4. Data are rounded to the nearest thousand.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners were living in relative poverty in (a) 1996-97, (b) 2003-04, (c) 2004-05 and (d) 2005-06; and if he will make a statement. [70289]

James Purnell: The seventh annual 'Opportunity for all' report (Cm 6673) sets out the Government's strategy for tackling poverty and social exclusion and reports progress against a range of indicators.

Specific information regarding relative low income for pensioners is available in the latest publication of the 'Households Below Average Income 1994/95—2004/05'. The threshold of below 60 per cent. of relative or contemporary median income is the most commonly used in reporting trends in low income.

Figures for 1996-97, 2003-04 and 2004-05, the latest year for which figures are available, showing the number of pensioners living in households with incomes below 60 per cent. of the contemporary median, are in the following table.

Number of pensioners living in contemporary low-income households

	Before housing costs (million)	After housing costs (million)
1996-97	2.2	2.8
2003-04	2.2	2.0
2004-05	2.0	1.8

Notes:
1. Figures are for Great Britain.
2. Results from Households Below Average Incomes publication.
3. Figures show the number and proportion of pensioners in households below 60 per cent. of median net income (after direct taxes including council tax).
4. Pensioners are all females aged 60 years or over, and all males aged 65 years or over.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps the Government are taking to ensure that more women receive a full basic state pension in the future. [70058]

James Purnell: On 2 November the Government published the report, "Women and pensions: The evidence". The report shows that today, only around 30 per cent. of women reaching state pension age (SPA) are entitled to a full basic state pension. However, women's basic state pension records are continuing to improve with the combined effect of increased labour market participation and home responsibilities protection.

We know that more needs to be done. The Pensions Commission has provided the right framework for debate and will help build consensus for delivering a long-term settlement for tomorrow's pensioners, in particular, one that is fairer for women. We will bring forward our proposals in a White Paper which will be published by the end of the month.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in each London borough receive the full basic state pension. [70107]

James Purnell: The number of state pension recipients who receive the full basic state pension in each London borough as at September 2005 is in the following table:

London borough	Number
Barking and Dagenham	15,200
Barnet	25,300
Bexley	24,300

London borough	Number
Brent	11,400
Bromley	36,400
Camden	10,200
City of London	600

Notes:
1. Caseloads are rounded to the nearest 100.
2. Numbers are based on a 5 per cent. sample, and are therefore subject to a degree of sampling variation.
3. A basic state pension is paid to those who fully or partially satisfy the contribution conditions for a category A or category B pension.
4. The full basic state pension as at September 2005 was £82.05 per week.
5. Local authorities are assigned by matching postcodes against the relevant Office for National Statistics postcode directory.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Gender Equality

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what his policy is towards the proposed establishment of a European Institute for Gender Equality. [68572]

Meg Munn: I have been asked to reply.

It is important that the institute offers value for money, that it does not duplicate existing bodies and that it adds value to ensure that it will be as efficient and effective as possible. We strongly believe that the new institute must work together with the Fundamental Rights Agency rather than seek to replicate it, and in doing so aim to be budget-neutral.

TV Licences

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he had with the BBC prior to its decision to discontinue the Post Office contract to supply TV licences. [70922]

Jim Fitzpatrick: None. The decision to discontinue the Post Office contract to supply TV licences was a commercial one made by the BBC, following a competitive tender exercise.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the impact on post offices of the decision to end the contract for post offices to supply TV licences. [71174]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The supply of TV Licences through post offices was governed by a commercial contract between Post Office Ltd. and the BBC. The impact of the decision not to renew the contract is an operational matter for the company. I have asked Alan Cook, the Managing Director of Post Office Ltd, to reply direct to the hon. Member.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Arts Council

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how long each member of the Arts Council of Northern Ireland has been in post. [71051]

Maria Eagle: All of the Arts Council members have been in post since July 2003 with the exception of Mr. Martin Bradley who has served as a member since 1996. Mr. Bradley was subsequently appointed vice-chair to the Council in July 2003 through open competition.

Child Poverty

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many children in Northern Ireland were living in poverty in (a) 1995 and (b) 2005. [69183]

Mr. Hanson: Defining poverty as households whose income is less than 60 per cent. of the median household income, the reports on households below average income in Northern Ireland indicate that there were 101,000 children in poverty in 2004-05 compared with 108,000 in 2003-04 and 113,000 in 2002-03, the only years for which data is available. Copies of these reports will be placed in the House of Commons Library.

The Government are committed to eradicating child poverty throughout the UK by 2020. In line with this, we have set targets to reduce by half in Northern Ireland the number of children living in poverty between 1998-99 and 2010-11 on the way to eradicating child poverty by 2020.

To that end, Government target significant resources at tackling child poverty in Northern Ireland. For example, working tax credit and child tax credit both provide financial assistance for working families on low incomes. In addition, working tax credits also provide help for child care benefiting around 11,000 families with an average of around £58 per week.

In addition, the Government are placing significant emphasis on initiatives that focus on the early years of life, such as Sure Start and Book Start and the Pre-School Education Expansion programme. Building on these initiatives, the Northern Ireland Priorities and Budget 2006-08, launched on 14 December 2005, established two new ring-fenced priority funding packages—the Children and Young People and Skills and Science Funds.

The Children and Young People's Fund announced in March 2006 and the Skills and Science Fund announced in February 2006 and worth around £100 million and £35 million respectively over the next two years, will play an important role in giving children the best start in life and tackling child poverty.

Civic Forum

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the total cost was of the Northern Ireland Civic Forum in each year since it was created. [69227]

Mr. Hanson: The total cost of the Northern Ireland Civic Forum in each year since it was created is as follows:

	Cost (£)
2000-01	145,000
2001-02	450,000
2002-03	328,000
2003-04	128,000
2004-05	1,000

Expenditure in 2003-04 and 2004-05 relates to the payment of expenses incurred prior to suspension, though not claimed until afterwards.

A cost is not yet available for the year 2005-06.

Departmental Expenditure

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much was spent on advertising by (a) each department in Northern Ireland and (b) the Northern Ireland Office in each of the last three years. [70460]

Mr. Hanson: The following amounts were spent on advertising in (a) each of the Northern Ireland departments and (b) the Northern Ireland Office, in 2003-04 and 2004-05:

Department	Expenditure (£)
	2003-04	2004-05
Office of the First Minister and Deputy First Minister	324,053	191,800
Agriculture and Rural Development	371,573	371,227
Culture, Arts and Leisure	24,758	11,517
Education	80,266	73,137
Employment and Learning	149,210	498,570
Enterprise, Trade and Investment	154,656	88,420
Environment	977,821	280,789
Finance and Personnel	298,260	347,494
Health, Social Services and Public Safety	355,141	1,333,024
Regional Development	24,282	22,364
Social Development	107,793	2,919
Totals	2,867,813	3,221,261
Northern Ireland Office	192,978	279,697
Grand Totals	3,060,791	3,500,958

These figures are compiled using the total media spend for all forms of advertising.

The figures requested for the remaining year have not yet been completed and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whom is conducting the recently announced review of senior Northern Ireland civil servants' travelling expenses; what the terms of reference of the review are; what stage the review has reached; what discussions the review team have had with senior civil servants as part of the review. [67504]

Mr. Hanson: I am not aware of any recently announced review of senior civil servants' travelling expenses.

The Department of Finance and Personnel has been conducting a routine policy review of the Travel and Subsistence policy for all NI civil servants in the 11 Departments, as set out in the Travel and Subsistence Part of the Northern Ireland Civil Service Staff handbook, with the following terms of reference:

"to examine the existing regulations and make recommendations for improvements in the Staff Handbook to ensure a consistency of approach by Departments. The review will also consider the various existing mileage, subsistence and removal rate's and determine where there is a need to update these."

Following consultation with the 11 NI Government Departments each of the four chapters of the Travel and Subsistence Part of the NICS Staff Handbook have now been re-drafted and, in accordance with normal industrial relations practice, will be issued to the civil service unions for consultation in the near future. There have been no discussions with senior civil servants as part of the review.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people have been medically retired in (a) each department in Northern Ireland and (b) the Northern Ireland Office in each of the last five years. [68007]

Mr. Hanson: The following table details the number of staff medically retired by employing departments in Northern Ireland in each of the last five financial years.

Information on Agencies sponsored by Departments is included with their Department unless separately identified.

Figures relating to the Northern Ireland Office include both the members of the Northern Ireland Civil Service and Home Civil Servants working in that Department.

Global Point Newtownabbey

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects to announce commencement of work on Global Point Newtownabbey. [71312]

Maria Eagle: The announcement of commencement of work at Global Point is dependent on the findings of the Public Inquiry into the draft Belfast Metropolitan Area Plan (BMAP). The Plan is a material consideration in determining current planning applications for Global Point. No decision has yet been reached in respect of the proposals.

The Department of the Environment has formally written to the Planning Appeals Commission (PAC) requesting a Public Inquiry into BMAP. Following acceptance of the request the organisational arrangements for the Public Inquiry will become the responsibility of the PAC.

Intertrade Ireland

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to the answer of 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 489W, on Intertrade Ireland, what affirmative action measures have been approved by Intertrade Ireland. [67136]

Maria Eagle: Affirmative action measures, suggested by the Equality Commission and approved and adopted by Intertrade Ireland are (i) the placement of job advertisements in newspapers read by the Protestant community, (ii) the inclusion of a statement in job advertisements specifically welcoming applications from that community and (iii) the circulation of job vacancies throughout Job Clubs and community organisations.

Irish Hare

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for North Down of 27 January 2006 on the protection of the Irish hare. [68550]

David Cairns: I am advised by the Department of the Environment that, unfortunately, it has no record of receiving the letter to which the hon. Member refers. However, if the hon. Member provides a copy of her letter, the Department will respond to the issues she wishes to raise.

Male Health

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many clinics and other healthcare providers in Northern Ireland promote male health and early detection of health problems particularly encountered by men. [70918]

Paul Goggins: Information is not available in the form requested. However, health care providers promote male health in a number of ways, for example some GPs run "Well Men" clinics, which cover general health issues including male cancers such as testicular and prostate. Other examples include holistic clinics at farmers markets, special awareness days aimed at men and men's health evenings where male-specific health issues are covered.

Mixed Sex Wards

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which hospitals in Northern Ireland operated mixed sex wards in March (a) 2000 and (b) 2005. [70424]

Paul Goggins: The following table shows which hospitals in Northern Ireland operated mixed sex wards in (a) March 2000 and (b) March 2005.

Trust/hospital	Did the hospital operate mixed sex wards in: (a) March 2000	(b) March 2005
Craigavon Area
Craigavon Area	Yes	Yes
Lurgan	Yes	Yes

Health and Social Services Trusts

Many trusts stated that where a mixed sex ward was in operation, within such a ward, patients were cared for in single sex bays. Bays would only be mixed sex in exceptional circumstances such as intensive care unit/high dependency unit beds or to allow a patient to be admitted to a ward rather than wait on a trolley in accident and emergency. In such cases, patients would be moved to a suitable bed as soon as practically possible.

Physiotherapists

Dr. Alasdair McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many newly-qualified physiotherapy graduates have been employed in each of the health board areas as junior physiotherapists in each of the last five years. [70945]

Paul Goggins: The information requested is not available.

Not all trusts were able to separately identify newly-qualified junior physiotherapist appointments from other appointments to this grade. The number of junior physiotherapists joining trusts within each health board area in each of the last five years, including some staff who will not have been newly-qualified, is detailed in the following table.

2. The figures include both permanent and temporary appointments.

Planning

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many planning applications were received by the divisional planning office of each borough and district council in Northern Ireland in (a) the month preceding 16 March and (b) each of the preceding three months. [71324]

David Cairns: The following table details the total number of planning applications received by the Planning Service for each Northern Ireland borough and district council area for each month between November 2005 and February 2006.

Roe Valley and Sperrins

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what publicly-funded modernised facilities are available for those using travelling caravans and campers to holiday in the Roe Valley and Sperrins. [69266]

Maria Eagle: The Northern Ireland Tourist Board (NITB) has provided financial assistance to two sites with facilities for touring caravans and campers in the Roe Valley and Sperrins areas, namely Benone Camping and Caravanning Tourist complex and the Six Towns Cross Community Group's Touring Caravan and Camping site in Draperstown.

School Building Programme

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the reasons are for the delay in the proposed building work at St. Joseph's high school, Crossmaglen; and when he expects work (a) to commence and (b) to be completed. [70531]

Maria Eagle: A feasibility study for a major capital scheme at St. Joseph's high school, Crossmaglen was submitted to the Department of Education by the school's Design Team in March 2006 and is currently under consideration. The feasibility study informs the Economic Appraisal which will be completed by the Department. St. Joseph's High School will not be in a position to compete for capital funding until the Economic Appraisal process is completed and the next phase of capital investment is being announced. No time scales have been set for this. Separate minor works to address security issues at the school are being addressed urgently and work is in progress to replace two mobile classrooms and upgrade existing sports facilities.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which schools are affected by the backlog in the school building programme; how many of these are involved in providing partnership initiative funding initiatives; and what steps he is taking to eliminate the backlog. [70558]

Maria Eagle: Over recent years, the funding made available by Government to the Department of Education for the schools estate has increased substantially. The Department, in conjunction with its education partners, has 146 major capital schemes under development. The Department is using both conventional and public-private partnership (PPP) procurement routes to deliver those projects. With such a high volume of projects in planning, delays have been encountered in some projects, both under conventional and PPP procurement, due to site issues, uncertainty over long-term enrolments and advancing policy in the area of PPP procurement. The Department is currently working with school authorities to expedite progress and overcome the delays experienced.

Details of those projects that have been delayed, together with their procurement route and the reason for delay, are shown on the following tables.

Details of conventional capital projects that have been delayed

Project	Announced	Reason for delay
St. Clares/St. Colman's Primary Schools, Newry	2000	Problems with acquiring a suitable site and issues with Roads Service, together with a review and reduction of the long-term enrolment (LTE) figure have caused delays in the project.
St. Eugene's Primary School, Londonderry	2002	Difficulty in finding a suitable site to decant to while extension/ refurbishment works are ongoing has caused delay.
Drumragh Integrated College, Omagh	2002	Problems in satisfying the Planning Service and Roads Service requirements has resulted in the need to purchase third party land to provide acceptable site lines. This has caused delay in progressing the scheme.
East Lisburn Primary Schools	2003	Site acquisition and Planning Service/Roads Service issues have caused delay.
Suffolk Primary School, Belfast	2003	The initial plans for the new school were to an incorrect specification. The enrolments at the school have fallen and as a result the requirements of the scheme have to be reviewed.
St. Teresa's Primary School, Lurgan	2003	Difficulties in acquiring a site have caused delay.
St. Joseph's Primary School, Newry	2003	Planning has been suspended while the enrolment position is reviewed.
St. Patrick's Primary School, Saul	2003	Difficulty in obtaining Planning Office and Roads Service approval.
Holy Family Primary School, Magherafelt	2003	Issues relating to the site and appropriate positioning of school on site have caused delay.

Details of PPP projects that have been delayed

Project	Announced	Reason for delay
Holy Cross College, Strabane	2001	The need to review and agree an appropriate long-term enrolment (LTE) caused delay. Further delay was caused while a decision on the treatment of ancillary services (such as cleaning) was awaited. The Secretary of State has now decided that cleaning services should be excluded from the contract and remain with the public sector. The Department is currently considering representation from the Trustees concerning the removal of cleaning from the contract.
Bangor Academy and Sixth Form College	2001	The need to review and agree an appropriate LTE caused delay. Further delay was caused while a decision on the treatment of ancillary services (such as cleaning) was awaited. The Secretary of State has now decided that cleaning services should be excluded from the contract and remain with the public sector. The Department is currently considering representations from school authorities concerning the removal of cleaning from the contract.
Derry Diocesan PPP Project	2001	Problems in acquiring a suitable site for one of the schools, and achieving agreement on the use of that site, caused delay. This has now been overcome and the project is at Invitation to Negotiate' stage.
Coleraine College	2001	The removal of schools from the project due to falling enrolments and the need for the North Eastern education and library board to examine the overall requirement for secondary provision in the area has caused delay.

Details of PPP projects that have been delayed

Project	Announced	Reason for delay
Lagan College/Tor Bank Special School	2002	Problems in agreeing a lease with the National Trust (Lagan College occupies a NT site) on the use and maintenance of the site have caused delay. These problems have now been overcome and the project is at Invitation to Negotiate[1] stage.
Down and Connor/De La Salle PPP Project	2002	Change in the scope of the project for two of the schools involved from extension refurbishment to new build has caused delay. This has now been resolved and the project is at Invitation to Negotiate[1] stage.
Belfast Strategic Partnering Project	2003	A change in the scope of the project and the need to redraft project documentation to take account of new procurement methods has caused delay. This project is now at Invitation to Negotiate[1] stage.

[1] Invitation to Negotiate is a stage in the procurement procedure under which the client invites a selected number of tenderers to negotiate the terms of a public-private partnerships contract.

Section 106 Agreements

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what form of (a) planning gain and (b) Section 106 Agreements operate in Northern Ireland. [70741]

David Cairns: There are no specific planning gain provisions in place in Northern Ireland. However, Article 40 of the Planning (Northern Ireland) Order 1991 (as substituted by the Planning (Amendment) (Northern Ireland) Order 2003) provides similar powers to Section 106 of the Town and Country Planning Act 1990, which applies to England and Wales. Article 40 enables the Department to enter into planning agreements with any person who has an estate in land for the purposes of:-

"facilitating, or restricting the development or use of land in any specified way; requiring specified operations or activities to be carried out in, on, under or over land; requiring the land to be used in any specific way (either indefinitely or for a period as may be specified); or requiring a sum or sums to be paid to the Department on a specified day, date or periodically."

Special Advisers

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 25 April 2006, Official Report, column 1043W, on special advisers, what the grade is of each of the two special advisers employed as temporary civil servants within his Department; and whether the posts they hold were advertised. [71375]

Mr. Hain: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the Prime Minister's written ministerial statement on special advisers of Thursday 21 July 2005. This statement gave details of the pay bands for the special advisers. These appointments were carried out in accordance with the ministerial code.

Temporary Classrooms

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in the East Londonderry constituency are using temporary classroom accommodation. [70439]

Maria Eagle: As at 31 March 2006 there were 31 primary and seven secondary schools in the East Londonderry constituency using temporary accommodation.

Tor Bank Special School

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the summer scheme at Tor Bank Special School in Dundonald will take place in 2006. [70433]

Maria Eagle: The South-Eastern Education and Library Board, at a meeting in March 2006, agreed that the 2006 Summer Activity Scheme for pupils with severe learning difficulties would proceed. The Board, however, having agreed its budget for 2006-07, is now considering a series of proposals to live within that budget. One of the proposals is to stop the Summer Activity Scheme.

The Board's Education Committee will reconvene on 22 May 2006 to consider the proposals. Board officers are currently engaged in making provisional arrangements for the scheme to run this summer, subject to the decision of the Board.

Unspent Budget

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much of the budget for (a) each department in Northern Ireland and (b) the Northern Ireland Office remained unspent in the 2005-06 financial year. [70458]

Mr. Hanson: Details of expenditure for 2005-06 relating to (a) Northern Ireland departments and (b) the Northern Ireland Office are not yet available. Information on performance against budget will be available in June of this year once provisional outturn data has been received and analysed. This information will be placed in the Library when available.

Valuation and Lands Agency

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will place in the Library a copy of the revised "Health and Safety in the Field" policy document produced by the Valuation and Lands Agency. [70592]

Mr. Hanson: The Valuation and Lands Agency has recently revised its "Health and Safety in the Field" policy. This document was placed in the Library in early May 2006, in response to an earlier PQ.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the Valuation and Lands Agency's domestic rates Automated Valuation Model uses (a) a location factor or factors in its multiple regression analysis and (b) geo-spatial statistical analysis in Computer Assisted Mass Appraisal. [70593]

Mr. Hanson: The answer to both (a) and (b) is "yes". The location factor is derived from analysis of sales using the multiple regression technique and is calibrated at neighbourhood level.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the Valuation and Lands Agency's domestic rates Automated Valuation Model (a) uses and (b) holds data on (i) local authority ward boundaries and (ii) numbers of criminal offences committed in each area. [70594]

Mr. Hanson: The Automated Valuation Model used by VLA is a CAMA (Computer Assisted Mass Appraisal) system comprising SPSS/Spatialest/GIS. The Agency's Automated Valuation Model uses and holds data on local authority ward boundaries. It does not use and hold data on numbers of criminal convictions committed in each area.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the conferences to be held oversees which Valuation and Lands Agency staff will attend in the next 12 months. [70596]

Mr. Hanson: Valuation and Lands Agency (VLA) staff will attend the following conferences overseas during the next 12 months:

International Association of Assessing Officers (IAAO) Conference in USA.

The IAAO is the lead professional organisation for those involved in property tax assessment. The Chief Executive of VLA has agreed to speak at this conference.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Alcohol-free Zones

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to encourage local authorities to extend alcohol-free zones. [66465]

Mr. Byrne: The Government are working with local authorities to reduce alcohol-fuelled violence by sharing good practice. Designated Public Place Orders (DPPOs) have been part of this good practice. The benefits of a DPPO have been highlighted in publications such as "Lessons Learned from the summer 2004 Alcohol Misuse Enforcement Campaign". They continue to be highlighted both on the "Together Tackling Antisocial behaviour" website and on the DPPO website. To date around 170 authorities have adopted the power to introduce a DPPO, with around 360 orders published.

Animal Rights Terrorists

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he is taking (a) in co-operation with the Department for Trade and Industry and (b) otherwise to detain animal rights terrorists who use shareholder registers to threaten individual shareholders. [70870]

Mr. Coaker: We have a clear cross-departmental strategy working with DTI and other Government Departments to put an end to the animal rights extremist threat and protect those targeted by it. We have introduced tough new legislation, supported the appointment of a dedicated senior police officer as national co-ordinator for domestic extremism and provided additional resources for the police to tackle the problem nationally. These steps have led to an increase in arrests, a reduction in incidents and a number of successful prosecutions which have seen leading activists receive lengthy custodial sentences.

We are looking at what more can be done. The Company Law Reform Bill already proposes protection for members by providing that companies do not have to release details of their registers of shareholders if a court is satisfied that the information requested is not being sought for a proper purpose. Following recent attempts to defraud or intimidate members of a number of leading companies, we are looking at what measures can be taken to strengthen shareholder protection further in the Bill. We also intend to consult on how to stop malicious applicants from getting members' details through Companies House rather than from the company.

Antisocial Behaviour

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he plans to take to publicise action taken to tackle antisocial behaviour to members of the public in Kingston-upon-Hull, North. [69786]

Mr. Byrne: Kingston-upon-Hull is one of the Government's Action Areas, committed to tackling antisocial behaviour. The council, Humberside police and their partners have worked together to promote initiatives to tackle alcohol-related disorder, nuisance vehicles and to promote It's Your Call, a dedicated phone line for the community to report and receive feedback on action taken to prevent and tackle antisocial behaviour.

The Respect Action Plan sets out our intention to do more to empower local communities to challenge and tackle antisocial behaviour by making services more responsive and accountable to local priorities. We will ensure effective dialogue between local people and services by introducing regular and systematic "face the people" briefing sessions, involving senior representation from the police and local authorities. The Community Call for Action will make it easier for the public to hold services to account where they fail to deliver.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many breaches of antisocial behaviour orders came to court in 2005-06; and what the average time was between the offence being committed and a court hearing taking place. [69762]

Mr. Byrne: Antisocial behaviour order (ASBO) breach data only cover breach proceedings where there has been a conviction and are currently available from 1 June 2000 to 31 December 2003 for ASBOs issued since 1 June 2000. Information is not available on the amount of time taken from an offence being committed to a conviction for breach of ASBO.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received on the use of antisocial behaviour orders to tackle the abuse of shopworkers; and if he will make a statement. [71045]

Mr. Byrne: We have not received any such representations. However antisocial behaviour orders have been used in a number of local areas to combat antisocial behaviour in retail environments.

Workers serving the public have the right to work without fear of being attacked or harassed. The Respect Action Plan sets out programmes to promote a two-way respect between workers serving the public and the individuals and communities to whom they provide a service.

Arson

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many incidents of arson there have been in Suffolk in each year since 1997. [69821]

Mr. Byrne: The requested information is given in the table.

Recorded offences of arson in Suffolk police force area

	Number of arson offences
1997	236
1998-99[1]	238
1999-2000	372
2000-01	542
2001-02	696
2002-03[2]	551
2003-04	656
2004-05	571

[1] Numbers affected by changes in the counting rules and expanded coverage of recorded crime.
[2] Numbers affected by the introduction of the National Crime Recording Standards which came into effect in 2002-03.
Note:
Data not comparable with earlier years.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers have been refused National Asylum Support Service support because their illness was not deemed to prevent travel in the last 12 months; and how many of these (a) were at risk from a recurrence of tuberculosis, (b) were pregnant, (c) had children under a year old and (d) had a mental health condition. [68573]

John Reid: If an asylum seeker is offered accommodation from the National Asylum Support Service (NASS) and fails to travel to the allocated accommodation claiming medical grounds as a reason for failing to travel, NASS caseworkers take advice from the NASS medical adviser, a practising GP, about whether the ailment would have prevented the applicant from travelling. They will take account of this advice alongside any other circumstance that may have prevented the applicant from travelling on that occasion, before deciding whether the explanation was reasonable.

When NASS considers that the applicant's explanation for not travelling is unsatisfactory, caseworkers issue a warning letter and rearrange travel. When the applicant fails to travel on a subsequent occasion, without a valid reason, their support is suspended until they agree to travel to their allotted accommodation. At no stage is support permanently withdrawn.

NASS does not keep records of the numbers of supported asylum seekers who fail to travel citing medical grounds. It does not refuse to support asylum seekers who fail to travel to allocated accommodation, but keeps it available to them at the allocated accommodation. This approach is set out in NASS's published Policy Bulletin 17 which can be downloaded from the Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND) Home Office website.

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many and what percentage of asylum seekers have (a) failed to return voluntarily and (b) not been removed within six months of the final refusal of their applications in the last 12 months. [68574]

John Reid: No accurate management information exists on the numbers of applicants who have failed to return voluntarily. Information on asylum seekers is published every quarter.

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many and what percentage of failed asylum seekers refused to make a declaration agreeing to co-operate in their voluntary return in the last 12 months. [68575]

John Reid: We do not centrally record this information.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many failed asylum seekers have been returned to (a) Eritrea, (b) Ethiopia, (c) Sudan, (d) Democratic Republic of Congo, (e) Cote d'Ivoire, (f) Chad, (g) Somalia, (h) Liberia, (i) Central African Republic, (j) Burundi, (k) Sierra Leone, (l) Uganda, (m) Nigeria and (n) Angola in the last 12 months; how many of these returns were (A) voluntary and (B) enforced; and what mechanisms are in place to monitor the welfare of returned asylum seekers. [70132]

Mr. McNulty: The accompanying tables show the number of returns to the specified countries during 2005, broken down by voluntary and enforced removals, and by principal and dependant applicants.

We do not routinely monitor the return of individual failed asylum seekers and others who are removed from the UK. The asylum decision-making and independent appeals processes exist to ensure that those who are at risk of persecution or serious mistreatment in their country of origin will not be removed there. However, if specific allegations are made that any returnee has experienced ill treatment on return from the UK, these will be followed up through the Foreign and Commonwealth Office as a matter of urgency.

Published statistics on immigration and asylum are available on the Home Office's Research and Development and Statistics website at: http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html

Bruche Police Training Centre

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he has taken to ensure that Centrex co-operates with (a) the local authority and (b) local residents when planning the future use of the site of the Bruche police training centre. [64745]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 24 April 2006]: The Bruche site will continue to be used as a police training centre up until 26 May this year. The situation remains that there are no options as to future use on which to consult locally yet. Any such options will be determined largely by who takes an interest in purchasing the site when it is put onto the market. The Home Office continues to work closely with Centrex on that process and, once options begin to emerge, we will be in a position to engage with local people over the future use of the site. The Centrex estates and facilities management team, along with staff working on behalf of my Department, have already begun preliminary discussions with local planning authorities around all three Centrex sites that are closing and will be focusing more effort on these discussions over the coming months.

Any change in the use of sites will, of course, require planning permission and the local authority will then need to involve residents in consultation over their decisions on any applications that are made. We welcome the involvement, in all such discussions and consultations, of members representing those communities that are affected by the closure of Centrex sites.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the answer of 2 May 2006, Official Report, column 1405W, on Bruche police training centre, what discussions his Department has had with Centrex on the future use of the Bruche police training centre; when these discussions took place; and whether any companies have expressed an interest in purchasing the site. [68711]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 8 May 2006]: As the sponsor department for Centrex, dialogue is, of course, ongoing between the Home Office and Centrex in relation to the disposal of the police training centre at Bruche. However, as the property has not yet been put on the market, no clear options as to future use have yet emerged for discussion.

Cannabis

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will reclassify the drug cannabis by moving it from Class C to Class B. [68950]

Mr. Coaker: No, cannabis will not be reclassified from a Class C to a Class B drug. On 19 January, the former Home Secretary announced in Parliament that he had considered very carefully the advice which he had asked for from the Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs and on behalf of the Government had accepted the council's recommendation to keep the current classification of cannabis as a Class C drug under the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971.

Capita Group

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much business his Department has placed with (a) Capita Group plc and (b) its subsidiaries in each of the last five years; what the total value is of outstanding contracts placed with Capita Group plc and its subsidiaries by his Department; for which current tenders issued by his Department (i) Capita Group plc and (ii) its subsidiaries have been invited to bid; and whether (A) Capita Group plc and (B) its subsidiaries have seconded staff (1) temporarily and (2) on a longer-term basis to (X) his Department and (Y) its agencies. [61073]

Mr. Byrne: The information on the total value of contracts held with the Capita group which is available for the last three financial years is as follows:

2003-04	35,651,040
2004-05	60,386,458
2005-06	47,758,223

Information on 2001-02 and 2002-03 is not held centrally and to obtain this information would incur disproportionate cost.

Information on contracts and participation in procurements by Capita and its subsidiaries is not held centrally and to obtain information on the value of outstanding contracts and current tenders would incur disproportionate cost.

Information on seconded staff is not held centrally and to obtain this information would incur disproportionate cost.

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the value of contracts held by his Department with (a) Capita plc and (b) its subsidiaries was in the last three financial years. [61462]

Mr. Byrne: The information on the total value of contracts held with the Capita group in the last three financial years is in the following table.

2003-04	35,651,040
2004-05	60,386,458
2005-06	47,758,223

Information on the individual value of contracts held by the Department with Capita plc and/or its subsidiaries is not held centrally and could not be obtained without incurring disproportionate cost.

Similarly where a contract relates to spend in more than one year, we are unable to distinguish the proportion of spend applicable to each of the three years requested.

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many contracts his Department holds with (a) Capita plc and (b) its subsidiaries which still have a potential duration of five years or more. [61464]

Mr. Byrne: This information is not held centrally and could not be obtained without incurring disproportionate cost.

Careless Driving

Mr. Touhig: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent discussions he has had with (a) police forces and (b) campaign organisations on sentencing of those convicted of careless driving following incidents in which a person died. [71371]

Mr. Sutcliffe: In 2005, the Government published a consultation exercise entitled "A Review of Road Traffic Offences involving Bad Driving" which examined this issue. During that consultation, a number of interested parties including the police, judges and road safety groups were consulted. A full summary of responses is available in the Library. Proposals arising out of the consultation have been included in the current Road Safety Bill. These include a new offence of causing death by careless driving with a maximum penalty of five years' imprisonment.

Chip and PIN

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance he has given to retailers on the protection from fraud of customers using Chip and PIN technology; and if he will make a statement. [70469]

Mr. Coaker [holding answer for 15 May 2006]: Chip and PIN is a finance and retail industry initiative introduced to help tackle counterfeit, lost and stolen card fraud. The Government have actively supported the introduction of Chip and PIN. I have not issued guidance to retailers on protection from fraud of customers using Chip and PIN technology but the banking industry makes available a large amount of fraud prevention advice to meet the needs of both merchants and cardholders.

The impact of Chip and PIN has been seen in industry figures[1] published in March which show that in 2005 counterfeit fraud fell by 25 per cent. and fraud on lost or stolen cards fell by 22 per cent. compared to 2004.

[1] APACS

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what reports he has regarding the incidence of Chip and PIN fraud; what steps he is taking to tackle such fraud; and if he will make a statement. [71351]

Mr. Coaker: Chip and PIN is a finance and retail industry initiative introduced to help tackle counterfeit and lost and stolen card fraud. The Government have actively supported the introduction of Chip and PIN.

We understand from APACS (the UK payment industry) that despite recent reports of fraud at a Chip and PIN outlet this is likely to be an isolated episode and does not signify a systematic failure of the Chip and PIN system.

The incident is being investigated by the Dedicated Cheque and Plastic Crime Unit, a specialist police unit which investigates cheque and card fraud where there is a link to organised crime. Government money helped establish the unit, which is now fully funded by the banking industry and an excellent example of partnership working to tackle crime.

Community Support Officers

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police community support officers have been introduced in (a) Kingston-upon-Hull North constituency, (b) the Kingston-upon-Hull division and (c) Humberside since the scheme began; and what assessment he has made of the impact of community support officers on crime and antisocial behaviour. [69769]

Mr. Byrne: Information on the number of police community support officers (PCSOs) at basic command unit level is collected annually. At the end of June 2005 the Kingston-upon-Hull division had six police community support officers and the Humberside police had 20 PCSOs on 30 September 2005. The deployment of PCSOs within the Hull division is a matter for the divisional commander. Data is not collected below divisional level.

"A National Evaluation of Community Support Officers"—Research Study No. 297, was published on 25 January. A copy of the report has been placed in the Library. PCSOs have been well received by the public. They are helping to restore respect in local communities by providing reassurance and tackling antisocial behaviour and low level crime.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many community support officers there are in the Avon and Somerset police force. [70235]

Mr. Byrne: On 30 September 2005, there were 146 police community support officers (full-time equivalents) in Avon and Somerset.

Mr. Touhig: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many community support officers have been employed in (a) Gwent, (b) South Wales, (c) Dyfed Powys and (d) North Wales police forces since 1997. [71369]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested on community support officers is only available from March 2003 onwards and is provided in the following table.

The number of community support officers (fte)[1] employed in each of the Welsh police force areas in 2003, 2004 and 2005

	March 2003	March 2004	March 2005	September 2005
Dyfed Powys	0	5	25	24
Gwent	30	45	77	81
North Wales	0	0	46	61
South Wales	0	59	107	116

[1] This table contains full-time equivalent (including those staff on career breaks or maternity/peternity leave) figures that have been rounded to the nearest whole number. Because of rounding there may be apparent discrepancy between totals and the sums of constituent items in this and other similar tables.

Correspondence

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the letter of 21 February 2006 from the hon. Member for Walsall, North regarding a constituent, HO ref: B1077614 and B1057074 and M13862/5. [68789]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 8 May 2006]: I wrote to my hon. Friend the Member for Walsall, North on 10 May 2006

Criminal Records Bureau

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people applying for positions within residential care and nursing homes in (a) Kingston upon Hull, North, (b) the Humberside police area and (c) England are awaiting clearance from the Criminal Records Bureau. [69772]

Mr. Byrne: The information sought by my hon. Friend is not available. The Criminal Records Bureau (CRB) is unable to provide information on Disclosure applications based on specific employment sectors and geographical areas.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department to how many people the Criminal Records Bureau has not given clearance since it was established. [69952]

Joan Ryan: The Criminal Records Bureau (CRB) does not give clearance to work in a particular job or occupation. Neither does it make the decision on the suitability of applicants to undertake work following the issue of disclosures; this is solely a matter for the employer or licensing authority.

The latest available figure shows that the CRB has issued 8,990,597 disclosures since its launch in 2002 and up to 31 March 2006.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether an individual (a) with multiple employment with children or vulnerable adults and (b) who engages with children or vulnerable adults in a number of different vocational fields is required to undergo more than one Criminal Records Bureau check. [70262]

Joan Ryan: The disclosure process may include a check against section 142 of the Education Act 2002, the Protection of Children Act and Protection of Vulnerable Adults (PoCA and PoVA) lists. Legislation governing these lists, as set by the Department for Education and Skills and Department of Health, requires fresh checks of the lists for certain positions involving work with children and vulnerable adults, regardless of any previous existing checks. In such circumstances, employers must obtain a new CRB check regardless of any existing disclosures that an individual may hold.

The overriding consideration must always be the safety of those whom the disclosure service is designed to protect and the employer, using a full range of pre-recruitment checks, is ultimately best placed to assess whether a new disclosure is required for a specific position, bearing in mind their legal and other responsibilities.

Departmental Child Care Facilities

Mr. Kemp: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many nursery and crèche places are provided for people working in his Department; what charges are made for the provision of such services; and what other facilities are provided for the children of employees of his Department. [67361]

Mr. Byrne: The Home Office provides childcare support as part of a range of worklife balance benefits for staff and in order to promote diversity and equality of opportunity for all staff.

As part of the provision, a limited number of subsidised workplace nursery and play scheme places are provided for staff in London, Croydon and on Merseyside. The following table sets out the nurseries and play schemes used, the cost to staff and the total annual cost of the subsidy provided by the Department.

In addition the Home Office runs a Childcare Voucher salary sacrifice scheme. The scheme was introduced in June 2005 for Home Office staff with pilots being run for staff in the Prison Service and the Immigration and Nationality Directorate. The scheme provides more choice and flexibility for staff than the existing workplace nursery and playscheme provision and with the roll out to all Home Office, IND and Prison Service staff completed in April 2006 it provides more equitable support for staff in all areas of the Department.

Currently, 102 Home Office staff and 173 Prison Service staff use the salary sacrifice scheme.

Identity and Passport Service staff have access to a Childcare Voucher salary plus scheme, which provides them with vouchers to the value of £20 per week for pre- school children age 0-4 and £15 per week for after school and holiday care for children aged 5-12. Additionally-staff are able to use the salary sacrifice scheme to enable them to obtain the maximum benefit from the tax and national insurance exemption.

Some 130 IPS staff currently benefit from the salary plus scheme, with 21 staff using the salary sacrifice scheme. The total cost to IPS in the last financial year was £110,500.

Workplace nursery places	Location	Number of places available	Number of places in use	Cost to staff of a full time nursery place (£)	Cost to the Home Office—total annual subsidy[1] (£)
Buffer Bear Network	Central London and the South East	32	18	123	67,014
Sunbeam Nursery	Croydon	71	56	89.00	103,000

Holiday playschemes	Location	Number of places available	Number of places in use (days)	Cost to staff of a place (daily rate) (£)	Cost to the Home Office—total annual subsidy (£)
Westminster Holiday Playscheme	Central London		[2]463	15	6,691
Happy Hours Playscheme	Crosby		[2]15	9.25	139

Holiday playschemes	Location	Number of places available	Number of places in use (days)	Cost to staff of a place (daily rate) (£)	Cost to the Home Office—total annual subsidy (£)
Sunbeam Playscheme	Croydon		[2]4,060	10.00	23,000

[1] The value of the subsidy varies as it depends on the age of the child and the location of the nursery. The total cost of the annual subsidy for all the places used in the financial year 2005-06 has therefore been provided.
[2] As use of the playscheme varies the total number of days used by staff in the financial year 2005-06 has been provided.

Departmental Staff

Ms Katy Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) women and (b) men are employed in the Department; what the average pay was for (i) women and (ii) men in the Department in (A) 1997 and (B) 2006; what women's average pay is as a percentage of men's average pay; and how many (1) women and (2) men the Department employed in each of the last five years, broken down by grade. [67776]

Mr. Byrne: The data requested is too detailed to be provided in answer format so I have arranged for the information to be placed in the Library.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many full-time equivalent staff are being transferred from his Department to the new Department for Communities and Local Government. [70715]

Mr. Byrne: The number of full-time equivalent staff being transferred is being negotiated between the two Departments concerned. Machinery of Government changes on this scale are a serious matter and require careful planning. Once the negotiations are complete and the figures known, I will place the information requested into the House Library.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of his private office staff are (a) male, (b) female and (c) disabled. [68970]

Mr. Byrne: The percentage of private office staff that are (a) male, (b) female and (c) disabled are shown in the following Table:

Percentage at 31 March 2006

	Home Office including Immigration and Nationality Directorate (excluding agencies)	HM Prison Service	Identity and Passport Service	Total
(a) Male	46.50	65.82	36	58.20
(b) Female	53.50	34.18	64	41.80
(c) Disabled	2	3.35	2	2.86

Note:
Overall average totals are weighted by size of organisation.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of the staff in his Department are (a) male, (b) female and (c) disabled, broken down by grade. [68971]

Mr. Byrne: The percentage of staff that are (a) male, (b) female, (c) disabled in the Home Office are broken down by grade in the following table.

Percentage at 31 March 2006

	Home Office including Immigration and Nationality Directorate	HM Prison Service	Identity and Passport Service	Total
(a) Male	46.50	65.82	36	58.20
(b) Female	53.50	34.18	64	41.80
(c) Disabled	2	3.35	2	2.86

Note:
Overall average totals are weighted by size of organisation.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the Respect Unit will be transferred from his Department to the new Department for Communities and Local Government. [70714]

Mr. Byrne: The Respect Task Force has a cross-departmental remit which reflects the Government's determination to ensure that all government departments are working effectively to tackle antisocial behaviour and its causes. The Task Force is based at the Home Office and there are no plans to transfer the team to the Department for Communities and Local Government.

Diversity Champion

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the role and responsibilities are of the Home Office Diversity Champion; what the cost to public funds of his activities has been to date; and if he will make a statement. [68764]

Mr. Byrne: The primary role of the Home Office Diversity Champion is to support the Group Executive Board (GEB) to take personal ownership of race and diversity and to demonstrate leadership within their areas of command.

The role of Home Office GEB Diversity Champion is carried out by Derrick Anderson who was appointed as a non-executive director of the Home Office as a local government advisor in 2001 and took on the role of Diversity Champion on a voluntary basis for which no additional remuneration is paid.

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the estimated cost to public funds is of his Department's five-year race and diversity programme; and if he will make a statement. [68765]

Mr. Byrne: The Home Office promotes its equality and diversity agenda in developing policies on its range of public responsibilities and in its treatment of its staff through a five-year race and diversity programme. The annual cost of the team which has responsibility for delivering the programme is approximately £900,000. The programme covers the Home Office group and devolved areas including the Immigration and Nationality Directorate, Her Majesty's Prison Service and UK Passport Service.

DNA

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what criteria were used in deciding to use low copy number DNA analysis in police investigations; and if he will make a statement. [69787]

Joan Ryan: Police forces typically only consider using low copy number DNA in serious crime when other options have been exhausted. Low copy number (LCN) DNA analysis is a specialist DNA service and the decision to use it is purely a police operational matter. In view of the additional complexity of interpretation and cost implications of using LCN DNA analysis, each submission to a laboratory during an investigation will be considered on a case-by-case basis following discussion with the force Scientific Support Unit. Forces are now developing strict evaluation criteria for its use in serious crime.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what safeguards the Government have put in place to ensure that DNA mismatches of people on the National DNA Database who were not present at the crime scene do not occur; and if he will make a statement. [69788]

Joan Ryan: The discriminating power of the 10 marker system for profiling DNA (SGM+) is very high and while the probabilities vary with the features of the particular profile, e.g. if the profile is degraded or only a partial profile, the probability of a "chance" or "adventitious" match with a full SGM+ to SGM+ is generally less than one in a billion. In any event, the Crown Prosecution Service makes it very clear that in every case involving a DNA profile there must also be appropriate supporting evidence before a case can proceed. It follows that any prosecution should be based on a DNA profile and other admissible and credible evidence.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many times crime scene DNA has been matched with the DNA of an innocent passer-by since the introduction of the National DNA Database; and if he will make a statement. [69792]

Joan Ryan: There is no known case of an innocent passer-by being wrongly convicted solely on the basis of their DNA being found at a crime scene. A match between DNA taken from an individual and that from a crime scene is intelligence, indicating that the individual has been present at the scene. The police and Crown Prosecution Service take account of the fact that there may be an innocent explanation for this. Home Office Circular 58/2004 to chief officers states that there should be further supporting evidence, in addition to the match, before someone is charged. This is also reflected in guidance issued by the Association of Chief Police Officers, and additionally the Crown Prosecution Service make it very clear that in every case involving a DNA profile, there must also be appropriate supporting evidence before a case can proceed.

Europol

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received from (a) the Austrian presidency, (b) the European Commission, (c) the European Parliament, (d) Europol and (e) other European partners on the future of Europol; and if he will make a statement. [69448]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 8 May 2006]: I have received no direct representations relating to the future of Europol.

Fireworks

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many penalty notices have been issued in relation to the illegal use of fireworks in (a) Kingston upon Hull, North, and (b) the Humberside police force area since the relevant legislation was introduced. [69776]

Mr. Byrne: Data from the penalty notices for disorder (PND) database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform showing the number of males and females issued with penalty notices for fireworks in Humberside police force area 2004, as well as provisional data for 2005, are provided in the following table.

The provisions for the new offences in the Fireworks Regulations 2004 came into force on 7 August 2004. The offences were added to the PND scheme with effect from 11 October 2004. The offence of throwing fireworks has been included in the scheme from the start.

It is not possible to identify the number of penalty notices issued in Kingston upon Hull, North as the data is broken down by police force area only and is not available at that level of detail.

Number of penalty notices for disorder issued for fireworks offences, Humberside Police force area, 2004 and 2005 provisional data

	2004	[1]2005
Throwing fireworks	5	5
Breach of fireworks curfew	1	1
Possession of a Category 4 firework	1	1
Possession by under 18 of adult firework	—	3

Forensic Science Service

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many copies of the Forensic Science Service Annual Report and Accounts 2004-05 were distributed by his Department; if he will list those who were sent copies; at what cost; how many copies were printed; at what cost; who was awarded the contract to undertake the printing; how (a) hon. Members, (b) members of the House of Lords and (c) members of the public may obtain a copy; at what cost; and if he will make a statement. [71017]

Joan Ryan: For the year 2004-05, Forensic Science Service Ltd. (FSS) printed 1,000 copies of the Forensic Science Service Annual Report and Accounts. Two hundred and fifty copies were issued to The Stationery Office. Of the remaining copies, an initial quantity of approximately 250 copies were distributed internally to eight laboratory facilities across the FSS. The UK Criminal Justice System Division has sent either hard or soft (cd rom) copies of the annual report to police forces upon request in response to police tenders or other enquiries. Forty copies have also been distributed to non-police customers of FSS Ltd. by the New Business Division.

Other copies have been given out to visitors to the FSS, and at exhibitions and events. There are 150 hard copies in total remaining within the FSS Communications and Business Planning Departments.

The total cost of preparing the Annual Report and Accounts for 2004-05 was £12,570.

Hon. Members, Members of the House of Lords and members of the public may either purchase a hard copy from the Stationery Office or Amazon for £13.50, or alternatively a copy may be downloaded from the website of FSS Ltd., www.forensic.gov.uk .

Home Detention Curfew

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offenders who have been released on Home Detention Curfew since April 2005 were not tagged on the day they were released. [67692]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The number of people released on Home Detention Curfew between 1 April 2005 and 30 April 2006 was 17,843. These statistics are based on information recorded on the central prison IT system on 30 April 2006. Further updates and amendments may be made to records in future resulting in revised figures.

The statistics on the number of cases where the tag was not fitted on the day of release have been provided by the electronic monitoring service providers. A total of 1,244 (7 per cent.) did not have their tag fitted on the day of release.

In the great majority of those cases (1,039, or 5.8 per cent. of the total) this was because the offender was not present at the curfew address or the monitoring company was refused access. A second failed attempt to fit the tag will result in the offender being recalled to prison.

Home Office Responsibilities

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list areas of policy responsibility which have been transferred (a) from the Home Office to other departments and (b) to the Home Office from other departments since 1997. [68904]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 8 May 2006]: The information requested is as follows.

A. Areas of policy responsibility transferred from the Home Office since 1997:

1. Transfer from the Home Secretary to the Lord Chancellor:

(a) the Monarchy

(b) titles

(c) ceremonial matters

(d) the relationship between the administration of any of the Channel Islands or of the Isle of Man and the Crown or a Minister of the Crown

(a) appointing a Conservator under section 12 of the Wimbledon and Putney Commons Act 1871.

Infant LIfe (Preservation) Act 1929

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) males and (b) females were (i) prosecuted and (ii) convicted of an offence under the Infant Life (Preservation) Act 1929 in each year since 1976. [69607]

Mr. Byrne: Data from the Court Proceedings Database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform for the number of males and females (i) prosecuted and (ii) convicted of an offence under the Infant Life (Preservation) Act 1929 in England and Wales for the years 1984 to 2004 can be found in the following table.

Data prior to 1984 is unavailable.

Data for 2005 will be available in the autumn of 2006.

Number of males and females prosecuted at magistrates courts and convicted at all courts, under the Infant Life (Preservation) Act 1929 in England and Wales, 1984 to 2004[1]

Juvenile Offenders

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what estimate he has made of the average weekly cost of a young person on remand (a) in a young offender institution and (b) on a foster remand placement; [70903]

(2) what resources he is making available in the 2006-07 financial year to increase the number of remand foster placements as an alternative to young offender institutions for young people on remand; [70904]

(3) how many remand foster placements are available as an alternative to young offender institutions for young people on remand; [70905]

(4) what steps he is taking to increase the number of remand foster placements; [70908]

(5) what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of remand foster placements as an alternative to young offender institutions for young people on remand. [70950]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 15 May 2006]: Remand fostering in England and Wales is the responsibility of local social services departments and funding is provided through the existing grant to Youth Offending Teams (YOT). Information on the numbers of placements are not held centrally.

There is a summary of a recent evaluation of pre-trial accommodation available on the Youth Justice Board (YJB) website. The Home Office and the YJB are committed to ensuring that there is suitable accommodation for young offenders and those at risk of offending. The YJB have been developing an accommodation strategy for this group and a key part of this will be looking at ensuring that there are no remands to custody as a result of a lack of suitable accommodation. I will ensure that the hon. Member receives a copy of this when it is published.

The average weekly cost of a remand or sentenced placement at a Young Offenders Institution (YOI) is £1,000. This figure is based on the Service Level Agreement between the Prison Service and the YJB.

Mobile Phones (Drivers)

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many fixed penalty notices have been issued for offences involving using a hand-held mobile telephone when driving a motor vehicle in (a) South Wales, (b) Gwent, (c) North Wales and (d) Dyfed Powys police force areas. [67166]

Mr. Byrne: In 2004 the number of fixed penalty notices issued for offences of use of hand-held mobile phones while driving were as follows:

	Number
(a) South Wales	134,743
(b) Gwent	25,228
(c) North Wales	71,678
(d) Dyfed Powys	14,752

The figures have been taken from the annual Home Office publication "Offences relating to motor vehicles, England and Wales Supplementary tables 2004" (latest available). Copies are available from the Library.

Data for 2005 will be available early in 2007.

Motoring Offences

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance he has issued to police forces on their duty to contact the owners of rented properties whose tenants are wanted for moving road traffic offences. [70180]

Mr. Coaker: None. The investigation of offences, including the inquiries made to trace suspected offenders, is an operational matter for individual chief officers of police. Police would generally obtain a driver's address from DVLA's register of vehicle keepers. This does not identify the nature of an address, nor whether it is owned or rented; it has no information on those linked to a vehicle keeper such as a landlord.

National Identity Register

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate the Government have made of the commercial value to the Government of the information stored about individuals in the National Identity Register. [67286]

Joan Ryan: The Government have made clear that commercial organisations will not have access to the information held on the National Identity Register and the Identity Cards Act 2006 does not make provision for such access. Thus, no such valuation has been conducted. The Identity and Passport Service plans to recover the majority of operational costs from fees. This will include the cost of the Identity Verification Service, which will be established under section 12 of the Identity Cards Act and will allow verification of identity by organisations such as banks, with the consent of the individual.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what restrictions the Government plan on the use of the National Identity Registration Number by private sector bodies. [67287]

Joan Ryan: The Government have made clear that the National Identity Registration Number would be a general identifier under the terms of schedule 1, part 2, paragraph 4 of the Data Protection Act 1998, which states:

> "personal data which contain a general identifier falling within a description prescribed by the Secretary of State by order are not to be treated as processed fairly and lawfully unless they are processed in compliance with any conditions so prescribed in relation to general identifiers of that description".

This means that the use of the number by other organisations would have to be specified in regulations. Additionally, before these regulations were tabled, the Secretary of State would be under a duty to consult the Information Commissioner as required by section 67(3) of the Data Protection Act 1998.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who the data controller will be for the National Identity Register. [67288]

Joan Ryan: The Secretary of State will be the data controller for the National Identity Register.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will supply complete answers to parliamentary questions to which answers have previously been refused on grounds of commercial confidentiality once a contractor for the National Identity Register has been selected. [67290]

Joan Ryan: The award of contracts for the National Identity Register will not necessarily change the impact that release of information may have on the Department's commercial interests. The Identity and Passport Service would need to undertake further consideration regarding the information at the time of contract award. However, it is likely that at the contract award stage, the release of certain cost estimates previously withheld will no longer prejudice commercial interests, and it may be possible for this information to be made public without prejudicing the Department's commercial interests.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the expected cost is to public funds of vetting the staff employed by contractors operating the National Identity Register; and what the expected cost is to the operation of the National Identity Register of the time taken to carry out such vetting. [67291]

Joan Ryan: Measures will be put in place to ensure that the National Identity Register operates to the level of security commensurate with being part of the critical national infrastructure. The published operating cost estimates for the scheme include staff-related costs of operating the National Identity Register.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the expected average salary is of persons who will have (a) any access to the National Identity Register and (b) physical access to the equipment which stores it. [67292]

Joan Ryan: Overall estimates with regard to staff costs have been made within the business case for the National Identity Scheme. However, precise details regarding the deployment of staff in specific roles or associated compensation packages are dependent on the final design of the scheme, which can only be finalised after negotiations with suppliers in the forthcoming procurement process are completed.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the public sector bodies that will have access to data held on the National Identity Register without specific citizen consent; and for what purposes. [70712]

Joan Ryan: No organisation will have direct access to information recorded on the National Identity Register, with or without the consent of the individual.

Sections 17-21 of the Identity Cards Act 2006 permit the Secretary of State to provide information from the National Identity Register without the consent of the individual to certain public sector organisations under certain circumstances.

Those organisations are:

the Security Services, the Secret Intelligence Service, Government Communications Headquarters and the Serious Organised Crime Agency when the request is connected with the carrying out of any of the functions of those organisations.

the police, when the request is (a) in the interests of national security or (b) for purposes connected with the prevention or detection of crime. However, in the case of information held under paragraph 9 of Schedule 1 of the Act, it can only be provided to the police when the request is related to the prevention or detection of serious crime.

Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs, when the request is (a) in the interests of national security, (b) for purposes connected with the prevention or detection of crime, (c) for purposes connected with the prevention, detection or investigation of conduct in respect of which the Commissioners have power to impose penalties, or with the imposition of such penalties, (d) for the purpose of facilitating the checking of information provided to the Commissioners in connection with anything under their care and management, or with any other matter in relation to which the Commissioners have duties under any enactment, (e) for purposes connected with any of the functions of the Commissioners in relation to national insurance contributions or national insurance numbers. However, as in the case with the police, information held under paragraph 9 of Schedule 1 can only be provided when the request is related to the prevention or detection of serious crime.

The provision of information from the National Identity Register in these circumstances can only occur when conditions established under Section 21 of the Identity Cards Act have been met. Furthermore, the National Identity Scheme Commissioner and, where appropriate, the Intelligence Services Commissioner will provide independent oversight of the National Identity Scheme.

The provision of information without consent of the individual to the aforementioned organisations for any other purpose or to any other Government department, Northern Ireland department or public authority cannot occur without the prior approval of Parliament through secondary legislation subject to the affirmative resolution procedure.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate the Government have made of the cost to an individual of (a) losing their identity card and (b) it being stolen. [67285]

Joan Ryan: The schedule of fees for Identity and Passport Service products after the introduction of identity cards is not yet settled. Currently, an individual must pay for the replacement of a lost or stolen passport.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of parliamentary questions on the subject of the identity cards scheme Ministers have (a) refused to answer and (b) given an incomplete answer to on grounds of commercial confidentiality in the current parliamentary session. [67289]

Joan Ryan: In the current parliamentary session, Ministers have answered all parliamentary questions that have been tabled by hon. Members. Out of a total of 271 parliamentary questions tabled, the answers to 16 (less than 6 per cent. of the total) were qualified to ensure that they did not prejudice the Government's ability to secure value for money.

Passports

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department where in the Anglesey and North Gwynedd area the secure webcam for passport application interviews will be located; and if he will make a statement. [70432]

Joan Ryan [holding answer 15 May 2006]: Locations for interviews have not yet been determined in any of the areas in which the remote community service will be available, including the Anglesey and North Gwynedd area. A procurement exercise will be undertaken to engage partner organisations with suitable premises and establish the detailed arrangements.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many pensioners in Hendon received free passports in 2005; and if he will make a statement. [41615]

Joan Ryan: The United Kingdom Passport Service (UKPS) does not keep records by address of how many British Nationals have received free passports.

In 2005, nationally, UKPS issued a total of 172,080 passports free of charge to British Nationals born on or before 2 September 1929.

Police

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department from which (a) police forces and (b) police authorities he has received a request for amalgamation with a neighbouring police force. [31515]

Mr. Byrne: None. The Home Secretary's written Ministerial statement on 6 February 2006 set out the latest position and undertook to keep the House up to date about the detailed plans for all areas as options for each are refined.

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers there were in (a) Kingston upon Hull, North constituency, (b) Kingston upon Hull division and (c) Humberside in each year since 1997. [69770]

Mr. Byrne: Statistics by constituency are not collected centrally. Figures for police officers have only been collected by basic command unit since March 2002. The available data for the number of police officers deployed in the Kingston-upon-Hull basic command unit is provided in the table along with the figures for Humberside.

I understand from the chief constable that in 2003 and 2004, criminal justice administration teams, command centres, dog handlers and scenes of crime officers were transferred from all of Humberside's basic command units to central force control. This accounts for the reduction in police officer numbers in Kingston-upon-Hull basic command unit.

Police officer strength (full-time equivalent) by year (1997-2005)

As at 31 March each year	Kingston-upon-Hull[1]	Humberside[2]
1997	—	2,045
1998	—	2,021
1999	—	1,974
2000	—	1,932
2001	—	1,917
2002	704	2,058
2003	761	2,105
2004	740	2,213
2005	699	2,230

[1] FTE includes those on career breaks or maternity/paternity leave. Data only available from 2002.
[2] Figures include those on Secondment to NCIS, NCS and Central Services, FTE excludes those on career breaks or maternity/paternity leave

Paddy Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects HM Inspectorate of Constabulary's (HMIC) report into the performance of Nottinghamshire Police to be published. [70901]

Mr. Byrne: It is hoped that HMIC will be in a position to publish the report in approximately one month (i.e. mid-June).

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in what circumstances the police retain DNA samples of people who have been arrested but not charged with an offence. [71102]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984, as amended, the police may take and retain DNA samples from persons who have been arrested for a recordable offence and detained in a police station. The decision whether or not to retain samples taken in these circumstances is an operational one for the police force concerned although it would be the norm to do so. Once taken, these samples may only be used for the purposes of prevention and detection of crime, the investigation of an offence, the conduct of a prosecution or for the purposes of identifying a deceased person.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many DNA samples the police collected on a voluntary basis in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [71103]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The number of DNA samples provided by volunteers to the police for elimination purposes is not held centrally by the Home Office and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

As at the end of April 2006, the number of persons who have voluntarily given a DNA sample to the police and who have also consented to their DNA profile being loaded onto the National DNA database was 16,173.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in what circumstances the police retain DNA samples of people who have been assisting a victim of crime. [71110]

Mr. Sutcliffe: DNA samples taken from a volunteer as part of the investigation of an offence are destroyed once they have fulfilled the purpose for which they were taken unless the volunteer gives written permission for them to be retained on the National DNA database.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the new headquarters of Gloucestershire constabulary at Quedgeley in its function as a major incident facility. [64737]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 24 April 2006]: Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary are planning to review the operation of the facility in due course.

Nick Herbert: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, if he will list the consultants employed by (a) each police authority and (b) each police force in England and Wales to advise on police force amalgamations; and what the cost was in each case. [47314]

Mr. Byrne: This information is not held centrally.

Nick Herbert: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, if he will list the consultants employed by his Department to advise on police force amalgamations; and what the cost was in each case. [47315]

Mr. Byrne: Consultants from a number of organisations have been employed to assist in the process of assessing the financial case for change, including:

Office for Government Commerce
Deloitte
Avail (Tribal Vale)
Ernst and Young

KPMG
Accenture
IBM
Mott MacDonald
Methods
Walker-Cox
Mentis

To date this consultancy support has cost £656,864.

Nick Herbert: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the consultants employed by non-governmental organisations funded by his Department to advise on police force amalgamations; and what the cost was in each case. [47316]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 31 January 2006]: This information is not held centrally.

Peter Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to delay decisions on the merging of police forces to enable more extensive local consultation on the implications of such changes to take place. [30418]

Mr. Byrne: The House will be kept up to date about the detailed plans for all areas as options for each are refined. In the meantime, the Home Secretary expects police authorities to continue to engage with their communities on this issue.

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consideration has been given to the location of police headquarters in the event of the Norfolk Constabulary being merged with other forces to create a strategic force in the Eastern region. [38863]

Mr. Byrne: This will be an issue for the chief officer and police authority of any new strategic force.

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the letter of 5 April from the Minister of State to Sir Ronnie Flanagan commissioning the O'Connor report, for what reasons the intention of the Government was that this stage of the review of policing structure be low key in terms of publicity. [27095]

Mr. Byrne: The White Paper "Building Communities, Beating Crime", published in November 2004, stated clearly (at paragraph 5.62-5.64) that the former Home Secretary (Charles Clarke) had commissioned Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary (HMIC) to examine the issue of force structures in England and Wales and that HMIC had been asked to report its initial findings by the end of January 2005. The further work commissioned from HMIC in my letter of 5 April 2005 to Sir Ronnie Flanagan was the next stage in the process mapped out in the White Paper and, as such, did not call for a further announcement at that stage.

Greg Mulholland: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the merits of 24-hour help desks in police stations. [65147]

Mr. Byrne: The Home Office has not commissioned or evaluated any research on the merits of 24-hour help desks in police stations.

The management of the police estate and allocation of resources are matters for each police authority and the chief officer, who are responsible for assessing local needs. The ownership of police stations is vested in the local police authority, not the Home Office. Their use is a matter for local decisions.

Greg Mulholland: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance he has issued to police forces on the provision of 24-hour help desks at police stations. [65189]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 24 April 2006]: The management of the police estate and allocation of resources are matters for each police authority and the chief officer, who are responsible for assessing local needs. The ownership of police stations is vested in the local police authority, not the Home Office. Their use is a matter for local decision.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether police precepts will be harmonised throughout the local authority areas covered by the new regional police force in Yorkshire and the Humber; and if he will make a statement. [67509]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 2 May 2006]: Yes. Work is taking place on transitional arrangements to allow for convergence of precepts over several years.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how police force mergers in Wales will be funded. [66079]

Mr. Byrne: We are committed to paying 100 per cent. of reasonable set-up, revenue and capital costs of restructuring, net of reasonable savings.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether existing North Yorkshire police force and police authority (a) revenue and (b) capital balances will be ring-fenced for use exclusively within the North Yorkshire and York local authority areas. [67611]

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether existing plans for police capital expenditure within North Yorkshire and York will be honoured by the new Yorkshire and Humberside regional police authority. [67512]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 2 May 2006]: Budget setting and management for any reorganised police area will be a matter for the new strategic police authority and the chief officer, who will be responsible for prioritising local needs.

Prisons

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much compensation has been paid to prisoners in each of the last eight years; and what the reason was in each case. [71203]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The following table covers the financial years 2004-05 and 2005-06 as data prior to this is unreliable. The data relates to public sector establishments only as litigation in private sector prisons is a matter for the individual contractor.

The Amount of Compensation Paid to Prisoners by the Public Sector Prison Service in England and Wales in 2004-05 and 2005-06

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the impact on education provision in prisons of the level of transfers of inmates between establishments. [62124]

Phil Hope: I have been asked to reply.

The throughput of prisoners in establishments (i.e. numbers of prisoners received and discharged on a daily basis) has increased significantly. It is to be expected that when prisons face operational pressures there may be an impact on a range of activities, including education and training, particularly in hard-pressed local prisons. However, since April 2002, over 150,000 basic skills qualifications have been achieved by learners in prison.

The Home Office and DfES have established the Offender Learning and Skills Service (OLASS) project which will introduce a new service of education and skills for offenders in both custody and the community. This, combined with plans set out in the "Reducing Re-offending through Skills and Employment" Green Paper launched in December 2005, will enable more offenders in custody and those serving their sentences in the community to complete their education and training successfully.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of incentive and earned privileges programmes on the prison estate. [62761]

Mr. Sutcliffe: All prisons operate a local scheme of incentives and earned privileges based upon a national framework. National policy requires that all establishments review and evaluate their own schemes annually.

A central review of the scheme is currently being conducted which will result in a revised issue of the Incentive and Earned Privileges guidance.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many copies of the Prison Service annual report and accounts 2003-04 were distributed by his Department; if he will list those who were sent copies; at what cost; how many copies were printed; at what cost; who was awarded the contract to undertake the printing; how (a) hon. Members, (b) Members of the House of Lords and (c) members of the public may obtain a copy; at what cost; and if he will make a statement. [70872]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Her Majesty's Prison Service (HMPS) printed 3,000 copies of its annual report and accounts for the financial year 2003-04. Most of these were issued free of charge to Parliament, colleagues elsewhere in the Home Office and criminal justice system and senior managers within HMPS. HMPS provided 350 copies to the Stationery Office, the official publishers, who offered these for sale through their retail outlets at a cover price (fixed by TSO) of £23. The distribution list used by HMPS is shown in the following table.

The total cost of producing 3,000 copies of the annual report and accounts 2003-04 was approximately £26,000. The contract for design work was awarded to the Brightside Partnership and the contract for printing was awarded to Formara Printers. Distribution costs were mostly covered by HMPS' internal mail and messenger services. Normal postage costs applied to copies distributed externally and would have amounted to no more than £80.

Copies of the document are held in the Library. Printed copies of the document may still be available from TSO outlets at a cost of £23. Alternatively, the document is viewable on the HMPS internet website (hmprisonservice.gov.uk).

Roger Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many hours of education for prisoners were provided in each of the last two years. [70984]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The total number of education hours undertaken by prisoners during each of the last two years is shown in the table. Data for 2005-06 is provisional subject to end-of-year validations by establishments.

Private Office

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost of his private office was in the last year for which figures are available. [55727]

Mr. Byrne: Running costs for the Home Secretary's Private Office for the financial year 2004-2005 were £6,020,526.

Prolific and Priority Offender Strategy

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many young people in Peterborough constituency have been subject to the Prolific and Priority Offender Strategy; and if he will make a statement. [70169]

Mr. Byrne: Currently, 32 young people under the age of 18 are being targeted. This comprises 28 under the Prevent and Deter and four in the Catch and Convict and Rehabilitate and Resettle strands. Peterborough is one of 39 schemes in the eastern region that is helping to deliver the Government's national Prolific and Priority Offender programme which uses a multi-agency approach to target those offenders causing a disproportionate amount of harm to their communities through a range of interventions to reduce their offending.

Proscribed Terrorist Organisations

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans the Government have to place the (a) Saved Sect and (b) al-Ghurabaa groups on his Department's list of proscribed terrorist organisations. [66365]

Mr. Byrne: Section 21 of the terrorism Act 2006, which came into force on 13 April, expanded the criteria for proscription. All possible candidates for proscription will be assessed against these widened criteria.

Racially Motivated Attacks

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many racially motivated attacks took place in (a) England and Wales, (b) Leicester and (c) London in each of the last 24 months for which figures are available. [71180]

Mr. Byrne: Information is collected in the form of racially or religiously aggravated less serious wounding and racially or religiously aggravated common assault. Data for the period April 2003 to March 2005 are given in the table.

Research Studies

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the research studies commissioned by his Department in each of the last five years where a decision was taken not to publish the results of the research after it was completed. [47563]

Mr. Byrne: Not every piece of research that is commissioned is published by the Home Office. The Chief Scientific Adviser may decide not to publish in a Home Office series on the grounds of inadequate scientific quality following external peer review, as the results are out of date or for operational reasons. In these circumstances, the researcher is usually released to publish the results through other means. We do not have a record centrally of which reports released in this way have subsequently been published in scientific journals or other non-HO publications.

In other cases, the Department decides to publish only a summary of research and allow the more detailed report to be made available separately. A list of research findings can be found on the Home Office website.

There are a number of further cases where the commissioned research is not released where the following circumstances apply:

1. That a decision is taken that any dissemination of the research should have a limited distribution for reasons such as security considerations or practical operational reasons.

2. That the research is commissioned, but during the course of the project a decision is made to re-prioritise work to other areas, before there are publishable results.

3. There are a very limited number of projects where no suitable publication date was found for release by the Home Office. We have found one such instance in the last five years.

4. The Home Office's Communications Directorate conducts market research to help develop and evaluate public information campaigns. The research is not peer reviewed and therefore has not been considered appropriate for official Home Office publication although details are available on request.

A table showing the available information on research projects commissioned in the last five years where the above circumstances apply has been collated into a table that has been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Road Trafffic Regulation Act 1984

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the operation of section (a) 1, (b) 5, (c) 6 and (d) 8 of the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984. [69143]

Mr. Byrne: The Government are satisfied that these provisions operate effectively to regulate road use. These provisions of the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984 provide for the making of traffic regulation orders outside Greater London and of similar orders within Greater London. The orders are made by local authorities or the Secretary of State according to the type of road and can make a wide range of provisions as to how the road is to be used. The orders are made in the interests of avoiding danger, preventing damage, facilitating passage along the road, preventing vehicular use of the road in a way that is unsuitable for the road or surrounding area, preserving the character of a road and preserving or improving local amenities.

Sex Offenders

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the procedure is for registered sex offenders who have been fully rehabilitated to apply to have their name removed from the register. [71837]

Mr. Coaker: Part 2 of the Sexual Offences Act 2003 provides for the notification requirements on offenders who receive convictions or cautions for certain sexual offences. These notification requirements are often known as the sex offenders register. The notification requirements apply for a fixed period as set out in the 2003 Act (see following table) and include lifetime registration for those sentenced to a term of imprisonment of 30 months or more or admitted to a hospital subject to a restriction order.

There is no general discretion in the application of the notification requirements and there is no power, to the police or the courts, to change the notification period which applies to an offender.

The only exception relates to those offenders who were made subject to the requirements because they were convicted for a homosexual offence that has now been abolished. These offenders may make an application to end the notification requirements placed upon them.

Description of relevant offender	Notification period
A person who, in respect of the offence, is or has been sentenced to imprisonment for life or for a term of 30 months or more	An indefinite period beginning with the relevant date (the date of conviction)
A person who, in respect of the offence, has been made the subject of an order under section 210F(1) of the Criminal Procedure (Scotland) Act 1995 (order for lifelong restriction)	An indefinite period beginning with that date
A person who, in respect of the offence or finding, is or has been admitted to a hospital subject to a restriction order	An indefinite period beginning with that date
A person who, in respect of the offence, is or has been sentenced to imprisonment for a term of more than six months but less than 30 months	10 years beginning with that date
A person who, in respect of the offence, is or has been sentenced to imprisonment for a term of six months or less	7 years beginning with that date
A person who, in respect of the offence or finding, is or has been admitted to a hospital without being subject to a restriction order	7 years beginning with that date
A person within section 80(1)(d)—subject to a police caution post 1 May 2004	2 years beginning with that date
A person in whose case an order for conditional discharge or, in Scotland, a probation order, is made in respect of the offence	The period of conditional discharge or, in Scotland, the probation period
A person of any other description	5 years beginning with the relevant date

Sexually Objectifying Material

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will assess the merits of introducing legislation similar to that protecting against incitement to racial hatred to protect women from sexually objectifying material. [64014]

Mr. Coaker: I share the hon. Member's concern at the portrayal of women in some parts of the media. However, I believe there is a significant difference between material which is intended or is likely to stir up hatred and material which may "objectify" a person and it would be a very large step to criminalise material in the second group. Moreover, in practical terms, hatred is a concept well understood by the courts—it includes behaviour which is likely directly to drive up violence and the fear of violence. It is less clear what "sexually objectifying material" is and what the direct effects of such material would be. I believe there would be genuine difficulties for the courts in defining "sexually objectifying material". This could cover a very wide range of material including much that is commonly available through the media, works of art and comedy material.

Legislation, including the Obscene Publications Act 1959, the Indecent Displays (Control) Act 1981 and the Video Recordings Act 1984 already exists to protect people against illegal and harmful sexual material.

Solicitors

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take steps to end the practice of locking solicitors in interview rooms at police stations when they visit violent suspects. [68897]

Mr. Byrne: The management of custody suites and arrangements for all those who come into the custody suite is a matter for the chief officer of the force concerned.

The Home Office Police Buildings Design Guide recommends that interview and consultation rooms are fitted with suitable warning and alert mechanisms. Guidance issued by the National Centre for Policing Excellence on 8 February 2006 sets out the need to consider any additional risks associated from or to visitors, such as solicitors and healthcare professionals, coming into the custody suite. The guidance states that effective risk management procedures must be in place and compliant with Health and Safety legislation.

I have asked my officials to meet with interested parties to consider the potential to establish a protocol between the Law Society and the Criminal Law Solicitors Association and the police on arrangements for solicitors attending police stations.

Special Constables

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what funding his Department has allocated to the special constables scheme in (a) the Kingston upon Hull division, (b) Humberside and (c) England and Wales in each year it has been running. [69765]

Mr. Byrne: (a) Grants are paid to police authorities. Kingston upon Hull division is part of Humberside police and (b) Home Office specific grants to forces under the Special Constabulary Capacity Building Scheme began in January 2004.

Grant payments to forces during the first two years of the scheme are shown in the following table.

	2004	2005
Humberside	70,000	70,000
All forces in England & Wales	2,044,034	2,473,009

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what average number of hours per week was worked by a special constable in (a) the Kingston upon Hull division, (b) Humberside and (c) England and Wales in each year since the beginning of the scheme. [69767]

Mr. Byrne: Humberside police force are unable to provide data on hours worked by special constables. Available information on the average number of special constable hours per week across England and Wales are as follows:

Average number of special constable hours per week across England and Wales (525 forces providing data[1])

	Hours
2003-04	19,452
2004-05	21,266

[1] Forces not providing data are Avon and Somerset, Cambridgeshire, Cleveland, Derbyshire, Durham, Greater Manchester, Humberside, Merseyside, Metropolitan Police, North Wales, North Yorkshire, Nottinghamshire, South Wales, Suffolk, Surrey, Sussex, Thames Valley and West Midlands.

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many special constables have been recruited in (a) the Kingston-upon-Hull division, (b) Humberside and (c) England and Wales since the beginning of the scheme. [69768]

Mr. Byrne: Home Office specific grants to forces under the Special Constabulary Capacity Building Scheme began in January 2004. In the year 1 April 2004 to 31 March 2005, 143 special constables were recruited by Humberside, with 3,636 special constables recruited in England and Wales.

Figures are not collected centrally for Kingston upon Hull.

Speed Cameras

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the total revenue raised from speed camera fines in England in the most recent year for which figures are available. [70710]

Mr. Coaker: The number of fixed penalties ordered to be paid and the number of court fines for such offences in 2004 (latest available), is given in the attached table.

Information for 2005 will be available early in 2007.

Not all fines and fixed penalties will have been paid.

Fixed penalty and court proceedings data for speeding offences detected by cameras[1] England, 2004

		Number of offences
Fixed Penalties		Court Proceedings[2]
Number of tickets[3]	Estimated revenue(£)[4]	Number of fines	Total amount of fine(£)	Average fine (£)
1,786,600	107,196,000	59,700	5,685,700	95

[1] Offences under the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984 and The Motor Vehicles (Speed Limits on Motorways) Regulations 1973

[2] Includes cases where fixed penalty notices were originally issued but not paid and subsequently referred to court.

[3] Only covers tickets paid where there is no further action.

[4] Estimate based on £60 fixed penalty charge.

Stop and Search

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the answer of 12 September 2005, Official Report, column 2615W, on stop and search procedures, if he will ensure that a copy of the "Stop and Search Manual" published on 31 March 2005 be placed in the Library. [70186]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 12 May 2006]: I have arranged for copies of the "Stop and Search Manual" to be placed in the Commons' Library. Copies are already available in the Lords' Library. The guidance can also be accessed online at: http://police.homeoffice.gov.uk/news-and-publications/publication/operational-policing/stopandsearch-intermanual1.pdf

Terrorism

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what inquiries his Department has carried out into the leak in the press about the security services foiling a terrorist attack on Canary Wharf in November 2004; [70029]

(2) whether the security forces foiled a planned terrorist attack on Canary Wharf in November 2004. [70028]

Mr. Byrne: We do not comment on alleged leaks of information.

However, on 11 May 2006, I placed on record to the House that the police and agencies have disrupted many attacks against the UK since 9/11, including three since last July.

Terrorist Interrogations

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what involvement UK agents or operatives have had in the interrogation of alleged terrorist suspects abroad. [39750]

Mr. Byrne: It is not the Government's policy to comment on intelligence issues.

Torture

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what assessment he has made of the role of intelligence obtained by torture abroad in legal proceedings in England and Wales; [29110]

(2) what assessment he has made of the reliability of intelligence obtained by torture abroad; [29111]

(3) what assessment he has made of the impact in England and Wales of the use of intelligence obtained by torture abroad on long-term national security. [29112]

Mr. Byrne: Evidence obtained as a result of any acts of torture by British officials, or with which British authorities were complicit, would not be admissible in criminal or civil proceedings in the UK. It does not matter whether the evidence was obtained here or abroad.

During the individual appeals against certification under powers provided under part four of the Anti-Terrorism, Crime and Security Act (ATCSA), the Special Immigration Appeals Commission (SIAC) emphatically rejected any suggestion that evidence relied upon by the Government was, or even may have been, obtained by torture. The Court of Appeal later confirmed the view of SIAC.

On 8 December 2005 the House of Lords ruled unanimously that evidence obtained by torture was inadmissible in SIAC proceedings. The decision will not impact on the Government's ability to fight terrorism, or change current practices, as the Government's own stated policy was already not to rely on evidence which we knew or believed to have been obtained as a result of torture. It is not always possible to know where all intelligence information has come from or the precise circumstances under which it was obtained. The Security Service and Secret Intelligence Service receive material from a wide range of foreign intelligence services. The agencies evaluate the reliability of this intelligence against other information available to them. It is then passed, together with an assessment of reliability, to the Government. It may be necessary in some circumstances to rely operationally on material which may have been obtained through the use of torture where it is considered necessary to do so, in particular for preventing terrorist attack and protecting life. The House of Lords judgment confirmed that material which had or may have been obtained through torture could be used for operational purposes.

We do not condone torture in any way, nor would we carry out this completely unacceptable behaviour. However, we do have an obligation to protect national security and public safety. We would be deficient in this duty if we did not properly assess all the information available to us.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases will be affected by the Law Lords ruling that evidence extracted under torture is inadmissible in judicial proceedings. [39752]

Mr. Byrne: We have no reason to believe that any convictions will be affected by this ruling. In criminal proceedings in England and Wales, the courts have a range of powers to prevent the admission of evidence that may have been obtained improperly or illegally, including through means of torture. Courts have the discretion to exclude evidence if it is unduly prejudicial or unfair, and a judicial discretion to stay proceedings if they are considered to be an abuse of the court's process. Defendants also enjoy the protections afforded by Article 6 of the ECHR, the right to a fair trial. Article 3 of the ECHR also prohibits torture and inhuman or degrading treatment. In addition, a confession is not admissible unless it meets the requirements set out in sections 76 and 78 of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act (PACE). That is, the evidence will not be admissible if it is unreliable or has been obtained by oppression. Section 76(8) of PACE states that oppression includes torture, inhuman and degrading treatment and the use or threat of violence.

Under-age Drinking

Lynda Waltho: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress is being made in reducing under-age drinking. [70174]

Mr. Byrne: The Home Office's policy in this area is directed towards reducing the sales of alcohol to under-18s. We are working very closely with both the on and off sectors of the licensed industry, and have secured commitments from both to seek to eliminate under-age sales.

The table shows the rate of test-purchase failures (i.e. where alcohol was sold to a minor) from the various Alcohol Misuse Enforcement Campaigns (AMECs) which have taken place, up to AMEC 3 which ran during November and December last year. This shows encouraging reductions in test-purchase failures for all sectors of the industry.

Data from the "Drug use, smoking and drinking among young people in England in 2005" survey shows that the number of children aged 11-15 who reported having drunk alcohol in the last week was 22 per cent. in 2005, down from 25 per cent. in 2003.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Deportations

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many defendants sentenced in the Crown Court of England and Wales were recommended to the Home Secretary for deportation on completion of their sentence in each of the last 12 months for which figures are available. [67685]

Ms Harman: The number of defendants for which a recommendation for deportation was made in the Crown Court for each of the last 12 months is displayed in the table.

Number of defendants for which a recommendation for deportation was made in the Crown Court between April 2005 and March 2006

	Number of Defendants

Judges

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many High Court judges are serving on the bench; how many are aged (a) 40-45, (b) 46-50, (c) 51-55, (d) 56-60, (e) 61-65, (f) 66-70, (g) 71-75 and (h) over 75 years; and how many there were in each group in (i) 1996, (ii) 1997, (iii) 1999, (iv) 2002 and (v) 2004. [70087]

Ms Harman: The information requested was not held centrally prior to 2000 in a form that is readily accessible. The following table shows the information for 2002 onwards.

Number of judges

	Aged 40-45	Aged 46-50	Aged 51-55	Aged 56-60	Aged 61-65	Aged 66-70	Aged 71-75	Aged over 75	High Court judges

1 Jan 2002	—	7	29	36	20	7	1	—	100

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will make a statement on diversity in judicial appointments. [67086]

Ms Harman: This Government are committed to bringing about a more diverse judiciary that better reflects and understands the communities it serves. We believe this is important to helping increase public confidence in the justice system.

We are working with the Lord Chief Justice and Chairman of the recently established Judicial Appointments Commission on the judicial diversity programme. A Written Ministerial Statement was made today, 17 May 2006, outlining the strategy.

New Court House (Colchester)

Bob Russell: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs pursuant to the Answer of 28 March 2006, Official Report, column 871W, on New Court House (Colchester), when she expects work on building a new court house at Colchester (a) to commence and (b) to be completed. [63186]

Ms Harman: The position in Colchester is currently being considered. I expect to make an announcement about the court in Colchester before the summer recess.

Small Claims (Courts)

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs pursuant to her Oral Statement of 30 March 2006, Official Report, column 361W, on small claims (courts), what information technology projects in the civil and family courts are under consideration by the Department. [67003]

Ms Harman: The Department is working hard to both improve existing systems and to introduce new systems where appropriate, as resources permit. Key projects currently either under consideration or in hand include:

An upgrade to existing systems in the civil and family courts to enable networked courts to view or work on cases held at any other networked court, which will be piloted later this year;

A new web-based system for use by claimants for possession of property through non-payment of mortgage or rent arrears;

An Electronic Filing and Document Management system is also under consideration, but work is at a very early stage.

Suicide

Mr. Drew: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs whether the Government plan to amend the Suicide Act 1961. [47772]

Mr. Sutcliffe: I have been asked to reply.

The Government have no current plans to amend the Suicide Act 1961.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what percentage of the staff in his Department is (a) male, (b) female and (c) disabled, broken down by grade. [69022]

Mr. Thomas: Details of DFID's permanent and pensionable home civil service staff by gender and grade can be derived from our published staffing figures return to the Office for National Statistics (ONS) as at 31 December 2005.

The following table shows the percentage of staff, by grade, who had declared a disability at 31 December 2005. Declaration of a disability is voluntary.

Grade	Total	Males	Percentage male	Female	Percentage female	Staff with declared disability	Percentage declared disabled
SCS	85	60	71	25	29	3	3.5
A1/A2 (G6/G7)	659	388	59	271	41	5	0.8
A3/B1 (SEO/HEO)	508	263	52	245	48	13	2.6
B2 (EO)	297	136	46	161	54	4	1.3
C1/C2 (AO/AA)	323	116	36	207	64	19	5.9
Total	1,872	963	51	909	49	44	2.3

Fishing

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps he is taking to promote sustainable fishing in the developing world; and if he will make a statement. [70923]

Mr. Thomas: DFID recognises that fisheries can make a significant contribution to economic growth and poverty reduction in the developing world but that, in many countries, this contribution is being constrained by problems of poor management. Pressures are being generated by high demand for fish products in rich countries, by poverty and the increasing numbers of people having to resort to fishing to sustain basic livelihoods and, in some places, by developed countries subsidising their own fleets to move into the waters of poorer countries.

In the long run, the contribution of sustainable fishing to the economies of developing countries can only be realised if the rich countries take into account the impact of their policies on developing countries and if the latter have the capacity to manage their own resources in a sustainable way.

DFID is working hard to ensure that international fisheries policy takes account of impacts on developing countries. Particular problems are being caused by illegal fishing—DFID-funded research has found that countries in Sub-Saharan Africa are losing as much as $1 billion a year from this alone. DFID is now working closely with DEFRA to support the development of an international plan of action to tackle illegal fishing.

We are also ready to support poorer countries to develop their capacity to manage their fisheries resources.

Ministerial Visits (Accommodation)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what the total cost was of overnight accommodation for Ministers of State in his Department on foreign visits in each of the last three years; [69013]

(2) on how many occasions Ministers of State in his Department stayed overnight in (a) five star, (b) four star and (c) three star hotels on foreign visits in each of the last three years. [69014]

Mr. Thomas: Under the terms of the "Ministerial Code" and "Travel by Ministers", when travelling on official business Ministers are expected to make efficient and cost-effective travel arrangements.

Since 1999 the Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year. This information includes accommodation costs. Copies are available in the Library.

For both the Secretary of State for International Development and I, the detailed information requested can not be provided without incurring disproportionate costs.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development on how many occasions (a) civil servants and (b) special advisers in his Department have stayed overnight in (i) five star, (ii) four star and (iii) three star hotels in each of the last three years. [69015]

Mr. Thomas: The Department for International Development (DFID) arranges hotel accommodation centrally through our agents. We do not have the ratings of all hotels used, but any hotel will be at least three star, and enable staff to comply with the departmental cost ceiling for overnight subsistence. The total number of room nights booked was as follows:

	Number
2003-04	9,444
2004-05	8,717
2005-06	9,687

Data related to our extensive use of overseas hotels are not centrally held and could not be obtained without incurring disproportionate cost.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the total cost was of overnight accommodation for (a) civil servants and (b) special advisers in his Department staying overnight in (i) mainland Great Britain, (ii) Northern Ireland, (iii) the Republic of Ireland and (iv) other countries in each of the last three years. [69016]

Mr. Thomas: The Department for International Development (DFID) books hotel accommodation centrally for the UK and some overseas locations through our agents. Expenditure for the past three years is as follows:

2003-04	838,691
2004-05	818,020
2005-06	933,698

Data related to our extensive use of overseas hotels are not held centrally. These details could not be obtained without incurring disproportionate cost.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discounts are available in relation to hotel accommodation used by (a) civil servants and (b) special advisers in his Department. [69017]

Mr. Thomas: The Department for International Development (DFID) books hotel accommodation centrally through our travel agents. They have negotiated substantial discounts with the most frequently used hotels in the UK of between 17 and 67 per cent. on the standard room rate. We do not hold a central record of any discounts agreed by our overseas offices for frequently used hotels in their countries. These details could not be obtained without incurring disproportionate costs.

TREASURY

Banana Imports

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what revenue was raised in (a) 2004 and (b) 2005 from imports into the UK of bananas (combined nomenclature 0803) from (i) Belize, (ii) Brazil, (iii) Cameroon, (iv) Colombia, (v) Costa Rica, (vi) Ivory Coast, (vii) Dominica, (viii) Dominican Republic, (ix) Ecuador, (x) Guatemala, (xi) Jamaica, (xii) Panama, (xiii) St Lucia and (xiv) St Vincent. [71501]

Dawn Primarolo: The customs duty declared in respect of bananas imported into the UK is in the following table.

Birth Statistics

Mr. Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many live births per 1,000 of the population there have been in (a) Ribble Valley and (b) Lancashire in each of the last 10 years; and what estimate he has made for each of the next five years. [71558]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 17 May 2006:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many births per 1,000 population in (a) Ribble Valley and (b) Lancashire there have been in each of the last 10 years and what estimate has been made for each of the next five years. (71558)

Figures are currently available on births that have occurred in each year up to 2004. The table below shows rates for the years 1995 to 2004. ONS projections of the numbers of births in each area are based on the assumption that local trends in fertility observed over the period 1999 to 2003 will continue into the future. The table below also shows projected birth rates on this basis for the years 2005 to 2009.

Live birth rates per 1,000 population 1995-2009, Kibble Valley CD and Lancashire county

	Ribble Valley	[1]Lancashire
1995	9.9	11.8
1996	10.2	11.9
1997	10.3	11.6
1998	10.0	11.4
1999	9.7	11.1
2000	10.2	10.7
2001	9.3	10.7
2002	8.8	10.3
2003	9.1	10.9
2004	9.2	11.4
2005[2]	9.5	10.9
2006[2]	9.3	10.7
2007[2]	9.0	10.5
2008[2]	8.9	10.4
2009[2]	8.7	10.3

[1] In 1997 Blackburn CD and Blackpool CD ceased to form part of Lancashire. To aid comparability they have been excluded throughout the table.
[2] Figures for 2005 to 2009 are 2003-based projections.

Cancer Rates

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the rates of cancer of the (a) breast and (b) cervix were in (i) the South East of England and (ii) the rest of the UK for those aged (A) 20 to 25 years, (B) 25 to 30 years, (C) 30 to 35 years, (D) 35 to 40 years, (E) 40 to 45 years, (F) 45 to 50 years and (G) 50 to 55 years in each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement. [70879]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 17 May 2006:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what the rates of cancer of the (a) breast and (b) cervix were in (i) the South East of England and (ii) the rest of the UK for those aged (A) 20 to 25 years, (B) 25 to 30 years (C) 30 to 35 years (D) 35 to 40 years (E) 40 to 45 years (F) 45 to 50 years and (G) 50 to 55 years in each year since 1979. [70879]

The most recent available figures for newly diagnosed cases of cancer registered in England and Wales are for 2003. Age-specific incidence rates by five-year age groups for both breast and cervical cancer registered in (a) London and South East Government Office Regions and (b) the rest of England and Wales for the years 1981-2003 are given in the attached tables.

Figures are not available for the United Kingdom prior to 1994 and so figures have been provided for England and Wales for consistency over the period.

Car Clubs

Colin Challen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will extend enterprise investment scheme relief to car clubs. [71503]

Dawn Primarolo: The enterprise investment scheme (EIS) provides tax relief to individuals who invest in certain unquoted, trading companies. Most trades qualify, as long as they are conducted on a commercial basis, but some are excluded, including those involving leasing or hiring. Companies whose trade involves these activities to a substantial degree do not qualify under EIS.

Car clubs are unlikely to qualify under the EIS. Many of them are organised on a not-for-profit basis and so are not trading on a commercial basis with a view to profit. And to the extent that car clubs are trading on a commercial basis with a view to profit, their trade would generally involve the leasing or hiring of vehicles.

So we would generally not expect car clubs to be qualifying companies under the EIS. Nor do we have plans to extend the scheme to provide for investment in car clubs.

Children's Trust Funds

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of families on low incomes have taken up children's trust funds. [71546]

Ed Balls: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given to him on 26 January 2006, Official Report, column 2253W. The next set of child trust fund statistics is due at the end of May.

Competitiveness

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the relative competitiveness of the economies of each country in the UK. [71213]

John Healey: This Government have put into place policies to make long-term sustainable improvements to the UK economy and the economies of each of the UK's constituent countries, including:

establishing a national macroeconomic framework to promote economic stability; and devolving significant responsibilities, including aspects of economic decision-making, to each of the countries.

The ONS has published nominal gross value added of each of the four countries of the United Kingdom up until 2004. These figures show that all the countries' economies have grown strongly. Since 1997, the output per person has grown each year, on average, by between 4.4 per cent. and 4.9 per cent., as shown in the following table. Employment levels have also grown substantially in each country.

Table 1. Countries' economic performance.

Percentage

	Average annual nominal growth rate (1997-2004)	Change in employment level (1997-2005)
England	4.9	8.8
Northern Ireland	4.7	11.8
Scotland	4.4	8.3
Wales	4.4	9.9

Further details of the size of each of the UK's countries and regions can be found on the Office of National Statistics website at the following address:

Correspondence

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the Paymaster General will reply to my letters of 14 March and 25 April 2006 concerning constituents Mr. and Mrs. Shirley of Belper, Derbyshire, and their claim for tax credits. [71905]

Dawn Primarolo: I have done so.

Data Sharing

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recommendations the Citizen Information Project made on two-way data sharing with (a) the National Identity Register and (b) other public sector databases. [70680]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the Written Statement made by my hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 18 April 2006.

The final report published by CIP on 19 April 2006 is available at www.gro.gov.uk/cip/.

Debt Collectors

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether (a) his Department or (b) its (i) executive agencies and (ii) non-departmental bodies use the services of private debt collectors. [71077]

John Healey: Neither the Treasury nor any of its agencies or non-departmental public bodies use private debt collectors. HM Revenue and Customs does have limited powers to use external bailiff companies for debt collection. HMRC currently uses these for some aspects of debt collection for indirect taxes and, in certain circumstances, for the service of legal documents.

Departmental Budget

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much was spent on advertising by his Department in each of the last three years. [70553]

John Healey: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave to the hon. Members for Sutton and Cheam (Mr. Burstow) and for Monmouth (David T.C. Davies) on 6 July 2005, Official Report, column 433W. The Treasury's spending on advertising in 2005-06 was £3,115,000; £3 million of this was the media spend (excluding VAT) within a publicity campaign running from September 2006 to March 2006 to raise awareness of Stakeholder savings and investment products.

Departmental Staff

Ms Katy Clark: To ask Mr Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) women and (b) men are employed in the Department; what the average pay was for (i) women and (ii) men in the Department in (A) 1997 and (B) 2006; what women's average pay is as a percentage of men's average pay; and how many (1) women and (2) men the Department employed in each of the last five years, broken down by grade. [67782]

John Healey: The Cabinet Office collects and publishes annually statistical information on the civil service by Department. This includes data on the employment of men and women.

The average pay for Treasury staff in 1997 is not available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The average pay for January 2006 is shown in the following tables:

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many staff surveys have been conducted in his Department in each of the last three years. [70555]

John Healey: There have been three Treasury-wide staff attitude surveys in the period, one in each year.

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what facility is available for senior civil servants in his Department to use credit cards supplied by the Department. [70556]

John Healey: HM Treasury operates a corporate credit card programme, which is available to any member of staff (subject to appropriate authorisation) who is frequently required to travel on official business.

HM Treasury also operates a Government procurement card (GPC) programme, which is available to any member of staff (subject to appropriate authorisation) to enable them to make small-value purchases on behalf of the Department.

Digital Switchover

Mark Williams: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate his Department has made of potential revenue from the sale of UHF spectrum released by the digital switchover programme. [71359]

John Healey: HM Treasury has made no such estimate, as it is not possible at this stage to make any reliable assumption of the market value or potential auction proceeds of the spectrum released by switchover.

Divorce

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many divorces there have been in the UK in each year since 2000, broken down by ethnic group. [71221]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 17 May 2006:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your request for the number of divorces in the UK since 2000, broken down by ethnic group. (71221)

As ethnic group is not collected by the Court Service at the time of divorce, the information requested is not available centrally. The total number of divorces in the UK for each year since 2000 is available in Table 2.1 of Population Trends, available at www.statistics.gov.uk/poptrends.

EU Customs Union Committee

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the UK members of the EU Customs Union Committee; on which dates this Committee met during the past 12 months; and whether the minutes of the Committee meetings are published. [70907]

Dawn Primarolo: The EU Customs Union Committee met on the following dates:

5 April 2005
5-6 May 2005
21 June 2005
18 July 2005
8 September 2005
22-23 September 2005

Financial Reporting Advisory Board

Mr. Harper: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will appoint a representative from each of the three main political parties as a full member of the Financial Reporting Advisory Board. [71597]

Mr. Timms: No. The Financial Reporting Advisory Board (FRAB) is an independent body fulfilling the role required by the Government Resources and Accounts Act 2000 as the 'group of persons who appear to the Treasury to be appropriate to advise on financial reporting principles and standards' for government. The board acts independently in setting accounting standards for government. It exists to promote the highest possible standards in financial reporting, ensuring that any adaptations of, or departures from, generally accepted accounting practice are appropriate.

FRAB submits an annual report to Parliament, outlining its activities for that year. In addition, as part of its publication scheme under the Freedom of Information Act, the FRAB publishes the minutes of its meetings (together with supporting papers) on its website (www.frab.gov.uk) once the minutes have been agreed at a subsequent meeting.

The board's membership reflects the constituents it serves (with representation from, for example, departments, audit agencies, the NHS and the devolved administrations) plus representation from the private sector. Parliament's interests are already met by having a parliamentary observer, supported by the Committee Office Scrutiny Unit.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he plans to appoint a new Parliamentary Observer to the Financial Reporting Advisory Board. [71598]

Mr. Timms: I am pleased that the hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent, South (Mr. Flello) has agreed to be the Parliamentary Observer to the Financial Reporting Advisory Board. He recently attended his first board meeting.

Government Spending

Adam Price: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the total capital expenditure on roads was in England in each year since 1999-2000. [65731]

Dr. Ladyman: I have been asked to reply.

Details of capital expenditure on roads in England are published annually in "Transport Statistics Great Britain", which is a major publication within the scope of National Statistics, and can be found in the House Library. Table 1.15 of "Transport Statistics Great Britain 2005" sets out both central and local government capital expenditure on roads. The data is broken down by country and across the time series 2000-01 through to 2004-05. Data for 1999-2000 can be found in the 2004 edition.

Hairdressing Bills

Mr. Dunne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether hairdressing bills declared as an election expense are treated by HM Revenue and Customs as a benefit in kind. [71022]

Dawn Primarolo: Whether a paid expense is taxed as an employment-related benefit will depend on the circumstances in which it is provided. There are no special rules for election expenses.

HM Revenue and Customs

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give details of Option Two mentioned in item 10 of the summary minutes of the meeting of the HM Revenue and Customs Executive Committee held on 11 October 2005; and if he will make a statement. [70673]

Dawn Primarolo: Following the postponement of the English council tax revaluation, the Valuation Office Agency (VOA) considered options for reducing its work force whilst securing the investment made in consultation with HMRC's Executive Committee prior to advising Ministers.

My hon. Friends the Minister for Communities and Local Government and the Minister for Local Government explained the approach in the Second Reading debate on the Council Tax (New Valuation Lists for England) Bill in the House on 7 November 2005. I also refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Meriden (Mrs. Spelman) on 21 November 2005, Official Report, column 1701W.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for what purpose HM Revenue and Customs purchased Mosaic UK data from Experian; whether the data was at (a) individual and (b) household level; and how much was spent. [70683]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Customs uses commercially available information to assist it in carrying out its functions in relation to the detection and prevention of crime and fraud, the assessment and collection of tax and improving the department's service to its customers. It would not be appropriate to comment in more detail on the acquisition (including cost) and use of particular datasets as to do so could prejudice law enforcement and commercial interests.

House Purchase Expenses

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) whether VAT is levied on local authority search fees; [70612]

(2) what estimate HM Revenue and Customs has made of the VAT revenue from (a) surveyor and valuation fees and (b) local authority search fees in the most recent year for which figures are available. [70663]

Dawn Primarolo: Local authority search fees are outside the scope of VAT.

No estimate of the VAT revenue has been made.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average stamp duty paid by first-time home buyers was in 1997. [70652]

Ed Balls: It is not possible to derive an estimate of average stamp duty for first time buyers from stamp duty land tax data as there is no requirement for taxpayers to provide information to HMRC as to whether they are a first-time buyer. However, the Department for Communities and Local Government estimates that the average stamp duty paid by first time buyers (excluding sitting tenants) with mortgages in 1997 was £280.

Income Tax

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what the expected yield in income tax was from a 1p change in the UK (a) starting, (b) basic and (c) higher rate of income tax in each year since 1995; and what estimates have been made of the yields for future years; [70310]

(2) what proportion of the UK income tax yield was raised in Scotland in each year since 1997. [70311]

Dawn Primarolo: The latest information on expected yields from changing the starting rate, basic rate or higher rate by 1p is available in Table 1.6 "Direct effects of illustrative tax changes" which is available on HM Revenue and Customs website; http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/taxexpenditures/1_6_apr06.xls

The information is for the years 2006-07 to 2008-09 and similar updated information for previous years is not available. However, estimates for previous years based on prior economic assumptions can found in Table 4 "Direct effects of illustrative changes in income tax" from earlier editions of the publication "Tax ready reckoner and tax reliefs" which are available in the House of Commons Library.

Tax receipts figures for Scotland are not readily available. Instead, the following table provides estimates of Scotland's share of UK income tax liabilities since 1997-98.

	Income tax liabilities (£ billion)
	Scotland?amounts of income tax liabilities (£ billion)	Scotland's share of UK income tax liabilities (percentage)
1997-98	6.2	7.8
1998-99	6.5	7.3
1999-2000	6.5	7.0
2000-01	7.3	6.9
2001-02	7.6	7.1
2002-03	7.8	7.1
2003-04	8.1	7.3
2004-05[1]	85	7.3
2005-06[1]	9.0	7.3
2006-07[1]	9.5	7.3

[1] Projections

The income tax information is based on the Survey of Personal Income (SPI), The latest survey year is 2003-04 and all estimates post that year are based on the 2003-04 SPI projected forward in line with Budget 2006 HM Treasury assumptions.

Inheritance Tax (Northern Ireland)

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on how many estates in Northern Ireland inheritance tax was paid in each of the last five years; and how much was paid. [70910]

Dawn Primarolo: The following table supplies the information requested for the last five years for which figures are available.

Inheritance tax where country of domicile was Northern Ireland

	Number of estates paying tax	Receipts (£ million)
2000-01	600	37
2001-02	500	27
2002-03	500	30
2003-04[1]	600	28
2004-05[1]	500	26

[1] Receipts for 2003-04 and 2004-05 are estimated from information on the number of estates paying tax in those years.

National Insurance Contributions

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) when he expects HM Revenue and Customs to have recorded national insurance contributions for (a) 2003-04, (b) 2004-05 and (c) 2005-06; [70228]

(2) what targets he has set HM Revenue and Customs to record national insurance contributions in each of the last three years; and whether these targets have been met. [70232]

Dawn Primarolo: HMRC achieved its PSA target to record 98 per cent. of relevant national insurance data contained in Employer's Annual Returns for both the 2002-03 and 2003-04 tax years by 31 March 2004 and 31 March 2005 respectively.

The same target applied for the 2004-05 tax year and was achieved on 30 April 2006, one month late.

For 2005-06 tax year the target is to record 100 per cent. of relevant national insurance data contained in Employer's Annual Returns by 31 March 2007 and we expect that this target will be met.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to speed up the recording by HM Revenue and Customs of national insurance contributions. [70229]

Dawn Primarolo: Last year HMRC implemented the Modernising PAYE Processes for Customers (MPPC) Programme to facilitate and encourage the filing of Employer's Annual Returns electronically. As a result the target to record relevant national insurance data contained in 2005-06 Employer's Annual Returns has been increased to 99 per cent. by 31 December 2006 and 100 per cent. by 31 March 2007.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average age was at which individuals began to pay national insurance contributions in each of the last 10 years. [70057]

Dawn Primarolo: The most common ages for individuals to pay national insurance contributions for the first time are 16, 17 and 18. However, later starters leads to a higher arithmetic average (mean) of around 20 to 22 years of age as shown in the following table.

Average age of individuals who started to pay national insurance contributions in each year

	Male	Female	All
1994-95	20	22	21
1995-96	20	21	21
1996-97	20	22	21
1997-98	20	21	20
1998-99	20	21	21
1999-2000	20	21	21
2000-01	21	21	21
2001-02	21	21	21
2002-03	21	21	21
2003-04	21	22	21

Notes:

1. The table shows the average age of individuals at the start (6 April) of the year for which they make their first national insurance contributions (Classes 1, 2 or 3).
2. Based on the 1 per cent. Lifetime Labour Market Database extract from the National Insurance Recording System in May 2005.
3. Latest available year is 2003-04, and recent years are subject to revision.
4. Since 1999, Class 1 NICs are only payable above the personal threshold although they are treated as paid on earnings between the lower earnings limit and the threshold. The figures above look only at individuals paying contributions and determine the earliest year for which they had made such a payment.
5. Average age has been rounded to the nearest year.

Personal Income Tax Allowance

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the cost to the Exchequer of raising the personal income tax allowance to £7,500, abolishing the 10p starting rate of income tax, raising the basic rate limit to £42,500 and abolishing age-related allowances. [71206]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 16 May 2006]: Introducing the proposed tax changes simultaneously would cost about £11 billion in 2006-07.

The estimate assumes:

a universal personal allowance of £7,500, absorbing the starting rate band on earnings and savings in the basic rate band, with tax rates on dividends unchanged, increasing the basic rate limit to £42,500, and abolishing the married couples allowances available for couples aged 72 and over.

The estimates are based on the 2003-04 Survey of Personal Incomes projected forward to 2006-07 in line with Budget 2006 assumptions.

The figure excludes any estimate of behavioural response to the tax changes which could be significant given the scale of the changes.

Private Office Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much has been paid in (a) salary, (b) travelling expenses, (c) subsistence allowance and (d) removal expenses to special advisers in his private office in each of the last three years. [69064]

John Healey: Since 2003, the Government have published on an annual basis the names and overall cost of special advisers and the number in each pay band. For information relating to the last financial year I refer the hon. Member to the written ministerial statement made by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 21 July 2005, Official Report, columns 158-61WS.

Information on special advisers for this financial year is currently being collected and will be published in the normal way when it is ready.

In relation to special advisers' travel and subsistence expenses, I refer to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Leicester, East (Keith Vaz) on 16 March 2006, Official Report, column 2411W. All official travel by special advisers is undertaken in accordance with the requirements of the Ministerial Code and the Civil Service Management Code.

There have been no special advisers' removal expenses in the last three financial years.

Rice Imports

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what revenue was raised in (a) 2004 and (b) 2005 from imports into the UK of rice (combined nomenclature 1006) from (i) Egypt, (ii) Guyana, (iii) India, (iv) Pakistan, (v) Thailand and (vi) the United States. [71500]

Dawn Primarolo: The customs duty declared in respect of rice imported into the UK is in the following table.

Egypt	1,427,587.80	952,488.41
Guyana	218,252.42	—
India	587,123.55	735,473.92
Pakistan	491,008.58	1,043,962.57
Thailand	2,130,163.11	1,743,046.84
USA	5,699,799.08	3,900,169.50

Student Loans

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the number of people affected by problems with in-tax year changes in employer and consequent effects on student loan repayments; and if he will make a statement. [71099]

Dawn Primarolo: Approximately 13 million employees moved between jobs in the 2004-05 tax year but only a small proportion of these would be likely to be repaying a student loan. No information is available to provide the estimate requested.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many students have contacted HM Revenue and Customs in each year since 2002 with queries relating to student loans where the problem has arisen because of a change in employer during the tax year; and if he will make a statement. [71100]

Dawn Primarolo: The information requested is not available.

Tamworth

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many residents of Tamworth worked outside the constituency in (a) 1981, (b) 1991, (c) 2001 and (d) the most recent year for which figures are available. [71242]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 17 May 2006.

I am replying as National Statistician and Registrar General for England and Wales to your recent question asking the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many residents of Tamworth worked outside of the constituency in (a) 1981, (b) 1991 and (c) 2001 and (d) the most recent year for which figures are available. (71242)

As Tamworth Parliamentary Constituency did not exist in 1981 no data are available for this year. Data from the 2001 census are the most recent figures available.

Tamworth parliamentary constituency

	Works in Tamworth	Works Outside Tamworth
1991	[1]20,168	[1]19,406
2001	23,999	21,447

Notes:
[1]In 1991 responses to workplace questions were only processed for approximately 10% of the population. The figures in this table have been grossed up by a factor of10.16 to account for this.

Tax Credits

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many tax credit claims have been terminated due to the ending of a joint claim by a married couple or partners in each month since April 2003; and if he will make a statement. [70258]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member on 10 May 2006, Official Report, column 289W.

Information on the number of joint tax credit claims terminated in each month since April 2003 is not available except at disproportionate cost.

Philip Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps are being taken (a) to identify and (b) to combat tax credit fraud; and how much was spent on such steps in the last year for which figures are available. [64821]

Dawn Primarolo: HMRC takes fraud very seriously and as part of its everyday activity, continually examines its approach to tackling fraud—introducing new measures and initiatives where necessary. It would be inappropriate to give specific details of these as it could aid those seeking to gain through fraud.

The operating costs for directly tackling tax credit fraud in 2005-06 was approximately £39.5 million.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much financial assistance was provided by HM Revenue and Customs to voluntary organisations to assist the public on tax credit issues in each year such assistance has been provided, broken down by (a) organisation and (b) region. [69840]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 12 May 2006]: HMRC has provided financial assistance to voluntary organisations on tax credits issues since new tax credits were introduced in 2003. The sum of the financial support provided in each of the financial years since then is:

2002-03	308,650
2003-04	323,922
2004-05	644,361
2005-06	559,926

Tax Office (Isle of Wight)

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the parishes or, where smaller, the electoral divisions of the Isle of Wight; what proportion of the population of each lies within the core catchment area of the Newport, Isle of Wight tax office; where he expects other island residents to conduct their face-to-face tax transactions; what criteria inform the definition of the core catchment area and its population; what definition of Newport town centre he used for the purpose of the impact assessment for relocating the Newport tax office; and if he will place in the Library a copy of the diversity and equality screen recommended in connection with the relocation of the Newport tax office. [70144]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 11 May 2006]: I refer the hon. Member to my reply of 9 May 2006, Official Report, column 123W.

HMRC is relocating its Newport Enquiry Centre. It will continue to offer a face-to-face service in Newport and this service will continue to be available to all customers of HMRC on the Isle of Wight. HMRC is also maintaining its regular presence at the Ryde Help Centre.

Teenage Pregnancies

Tim Loughton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many girls under the age of 16 years (a) became pregnant and (b) gave birth in each of the last 10 years, broken down by age. [71653]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 17 May 2006:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many girls under the age of 16 years (a) became pregnant and (b) gave birth in each of the last 10 years, broken down by age. (71653)

Conception statistics include pregnancies that result in one or more live or still births (a maternity) or a legal abortion under the Abortion Act 1967 (an abortion).

Conception statistics for girls aged under 14 by single year of age are not published by the Office for National Statistics (ONS) to protect the confidentiality of individual's information due to small number of events at younger ages. Therefore figures are provided for all girls aged under 14 combined.

Number of conceptions and conceptions leading to maternities for girls aged under 14, 14 and 15 for England and Wales from 1995 to 2004 (the most recent year for which figures are available) are given in the table below.

Number of total conceptions and conceptions leading to maternity, England and Wales, 1995 to 2004[1]

	Age of woman at conception
	Under 14		14		15
Year of conception	Total conception	Conception leading to maternity	Total conception	Conception leading to maternity	Total conception	Conception leading to maternity

[1] Provisional.

Telephone Advice Lines

Mr. Love: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many telephone advice lines his Department and its non-departmental public bodies support; how many telephone advisers each employs; and (a) how much funding is provided to each by his Department and its non-departmental public bodies, (b) other Government Departments, (c) the private sector and (d) the voluntary sector. [66582]

Dawn Primarolo: The information is as follows

HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC)

HMRC operates a wide range of help and advice lines for members of the public. These are directly managed and funded by the Department through a network of some 29 Contact Centres currently employing around 9,100 full time equivalent staff and handling in the region of 50 million calls a year. It would only be possible to provide information on individual lines at disproportionate cost.

Valuation Office Agency (VOA)

The Valuation Office Agency supports two telephone advice lines that are in operation when business needs dictate. The last two uses were for the 2005 Non-Domestic Revaluation for England and Wales and the 2005 Welsh Council Tax revaluation.

The staff operating these lines are Valuation Office Agency staff who return to other duties when the lines are not in use. The staffing budget does not show a separate figure for staff employed on this duty.

General Register Office (GRO)

The GRO has four Advice lines that cover: certificate requests, Births, Marriages and the Local Register. A total of 36 staff are employed on these advice lines and they are funded entirely by the GRO.

Office for National Statistics (ONS)

The ONS has four main advice lines and employs 22 staff. These lines cover: National Statistics Customer Contact Centre (one UK line and one EU line that is 70 per cent. funded by EU money); Public Enquiry Line; Census Customer Service Retail and Prices Index Help Line.

All of the lines except for the small piece NS Customer contact 2 for EU is funded by ONS.

Royal Mint

The Royal Mint has a dedicated line that deals with public enquiries. It also has access to 43 further lines that are normally used to deal with telephone orders from retail customers. Some of these lines are periodically used to deal with public inquiries if an increase in demand deems it necessary. The cost of these lines is totally funded by Royal Mint.

Government Actuaries Department (GAD)

GAD publishes two telephone numbers to enable people to contact GAD direct. GAD does not employ a 'telephone adviser', but manages all inquiries on an ad-hoc basis redirecting them to the specific area of responsibility to answer. The Press Officer, who deals primarily with press-related calls, assists this service. Costs for this service are fully absorbed into the normal running of the department.

Debt Management Office (DMO)

Computershare Investor Services plc provides a phone advice line as part of their contract with HM Treasury for the registration and administration of Government Stocks. The phone line, which usually has four staff, is not separately costed.

Office of Government Commerce (OGC)

The public advice line for OGC is 0845 000 4999 and is staffed by seven OGC telephone advisors. The line is 100 per cent. funded by OGC.

National Savings and Investments

NS&I outsourced its operations to Siemens Business Services UK. As such NS&I does not employ telephone advice lines or staff to give advice.

Troncs

Mrs. Villiers: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what the cost has been to his Department of the National Insurance Contributions exemptions on the payment of troncs in each year since 1997; [71331]

(2) with whom Treasury officials have met to discuss the (a) retention, (b) reform and (c) replacement of the tronc system; and from whom his Department has had representations on this system; [71332]

(3) how many people (a) have received payments and (b) have received payments solely through a tronc system in each year since 1996; [71333]

(4) how many troncmasters there were in the UK in each year since 1996. [71334]

Dawn Primarolo: Information on the cost of national insurance contributions exemptions on the payment of troncs, the number of people receiving payments through a tronc system and the number of troncmasters in the UK is not available.

There have not been any meetings on the retention, reform or replacement of troncs nor have Treasury officials received representations about the system. HMRC officials have had meetings about revisions to the guidance booklet 'E24 Tips, Gratuities, Service Charges and Troncs'.

Unemployment

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the unemployment rate is, broken down by (a) sex and (b) ethnic group. [71231]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell dated 17 May 2006:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about unemployment rates by gender and ethnic origin. (71231)

The attached table gives the rates of unemployed people aged 16 and over by gender and ethnic origin, for the three months ending February 2006.

Estimates are taken from the Office for National Statistics's Labour Force Survey (LFS). As with any sample survey, estimates from the LFS are subject to a margin of uncertainty.

Unemployment rates[1] of people aged 16 and over by sex and ethnic origin

			Percentage
Three months ending February 2006	All	Men	Women
All origins[2]	5.0	5.5	4.6
White	4.5	4.9	4.1
All ethnic minority groups	11.0	11.7	10.1
Mixed	13.0	17.8	8.4
Asian or Asian British	9.6	9.4	10.0
Black or Black British	12.3	13.4	11.2
Chinese	7.9	7.5	8.3
Other stated ethnic origins	13.4	16.1	9.9

[1] Unemployed aged 16 and over as a percentage of economically active aged 16 and over.
[2] Includes those who did not state their ethnic origin.

Valuation Office Agency

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Meriden (Mrs. Spelman) of 30 November 2005, Official Report, column 530W, on the Valuation Office Agency, what assessment the (a) Valuation Office Agency and (b) HM Revenue and Customs has now made of other uses of the automated valuation model. [70560]

Dawn Primarolo: The Valuation Office Agency (VGA) believes that the automated valuation model can be effective as a tool to support decision making.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library a copy of the Valuation Office Agency's electronic data sharing agreement with the Land Registry. [70677]

Dawn Primarolo: The Memorandum of Understanding between the Valuation Office Agency and HM Land Registry has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the Office for National Statistics has access to (a) the Valuation Office Agency's Council Tax Valuation Lists and (b) dwellinghouse coding details. [70682]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, date 17 May 2006:

As National Statistician and Registrar General for England and Wales I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking whether the Office for National Statistics has access to (a) the Valuation Office Agency's Council Tax Valuation Lists and (b) dwellinghouse coding details.

A number of areas within the Office for National Statistics (ONS) have at times had access to the Valuation Office Agency's Council Tax Valuation Lists and dwellinghouse coding details. For example, ONS provided a bureau service to the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (now Department for Communities and Local Government) and the Valuation Office Agency (VOA) to geo-reference 2001, 2002 and 2003 valuation list data which enabled aggregated and non-disclosive dwellings statistics by council tax bands for small areas to be disseminated on the Neighbourhood Statistics website.

http://www.statistics.gov.uk/StatBase/Product.asp?vlnk=9616&Pos=&ColRank=1&Rank=272

This required access to valuation lists and coding details to which VOA retained ownership. ONS is no longer required to provide a bureau service.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the Valuation Office Agency's 2005-06 annual report will be published. [70687]

Dawn Primarolo: It is expected that the Agency's 2005-06 annual report and accounts will be laid before Parliament in the week commencing 12 June.

VAT Fraud

Mr. Davey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what guidance his Department has produced for (a) businesses and (b) consumers regarding missing trader intra-community (carousel) VAT fraud. [71348]

(2) what estimate he has made of the revenue lost through missing trader intra-community (carousel) VAT fraud in each year since 2001; and what (a) plans he has and (b) resources he has allocated to tackle such fraud. [71349]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 2 May 2006, Official Report, columns 1455-56W, to the hon. Member for Twickenham (Dr. Cable).

HMRC have committed significant additional resources to strengthen their strategy, and there are now over 1,000 staff engaged in tackling Missing Trader Intra-Community (MTIC) VAT fraud.

HMRC have published 'Notice 726—Joint and Several Liability in the Supply of Specified Goods' and VAT Strategy: Input Tax deduction without a valid VAT invoice—Statement of Practice July 2003'. These contain guidance for businesses on specific measures that have been introduced to tackle VAT fraud, including reasonable checks that they can make in order to satisfy themselves of the bona fides of their trading activity and those with whom they trade. Both these publications are available on HMRC's internet site at www.hmrc.gov.uk.

In addition HMRC are working closely with the Joint VAT Consultative Committee to develop guidance aimed at helping businesses to identify the hallmarks of MTIC fraud.

Accenture

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been spent by (a) the national health service and (b) her Department on management consultant services from Accenture in each of the last five years. [68372]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Detailed information about contracts for management consultants engaged by NHS bodies is not held centrally.

The expenditure by the Department directly on management consultancy services provided by Accenture is shown in the table. The Department's current financial system does not hold information or years prior to 2004 and could not obtain this information without incurring disproportionate costs.

Acute Hospital Trusts

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the annual capital servicing charges are for each acute hospital trust in England. [64331]

Andy Burnham: The capital charges paid by each national health service trust have been placed in the Library. Figures are for 2004-05, which is the latest year available.

Ambulance Services

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects to announce her decision on the possible merger of Staffordshire Ambulance Service with other ambulance services. [71271]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 16 May 2006]: An oral statement was made to the House on the subject of ambulance and primary care trust configuration on 16 May 2006.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many times ambulances attended emergency mental health cases in each London borough in each of the last five years; and if she will make a statement; [69785]

(2) what average time ambulances took to convey patients from point of pick-up to hospital in each London borough in each of the last five years; and if she will make a statement. [69786]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information requested is not collected centrally.

However, the Department does collect data on the number of emergency calls received by each ambulance trust and data on ambulance response times. These data are published in the statistical bulletin "Ambulance Services, England: 2004-05", which is available in the Library and on the Department's website at www.dh.gov.uk/assetRoot/04/11/36/79/04113679.pdf. This publication includes data for the London Ambulance National Health Service Trust, which cover the London boroughs.

Autism

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research her Department has commissioned into the causes of autism. [69398]

Andy Burnham: None. The main agency through which the Government supports medical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council (MRC). The MRC is an independent body funded by the Department of Trade and Industry via the Office of Science and Innovation.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many finished consultant episodes involving a diagnosis of autistic spectrum disorders there were between 1990-91 and 1996-97. [70748]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Diagnoses of autistic spectrum disorders (ASDs) in hospitals are available from hospital episode statistics, as shown in the table.

ASDs include childhood autism, atypical autism, Asperger's syndrome, Rett's syndrome, and other less common ASDs.

The two sets of information are not comparable, as up to 1994-95 figures show diagnoses for children only, and after 1995-96 figures show diagnoses for all ages.

Cancer Services

Ann Keen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been spent on cancer services in Brentford and Isleworth in each year since 1997. [71161]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information requested is not held centrally.

Children's Health Services

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps have been taken to provide choice to those needing to use child and adolescent mental health services. [67647]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department has commissioned a Choice in Mental Health programme, which is run by the Care Services Improvement Partnership and the National Institute for Mental Health England. The programme aims to extend the scope, range and equity of choices available for people across the spectrum of care, including child and adolescent mental health services.

In December 2005, choice local implementation teams were asked to submit a themed review on choice in all age mental health and learning disability services, as part of the mental health national service framework autumn assessment process. A report summarising the key findings of the themed review, including local developments in providing choice to children and adolescent service users, is currently being finalised ahead of publication in June 2006.

Children's Hospices

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what recent discussions she has had with (a) ministerial colleagues, (b) primary care trusts and strategic health authorities and (c) outside organisations on the funding of children's hospices; [55060]

(2) if she will make a statement on the (a) short-term and (b) long-term funding of children's hospices. [55061]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: My predecessor Liam Byrne visited the Donna Louise Trust Children's Hospice in Stoke and Great Ormond Street hospital to see the different options available in palliative care for children and young people. He also met with a delegation from Butterwick Hospice and has held a seminar on children's palliative care with a wide range of organisations. A full list of organisations who attended the seminar is shown in the following list. My predecessor has also discussed this issue with ministerial colleagues, including my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State.

Palliative care for children and young people with a life threatening or life limiting condition requires a wide range of services provided in a variety of settings: home—to look at the level and type of palliative care services for children and young people needed in the different areas and to facilitate how this can be drawn together; school; and hospital or hospice—to enable them to live as normal a life as possible. It is for local decision how these services will be provided but we have published guidance to support primary care trusts, in working with local authorities and other partners (including hospices), to commission high quality services.

Our manifesto commitment to double funding for end of life care will increase choice about where to receive palliative care for children and young people with life-limiting conditions. A statement will be made about funding the commitment shortly.

Choose and Book System

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer to question 54872, on the choose and book pilot scheme, how many patients opted to receive a service outside of their own primary care trust (PCT), broken down by PCT. [64085]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent estimate she has made of the proportion of general practitioners using the choose and book service in (a) England and (b) Taunton constituency. [64256]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Over 95 per cent., of general practitioners (GPs) in England are currently registered to use choose and book and 4,489 (52 per cent.) GP practices in England have made at least one booking using the choose and book service. In the Taunton Deane primary care trust area, 93 per cent. (14 out of 15) of GP practices have made at least one booking using the choose and book service.

Mr. Leech: To ask the Secretary of State for Health why the choose and book system within the NHS is not used for mental health; and whether there are plans to extend its use to that area. [65812]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Choose and book is not currently widely used for mental health services, because the majority of referrals for these services are not from general practitioners to consultants. Where this is the referral route, the system is available for use. At the end of April 2006, choose and book had been used to make 266 bookings to services for the adult mental illness and old age psychiatry specialties.

However, the national choice consultation in autumn 2003 highlighted the choices which mental health service users feel would most enhance their user experience, these focused on choice of treatment rather than choice of service provider. These findings informed the detailed work carried out to formulate the Government's choice at referral policy and led to the decision not to require mental health services to offer choice of four providers at the point of referral.

In the light of the national choice consultation's findings, the Department commissioned the choice in mental health programme, which is being run by the National Institute of Mental Health in England. This programme aims to extend the scope, range and equity of treatment choices available across service user pathways.

Dorset and Somerset Strategic Health Authority

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much funding her Department allocated per head of population in (a) Taunton constituency, (b) Dorset and Somerset strategic health authority and (c) England in each year since 2001. [64307]

Andy Burnham: The Department makes revenue allocations to primary care trusts (PCTs), not constituencies or strategic health authorities (SHAs).

Allocations were first made to PCTs in 2003-04. Prior to this, funding was allocated to health authorities (HAs).

Allocations per head of population to PCTs covered by Dorset and Somerset SHA and the England average are shown in tables 1 and 2.

The majority of the population of Taunton constituency is resident in Taunton Deane PCT.

Table 1: HA allocations per head of population

Notes:
It is not possible to compare allocations rounds for the following reasons: organisational changes and changes made to the weighted capitation formula for each allocations round, mean that comparisons between allocations rounds would not be on a like with like basis; changes in the services for which PCTs are responsible for funding changes over time. For example, 2006-07 is the first year that primary medical services were incorporated into revenue allocations.

Foster Review

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when she expects to publish the findings of the Foster Review of non-medical healthcare regulation; [70820]

(2) when she expects to publish the regulatory impact assessment of proposed changes to the regulation of osteopaths; [70821]

(3) what discussions she has had with the osteopathic profession regarding changes to the regulation of osteopaths; and what assessment she has made of the merits of changes to patient care. [70822]

Andy Burnham: We will publish our decisions on the review of non-medical professional regulation and on the Chief Medical Officer's review of medical revalidation and related subjects in due course. A statement will be made at that point. The reviews used a wide range of evidence, including from the osteopathic profession.

General Practitioners

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her Department's press release of 21 March 2006 on the proposed general practitioner Systems of Choice initiative, what assessment she has made of the impact that the initiative will have on contracts with local and national service providers which commit the NHS to buy a minimum volume of services and systems. [63946]

Caroline Flint: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on Monday 27 February 2006, Official Report, column 452W.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her Department's press release of 21 March 2006 on the proposed general practitioner Systems of Choice initiative, whether general practitioners will be able to claim back their costs from primary care trust budgets. [63947]

Caroline Flint: Under the general practitioner Systems of Choice (GPSoC) proposals funding would be provided for general practice systems that have achieved a GPSoC level of compliance. Capital funding for any necessary hardware improvements, and revenue funding for compliant systems provided by existing system providers, would be included in primary care trust allocations. The NHS Connecting for Health agency will continue to fund local service provider-supplied systems.

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of general practitioner practices in West Lancashire make referrals using the choose and book system. [64295]

Caroline Flint: About 40 per cent. (10 general practitioner practices out of a total of 25) have made at least one booking through the choose and book system.

Source:
Connecting for Health

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practitioners covered out-of-office hours in (a) England and (b) Taunton constituency in each year since 1997. [64345]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information is not collected by the Department. It is for individual primary care trusts to ensure that out-of-hours provision in their areas continues to be improved and developed into a better service for patients.

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her statement of 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 4, on the general practitioner contract, what the evidential basis was for her statement that thousands of people were alive and well as a result of the contract. [65511]

Caroline Flint: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 4 May, Official Report, column 1776W.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the number of urban dwellers who live more than one mile from their nearest GP practice or outreach surgery. [69750]

Andy Burnham: None. However, under section 16CC(1) of the National Health Service Act 1977, primary care trusts must, to the extent that they consider necessary to meet all reasonable requirements, ensure the provision of primary medical services in their localities.

Gershon Review

Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much she expects Information and Communication Technology changes to contribute to the Gershon efficiency savings in her Department in 2007-08. [63514]

Caroline Flint: The Gershon report "Releasing Resources to the Front Line" identified three main contributors to front line service (productive time) efficiency—information and communication technology (ICT), process redesign and work force reform. Overall, we expect this part of the efficiency programme to deliver savings of at least £2,700 million per year by March 2008.

Our delivery strategy for this programme recognises that efficiencies are achieved by technology, process and work force changes being delivered together. The national health service uses an integrated service improvement programme (ISIP) to plan and manage service improvement. This programme is a key element of implementing the national programme for information technology. More information is available at www.isip.nhs.uk.

The approach to measuring benefits reflects this delivery strategy. It therefore measures overall outcome changes rather than the separate contribution of ICT or work force or process change. This approach is explained in the Department's efficiency technical note which is available on the Department's website at:

www.dh.gov.uk/assetRoot/04/12/41/37/04124137.pdf.

Health Trusts

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what plans she has to review the market forces factor used in the allocation of funding to health trusts; [71129]

(2) who the members are of the Advisory Committee on Resource Allocation. [71130]

Andy Burnham [holding answers 15 May 2006]: The Department has commissioned a review of the market forces factor (MFF) component of the weighted-capitation formula. This review will inform revenue allocations to primary care trusts (PCTs) post 2007-08.

The review is being overseen by the advisory committee on resource allocation (ACRA). ACRA is an independent body consisting of national health service management, general practitioners and academics.

The ACRA members are shown in the table.

ACRA membership as of September 2005

Professor H. Glennerster	Professor Emeritus of Social Administration and Co-Director of CASE, London School of Economics
Dr. R. Hussey	Director of Health Strategy, Cheshire and Merseyside Strategic Health Authority
Professor Sir B. Jarman	Emeritus Professor of the Department of General Practice, Imperial College of Medicine
Mr. P. Lilley	Chief Executive, Gloucestershire Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust
Ms R. MacDonald	Chief Executive, Bath and North Somerset Primary Care Trust
Dr. N. Rice	Reader, University of York
Mr. D. Roberts	Unit Manager, The Information Centre for health and social care
Dr. I. Trimble	General practitioner, Nottingham
Mr. C. Vincent	Department of Health, Finance

Healthcare Commission

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many lay associates have been trained by the Healthcare Commission for handling complaints against the NHS; how much it cost the commission to provide the training; and how much has been paid to associates attending mandatory training courses; [71395]

(2) how many independent panels involving lay associates have been convened by the Healthcare Commission for the investigation of complaints against the NHS. [71397]

Andy Burnham [holding answer 16 May 2006]: The chairman of the Healthcare Commission has confirmed that when the commission took on its present role in the independent review of complaints in July 2004, it recruited approximately 250 lay panel members. All those recruited underwent three days training for which they received expenses of £250 a day. In addition, there were costs associated with the room hire and some speakers at the training events. These costs are not reported separately from wider commission expenditure on such items, but the commission estimates that expenditure on venues, speakers and accommodation might have been about £100,000.

The chairman of the Healthcare Commission has confirmed that lay panels were involved in only four of the 7,400 cases completed in 2005-06 and that it is unlikely that there will be a significant number of panels in the future. The chairman has added that the commission is seeking alternative ways of using the valuable experience of some lay panel members. Approximately 100 lay panellists worked as office-based case managers in 2005-06. The commission is also developing options for using lay panellists as home-based associate case managers.

Independent Care Sector

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions his Department has had with the independent care home sector over the past 12 months on financial measures to reward high-quality care. [70126]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Ministers and departmental officials meet regularly with representatives of the care home sector, when issues such as funding are raised and discussed.

However, responsibility for commissioning social care services rests with local councils. The Department allocates funding to councils for social care services. Councils are responsible for using these resources in a way which best meets the needs of their local populations. Contracting arrangements between councils and independent-sector providers of care are a matter for local decision. The Department does not set or recommend rates at which councils contract with nursing and residential homes, nor does it set quality standards. It is important that councils are able to tailor contracts as necessary to suit specific local circumstances. Many councils do pay financial premiums for high-quality services.

There have been substantial increases in the level of funding provided for social services. Between 1996-97 and 2002-03, the overall level of funding for social services increased by 20 per cent., an average real-terms annual increase of around 3 per cent. Funding to councils for personal social services has increased by an annual average of 6 per cent. In real terms from 2003-04 to 2005-06; councils can and do use this money to increase the fees they pay to care homes.

Insulin

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 2 March 2006, Official Report, column 919W, on insulin, whether data pertaining to accidental insulin overdoses includes the type of insulin being used. [71654]

Andy Burnham: The data collected on accidental insulin overdose does not identify the type of insulin used.

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many deaths have occurred in the UK where the insulins (a) Hypurin Porcine isophane, (b) Human Insulatard and (c) Lantus were suspected to be a cause or contributory factor since 2002 as show on Yellow Card Adverse Reaction Reports; and if she will make a statement; [69615]

(2) if she will investigate the impact of the insulin analogue Lantus on patient health and well-being since its introduction in 2002; and if she will make a statement. [69620]

Andy Burnham: The human insulin analogue Lantus (insulin glargine) was granted a marketing authorisation valid throughout the European Union by the European Commission in June 2000. Clinical trials submitted at the time of licensing examined the safety and efficacy of insulin glargine in diabetic patients treated for up to 12 months. Generally, the side effects observed with insulin glargine were similar to those seen with other human insulins, with the most commonly observed side effects being hypoglycaemia, visual disturbance and injection site reactions. A European public assessment report, which details the basis for the decision to license insulin glargine and all subsequent changes to the license, is available on the website of the European Medicines Agency (EMEA) at www.emea.eu.int.

The safety of all insulins in routine clinical practice in the United Kingdom (UK) is closely monitored by the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA). Any possible new safety issue to emerge is evaluated and any new prescribing advice is issued to health professionals and patients, following discussion with other European regulatory agencies and EMEA as appropriate. The patient information leaflet for insulin glargine contains suitable advice on use of the product and warnings about possible adverse effects.

The MHRA receives reports of suspected adverse drug reactions (ADRs) via the UK yellow card scheme. A total of 373 reports of suspected ADRs have been received in association with insulin glargine since January 2002 and of these 15 had a fatal outcome. Where cause of death was reported there is no particular pattern. There have been a total of five reports of a suspected adverse reaction with Human Insulatard in this time period, of which one had a fatal outcome. There has been one report of a suspected adverse reaction to Hypurin Porcine Isophane in this time-period; this did not have a fatal outcome. These figures reflect only those reports where the products Human Insulatard or Hypurin Porcine Isophane have been specified by the reporter.

The reporting of a suspected adverse reaction does not necessarily mean it was caused by the drug. The suspected reaction may relate to other factors such as underlying illness or other medicines taken concurrently. It is not valid to compare the number of reports of suspected adverse reactions between products as a number of different factors affect the level of reporting of adverse reactions including the level of usage of the product, how long the product has been on the market and any publicity surrounding the product.

IT Interoperability

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research she has commissioned into healthcare information technology programmes in other countries, with particular reference to system interoperability. [66073]

Caroline Flint: The national programme for information technology has been designed and developed, and is being implemented, in accordance with international and European Union-wide standards. These standards have also been adopted by the United Kingdom e-Government Interoperability Framework. The Department's NHS Connecting for Health agency, which is responsible for delivering the programme, works closely with the World Health Organisation and with European and international standards bodies to ensure interoperability subject to adherence to standards and strict security and confidentiality safeguards. The interoperability standards are regularly updated and are made readily available to suppliers of information technology systems. Departmental officials have regular contact and dialogue with healthcare organisations across the world. The national health service is taking a leadership role in the promotion of SNOMED CT, a terminology system that has now been adopted by several other jurisdictions.

LIFT Schemes

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the answer of 28 March 2006, Official Report, column 926W, on local improvement finance trust (LIFT) schemes, what progress she has made towards the targets set for LIFT. [66724]

Andy Burnham: The national health service local improvement finance trust, along with other existing primary care procurement routes, is a mechanism to support the delivery of the following targets set out in the NHS Plan:

Up to £1 billion investment in primary care facilities;

Up to 3,000 family doctors' premises substantially refurbished or replaced by 2004; and 500 one stop primary centres delivered by 2004, which has been extended by delivering the NHS Plan to 750 by 2008.

Progress against these targets has been made as follows:

Over £1 billion additional investment is supporting the development of primary care facilities;

2,848 family doctors' premises were substantially refurbished or replaced by the end of 2004; and 510 one stop primary care centres were delivered by the end of 2004, with the latest figure being 566 centres delivered by December 2005.

Maternity Care

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the efficacy of whole-scale 12-week scans during pregnancy; and if she will make a statement. [70991]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) produced guidelines "Antenatal Care: Routine Care for the Healthy Pregnant Woman" which recommend an early ultrasound scan between 10 to 13 weeks for gestational age assessment.

The benefits of the whole-scale 12-week scans are well documented. Early detection and appropriate care management is important for women with multiple pregnancies and will produce a healthier outcome for both the mother and baby. The benefits of early screening also extend to screening for other conditions such as sickle cell anaemia and Thalassaemia, so that screening and the follow on diagnosis can take place at the correct time.

The early scan will also detect some serious abnormalities such as neural tube defects. In relation to national screening programmes, an early dating scan is a set standard agreed by an expert working group who recommend that all women prior to Down's syndrome screening must have a dating scan to ensure the quality of the screening test. Guidance for health professionals on more accurate tests for Down's syndrome screening was published by the Department in November 2003. This guidance, based on advice from the national screening committee, which advises Ministers on all aspects of screening, complements and supports national health service implementation of the NICE guideline.

Mental Health

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what her latest estimate is of the extent of perinatal mental health provision in (a) England and (b) Northamptonshire. [71548]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has not made a direct assessment of perinatal mental health provision in Northamptonshire or England. The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence has been commissioned to produce guidelines on routine postnatal care, which is due for publication in June 2006, and antenatal and postnatal mental health, which is due in February 2007.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many prescriptions for anti-depressants have been given to children in the last 12 months; and if she will list the drugs prescribed; [69392]

(2) what percentage of children being treated for depression were prescribed drugs by (a) GPs and (b) consultants in the last period for which figures are available. [69393]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Information on the number of prescriptions of anti-depressants issued for children in 2005 is shown in the following table:

We do not collect information on the number of children in respect of which these prescriptions were issued, nor whether the prescriber was a general practitioner or consultant. Not all the prescriptions will have been treating depression as these drugs are also used to treat disorders such as nocturnal enuresis, anxiety, obsessive compulsive disorders and phobic states.

Notes:
PCA Data Prescription information are taken from the Prescription Cost Analysis (PCA) system, supplied by the Prescription Pricing Authority (PPA), and is based on a full analysis of all prescriptions dispensed in the community i.e. by community pharmacists and appliance contractors, dispensing doctors, and prescriptions submitted by prescribing doctors for items personally administered in England. Also included are prescriptions written in Wales, Scotland, Northern Ireland and the Isle of Man but dispensed in England. The data do not cover drugs dispensed in hospitals, including mental health trusts, or private prescriptions.
Prescription Items Prescriptions are written on a prescription form. Each single item written on the form is counted as a prescription item.
Exemption Category Estimates
The exemption data is identified from the box ticked on the back of the prescription form and relies on the form being completed correctly which may not always be the case. Information for categories that are not required to pay a charge (e.g. children) is based on a 1 in 20 sample of all exempt prescriptions dispensed by community pharmacists, appliance contractors and dispensing doctors. The information we have is therefore an estimate and subject to sampling errors. To reflect this we have rounded the exemption figures appropriately-figures less than 1,000 are shown as "*"; figures between 1,000 and 100,000 have been rounded to the nearest 1,000 and figures between 100,000 and 1 million have been rounded to the nearest 10,000.
Data for total of all ages has not been rounded since it is not exemption data.
Due to rounding, the sum of the components may not equal the totals.
Children are defined as 0-15 year olds, and as 16-18 year olds in full time education.
Dispensing Doctors
Data up to 2000 are not strictly comparable with data from later years. Up until September 2000 only patients having their prescriptions dispensed by the community pharmacists and appliance contractors were required to complete the back of the prescription form, but from October 2000 this requirement was extended to patients of dispensing doctors. Therefore data prior to October 2000 do not include prescriptions dispensed by dispensing doctors.

Multiple Sclerosis

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent discussions she has had with her counterparts in other EU member states on the efficacy, cost and availability of treatments for multiple sclerosis; and if she will make a statement. [70926]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: We have had no recent discussions with my counterparts in other European Union member states on the efficacy, cost and availability of treatments for multiple sclerosis.

Myalgic Encephalomyelitis

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will take steps to ensure the allocation of ring-fenced funds for specialist services for myalgic (a) encephalomyelitis and (b) encephalopathy should primary care trusts seek to reduce provision. [70869]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: In January 2004 funding of £8.5 million was announced for specialist services for those living with chronic fatigue syndrome/myalgic encephalomyelitis (CFS/ME). This funding, £2.5 million for 2004-05, and £6 million for 2005-06, was specifically intended to cover the costs of setting-up services where none already existed. At the end of this period funding for these centres will be from primary care trust general allocations. It is the responsibility of local health bodies to meet the health and social care needs of their local population.

The national service framework for long-term conditions (NSF) sets out a clear vision of how health and social care organisations can improve the quality, consistency and responsiveness of their services and help improve the lives of people with neurological conditions, including CFS/ME. National health service organisations are expected to demonstrate that they are making progress towards achieving the level of service quality described in the NSF.

The Healthcare Commission and the Commission for Social Care Inspection may undertake performance reviews to assess progress on local implementation of the NSF.

NHS Deficits

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the year-end gross NHS deficit for 2005-06. [70008]

Andy Burnham: For 2005-06 month six, the national health service as a whole is forecasting a gross deficit of around £948 million. Some NHS organisations have generated surpluses of around £325 million. Therefore, the NHS at 2005-06 month six is forecasting a net deficit of around £620 million.

NHS Finance

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment she has made of the International Monetary Fund's warning of a £50 billion gap in NHS finances; and if she will make a statement; [63922]

(2) what estimate she has made of healthcare spending between 2007 and 2050; what assessment she has made of the International Monetary Fund's estimate that healthcare spending could rise by up to six percentage points of gross domestic product over this period; and if she will make a statement. [63931]

Andy Burnham: The Government's latest long-term fiscal projections are contained in the 2005 long-term public finance report, published alongside the pre-Budget report in December 2005. On the basis of the projections presented in the report, healthcare spending is projected to increase from around 8.2 per cent. of gross domestic product in 2007 to around 9.7 per cent. in 2050. The actual level of public long-term health spending is however a matter for future budgets and spending reviews.

NHS Finance

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the budgets are for each (a) primary care trust, (b) NHS trust and (c) other NHS organisation in 2006-07. [63943]

Andy Burnham: Primary care trusts (PCTs) receive most of their budget through revenue allocations. PCTs also receive operational capital funding.

Revenue budgets for national health service trusts are agreed locally with PCTs. NHS trusts and care trusts also receive operational capital funding for building and equipment purchases.

Strategic health authorities (SHAs) receive strategic capital allocations for major capital developments, and capital will be allocated to PCTs and NHS trusts at the discretion of the SHA. Allocations for 2006-07 have been placed in the Library.

Central budgets for 2006-07, including SHA running costs budgets, have been agreed at board level within the Department. The detail of individual budgets will be confirmed shortly.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which strategic health authorities have authorised the top-slicing of primary care trust allocations in the (a) 2006-07 and (b) 2007-08 financial years; what proportion of primary care trust allocations are being withheld in each case; and under what legislation strategic health authorities have the authority to top-slice primary care trust allocations. [66603]

Andy Burnham: The plans for the creation of local reserves at strategic health authority level was set out in "The NHS in England: The operating framework for 2006-07" published by the Department on 26 January 2006 which is available in the Library and on the Department's website at: www.dh.gov.uk/assetRoot/04/12/73/15/04127315.pdf

The level of reserve transferred from primary care trusts to be held at strategic health authorities will be agreed by the Department as part of the national health service financial planning process for 2006-07.

Transfers of funding will be made by the Department on the basis of these agreed plans under section 97 of the NHS Act 1977 as amended.

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the total public expenditure per head of population on the (a) capital and (b) running costs of the national health service was in (i) London and (ii) each of the English regions in each of the last 10 years; [67322]

(2) what the total public expenditure per head of population on the (a) capital and (b) running costs of the national health service was in the metropolitan areas of (i) Greater Manchester, (ii) West Yorkshire, (iii) South Yorkshire, (iv) West Midlands, (v) Merseyside and (vi) Tyne and Wear in each of the last 10 years. [67325]

Andy Burnham: Expenditure per head of population from 1997-98 to 2004-05 by strategic health authority (SHA) area and for England is shown in the tables. Capital expenditure is taken as the total expenditure on purchased additions of fixed assets in each year by national health service bodies. Running costs are the total expenditure by health authorities, SHAs and primary care trusts.

Total expenditure is the expenditure by health authorities, strategic health authorities and primary care trusts in England, shown by current strategic health authority area. Expenditure on general dental services and pharmaceutical services accounted for by the Dental Practice Board and Prescription Pricing Authority, respectively, are excluded. This expenditure cannot be included within figures for individual health bodies as they are not included in commissioner accounts.

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her comments in The Guardian of 11 May 2006 on support for overspending trusts, if she will agree to write off the £11.27 million deficit of the University Hospitals of Morecambe Bay Trust. [71560]

Andy Burnham: National health service bodies must live within their means, and we will not be writing off debt when a particular trust has failed to operate within its budget.

It is the responsibility of strategic health authorities (SHAs) both to deliver overall financial balance for their local health communities and to ensure each and every body achieves financial balance. However, there is a degree of flexibility in how this is managed at a local level. SHAs can agree a recovery plan which phases the recovery of deficits over a number of years. This would require other NHS organisations within the health economy to under spend over the same period. Any such arrangements would have to be subject to the agreement of local providers, commissioners and the managing SHA.

NHS IT Programme

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment she has made of the effect that system interoperability would have on the costs of the NHS information technology programme; [63919]

(2) what assessment she has made of the ability of the single-system approach used by the NHS IT programme to respond to user demands and changing requirements. [63920]

Caroline Flint: The strategy for the national programme for information technology requires a consistent information architecture that can make patient treatment information available when and where it is needed. This does not rely on a single information system but involves the integration of multiple systems and applications operating together within that architecture to functional and technical interoperability standards.

Contracts with local service providers require them to ensure their systems and services meet these standards. This requirement covers interoperability both between systems and between localities, with the aim of supporting clinical networks and patient flows across communities, as well as providing the flexibility to meet emerging models of care that provide plurality of supply, choice and convenience for patients. Interoperability standards are shared with existing suppliers who are able to demonstrate compliance.

The commercial and organisational models chosen for delivering the national programme have produced exceptional value for the taxpayer by avoiding multiple procurements and significantly reducing unit costs for applications and systems.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment she has made of the merits of using service-oriented architecture in the NHS information technology programme; [63924]

(2) what assessment she has made of the potential impact of service-oriented architecture on competition for provision of services in the NHS information technology programme. [63925]

Caroline Flint: Service-oriented architecture has been in use for well over a decade in large enterprises, and encouragement has been given to the use of its design principles in connection with the development of national programme for information technology systems and services wherever doing so would improve the quality of the product. There have been no material changes in service-oriented architecture since the procurement phase of the national programme, and there is therefore no obvious scope for its impacting on competition for the provision of services at this stage.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the annual cost of the NHS information technology programme is to (a) primary care trusts, (b) NHS trusts and (c) other NHS organisations; [63927]

(2) what percentage of the budget of (a) primary care trusts, (b) NHS trusts and (c) other NHS organisations she expects to be spent on the NHS IT programme in (i) 2006-07 and (ii) in the next five years. [63942]

Caroline Flint: Information about local national health service spending by primary care trusts, NHS trusts and other NHS organisations on the national programme for information technology to complement the investment from central funding is not collected centrally. A survey of total NHS information technology (IT) expenditure is conducted annually and the results are published on the NHS Connecting for Health's website at www.connectingforhealth.nhs.uk/publications/funding.

There is no specific numerical target for year-on-year spending by NHS organisations on the programme. However, we have always made it clear that we anticipate the NHS as a whole increasing its overall spending on IT broadly in line with the recommendations in the 2002 Wanless report.

NHS Reconfiguration

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 9 January 2006, Official Report, column 146W, on NHS Reconfiguration, what estimate she has made of the total cost involved in the structural reorganisation of strategic health authorities. [66057]

Andy Burnham: Total costs of change are dependent on a number of factors, including the number of new organisations, number of people in the new organisations and their pay as well as changes in estate costs following reconfiguration. When complete the reconfiguration of strategic health authorities will cost less to run than the previous arrangements and free resources for frontline services.

Nuffield Speech and Language Unit

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if a Minister in her Department will meet a delegation of hon. Members, speech and language therapists and parents to discuss the future of the Nuffield speech and language unit. [69310]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I would be happy to meet the delegation to hear their concerns regarding the future of the Nuffield speech and language unit.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the arrangements to publicise the public consultation on the future of the Nuffield speech and language unit; and what discussions she has had since 25 April 2006 with the Royal Free hospital on its conduct of that consultation. [69312]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: No discussions have been held since 25 April 2006 with the Royal Free hospital on its conduct on the public consultation on the future of the Nuffield speech and language unit and no assessments have been made of the trust's arrangements to publicise the consultation.

It is the duty of the local national health service to involve and consult patients, the public and their representatives in the planning of services, the development of proposals to change services and in decisions affecting the operation of services.

Nurses/Doctors

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to allow nurses to prescribe medicines to patients without the consent of a doctor; if she will list the medicines nurses will be allowed to prescribe; what consultation she has undertaken; what representations she has received; and if she will make a statement. [70370]

Andy Burnham: Over 29,000 community practitioner nurse prescribers are able to prescribe from a list of dressings, appliances and some medicines for patients in the community. These are listed in Part XVIIB(i) of the Drug Tariff.

Nearly 7,000 qualified nurse independent prescribers are able to prescribe any licensed medicine independently for any medical condition within their competence, including some controlled drugs that are listed in the Drug Tariff in Part XVIIB(ii).

Regulations to enable this came into effect on 1 May 2006, following public consultation beginning on 28 February 2005, which examined options for the future of nurse prescribing. A summary of responses to this consultation is publicly available on the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency's website at www.mhra.gov.uk, a copy of which will be placed in the Library.

Ann Keen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) nurses and (b) doctors there were in Brentford and Isleworth constituency in (i) 1997 and (ii) 2006. [64086]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The following table shows the number of nurses and doctors there were in the North West London area in 1997 and 2004. Information on the number of doctors and nurses in 2005 was available on 24 April 2006. The 2006 work force census will be conducted in September 2006.

Operations

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) in-patient and (b) day case operations were carried out in each year since 1997 (i) in England and (ii) in each NHS trust. [69611]

Andy Burnham: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Patient/Public Involvement

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding has been allocated to the Patient and Public Involvement Resource Centre; when she expects the Resource Centre to begin its work; and if she will make a statement. [71474]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department is looking for a supplier to design, develop and have operational responsibility for a new centre to support the delivery of patient and public involvement in the healthcare delivery system. The procurement process is ongoing and until it is complete, we are unable to provide further details as they are commercially sensitive.

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the budget is for the Commission for Patient and Public Involvement in Health in 2006-07; and what she estimates the cost of abolishing the commission by the summer of 2007 to be. [71475]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The budget for the Commission for Patient and Public Involvement in Health (CPPIH) for the financial year 2006-07 has recently been agreed at £28 million. The budget for 2007-08 will not be set until later in the current financial year.

The cost of abolishing the CPPIH, including staff redundancy costs, will be contained within the overall budgets for 2006-07 and 2007-08 with final costs being assessed later in the year when the full implications for the CPPIH of the recent review of patient and public involvement have been assessed.

Population Statistics

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what account primary care trusts funding formulae take of the proportion of over 25-year olds in a local population. [68394]

Andy Burnham: The weighted capitation formula, which informs revenue allocations to primary care trusts, includes adjustments for age related need to reflect that demand for healthcare varies according to the age structure of the local population.

Each component of the formula has its own age weights which are shown in the tables.

Table 1: Hospital and community health service age weights

Premature Babies

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many babies have been born prematurely in each of the last five years; and what research her Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into links between premature birth and (i) areas of deprivation and (ii) environment. [69347]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The available information about length of gestation at delivery is published annually in table 21 of the statistical bulletin NHS Maternity Statistics: England. Copies of the bulletins, the latest of which relates to 2003-04, are available in the Library and also on the Department's website at www.dh.gov.uk/assetRoot/04/1070/61/04107061.pdf.

The main agency through which the Government support medical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council (MRC). The MRC is an independent body funded by the Department of Trade and Industry via the Office of Science and Innovation. The MRC supports a large portfolio of reproductive tract research and underpinning reproductive medicine and paediatric research.

The Department funds research to support policy and to provide the evidence needed to underpin quality improvement and service development in the national health service. The policy research programme in particular supports the national perinatal epidemiology unit. Much of the unit's work on the compromised foetus and baby focuses on or is linked to preterm birth.

Over 75 per cent. of the Department's total expenditure on health research is currently devolved to and managed by NHS organisations. Details of individual projects including a number concerned with premature birth are available on the national research register at www.dh.gov.uk/research.

Self-harm

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many children have been treated in hospital for self-harm in each of the last five years; [69342]

(2) how many children self-harmed in each of the last five years; [69378]

(3) how many children were admitted to hospital following incidents of self-harm in each of the last five years. [69379]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: In 2002, a survey by the Office for National Statistics of 12,000 five to 15-year-olds has found that 1.3 per cent. had tried to harm themselves. The available information on children admitted and treated in hospital is shown in the table.

Specialised Commissioning

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions she has had with the Secretary of State for Education and Skills about the review of specialised commissioning. [69309]

Andy Burnham: The review of commissioning arrangements for specialised services is an independent review commissioned by Health Ministers and will be considered appropriately when the report is received.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which interested parties will be consulted as part of her Department's review of specialised commissioning; and over what time period the review will take place. [69311]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The review of commissioning arrangements for specialised services received 144 written submissions. A list of the written submissions has been placed in the Library. Additionally, the review ran an accelerated policy-making day with over 80 attendees and attended workshops with groups such as the NHS Confederation, the National Specialist Commissioning Advisory Group and the Specialised Healthcare Alliance. Meetings were also held with officials from various bodies, for example specialised commissioning groups, Monitor (the independent regulator of NHS foundation trusts), the Audit Commission and the Healthcare Commission. The review report will be submitted to Ministers shortly.

Strategic Health Authorities

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many staff are employed by each strategic health authority; and at what cost in 2005-06. [69823]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information requested is shown in table one. This relates to the current 28 strategic health authorities (SHAs) that from 1 July 2006 will be reduced to 10 (as set out in written ministerial statement on 16 May 2006).

Waiting Lists/Times

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the oral answer from the then Under-Secretary of State of 25 April 2006, Official Report, column 549, from what sources the figures for waiting times for in-patient treatment were taken. [71138]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 15 May 2006]: The figures quoted for waiting times for in-patient treatment in the North Central London Strategic Health Authority area during the Adjournment debate held on 25 April on the future of the Nuffield speech and language unit were obtained from the monthly monitoring return submitted to the Department by the local national health service. I have written to the hon. Member on this subject.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average waiting list time in (a) the Sutton and Merton Primary Care Trust and (b) England was in each year since 2003. [71389]

Andy Burnham: The median waiting times in Sutton and Merton Primary Care Trust and England are shown in the tables:

Working with Children

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what criteria she uses when deciding who should be placed on her Department's list of individuals who are considered unsuitable to work with children. [44478]

Mr. Dhanda: I have been asked to reply.

The Secretary of State for Education and Skills has the power under section 142 of the Education Act 2002 to bar an individual from working with children in schools, further education colleges and local authority education services. Education organisations are under an obligation not to allow an individual to work in contravention of the bar. The list of those individuals subject to a bar is known as "List 99".

There are three circumstances in which the Secretary of State must issue a direction barring someone automatically:

(i) Firstly, if on or after 1 November 1995, a person has pleaded guilty to or been found guilty of a specified offence (or an attempt to commit such an offence) against or involving a child under the age of 16 before or by a court in the United Kingdom; was carrying out work to which section 142 of the 2002 Act applies before or at the time he committed or was convicted of the offence; and was aged 18 or over at the time the offence was committed;

(ii) Secondly, if the person is permanently included in the Protection of Children Act List;

(iii) Thirdly, if on or after 1 June 2003,

(a) a person is made subject to a disqualification order (i.e. disqualified by the courts); and

(b) was carrying out work to which section 142 of the 2002 Act applies before or at the time they committed or were convicted of the offence to which the disqualification order relates.

A précis of this information was included in the report of 19 January.

The Department also administers the PoCA list. Following a valid referral the Department can only place an individual on the PoCA list (otherwise than provisionally) if the following criteria apply:

(a) The Secretary of State is satisfied that the referring organisation reasonably considered the individual to have been guilty of misconduct which harmed a child or placed a child at risk of harm (whether or not in the course of his employment); and

(b) The Secretary of State considers the individual to be unsuitable to work with children.

In the 19 January and 1 March statements the Secretary of State referred to the Safeguarding Vulnerable Groups Bill which was introduced before Parliament on 28 February. The key measures of the cross-Government Bill include introducing a new vetting and barring system bringing relevant information together in one place for the first time. This will integrate the current List 99 (for teachers), and the Protection of Children Act lists (for those working in child care settings) and also provide for a new list of people barred from working with vulnerable adults to replace the Protection of Vulnerable Adults list.

making it possible for domestic employers such as parents to check whether private tutors, nannies, music teachers and care workers are barred.

for the first time, enabling employers to make a 'real-time' instant check of whether a prospective employee is barred with secure online access rather than the current paper-based process.

updating barring decisions as soon as any new information becomes available, and where possible, notifying relevant employers if an employee becomes barred.

removing responsibility for barring decisions from Ministers entirely and transferring this to a new independent statutory board which will take decisions on whether to include someone on the barred list.

In the meantime and also referred to in the statements, the Secretary of State has established a panel of independent experts, chaired by Sir Roger Singleton, to advise the Secretary of State in relation to the exercise of his decision-making powers.

TRANSPORT

Air Emergency

Mr. Scott: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport after the emergency landing at Heathrow on 24 April 2004 by Boeing 747-132, registration N481 EV, whether the aircraft was boarded by any official from a UK agency; and whether the cargo was inspected. [64058]

Gillian Merron: The Boeing 747-132, call sign Evergreen, was diverted to Heathrow after encountering engine trouble on 24 April 2004. Only the police, immigration and customs officials have powers to board aircraft in situations such as this.

I am advised by my colleagues at the Home Office and Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs that neither immigration service nor customs officials boarded the Evergreen aircraft or inspected its cargo.

I understand that police at London Heathrow are searching their records to determine whether this aircraft was boarded by uniformed officers, but that this process can take some time. The Home Secretary has undertaken to write to the hon. Gentleman with the relevant information once these investigations have been completed.

Air Freight

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many air freight flights were recorded (a) to and (b) from (i) Heathrow, (ii) Gatwick and (iii) Stansted airports in each of the last five years; and what freight tonnage this represented in each case. [71350]

Gillian Merron: The number of cargo flights and freight tonnage recorded to and from Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted for last five years are as follows:

Cargo Flights

Aircraft Safety

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to the answer of 2 May 2006, Official Report, column 1462W, on airports, how many of the near misses that were recorded over Northern Ireland airspace in each of the last five years related to flights into or out of (a) Belfast International, (b) Belfast City and (c) Londonderry airports. [70495]

Gillian Merron: During the five years from 2001 to 2005 inclusive seven Airprox incidents involving commercial air transport aircraft in airspace over Northern Ireland were reported to the UK Airprox Board for assessment. These can be broken down as follows.

	Breakdown by airport (with Airprox report number)	Number of Airprox incidents
2001	Londonderry (058/2001)	1
2002	Belfast Intl (058/2002) Londonderry (225/2005)	2
2003	—	0
2004	Londonderry (196/2004)	1
2005	Belfast City (031/2005) Belfast City (150/2005) Belfast City (166/2005)	3

All seven events were reviewed and categorised by the UK Airprox Board as being Category C (where no risk of collision existed). The Airprox reference number for each incident is given in the table. Final reports on each event are available, if required, on the UK Airprox Board's website at www.airproxboard.org.uk .

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to the answer of 2 May 2006, Official Report, column 1462W, on airports, how many near misses were recorded in mainland Great Britain airports relating to flights departing from Northern Ireland in each of the last five years. [70496]

Gillian Merron: During the five years from 2001 to 2005 inclusive there were nine Airprox incidents recorded over Great Britain relating to flights departing from airports in Northern Ireland.

These can be broken down by year as follows:

	Airprox Board Reference (and risk category)	Number of incidents
2001	065/2001 (D) 083/2001 (B) 108/2001 (C)	3

2004	035/2004 (C) 124/2004 (C) 139/2004 (C)	3
2005	024/2005 (C) 036/2005 (B) 194/2005 (C)	3

All nine events were reviewed by the UK Airprox Board. The Airprox reference number and risk category for each incident is given above. Of the nine incidents, two were categorised as "risk bearing" Airprox in which safety was not assured (a "risk bearing" Airprox is one that falls into category A or B). Final reports on each event are available, if required, on the UK Airprox Board's website at www.airproxboard.org.uk.

British Transport Police

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with the British Transport police authority on its financial management; whether he plans changes thereto; and if he will make a statement. [71555]

Derek Twigg: Ministers meet the chair of the British Transport police (BTP) authority as necessary to discuss issues affecting the BTP.

Since its establishment on 1 July 2004, the authority has provided funds to BTP to enable it to review and update its key central support systems, policies, and processes including risk management, business continuity, procurement, human resources and payroll.

As part of this review, BTP's finance department has been reorganised, restructured, and strengthened with the objective of improving financial management throughout BTP.

Executive Agencies

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action he is taking to improve the financial management arrangements of the executive agencies that report to his Department; and if he will make a statement. [71429]

Gillian Merron [holding answer 17 May 2006]: Agency accounting officers are responsible for financial management under the terms of their agreed framework documents. The Department has taken a number of steps to co-ordinate and encourage improvement initiatives, including the establishment of a Group Finance Committee, a new shared services centre providing finance and human resources services for the whole organisation, and Group Internal Audit Assurances.

Galileo Service

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with his counterparts in the European Union on China's involvement in the Galileo service. [71571]

Dr. Ladyman: There have been no discussions at ministerial level specifically about Chinese involvement. Officials at the Department for Transport regularly discuss the involvement of non-European Union countries, including China, in meetings with the Commission and other member states.

Heathrow

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans his Department has to consult on the ending of mixed-mode landings and runway alternation at Heathrow; and if he will make a statement. [72187]

Gillian Merron: I refer to the statement made by the Under-Secretary of State for Transport my hon. Friend the Member for Halton (Derek Twigg) on 17 March 2006, Official Report, column 117WS.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much funding Staffordshire county council received from his Department (a) in total, (b) per mile of road and (c) per head of population in each year since 1997-98. [71227]

Gillian Merron: The following table shows the total funding allocated to Staffordshire county council in the local transport capital settlements between 1997-98 and 2005-06 (inclusive) in terms of totals, per mile of road, and per head of population.

Staffordshire county council	1997-98	1998-99	1999-2000	2000-01	2001-02	2002-03	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06
Total funding (£000)	15,564	5,364	6,243	10,954	15,208	15,081	22,097	19,938	30,603
Funds (£000) per mile[1]	4.032	1.380	1.609	2.838	3.940	3.900	5.725	5.165	7.929
Funds (£ per head)[1]	19.16	6.6	7.6	13.4	18.7	19.4	27.2	24.5	37.7

[1] The population and road mileage for the year 2004 have been used in the calculations, the road mileage being 3,860 miles and the population 812,600.

Portland PR

Ian Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what meetings officials in his Department have had with representatives of the public relations company Portland PR; what contracts Portland PR has with his Department and agencies for which he has responsibility; and what the nature of the contract is in each case. [70043]

Gillian Merron: The Department does not maintain a central list of such meetings. Civil servants meet many people as part of the process of policy development and business delivery. All such meetings are conducted in accordance with the requirements of the Civil Service Code and Guidance for civil servants on contacts with lobbyists and people outside Government.

The Department does not currently have any contracts with Portland PR.

Post-retirement Working

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what opportunities exist for people to work beyond retirement age in his Department. [69086]

Gillian Merron: Currently departmental staff below the Senior Civil Service may retire up to the age of 65 or at any time from the date of their 60th birthday.

The Department has the discretion, in exceptional circumstances, to invite staff to continue in service beyond the date on which they would normally retire if this is the best way of meeting the Department's staffing needs; recruitment and promotion arrangements will not be adversely affected;

they continue to meet the normal requirements of health, efficiency and conduct.

Any approvals will be for a specified period and subject to review. If staff are allowed to continue, they must retire if it is decided to give them notice of retirement. No employee may continue in service beyond the age of 70.

The Cabinet Office is responsible for setting the retirement age of staff in the Senior Civil Service. This is currently 60 unless the Department and the Cabinet Office allow them to stay longer.

Public Transport

Graham Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the public expenditure per head of population for public transport was in each of the English regions in each of the last 10 years calculated on the same basis as HM Treasury's public expenditure statistical analysis for all transport expenditure. [69162]

Gillian Merron [holding answer 8 May 2006]: The information requested on public expenditure for public transport is not collected centrally in the form requested. Information on the Department's identifiable expenditure by region per head for years from 2000-01 is published in the Department's Annual Report 2005 (Cm 6527), Table A8; and separate figures for local public transport and railways for 2003-04 in Table A9; but these do not include payments to local authorities or local authorities' own expenditure. Information on total transport identifiable expenditure per head, which includes local authority expenditure, is given in Table 8.11 of PESA 2005 for years from 1999-2000. Figures for earlier years are given in earlier PESA publications and DfT Annual Reports, although these are not strictly comparable due to changes in data coverage and classification changes.

Rail Franchises

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will list the train franchise contracts that have (a) protection, (b) partial protection and (c) no protection against loss of revenue from new open access operators over the course of the franchise; and if he will make a statement; [67269]

(2) what assessment he has made of the potential impact on their lines of the shortfall in premium payments to the Exchequer from train operating companies subject to open access operators; and if he will make a statement. [67482]

Derek Twigg: No train operator is explicitly provided with a guarantee or indemnity against loss of revenue arising from new open access operators.

The SRA did give certain protection to the TransPennine Express franchisee in 2003 in the event that SRA changed its policy of opposing an open access application which was under discussion at that time.

When proposals for new open access services are submitted to the Office of Rail Regulation (ORR), the Department for Transport will routinely make an assessment of the financial impact that those services will have on the railway as a whole. These assessments are used to inform the Government response to any consultation that the ORR undertakes in relation to the proposals.

Railways

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport for what reason the Government have altered their growth target for heavy rail; what implications the alteration has for future rail expansion and improvement plans; and if he will make a statement. [71556]

Derek Twigg: The Government set out their strategy for the railway in the Future of Rail White Paper published in July 2004. This new strategy is designed to control costs, improve reliability and deliver sufficient capacity to meet forecast demand.

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether (a) he and (b) his officials discussed with Central Trains the cancellation of train services in the West Midlands on 18 December 2005; and if he will make a statement. [71895]

Derek Twigg: As part of the franchise management, regular discussions take place between Department for Transport officials and Central Trains, which has included the cancellation of train services in the West Midlands on 18 December 2005.

Rescue Helicopters

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on how many occasions search and rescue helicopters based at Sumburgh and Stornoway have been used for air ambulance evacuations in each of the last five years; and what charges have been made to the Scottish ambulance service for the service. [71906]

Dr. Ladyman: The following tables show for each of the last five financial years the number of occasions, the total hours and total amount invoiced when the air ambulance has been used. The amounts shown are where the Maritime and Coastguard Agency has invoiced the Scottish ambulance service.

Sumburgh

Financial year	Number of flight	Total hours	Total cost (£)
2005-06	6	11.15	20,491.88
2004-05	3	7.55	9,890.00
2003-04	4	7.05	12,246.40
2002-03	1	.55	1,565.20
2001-02	3	11.10	19,178.00
Total	17	38.20	63,371.48

Stornoway

Financial year	Number of flight	Total hours	Total cost (£)
2005-06	10	35.20	66,539.20
2004-05	7	25.05	35,139.00
2003-04	3	14.25	24,750.80
2002-03	4	10.00	17,187.96
2001-02	9	23.15	39,975.72
Total	33	108.05	183,592.68

Road Safety

Anne Moffat: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many road traffic accidents in 2005 resulted in the death of children of school age. [72611]

Dr. Ladyman: Information on personal injury road accidents reported to the police in 2005 is not available until first release on 29 June.

In 2004 (the latest year in which figures are available), there were 186 personal injury road accidents in Great Britain reported to the police involving death of one or more children aged five to 16.

TREASURY

Capital Gains Tax

Dr. Cable: To ask The Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate (a) the revenue implications and (b) the additional number of people who would pay tax if the capital gains tax threshold were reduced to (i) £1,000, (ii) £2,500 and (iii) £5,000; and if he will make a statement. [71659]

Dawn Primarolo: The total estimated yield on an accruals basis from abolishing Capital Gains Tax Annual Exempt Amount (AEA) for individuals and trusts in 2005-06 is published in Table A3.1 in the Budget Report 2006. This excludes any behavioural response to the tax change.

Estimate of the total yield on an accruals basis, and additional number of resultant taxpayers, from reducing the Capital Gains Tax AEA for individuals to (i) £1,000, (ii) £2,500 and (iii) £5,000 in 2006-07 are set out in the following table.

Estimate of the total yield on an accruals basis, and additional number of resultant taxpayers, from reducing the Capital Gains Tax AEA for individuals in 2006-07

	AEA = £1,000	AEA = £2,500	AEA = £5,000
Additional Revenue (Accruals £ million)	800	500	200
Additional Taxpayers (Thousand)	1,450	600	300

The figures are consistent with the assumptions made in Budget 2006 on future asset prices, and take into account the likely taxpayer behavioural responses to the tax change. The Annual Exempt Amount for Trusts is assumed to be half that of individuals.

EU (UK Contributions)

Mr. Brady: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the Financial Secretary to the Treasury's statement in the debate on future EU finances and own reserves on 8 May 2006, Official Report, column 135W, if he will list the net UK contribution from all sources to the EU for each year of the current financial perspective and the projected contribution for each year of the next financial perspective. [70995]

Ed Balls: I refer the hon. Member to footnote 3 of the amended table C11 (Total managed expenditure 2004-05 to 2007-08) in the 2006 Financial Statement and Budget Report for net contributions to the EU Budget 2004-05 (outturn), 2005-06 and 2006-07 (estimated projections).

For estimated net contributions to the EU budget over the next financial perspective I refer the hon. Member to the reply to the hon. Member for Surrey Heath (Michael Gove) on 31 January 2006, Official Report, column 399W.

EU Accession Countries (Immigration)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment has been made of the effect on public expenditure in the West Midlands region of immigration from EU accession countries since May 2004; and if he will make a statement. [71275]

Mr. Timms: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Peterborough (Mr. Jackson) on 12 May 2006, Official Report, column 619W.

The West Midlands region has received 6.8 per cent. of the total number of applications for income-related benefits made by nationals from the accession countries between May 2004 and December 2005.

Income Tax

Dr. Cable: To ask The Chancellor of the Exchequer what the revenue implications would be of (a) a 1p cut and (b) a 1p rise in the lower rate on (i) savings income and (ii) (A) the basic rate and (B) the higher rate of income tax for each year from 2006-07 to 2010-11; and if he will make a statement. [71658]

Dawn Primarolo: The latest information on expected yields from changing the lower rate on savings income, the basic rate and higher rates of income tax by 1p is available in Table 1.6 "Direct effects of illustrative tax changes" which is available on HM Revenue and Customs website;

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/tax_expenditures/1_6_apr06.xls

The information is for the years 2006-07 to 2008-09. Similar information for 2009-10 and 2010-11 is not available.

Inheritance Tax

Dr. Cable: To ask The Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the revenue implications of raising the inheritance tax threshold in line with house price inflation for each year to 2010-11; and if he will make a statement. [71656]

Dawn Primarolo: Raising the inheritance tax according to house price inflation assumptions, starting in 2007-08, would have the following effect on forecast revenue:

Effect of raising the inheritance tax according to house price inflation assumptions on forecast revenue

	Impact on forecast revenue (£ million)
2007-08	+5
2008-09	—
2009-10	-25
2010-11	-75

The house price inflation figures were obtained by assuming a constant house price to earnings ratio together with earnings growth consistent with the Treasury assumptions for trend growth.

In Budget 2006 the Chancellor announced that the inheritance tax threshold will continue to increase above expected statutory indexation for all years up to 2009-10, when it will reach £325,000.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the revenue implications for each year to 2010-11 of raising the inheritance tax threshold to £500,000; and if he will make a statement. [71657]

Dawn Primarolo: Raising the inheritance tax threshold to £500,000 with effect from 2007-08 would have the following effect on forecast revenue.

	Reduction in revenue (£ billion)
2007-08	0.7
2008-09	1.6
2009-10	1.7
2010-11	1.8

Tax Credits

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much financial assistance was provided by HM Revenue and Customs to voluntary organisations in the West Midlands region to assist the public on tax credit issues in each year in which such assistance has been provided. [71277]

Dawn Primarolo: Most financial support provided by HMRC has been targeted at national organisations. Although no funds have been specifically provided to voluntary organisations in the West Midlands, national campaigns have included support for the West Midlands.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will resolve the tax credit case of Mrs. Charlotte Rosetti of Brixham following communication with his Department between 15 March 2004 and 30 March 2006; what the reasons are for the continued delay in resolving the case; and if he will make a statement. [71655]

Dawn Primarolo: HMRC replied to the hon. Gentleman's most recent letter on 16 May.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Council House Sales

Mr. Love: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate he has made of the likely total income in capital receipts from the sale of council housing under the right-to-buy scheme in 2005-06. [58667]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 15 May 2006, Official Report, columns 815-18W to my hon. Friend the Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell).

Coventry (Local Government)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what funds were distributed to Coventry to increase efficiency in local government in each of the last three years. [70955]

Mr. Woolas [holding answer 17 May 2006]: Funding to support efficiency in local authorities is distributed to nine Regional Centres of Excellence (RCEs). Each RCE has its own local governance arrangements for supporting authorities across the region.

Funding for individual projects, many of which operate across local authority boundaries, is decided by the RCE Board. Since 2004-05, funding made available to the West Midlands RCE in relation to taking forward the Efficiency Agenda is as follows:

	Grant payable (£ million)		2005-06
Receiving authority	2004-05	2005-06	Additional core funding (£)	Work stream specific efficiency support (£)
West Midlands Regional Centre of Excellence	1.18	1.58	50,000	180,000

For 2005-06, the West Midlands Improvement Partnership was awarded a Capacity Building grant of £5.95 million from which Coventry will be able to access support. Capacity building funds are granted to support local authorities in their improvement activities and performance. The West Midlands RCE has joined the West Midlands Improvement Partnership to form the Regional Improvement and Efficiency Partnership. Local authorities in the region can access both RCE and CBF funds through the partnership.

Departmental Responsibilities

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the responsibilities of her Department are. [70581]

Angela E. Smith: The Department for Communities and Local Government has responsibility for local government, housing and planning, social exclusion, neighbourhood renewal, communities, race, faith and equalities.

Fire Service

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will make a statement on the regionalisation of the fire service; and what the timetable is for the process. [70572]

Angela E. Smith: We have no plans to regionalise the Fire and Rescue Service. As set out in the National Framework for the Fire and Rescue Service we believe in a regional approach where fire and rescue authorities work collaboratively in a way that will deliver the best possible service to the public. This approach is based on the National Framework for the Fire and Rescue Service which requires fire and rescue authorities to collaborate in six key areas of work through the regional management boards. Outside London, the regional management boards (RMBs) are responsible for delivering improvements in procurement, training, human resources, specialist services, regional control centres and resilience, through regional collaboration. Individual fire and rescue authorities (FRAs) in each region continue to be accountable for the day-to-day operation of their local fire and rescue service in line with their Integrated Risk Management Plan; and are accountable to their local electorates.

Social Housing

Mr. Laws: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate he has made of the number of people on the register for social housing in England in each year from 1979-80 to 2005-06; and if he will make a statement. [59346]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

Information on the number of people on housing waiting lists in England is not collected centrally. The number of households on councils' housing waiting lists in England has been collected centrally only from 1986 onwards. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 17 May 2006, Official Report, columns 991-92W to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Selly Oak (Lynne Jones).

There are wide variations in how often local authorities update their waiting lists, including how quickly they remove people from the list who no longer want social housing.

Local authority waiting lists are only a broad indicator of housing need and not everyone on the list will necessarily be in urgent housing need.

Sports Trusts

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will take steps to ensure that sports trusts operating services and facilities on behalf of local authorities are subject to the same rules in respect of public access to information as local authority leisure services departments. [67668]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

We have no plans to extend the provisions relating to public access to local authority information to information held by non-local authority bodies.

Where services are operated on behalf of local authorities, information relating to the body operating those services may be open to inspection and inquiry by those authorities' overview and scrutiny committees, to whose meetings and documents public access is provided for under the Local Government Act 1972. In addition, many sports trusts have charitable status and will be subject to legislation relevant to charities, which includes provision for examination of accounts.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Atomic Energy Authority

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what financial value is used by the Atomic Energy Authority for a human life lost or saved in cost-benefit analysis of a proposed subject; and if he will make a statement. [71122]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 15 May 2006]: UKAEA bases any cost benefit analysis on guidelines issued by the Health and Safety Executive (and its Nuclear Installations Inspectorate). These use a similar baseline figure to that recommended in the Treasury Green Book for the 'Value of a Prevented Fatality or Prevented Injury', of around £1.2 million. However, UKAEA also applies the ALARP (As Low As Reasonably Practicable) principle in setting dose levels for its employees. ALARP introduces a further factor of safety, and subject to the circumstances, this financial limit may be increased by a factor of between two to 10 if the proposed solution is judged by safety authorities to be reasonably practicable.

Carbon Dioxide

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the amount of carbon dioxide created from (a) the mining of uranium, (b) ore milling, (c) uranium hexafluoride conversion, (d) fuel enrichment, (e) the making of fuel rods and (f) the treatment, transportation and deposition of nuclear waste. [70254]

Malcolm Wicks: In the context of the Energy Review, the DTI is considering a range of assessments covering the life cycle carbon emissions of generating electricity from nuclear power plants, including the recent analysis by the Sustainable Development Commission—"The role of nuclear power in a low carbon economy". We are aware of various external studies in this area, of which we are taking account.

Global Monitoring for Environment and Security

Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what support his Department is giving to the European Commission and the EU Space Agency Respond Programme within the Global Monitoring for Environment and Security Initiative; and if he will make a statement. [71041]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Department for Environment Food and Rural Affairs (Defra) has the policy lead in this area.

The DTI has taken a close interest in the RESPOND project within the European Space Agency (ESA) Earth Watch programme, Global Monitoring for Environment and Security (GMES) Service Element (GSE) and contributed 12mEuro in 2002 towards this element of the GMES programme. We will closely monitor the progress of RESPOND as the project develops.

Miners' Pensions

Mr. Touhig: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much funding was transferred from the Guarantee's Fund into the miners' pension schemes and British Coal Special Superannuation Scheme in (a) 2003-04, (b) 2004-05 and (c) 2005-06. [71409]

Malcolm Wicks: Following completion of the September 2002 actuarial valuation of the Mineworkers' Pension Scheme (MPS) £355 million was transferred from the Scheme's Investment Reserve within the scheme's funds to make good a deficit in the Guaranteed Fund, from which members' guaranteed pensions are paid. Similarly, following completion of the March 2003 actuarial valuation of the British Coal Staff Superannuation Scheme (BCSSS) £220 million was transferred from the Investment Reserve to the Guaranteed Fund within that scheme. There have been no other such transfers since.

National Concessionary Fuel Scheme

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will consider linking cash in lieu arrangements under the National Concessionary Fuel Arrangements directly to the price of electricity and gas; [70941]

(2) whether he plans to review the arrangements for paying cash in lieu to former miners under the National Concessionary Fuel Arrangements to take account of recent increases in fuel costs. [70940]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answers 15 May 2006]: There is a long standing agreement within the National Concessionary Fuel Scheme whereby former miners (and their widows) who receive cash in lieu of concessionary fuel will have their benefit increased every October in line with any increase in the Heating and Lighting element of the retail prices index for the 12 month period ending in the July of that year.

John Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he plans to meet officials of the National Union of Mineworkers to discuss his proposed changes to the concessionary fuel entitlement received by recipients under the present scheme. [69422]

Malcolm Wicks: I have recently written to the General Secretary of the Union agreeing to meet to discuss concessionary fuel issues.

Non-Fossil Fuel Obligation

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 8 May 2006, Official Report, column 54W, on the Non-Fossil Fuel Obligation Fund, if he will summarise the legal argument which led him to agree with the Chancellor of the Exchequer, in October 2004, that funds in the Non-Fossil Fuel Obligation Fund were hereditary revenues of the Crown. [70309]

Malcolm Wicks: Legal advice from the Treasury is that the funds representing the element of the NFFO surplus referred to in my answer of 8 May are hereditary revenues and so are required by law to be paid into the Consolidated Fund. As indicated in my answer of 8 May 2006, Official Report, column 54W, the legal advice in question is confidential and subject to legal professional privilege. It would therefore not be appropriate to provide details of the legal advice.

Pipe Organs

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) when his Department first became aware of the possible implications that the proposed EU Directives on Restriction of Hazardous Substances and Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment might have for organ building in the United Kingdom; [70975]

(2) when his Department first received representations on the concerns of organ builders about the implementation of the proposed EU Directives on Restriction of Hazardous Substances and Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment; [70976]

(3) what discussions with representatives of organ builders in the United Kingdom his Department initiated on the implications of the proposed EU Directives on Restriction of Hazardous Substances and Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment for organ building in the United Kingdom; and when the first discussions took place; [70977]

(4) what discussions he has had with his (a) Danish and (b) German counterparts on the implications of the proposed EU Directives on Restriction of Hazardous Substances and Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment for organ builders; [70978]

(5) on what date his Department first raised with the European Commission concerns of United Kingdom organ builders regarding the proposed EU Directives on Restriction of Hazardous Substances and Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment. [70979]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department has been working with the pipe organ industry for some time and will continue to do so in order to secure a favourable outcome on this issue.

The UK Government do not consider that pipe organs fall within the scope of this Directive, a view widely accepted across Europe. The DTI is working closely with the European Commission and other EU member states to obtain agreement at a European level. Our aim is to reach a successful conclusion before the Directive comes into force on the 1 July.

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will place in the Library copies of the correspondence between his Department and (a) the European Commission and (b) representatives of organ builders on the effects on organ building in the United Kingdom of the proposed EU Directives on Restriction of Hazardous Substances and Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment. [70980]

Malcolm Wicks: Yes. As requested, I have made arrangement to place copies of the relevant correspondence since the Institute of British Organ Building's campaign on this issue was initiated.

Joint Energy Security of Supply

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) when he expects the sixth report of the energy security of supply working Group to be published; and if he will make a statement; [68085]

(2) whether he expects the energy security of supply working group to continue to report on a twice yearly basis; [68086]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 3 May 2006]: The sixth report of the Joint Energy Security of Supply (JESS) working group was published on Tuesday 16 May.

As of last year the Secretary of State's report to Parliament on security of gas and electricity supply as provided for under section 172 of the Energy Act 2003 replaced one of the two bi-annual JESS reports. The Department will be laying before the House the Secretary of State's second Annual Report to Parliament later in the year.

The JESS working group will be looking this year at how best to take forward its reporting responsibilities in the light of feedback from users of its reports and the introduction of the Secretary of State's Annual Report.

PRIME MINISTER

Minister for Europe

Mr. Vara: To ask the Prime Minister in what circumstances the Minister for Europe will attend Cabinet; and if he will make a statement. [71854]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the press briefing given by my official spokesman on 8 May, a copy of which is available on the No. 10 website.

Overseas Visits (Media Airfares)

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Prime Minister how much has been received from (a) the ITV group, (b) Sky, (c) the BBC and (d) non-UK based television companies in payment for airfares for journalists accompanying him on overseas trips in each of the last five years. [71746]

The Prime Minister: The information is not held in the format requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

CABINET OFFICE

Knowledge Network

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how much was spent on the Knowledge Network in each year since 1997. [72026]

Hilary Armstrong: The costs of the Knowledge Network for each financial year since its inception in 1999 are shown in the table.

	Gross spend (£ million)
1999-2000	2.0
2000-01	3.6
2001-02	6.4
2002-03	3.2
2003-04	3.2
2004-05	4.8
2005-06	3.7

Up until 2003-04 the Cabinet Office funded the development and operational costs; since that time the Cabinet Office has recovered the majority of the costs from those government departments who are key users of the service.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Free School Meals

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children attending (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in (i) Southend-on-Sea, (ii) Essex, (iii) each local authority in Hertfordshire and (iv) England received free school meals in each year since 1990; and what estimate he has made of the number of children who will receive free school meals for each of the next five years. [69623]

Jim Knight: The available information is shown in the table.

Information on school meals is only available on a consistent basis from 1993 onwards and has also been affected by local government reorganisation since then.

The Department does not produce projected numbers of pupils who will be in receipt of free school meals in the future.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Departmental Staff

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many whole-time equivalent staff there were in each (a) (i) customer-facing and (ii) benefit-processing district and (b) call centre (A) before customer management service (CMS) was implemented and (B) after full or partial CMS implementation. [69577]

Mrs. McGuire [holding answer 11 May 2006]: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question asking how many whole time equivalent staff there were in each (a) (i) customer facing and (ii) benefit processing district and (b) call centre (A) before Customer Management Service (CMS) and (B) after full or partial CMS implementation. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Our staffing information is not held in a format that allows any specific distinction between customer facing and benefit processing functions, as the majority of our benefit delivery staff have regular contact with customers.

I attach a table which provides a breakdown of the number of Full Time Equivalent staff for the period ending 30 September 2003, immediately prior to the commencement of implementation of CMS in October 2003, and in March 2006. It differentiates between Jobcentres (including Jobcentre Plus offices), Social Security Offices and Contact Centres. The data includes some Districts for which Jobcentre Plus implementation is not yet complete.

A number of factors have contributed to the changes in staffing volumes over the period, including progress towards the Government's efficiency challenge. The implementation of Jobcentre Plus introduces significant process changes, such as the introduction of work-focussed interventions for all new claims, which attracts additional resource in Jobcentres, but also some transfer of new claims work to Contact Centres. Comparisons of staffing numbers pre and post CMS implementation cannot therefore be directly attributable only to the introduction of the new information technology.

I hope this is helpful.

Overnight Stays

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the total cost was of overnight accommodation for Ministers of State in his Department on foreign visits in each of the last three years. [68997]

Mrs. McGuire: The information requested could be supplied only at disproportionate cost. Under the terms of the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers, when travelling on official business Ministers are expected to make efficient and cost effective travel arrangements.

Pension Credit

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioner households were (a) estimated to be eligible for and (b) recipients of pension credit in (i) Aberdeen city and (ii) Aberdeenshire council areas in each financial year since 2001. [71926]

James Purnell: Estimates of eligibility are not available below the level of Great Britain. Information that is available is in the following table.

Pension credit recipients in the local authorities of Aberdeen City and Aberdeenshire, by quarter since November 2003

Quarter	Aberdeen City	Aberdeenshire
November 2003	7,200	6,680

Power Companies (Security)

Mark Tami: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what guidance his Department provides to power companies regarding appropriate security measures around (a) high-voltage pylons and (b) sub-stations. [71647]

Malcolm Wicks: I have been asked to reply.

The Electricity Safety, Quality and Continuity Regulations 2002 contain requirements to protect the public from danger associated with electrical plant, including high-voltage pylons and substations. Guidance on these regulations is available on DTI's website (www.dti.gov.uk/files/file26709.pdf).

Returning to Work

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the Answer of 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 437W, on returning to work, when he expects to make an assessment of the total number of annual job entries that would result from a nationally rolled out service. [67890]

Mrs. McGuire: We are still working on plans for the national roll-out of Pathways to Work and will make an announcement in due course. We therefore cannot make an accurate assessment of future annual job entries until plans have been finalised.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

BBC Broadcasts

Mark Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what she estimates the total cost of digital switchover will be to the (a) Government and (b) BBC; [71356]

(2) how much money the (a) Government and (b) BBC plan to spend on digital switchover assistance schemes to aid the elderly and the vulnerable. [71358]

Tessa Jowell: Other than the costs of updating television equipment within the Government sector, the only costs will be those incurred for research, communications and other programme support costs for the Digital Switchover Programme.

The costs of digital switchover to the BBC arise from:

the replacement of the existing analogue and digital terrestrial network with a new terrestrial network; Digital UK's communications campaign; the BBC's share of Digital UK's other operating costs; the assistance scheme for people aged 75 or over or with a significant disability.

The BBC's digital switchover costs are being assessed as part of work to determine the licence fee settlement for the new Charter period. This work will draw upon a variety of sources, including the BBC's own figures and the financial analysis carried out by PKF, and set out in their independent report published on 26 April, and outputs from the Bolton Digital television trial, which considered the needs of those who would be entitled to help from the assistance scheme. We will set out details of the BBC's switchover costs, including the costs of the assistance scheme later this year in association with the BBC

BBC Jam

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations she has received on BBC jam's compliance with its approval conditions; and if she will make a statement. [71573]

Mr. Woodward: We are aware of comments regarding BBC jam in the recent report of the Content Advisory Board (CAB) and of concerns raised by industry representatives. It is a matter for the BBC to ensure that the digital curriculum service fully complies with the conditions of its approval.

Channel 4

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she expects Ofcom to commence its financial review of Channel 4; and if she will make a statement. [71879]

Mr. Woodward: The timing of reviews by the Office of Communications (Ofcom) is a matter for Ofcom itself, within the framework of its statutory duties and powers. My officials have therefore asked the Chief Executive of Ofcom to respond directly to the hon. Member and to send me a copy of his response. Copies of the Chief Executive's letter will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Fashion Industry

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much (a) lottery funding and (b) Exchequer funding for which her Department is responsible was spent in connection with sponsorship of the designer fashion industry in 2005-06; and if she will make a statement. [71620]

Mr. Woodward: The fashion industry is very important to the UK economy not only because of the contribution it makes to the economy and the employment it generates, but also because of the prestige our world-renowned designers generate for the UK.

My Department is committed to helping to improve the productivity of the UK fashion industry, and as part of the Creative Economy Programme, which aims to improve the growth and productivity of the UK's creative industries, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State chaired a summit with fashion leaders to ascertain how Government can help the sector.

No lottery funding was spent in 2005-06 in connection with sponsoring the designer fashion industry. Sponsorship of the designer fashion industry is outside the scope of the Lottery Good Causes:

Arts
Heritage
Sport
Charitable Expenditure
Health Education and Environment
the Olympics.

The Scottish Arts Council has used lottery money to assist people working in the fashion industry but does not use its funds for sponsorship. The Scottish Arts Council made three relevant Professional Development awards in 2005-06 totalling £2,705.

In addition, the National Endowment for Science, Technology and the Arts (NESTA) made one grant of £35,000 to a designer fashion project in 2005. NESTA does not receive an income stream from lottery proceeds, although its core revenue comes from investment income on a £250 million endowment originally received from the National Lottery.

Staff costs associated with my Department's day-to-day sponsorship of the designer fashion industry since taking on responsibility for the sector in 2005 were found from within existing resources and no additional staff have been employed to sponsor the sector.

Football

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has held with (a) the Football League, (b) publicans and (c) police authorities on the impact on Football League attendances of the screening of Premiership football on a Saturday afternoon via foreign satellite systems. [71611]

Mr. Caborn: I have not held any discussions with the Football League, publicans or police authorities regarding the impact that the screening of Premiership football on a Saturday afternoon via foreign satellite systems has on Football League attendances.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has had with the Football Association Premier League on season ticket prices. [71613]

Mr. Caborn: I have not held any discussions with the FA Premier League on season ticket prices.

The Government have no role in the commercial and sporting operation of professional football. The issue of season tickets prices is a matter between individual clubs and the relevant football authorities.

Hospitality (Environmental Impact)

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what assessment her Department has made of the impact on the environment of green accommodation providers within the hospitality sector; and if she will make a statement; [71625]

(2) what assessment her Department has made of the environmental impact of the hospitality sector; and if she will make a statement. [71626]

Mr. Woodward: The Department has made no such assessments, either in relation to the hospitality sector as a whole or to green accommodation providers, and there are currently no plans for it to do so.

However, I recognise that all tourism businesses have a major role to play in helping protect and enhance the environment, in line with the Government's wider goals of sustainable development. I therefore welcome the participation of hospitality businesses in schemes such as Hospitable Climates (a programme that has saved over 130,000 tonnes of carbon through reducing CO_2 emissions since 2000) and the David Bellamy Conservation Award (held by over 500 holiday parks).

English Tourism Council research during 2003-04 showed that 84 per cent. of customers surveyed would choose an attraction or accommodation which was a member of a "green" accreditation scheme over one that was not—and that 68 per cent. would pay more for doing so. Currently over 10 schemes exist at national and local level, including the David Bellamy Award and the Green Tourism Business Scheme (over 500 businesses across England and Scotland). We are working with tourism stakeholders in England to develop a national framework for such schemes.

Olympic Games

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps the Government are taking to ensure a lasting legacy of increased sporting participation following the 2012 Olympic Games. [71612]

Mr. Caborn: We are committed to driving up grass-roots participation in sport across the whole of the UK. The Olympic Board has overall responsibility for ensuring that the social, economic and sporting benefits from 2012 are maximised. The Board have agreed that the Greater London Authority, the British Olympic Association and Government will work together to ensure that there is lasting legacy of increased sporting participation in London, and the wider UK, as a result of the 2012 Games.

We are keen to use the inspiration of the Olympics and Paralympics to boost the numbers of people, particularly young people, engaged in sport. The UK School Games, which we envisage will be held each year in the run up to 2012, will not only be an opportunity for talented young people to engage in a major sporting event, but will also provide inspiration and a lasting legacy of competitive school sport for countless others.

Russian Orchestras

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the cost of visas and work permits for visiting orchestras from Russia; and if she will make a statement. [72173]

Mr. Lammy: Matters relating to the cost of work permits and visas are the responsibility of the Home Office and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

Shostakovich Centenary

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what support her Department is giving to Shostakovich Centenary events. [72175]

Mr. Lammy: The Government support the arts through Arts Council England. A number of organisations in receipt of regular funding from the Arts Council are holding concerts and other events to mark the centenary of Shostakovich's birth.

The Public (West Bromwich)

Mr. Ian Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when the Arts Council was informed of the legal advice given to the West Bromwich arts organisation The Public. [71729]

Mr. Lammy: Arts Council England was informed by the Board of The Public on 3 March 2006, that, acting on legal advice, they were to register their insolvency.

Tourism

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will place in the Library her Department's consultation document on the Tourism 2012 Charter strategy; and if she will make a statement. [71621]

Mr. Woodward: My Department is finalising the Tourism 2012 Strategy consultation document. It will be issued shortly, at which time I shall arrange for copies to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate her Department has made of the value of inbound tourism from China in each year since 1997; and if she will make a statement. [71623]

Mr. Woodward: Spend by inbound travellers from China increased by 240 per cent. between 1997 and 2005. Annual figures from the International Passenger Survey (for mainland China only—excluding Taiwan and Hong Kong) are given in the following table:

	Spend (£ million)
1997	32
1998	51
1999	40
2000	82
2001	83
2002	80
2003	127
2004	131
2005	109

Note:
2005 data are provisional

The UN World Tourism Organisation has predicted that the number of outbound visits from China will grow by 12.3 per cent. a year from 1995 to reach 100 million in 2020, and that China will become the fourth largest source of international travellers, behind Germany, Japan and the United States.

This is why the Government signed a Memorandum of Understanding with the Chinese Government in January 2005, which conferred Approved Destination Status (ADS) on the UK. ADS came into operation in July 2005, meaning that for the first time the UK could be marketed as a holiday destination in China. Prior to ADS it was possible for Chinese nationals to travel to the UK for business or study purposes only.

VisitBritain has launched a major marketing initiative—Britain Welcomes China—to take advantage of ADS. China is now the best resourced of VisitBritain's emerging markets. VisitBritain has estimated that the Chinese market could be worth £200 million a year by 2010 and £500 million a year by 2020.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the total value of the tourism industry to the economy was in each year since 1980; and if she will make a statement. [71628]

Mr. Woodward: Estimates of the value of the tourism industry to the economy for the years 1996 to 2003 are given as follows. 2003 is the latest year for which data have been estimated, and figures prior to 1996 are not available on a comparable basis.

	£ billion	Percentage
1996	58.7	[1]4.6
1997	65.7	[1]4.9
1998	70.0	[1]4.9
1999	73.3	[1]4.9
2000	74.9	[2]3.8
2001	72.9	[2]3.6
2002	73.7	[2]3.5
2003	74.2	[2]3.4

[1] Of Gross Domestic Product
[2] Of Gross Value Added

These figures include expenditure in respect of inbound tourists while in the UK, domestic trips with an overnight stay, domestic leisure day visits, fares paid to UK carriers, and imputed rents for second home ownership.

From 2000, the industry's contribution to the wider economy is measured in terms of Gross Value Added, rather than Gross Domestic Product (GDP). This is in line with wider statistical norms across the Government. Also in that year, the estimates used are based on Tourism Satellite Accounting, which gives a more accurate statement of the size of the sector.

HEALTH

Abortions

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will update the table of statistics printed in the special report and report of the Select Committee on the Infant Life (Preservation) Bill, H.L. Paper 153 of 1986-87 and H.L. Paper 50 of 1987-88, on (a) the number of notifications of abortions carried out under the Abortion Act 1967, gestation by completed weeks by statutory grounds and category of premises, residents and non-residents, England and Wales, in the special report on pages 22 to 26 and the report on pages 72 to 73, and (b) the number of notifications of abortions carried out under the Abortion Act 1967, gestation by completed weeks by statutory grounds and mother's age, England and Wales as in the special report on pages 28 to 37 and in the report on pages 74 to 77, to cover each year since 1990. [70371]

Caroline Flint: This information can only be provided at disproportionate cost.

The most relevant information available is published within the annual abortion statistics for England and Wales which are available in the Library. The data can also be found on the Department's website:

2002-04 data:

www.dh.gov.uk/PublicationsAndStatistics/Statistics/StatisticalWorkAreas/StatisticalPublicHealth/fs/en

1991-2001 data:

www.statistics.gov.uk/StatBase/Product.asp%3Fvlnk%3D68%26Pos%3D2%26ColRank%3D2%26Rank%3D640

Accident and Emergency Departments

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what estimate she has made of the percentage of people who attended Accident and Emergency units who needed emergency treatment in the last five years; [43017]

(2) what estimate she has made of the percentage of people who attended Accident and Emergency units who needed to be seen within four hours in the last five years. [43018]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Data on the level of clinical need of patients presenting at accident and emergency are not collected centrally. Four hours is an access standard. Clinicians use well established triage systems to prioritise patients' clinical needs.

Acute Services

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent discussions she has had on the delivery of acute services in Surrey. [69975]

Caroline Flint: There have been no recent discussions on the delivery of acute services in Surrey.

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent (a) representations she has received and (b) discussions she has had on the delivery of acute services in south-east London. [70807]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: No representations have been received and no discussions have been held on the delivery of acute services in south-east London.

Advertising

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she plans to publish an impact assessment on the health effects of Ofcom's proposed restrictions on the volume and scheduling of the broadcast advertising code. [67951]

Caroline Flint: A health impact analysis was included in the regulatory impact assessment published by Ofcom alongside the consultation looking at options for new restrictions for television advertising of food and drink products to children on 28 March 2006. As the regulator, it is Ofcom's responsibility to produce an impact assessment.

Audiology Services

Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to ensure that (a) existing levels of funding for hearing aid services are maintained and (b) waiting times and waiting numbers are reduced following the exclusion of direct audiology referrals from the 18-week waiting time target. [71477]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department expects to announce final allocations of funding for the national health service, including audiology services, in the near future.

From April 2005, the 164 NHS audiology departments have been able routinely to assess for and fit digital hearing aids. It is for primary care trusts to ensure their local population benefits from the modernised services.

For audiology and adult hearing services, a separate action plan is being developed on improving access to services. This reflects the direction set out in the White Paper "Our health, our care, our say" (January 2006) to move services closer to the patient.

Bone Marrow Register

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many blood donors have been added to the British bone marrow register in each of the last three years; [71847]

(2) what the annual expenditure of her Department has been on the British bone marrow register in each of the last three years; [71848]

(3) what action she is taking to raise awareness of bone marrow donation among ethnic groups. [71849]

Caroline Flint: NHS Blood and Transplant (NHSBT) is responsible for managing blood supplies in England and north Wales and for managing the British Bone Marrow Register (BBMR). It does this through its operating division—the National Blood Service (NBS). The NBS recruits blood donors from the general public and potential bone marrow donors from the active blood donor populations.

Over the last three years, the NBS has added over 120,000 people to the BBMR:

	People added to the BBMR
2003-04	42,644
2004-05	42,375
2005-06	37,248

The Department has provided NBS with £3.3 million for each of the past three years to fund the addition of 120,000 potential donors to the BBMR. The NBS's strategy over the coming year is to maintain the BBMR at its current size and focus their recruitment activity towards under-represented ethnic groups.

In 2004, the NBS commissioned the Central Office of Information (COI) to lead on a long-term strategy to attract more people from ethnic communities to give blood and join the BBMR. A campaign called 'OneBlood' is addressing existing barriers by raising awareness of the importance and relevance of blood donation; encouraging individual and community ownership of the issue; tackling religious objections and myths; encouraging blood donation.

The NBS has also developed an advertising campaign 'Are you my Type' which features black and minority ethnic celebrities.

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what value for money assessment has been made of her Department's funding of the British bone marrow register; [71850]

(2) what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of different methods of encouraging bone marrow donation. [71851]

Caroline Flint: The Department has not undertaken a formal assessment of the effectiveness of the British Bone Marrow Register (BBMR). However, the National Blood Service (NBS) has successfully recruited over 120,000 potential bone marrow donors to the registry in the last three years.

The number of procedures undertaken through the BBMR in the last three years are 137 bone marrow transplants and 175 peripheral blood transplants for both United Kingdom and international patients.

We are committed to continued improvements to the BBMR so that patients requiring bone marrow are increasingly likely to find a match. The NBS's strategy over the coming year is to maintain the BBMR at its current size and focus their recruitment activity towards under represented ethnic groups.

Breast Screening

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many deliveries at the Eastbourne District General hospital maternity unit have involved significant complications in each of the last 10 years. [68398]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Breastfeeding

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much (a) was spent on supporting breastfeeding during the 2005-06 financial year and (b) has been allocated to support breastfeeding in the 2006-07 financial year; what measures she has taken to promote breastfeeding; and if she will make a statement. [70259]

Caroline Flint: In 2005-06, the Department spent £743,000 on promoting and supporting breastfeeding and infant nutrition.

In addition, a further £309,000 has been spent on materials for the new Healthy Start initiative, which supports breastfeeding. Funding for 2006-07 is due to be confirmed shortly.

Primary care trusts are responsible at a local level for breastfeeding services and support.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what (a) information and (b) support on breastfeeding is routinely made available to parents; and what assessment she has made of whether provision is consistent across the country. [67653]

Caroline Flint: The Department undertakes work at a national level to support breastfeeding including providing a range of breastfeeding publications, guidance and leaflets which are made available through the national health service to health professionals and parents.

The Government have adopted the World Health Organization recommendations to encourage exclusive breastfeeding for the first six months of life, with continued breastfeeding alongside the introduction of complementary feeding.

Breastfeeding services and support for breastfeeding at a local level is the responsibility of NHS primary care trusts. The Government have a commitment in the NHS Plan to increase support for breastfeeding as part of its strategy to reduce health inequalities and has set a target to increase breastfeeding initiation rates by 2per cent. per year.

Child Drug Addicts

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the number of children taking (a) heroin and (b) cocaine. [69346]

Caroline Flint: Figures from the schools survey, 'Drug use, Smoking and Drinking among Young People in England in 2005: Headline Figures'[1] show that 1 per cent. of secondary school children aged 11 to 15 had used heroin in the last year and 2 per cent. had used cocaine in the last year.

These headline figures do not contain estimates of numbers and nor do any of the full schools survey reports. There would be difficulties in taking account of the survey design and sampling, which mean we are unable to supply estimates of actual numbers.

The Home Office's yearly British crime survey (BCS) has published figures for 2004-05 estimating the numbers of young people[2], who have taken drugs in their lifetime, in the last year and in the previous month. These figures are shown in table one.

[1] 2006, The Information Centre for health and social care, public health statistics

[2] Young people are defined as those aged 16 to 24 living in England and Wales because the BCS drugs module is only asked to those aged 16 to 59 and the young people's target of the drug strategy focuses on those aged under 25.

Drug	Used ever	Used last year	Used previous month
Cocaine	531,000	298,000	127,000
Heroin	34,000	9,000	5,000

[1] Estimates are derived by multiplying the prevalence rate by the estimated population aged 16 to 24 in England and Wales. The figures are calculated using population estimates provided by the Government Actuarial Service.

Children's Health Services

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many health service staff have received specific training and support to promote the psychological well-being of children. [67644]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information regarding the number of health service staff receiving training and support to promote the psychological well-being of children is not held centrally by the Department.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many staff in primary care have received specific training in the assessment of (a) children, (b) mental health conditions and (c) child mental health conditions. [67646]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information regarding training for the assessment of children, mental health conditions and children's mental health conditions in primary care is not held centrally by the Department.

Doctors

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consultations have been held with the Community Relations Council on the implications of the new immigration rules for Commonwealth doctors and their prospects for employment and training. [65032]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Community Relations Council was not consulted on the implications of the new immigration rules.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether EU doctors appointed under new work permit regulations will have to take (a) the International English Language Testing System examinations and (b) an equivalent test of proficiency in English. [64654]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Doctors who are nationals of the European Economic Area are not required to pass a language proficiency exam for the purposes of registering with the General Medical Council.

However, national health service employers are required to ensure that those whom recruit can safely communicate with patients.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessments she has made of the likely effect of the new regulations on work permits for non-EU doctors on the (a) numbers and (b) quality of doctors recruited from the Commonwealth. [64668]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The success of our investment in workforce and training has led to increasing competition for posts. As a result, there will be correspondingly fewer opportunities for doctors from outside the European Economic Area (EEA), who will, however, still be able to apply to posts which have not been filled by a suitable EEA candidate.

It is the responsibility of the General Medical Council to ensure that all doctors registered in the United Kingdom are fit to practise.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how long doctors of overseas origin who are UK graduates will be allowed to complete their foundation training before they are sent home. [65026]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Doctors from outside the European Economic Area who have graduated in the United Kingdom will have up to three years to complete their foundation training. Once the foundation course has been completed doctors will need to meet the normal requirements of the immigration rules.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will take steps to ensure that overseas junior doctors working in the UK are allowed to complete their training without a permit. [66841]

Ms Rosie Winterton: We have put in place transitional arrangements to ensure that doctors currently in training posts are able to complete their training.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will give overseas doctors living in the UK who are not employed a grace period of up to two years in which to find a training post. [66843]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has been working with the Home Office to put in place transitional arrangements. Those doctors and dentists, who were offered a relevant training post before the changes were announced will be given the opportunity to complete their training.

There is no need for any additional arrangement. It was already the case before this recent change that doctors and dentists could not be granted an extension of stay as a postgraduate doctor or dentist without having a recognised training post arranged. Those without posts would not have been eligible to extend their stay.

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the impact of the new rules restricting the employment of non-European economic area doctors on such doctors working in England; and if she will make a statement. [67273]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has been working with the Home Office to put in place transitional arrangements. Those doctors and dentists who were offered a relevant training post before the changes were announced will be given the opportunity to complete their training.

Overseas doctors and dentists will still be able to come and train in the United Kingdom. They will now be considered as being in employment for immigration purposes and will need to meet the requirements of an employment category of the immigration rules.

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many doctors who are non-European Economic Area citizens who work in the NHS received their medical training in the United Kingdom; how many received their training in another part of the European Economic Area; and if she will make a statement. [67274]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information is not collected centrally relating to the country of origin of national health service staff.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps NHS trusts will have to take to ensure that no EU or EEA applicants are available for doctors posts, with particular reference to the advertisement of posts; [65024]

(2) what demonstration of a lack of suitable EU or EEA nationals for vacant medical posts NHS trusts will have to make before they can consider international medical graduates from other countries; and whether work permits will be issued to non-EU and non-EEA nationals (a) before application, (b) on application and (c) on appointment. [65039]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Before they employ a person who requires a work permit to work in the United Kingdom, national health service trusts will need to satisfy the resident labour market test. To demonstrate they have done this, they should provide:

The vacancy as it appeared on a website, if advertised on NHS jobs or similar portal, or a copy of the advertisement as it appeared in a recognised journal;

Confirmation of where the post was advertised;

Proof that the advertisement was placed within six months of the work permit application being made;

Information on how many people applied for the post;

Information on how many people were shortlisted for the post; and

An explanation, for each resident worker who applied, why they have not been employed.

Work Permits (UK) expects vacancies to be placed in the most appropriate medium for reaching suitably qualified resident workers.

Employers should apply for a work permit once the appointment has been made.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the new recruitment process for overseas doctors will be put in place; and when examinations will be held overseas as part of its arrangements. [65025]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The new recruitment process for junior doctors will be in place by October 2006 for posts starting in August 2007.

The professional and linguistic assessment board is the responsibility of the General Medical Council and it is their responsibility to determine when and where the exam will take place.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what representations she has received from the British Medical Association (BMA) on the new regulations on work permits for trainee doctors; and how many of the BMA's proposals she accepted. [64710]

(2) what representations she has received from the BMA on the new regulations on work permits for trainee doctors. [65057]

Ms Rosie Winterton: We have received no representations. Departmental officials have met with the British Medical Association's junior doctors committee and the international committee to clarify the arrangements.

Dignity Nurses

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what measurable outcomes a dignity nurse will deliver in each care setting where a nurse is so designated; [67552]

(2) what assessment she has made of how the (a) content of and (b) curriculum for nurse training fits her plans for dignity nurses; [67553]

(3) what process will be used to appoint dignity nurses; and what estimate she has made of the number of dignity nurses who will be in post by the end of (a) 2006-07 and (b) 2007-08; [67554]

(4) how the work of designated dignity nurses will be evaluated; [67555]

(5) what the (a) role and (b) remit will be of designated dignity nurses; and how she expects this to differ from the role of other nurses. [67556]

Ms Rosie Winterton: There is not a specific nursing role called a dignity nurse. All nurses are expected to protect patients' dignity and be trained to deliver high standards of care.

'A New Ambition for Old Age—Next Steps in Implementing the National Service Framework for Older People' was published in April 2006. This builds on the role of existing nurse leaders such as modern matrons, ward sisters and directors of nursing and strengthens their responsibility for ensuring that older people in their area of care are treated with respect for their dignity. Organisations need to identify specific nurses from their existing clinical leaders and these nurse leaders are to be champions for maintaining patient dignity, providing leadership and support to others and embedding dignity considerations in all working practices.

Nurse leaders can use the national benchmarking system to evaluate their effectiveness. 'Essence of Care' includes a measure for assessing the preservation of dignity. Standards of care are also monitored through the Healthcare Commission and Commission for Social Care Inspection and patient feedback surveys.

Drug Rehabilitation

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many publicly funded residential drug rehabilitation places there were in England and Wales in each of the last five years. [68946]

Caroline Flint: The Department does not hold annual records of publicly funded residential rehabilitation places for the last five years.

The National Treatment Agency for substance misuse launched a residential directory on 8 August 2003, and an online bed vacancy directory, BEDVACS, started on 23 April 2004. There is no record of any data prior to 1 February 2005. On 1 February 2005, there were 118 English residential rehabilitation units with a total of 2,498 beds. The most recent data from February 2006 show that the directory lists 119 English residential rehabilitation units with a total of 2,530 beds.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people are on (a) methadone, (b) buprenorphine and (c) naltrexone in England in order to treat drug addiction. [71935]

Caroline Flint: The Department does not hold information centrally for the number of people in drug treatment who receive prescribed drugs methadone, buprenorphine and naltrexone.

Figures for 2005-06 taken from the National Treatment Agency's national drug treatment monitoring system (NDTMS) give data on the number of people receiving all opiate substitutes, including methadone, buprenorphine and naltrexone, as part of a drug treatment programme. However, we are unable to split data taken from NDTMS into separate opiate substitutes. The overall figures are shown in table.

2005-06

	Numbers treatment
Specialist prescribing (secondary care)	48,786
General practitioner prescribing	21,577
Total	70,363

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many individuals have (a) entered and (b) remained for over three months in drug rehabilitation treatment in (i) Birklands and (ii) Meden ward of Mansfield in each of the last five years. [71931]

Andy Burnham: Data are not held centrally. The table shows information relating to the Nottinghamshire drug action team. Data are not available prior to 2003-04.

Drug rehabilitation treatment, Nottinghamshire drug and alcohol action team

	Number of patients entering rehabilitation treatment	Number of patients remaining in rehabilitation treatment for more than three months

National Treatment Agency, national drug treatment monitoring system

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many methadone patients have been registered with the drugs and alcohol action team in (a) Meden and (b) Birklands ward in Mansfield in each of the last five years. [71932]

Andy Burnham: Methadone patients are not required to register with a drug and alcohol team. In 2005-06, the national drug treatment monitoring system had notification of 1,249 Nottinghamshire residents receiving 2,234 episodes of substitute prescribing. 892 of these episodes were through specialist prescribing services, and 1,342 were through general practice prescribing.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many needle exchange transactions have there been in (a) Meden and (b) Birklands ward of Mansfield in each of the last five years. [71934]

Andy Burnham: The information requested is not held centrally.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people have been treated with methadone in each of the last five years; and how many of them were former prisoners. [69408]

Caroline Flint: Records taken from the National Treatment Agency's national drug treatment monitoring system give data on the number of people receiving all opiate substitutes, like buprenorphine and naltrexone, and not just methadone, as part of a drug treatment programme. These figures are available for the last three years only:

2003-04

	Number treated
Specialist prescribing (secondary care)	53,676
General practitioner (GP) prescribing	9,151
Total	62,827

2004-05

	Number treated
Specialist prescribing (secondary care)	48,818
GP prescribing	18,972
Total	67,790

2005-06

	Number treated
Specialist prescribing (secondary care)	48,786
GP prescribing	21,577
Total	70,363

The Department does not hold information on how many of these were former prisoners.

Eastbourne District General Hospital

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many overnight stays in the paediatric ward of the Eastbourne District General hospital there have been in each of the last 10 years. [68388]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is not collected centrally.

External Consultants

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been allocated to external consultants for the recruitment exercise for chairs of strategic health authorities. [69135]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The recruitment of the chairs for the strategic health authorities was managed by the NHS Appointments Commission. I have asked the Commission's chair to answer my hon. Friend's question directly.

Food/Alcohol Advertising

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she last met Ofcom to discuss the rules on broadcast advertising, sponsorship and promotion of food and drink to young people; if she will publish the minutes of the meeting; and if she will make a statement. [67409]

Caroline Flint: Ofcom met the Food Standards Agency and myself on 22 March 2006 when they set out the options for restrictions on broadcast advertising that were subsequently published in a consultation document on 28 March. Ofcom were also represented at the last meeting of the food and drink advertising and promotion forum on 26 April 2006, which I attended in part.

Fourth World Conference on Women

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what response her Department made to the report of the Fourth World Conference on Women 1995. [65176]

Caroline Flint: The United Nations Fourth World Conference on Women in 1995 helped focus attention on gender equality in policy making and in particular on services to strengthen women's health.

The Department is committed to improving the health and well being of the general population, including the promotion of healthy lifestyles. The Department is currently taking forward a number of initiatives, including gender specific screening programmes. Some initiatives address particular aspects of women's health which take account of vulnerable and hard to reach populations. Examples include work related to the maternity standard of the national service framework for children, young people and maternity services. The standard contains a number of recommendations including ones to address improving maternal health and the needs of pregnant women experiencing domestic violence. Many of our initiatives help to promote empowerment of women by encouraging choice and partnership working with professionals over care, therefore fulfilling the commitment given in Beijing.

In March, the Department wrote to Baroness Prosser at the Women's National Commission in response to its annual violence against women audit. We provided information on a range of subjects from domestic abuse and female genital mutilation to the gender equality public sector duty, which all public bodies will be legally bound to uphold from April 2007.

Great Western Ambulance Service

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) administrative centres and (b) call centres the new Great Western Ambulance Service plans to have; and what guarantees have been made to existing staff on redeployment. [65972]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The number of administrative centres and control rooms for each ambulance trust is a local matter for the trust concerned.

The principles of the human resources (HR) framework, agreed in partnership with trade unions nationally, apply to the recently merged Great Western Ambulance Service. The HR framework was produced to ensure that changes to configuration arising from "Taking Healthcare to the Patient: Transforming NHS Ambulance Services" are managed consistently and equitably across the country.

Any staff who do not secure jobs in the new structure and who may remain at risk of redundancy will have guaranteed employment until March 2007, and during the intervening period support will be provided to staff in obtaining suitable alternative employment within local national health service communities and partner organisations.

Midwives

Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action she is taking to ensure more midwives are recruited in the north west region. [67826]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Individual national health service organisations are responsible for the recruitment of midwives. However, the Department is currently assessing the implications of the recently published White Paper 'Our health, our care, our say: a new direction for community services' and the commitment around offering choice within maternity services.

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of midwives have a nursing qualification as well as a midwifery qualification. [71547]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This information is not collected centrally by the Department or the Information Centre for health and social care.

However, the Nursing and Midwifery Council holds figures on the number of midwives in the United Kingdom (UK) with more than one qualification.

According to their data, there are 22,306 midwives in the UK with more than one qualification.

Mobile Telephony

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent research she has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the health effects of mobile telephony; and if she will make a statement. [69870]

Caroline Flint: The Stewart report in 2000 comprehensively reviewed the scientific literature and concluded that

"the balance of evidence to date suggests that exposures below international guidelines do not cause health effects to the general population"

(www.iegmp.org.uk). More recently, "Mobile Phones and Health 2004" reiterated the Stewart report's conclusions noting that "there is a lack of hard information showing that the mobile phone systems in use are damaging to health."

The report [Documents of the National Radiological Protection Board, Volume 15, No. 5] is available on the Health Protection Agency's radiation protection division's (HPA-RPD) website at www.hpa.org.uk/radiation. Both these reports, additionally, recommended further research and a precautionary approach to the use of mobile phone technology pending the availability of more robust scientific research results.

The independently managed mobile telecommunications and health research (MTHR) programme was set up in 2001 in response to the Stewart report recommendations. It is currently supporting a number of studies into the possible health effects of mobile phone technology and these are described on the MTHR's website at www.mthr.org.uk.

All mobile phones and base stations in this country comply with international guidelines that are based on comprehensive reviews of the scientific literature. Measurements undertaken by both the HPA and by Ofcom (www.ofcom.org.uk) have consistently shown that exposures to radio signals from base stations are lower than the international guideline levels.

National Treatment Agency

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost has been of the National Treatment Agency since its inception. [69406]

Caroline Flint: The National Treatment Agency for substance misuse (NTA) has been funded by central Government since its inception in 2001-02. Total funding is shown in the following table.

Funding of the NTA, 2001-02 to 2005-06

	£ million
2001-02	3.4
2002-03	6
2003-04	7.76
2004-05	10.43
2005-06	12.10

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what programmes are being undertaken by the National Treatment Agency; and how many people are employed by the Agency. [69407]

Caroline Flint: The National Treatment Agency for substance misuse (NTA) business plan outlines work programmes planned by the NTA for the year ahead, within seven priority areas:

treatment capacity;

access;

retention;

treatment delivery;

criminal justice and the drug intervention programme; and young people.

The business plan has not yet been finalised to reflect the possibility of programme changes when funding allocations for the year are finalised.

As at 1 April 2006, there were 130 full-time employees of the NTA.

NHS Business Arrangement Manual

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the (a) individuals and (b) companies consulted in writing on the forthcoming business arrangement manual for NHS managers. [68262]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The "Business Arrangement Manual for NHS managers" was published on 25 January 2006 as the document "The NHS in England: the operating framework for 2006/7".

As is common for publications of this type, the Department consulted informally with a broad selection of senior national health service managers. The Department also consulted in writing with Monitor in relation to issues concerning NHS foundation trusts. In addition, the Department consulted informally with individuals in other Government departments.

NHS Finances

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health by what date the (a) West Gloucestershire primary care trust, (b) Cotswold and Vale primary care trust, (c) Cheltenham and Tewkesbury primary care trust, (d) Gloucestershire Partnership NHS Trust, (e) Gloucestershire Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust and (f) Great Western Ambulance Trust are required to (i) achieve month by month financial balance and (ii) clear the accumulated deficit from prior years. [72152]

Caroline Flint: With respect to Gloucestershire Hospitals National Health Service Foundation Trust, this is a matter for the Chair and I have written to the Chair to inform him of the hon. Member's inquiry and copies will be placed in the Library.

With respect to the other organisations the hon. Member refers to, the strategic health authority (SHA) has the responsibility to secure financial balance across the area by the end of the financial year. The SHA is agreeing plans with local organisations to achieve month by month financial balance and clear the accumulated deficit from prior years.

NHS Hospitals

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 11 May 2006, to question 70030, on NHS hospitals, if she will list the NHS facilities in England which have inpatient beds. [72186]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information requested is available on the Department's website at:

www.performance.doh.gov.uk/hospitalactivity/data_requests/index.htm

NHS Pension Scheme

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment she has made of the impact of agenda for change on the NHS Pension Scheme; [67949]

(2) whether the figures she has released on the under-estimate of the cost of the GP and consultants contract include the cost of the contract to the NHS Pension Scheme. [67950]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Government Actuary's department has valued the total liabilities of the NHS Pension Scheme as at 31 March 2005 to be £127.9 billion. They are in the process of preparing a detailed actuarial valuation of the scheme as at 31 March 2004 which will be published later this year, which will include analysis of the factors leading to any change in valuation.

NHS Staff

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the Answer of 8 May 2006, to Official Report, column 62W, on NHS staff, what the estimated out-turn figures are for 2006. [70667]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is not held centrally.

Nurses

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the number of student nurses who graduate in 2006 who will find jobs within the NHS. [67208]

Ms Rosie Winterton: We estimate up to 19,000 student nurses will complete their training in 2006. It is not possible to state exactly how many nursing students will complete their training in any given year because a number will delay completion, leave the course or take career breaks.

There are still jobs for newly qualified staff in the national health service but there is now a closer match between demand and supply, and consequently more competition. We will continue to need new staff to replace those who retire or take career breaks. Strategic health authorities and trusts are working proactively to find opportunities for graduates within their overall workforce plans.

Obesity

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the annual change in obesity levels in children under 11 years of age in each year since 1997; and if she will make a statement. [67410]

Caroline Flint: The data requested are shown in the table:

Prevalence of obesity among among children aged 2-10 by sex, England 1997-2004

Percentage

				unweighted				weighted[1]
	1997	1998	1999	2000	2001	2002	2003	2003	2004

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on progress towards issuing guidance on (a) prevention, (b) identification, (c) management and (d) treatment of obesity. [67422]

Caroline Flint: The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence's (NICE) guideline on the prevention, identification, assessment and management of overweight and obesity in adults and children is currently out for consultation. The guideline will be published in November 2006. Meanwhile, in order to help primary care trusts to improve the provision of obesity services and advice to patients, the Department has published an obesity care pathway and weight loss guide on 4 May.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent discussions she has had with the British Medical Association on the prevention of childhood obesity; and if she will make a statement. [68843]

Caroline Flint: On 1 February 2006, I met with the British Medical Association to discuss issues related to the prevention of childhood obesity.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines her Department has set for the (a) minimum and (b) maximum recommended daily calorie requirements for adolescents aged 13 to 18 years. [71010]

Caroline Flint: The Department has not set any minimum or maximum daily calorie requirements for adolescents aged 13 to 18 years. However, the committee on medical aspects of food policy published a report in 1994, "Dietary Reference Values for Food Energy and Nutrients for the United Kingdom", which gives estimated average energy requirements for children and adolescents based on their present lifestyles and activity levels.

The relevant estimated average requirements (EARs) for energy in adolescents is shown in the table:

EAR (kcal/d)

Age	Males	Females
11-14 years	2,220	1,845
15-18 years	2,755	2,110

Parkinson's Disease

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many specialist neurological nurses there have been for Parkinson's disease in each year since 1997, broken down by (a) region and (b) primary care trust area. [64765]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information on the number of specialist neurological nurses for Parkinson's disease is not collected centrally.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many people diagnosed with Parkinson's disease there were in (a) England and (b) Tamworth constituency in each of the last five years; and if she will make a statement; [71251]

(2) what percentage of people in (a) England and (b) Tamworth constituency diagnosed with Parkinson's disease have access to a specialist nurse; and if she will make a statement. [71252]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Data on the number of people diagnosed with Parkinson's disease are not collected. However, the Parkinson's Disease Society estimated that around 10,000 people are diagnosed with the disease each year in the United Kingdom.

The percentage of those living with Parkinson's disease with access to a Parkinson's disease nurse specialist is not collected.

Sexual Health

Mr. Laxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of patients who presented themselves at a genito-urinary medicine clinic within the Greater Derbyshire and Derby Central Primary Care Trusts were treated or tested within (a) 24 and (b) 48 hours in the last period for which figures are available. [67632]

Caroline Flint: Data on patients seen within 24 hours are not routinely collected. The latest available data for patients seen within 48 hours, as at February 2006, are shown in the table.

Primary care trust (PCT)	Percentage of patients seen within 48 hours
Central Derby	25
Greater Derby	24

Source:
Health Protection Agency quarterly survey of genitor-urinary medicine waiting times.

As part of the Government's drive to improve sexual health, all PCTs are working towards the target of 100 per cent. of genito-urinary (GU) attendees being seen within 48 hours by 2008. To help achieve this, sexual health and GU access have been identified as one of the top six national health service priorities in the NHS operating framework for 2006-07, and additional investment of £130 million over three years, was announced through the 'Choosing Health' White Paper.

Sexually Transmitted Diseases

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research she has commissioned to explore the relationship between recreational drug use and the spread of sexually transmitted diseases and infections. [71011]

Caroline Flint: The Department has not commissioned any specific research to explore the relationship between recreational drug use and the spread of sexually transmitted diseases and infections.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures her Department is taking to educate the public on the potential dangers of recreational drug use with particular reference to the risk of spreading sexually transmitted diseases and infections. [71012]

Caroline Flint: As part of the Government's commitment to educating and advising people regarding the harms associated with recreational drug use, we along with the Home Office have invested substantial funding in programmes such as FRANK, talktofrank.com, which where appropriate will include risks of spreading sexually transmitted diseases and infections.

Speech/Language Therapists

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the statement by the Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Birmingham, Hodge Hill (Mr. Byrne), of 25 April 2006, Official Report, column 549, how many of the 100 extra speech and language therapy staff in the North Central London strategic health authority area will be deployed to each borough. [69333]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: This information is not collected in the format requested. However, the following table shows the number of qualified speech and language therapy staff in the North Central London strategic health authority (SHA) area by national health service organisation in 1997 and 2005, which are the latest figures available.

Staff and Associate Specialist Group

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many doctors in the staff and associate specialist group are employed in the NHS. [64223]

Ms Rosie Winterton: At September 2005, there were 2,554 doctors who were associate specialists and 5,527 who were staff grades.

Student Midwives

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the total cost to her Department of training student midwives was in each year since 1997-98; [71735]

(2) how many student midwives there were in each academic year since 1997-98; how many student midwives were in receipt of a bursary in each year; and what the total cost to public funds was of bursaries to student midwives in each year; [71736]

(3) if she will list the institutions which offer training to student midwives. [71739]

Caroline Flint: The total cost of training student midwives for each year since 1997 is shown in the table.

Notes:
1. 1997-98, 2004-05 and 2005-06 are forecasts (actual outturn was only collected from 1999 onwards)
2. Data in the above time series are not strictly comparable due to changes in the way data were collected
3. Average bursary costs for nurses and midwives added to tuition costs from 2000-01 onwards

Information on the number of student midwives in each academic year since 1997-98, the numbers in receipt of a bursary in each year and the total cost to public funds of bursaries to student midwives in each year are shown in the following table.

Information on the institutions, which offer training to student midwives, is not held by the Department. The Nursing and Midwifery Council is responsible for approving education institutions to run midwifery training programmes.

Work Permits

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she plans to issue final guidance for the NHS on work permits, categories and the detailed operation of the new immigration rules. [65029]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Full guidance on work permits can be found on the Working in the UK's website at: www.workingintheuk.gov.uk.

Details of the new requirements of the immigration rules are available on the Immigration and Nationality Directorate's website at: www.ind.homeoffice.gov.uk.

Full guidance on the implications of the changes for the medical community is available on the NHS Employers website at: www.nhsemployers.org.

Departmental officials are discussing points for clarification with the British Medical Association and guidance will be updated where necessary.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Asylum Seekers (Legal Aid)

Damian Green: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs pursuant to her answer to the right hon. Member for Haltemprice and Howden of 6 July, Official Report, column 489W, on asylum seekers (legal aid), what the cost was of legal aid for asylum and immigration cases in cash terms in (a) 2004-05 and (b) 2005-06. [71160]

Vera Baird: The cost of legal aid for immigration and asylum cases, including administration, is as follows:

	£ million
2004-05	177
2005-06	107

Court of Protection

Willie Rennie: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many people have died while their cases were being dealt with by the Court of Protection in each year since 1997. [71742]

Ms Harman: The number of people who have died while under the jurisdiction of the Court of Protection pursuant to the proceedings of the Mental Health Act 1983 from 1999 to 2006 are as follows:

	Number
1999	6,347
2000	5,692
2001	5,589
2002	5,055
2003	4,946
2004	4,778
2005	5,234
2006	1,911

The court only holds records for six years following the end of its involvement in the client's case and it is not therefore possible to provide reliable data prior to this period. The court does not hold reliable information on the number of donors who have died while under its jurisdiction pursuant to the proceedings of the Enduring Power of Attorney Act 1985.

Freedom of Information

Mr. Heald: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many representations she has received about her Department's handling of Freedom of Information requests. [69994]

Vera Baird: Complaints about the Department's handling of Freedom of Information are dealt with under the Department's internal review procedures. Details of internal reviews handled by my Department in 2005 will be published in the annual report on Freedom of Information which will be published shortly.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what criteria the Government used to identify and classify public authorities when drawing up Schedule 1 to the Freedom of Information Act 2000. [70606]

Vera Baird: Schedule One to the Freedom of Information Act 2000 now lists the majority of bodies and offices which are subject to the Act.

In drawing up Schedule 1, central and local government bodies, the health, police and education sectors were largely listed by generic descriptions, the majority of which refer to the statutory basis for those bodies' functions.

Parts Six and Seven of the Schedule list "other public bodies and offices" in England and Wales, and in Northern Ireland respectively.

The bodies and offices in these Parts have been identified as meeting the two criteria set out in section 4 of the Act, namely:

that the body or office was established by virtue of Her Majesty's prerogative, by an enactment or subordinate legislation, or in any other way by a Minister of the Crown, a government department, or the National Assembly for Wales; that the body or office is wholly or partly constituted by appointment made by the Crown, a Minister, a government department or the National Assembly for Wales.

In drawing up this Schedule, departments were asked to identify the bodies for which they were responsible which met these criteria. Many of these were already to be found in Schedule 2 to the Parliamentary Commissioner Act 1976 (as amended), and hence were already subject to the non-statutory Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

The Secretary of State has a discretionary power to amend Parts 6 and 7 of the Schedule to add new bodies and offices which meet the necessary criteria, and remove references to bodies which have ceased to do so, or which no longer exist. Amending Orders of this kind are made annually.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the timetable is for the Secretary of State's review of the bodies covered by the Freedom of Information Act 2000. [70607]

Vera Baird: Bodies covered by the Act are listed in Schedule 1 to the Act. The list can be amended by Order under section 4 of the Act.

Orders are made annually to ensure that the Schedule is up to date by adding references to new bodies which meet the necessary criteria for inclusion, and removing references to bodies which have ceased to exist, or which no longer meet the criteria.

New bodies created by statute are also frequently added to the Schedule by the same legislation which created the body.

The Secretary of State also has a discretionary power under section 5 of the Act to designate as public authorities those private organisations which appear to him to be performing functions of a public nature.

The Secretary of State has taken the view that it would be most appropriate to learn the lessons of FOI implementation in the public sector before extending application of the Act to private bodies in this way.

Human Rights

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will make a statement on the operation in England and Wales of (a) Article 3 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights 1948 and (b) Article 6 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights 1966. [72034]

Vera Baird: Neither the Universal Declaration of Human Rights nor the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights has direct legal effect in the United Kingdom. However, the right to life is protected by Article 2 of the European Convention on Human Rights, and the abolition of the death penalty has been most recently confirmed by the Thirteenth Protocol to the Convention. These are both given further effect in the United Kingdom by the Human Rights Act 1998.

Legal Aid

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the total cost of legal aid for supporting prisoners appealing parole board decisions was in each of the last five years. [69743]

Vera Baird: The total cost of legal aid for supporting prisoners appealing parole board decisions in each of the last five years was as follows:

2001-02[1]	209,753
2002-03	791,084
2003-04	1,176,468
2004-05	2,156,443
2005-06	2,400,821

[1] During the first year of contracting (2001-02) cases were also paid under the previous regime for residual work. Such expenditure is not included in the figures, as it cannot be separately identified.

National Security Appeals Panel

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs whether any decisions of the National Security Appeals Panel under section 28 of the Data Protection Act 1998 have been the subject of judicial review; and if she will make a statement. [69797]

Vera Baird: One decision on the National Security Appeals Panel under Section 28 of the Data Protection Act 1998 is subject to a Judicial Review. The proceedings are subject to a Court Order which provides that "no information is to be given to anyone who is not a party to these proceedings which may identify the parties to or the subject matter of the claim without the leave of a judge."

Portland PR

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what meetings officials in her Department have had with representatives of the public relations company Portland PR; what contracts Portland PR has with her Department and agencies for which she has responsibility; and what the nature of the contract is in each case. [70044]

Vera Baird: My Department does not maintain a central list of such meetings. Civil servants meet many people as part of the process of policy development and business delivery. All such meetings are conducted in accordance with the requirements of the Civil Service Code and Guidance for civil servants on contacts with lobbyists and people outside Government.

Neither DCA nor its agencies has any contracts with Portland PR.

Repossessions

Mr. Spring: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many court orders have been issued for the repossession of homes in West Suffolk in each of the past five years. [69815]

Ms Harman: Although figures for the West Suffolk constituency are not available, the table shows the number of mortgage possession orders made at Bury St. Edmunds county court in the last five years. This is the only such court in the West Suffolk constituency area.

The civil procedure rules provide that all claims for the repossession of land must be commenced in the district in which the land is situated. However, Bury St. Edmunds county court covers areas other than West Suffolk and therefore not all possession actions entered in that court necessarily relate to the West Suffolk area.

These figures do not indicate how many houses have been repossessed through the courts, since not all the orders will have resulted in the issue and execution of warrants of possession.

[2] The court, following a judicial hearing, may grant an order for possession immediately. This entitles the claimant to apply for a warrant to have the defendant evicted. However, even where a warrant for possession is issued, the parties can still negotiate a compromise to prevent eviction.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many court orders have been issued for the repossession of homes in Tamworth constituency in each of the past five years. [71222]

Ms Harman: The following table shows the number of mortgage possession orders made at Tamworth county court in the last five years.

The civil procedure rules provide that all claims for the repossession of land must be commenced in the district in which the land is situated. However, Tamworth county court covers areas other than Tamworth itself, and therefore not all possession actions entered in that court necessarily relate to the Tamworth constituency.

These figures do not indicate how many houses have been repossessed through the courts, since not all the orders will have resulted in the issue and execution of warrants of possession.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Departmental Advertising

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much was spent on advertising by his Department in each of the last three years. [70505]

Mr. Thomas: DFID does not hold a separate advertising budget; the majority of advertising relates to recruitment advertising in newspapers and journals; for the last three calendar years 2003-05 this was as follows:

2003	703,012
2004	594,769
2005	307,359

DFID does not directly fund advertising by non-departmental public bodies, Executive agencies or independent statutory bodies. Figures for 2006 have yet to be finalised.

Departmental Budget

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much of the budget for his Department remained unspent in the last financial year. [70502]

Mr. Thomas: The Department for International Development forecasts an under spend for the financial year 2005-06 of £79.879 million from a budget of £4,567.823 million. This is a provisional figure based on the estimated outturn data published in the annual report; the final under spend is likely to be significantly lower.

Global Monitoring for Environment and Security

Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment his Department has made of the effects on (a) the delivery of the UK's humanitarian aid programme and (b) UK emergency preparedness of the Respond Programme within the Global Monitoring for Environment and Security Initiative; and if he will make a statement. [71043]

Mr. Thomas: DFID has found that the Respond Programme has made a useful contribution to map information and therefore to humanitarian response, specifically in the Pakistan earthquake and generally in global disaster monitoring.

The Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA) has the policy lead for the Government on the Global Monitoring for Environment and Security Initiative (GMES). DEFRA takes a close interest in all aspects of GMES, including the Respond Programme, and will continue to engage with it and with the European Commission, the European Space Agency and other UK Government Departments.

Legislation

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what amendments have been made to the International Development Act 2002. [70374]

Hilary Benn: A number of amendments have been made to the International Development Act 2002.

Section 9, Subsection (4) has been amended as follows: in para (b) the words "other than the National Assembly for Wales" in square brackets were inserted by SI 2005/3225, art 6(2), Sch 2, Pt 1, para 6(1).

Schedule 1 has been amended as follows:

Entry "Health Protection Agency" was inserted by the Health Protection Agency Act 2004, s 11(1), Sch 3, para 16

Entry "An NHS foundation trust" was inserted by the Health and Social Care (Community Health and Standards) Act 2003, s 34, Sch 4, paras 121, 122.

Entry "Public Health Laboratory Service Board" (omitted) was repealed by the Health and Social Care (Community Health and Standards) Act 2003, ss 190(2), 196, Sch 13, para 11, Sch 14, Pt 7.

Entry "A Strategic Health Authority" was inserted by SI 2002/2469, reg 4, Sch 1, Pt 1, para 31.

Entry "The National Assembly for Wales" was substituted for entry "Wales Tourist Board" as originally enacted, by SI 2005/3225, art 6(2), Sch 2, Pt 1, para 6(2).

Schedule 3 has been amended as follows:

Para 3: sub-para (3) was repealed by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005, s 174(2), Sch 17, Pt 2;

Para 10 was repealed by the Income Tax (Earnings and Pensions) Act 2003, s 724(1), Sch 8, Pt1;

Para 11: sub-para (3) was repealed by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005, s 174(2), Sch 17, Pt 2;

Para 12: sub-para (3) was repealed by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005, s 174(2), Sch 17, Pt 2.

Maternal Health

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what steps are being taken by his Department to improve its performance on maternal health; [68165]

(2) if he will make maternal health a tracker for his Department to monitor its progress in supporting health systems in developing countries. [68167]

Mr. Thomas: DFID's approach to improving maternal health is outlined in our 2004 strategy document "Reducing maternal deaths: evidence and action: First Progress Report". This sets out four priority areas for supporting better maternal health; specifically advocacy, scaling-up and improving services, helping remove barriers to access, and research to develop better technologies and policies.

We have recently reviewed our performance; copies of our Progress Report have been deposited in the Libraries of both Houses. The report notes that DFID spending on reducing maternal mortality (together with reproductive health services) has increased by 41.3 per cent. over the past three years, and we are committed to continuing to increase our support to maternal health.

But we still need to see more governments give greater priority to this issue. Some progress has been made in Asia—for example in Nepal, China, Vietnam and Indonesia. In many parts of Africa, however, weak health services, conflict and HIV have combined to constrain overall progress. Improving this situation will require long term and sustained help.

The Progress Report makes several recommendations, one of which is to use maternal mortality as an indicator through which to track progress in health systems strengthening. Functioning health systems are essential in seeing improvements in maternal health, and we will indeed wish to monitor maternal health outcomes as we scale up our support to basis health services.

Palestinian Ministry of Health

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment he has made of the adequacy of funds available to the Palestinian Ministry of Health; and what action he is taking in this regard. [71946]

Hilary Benn: In 2005, the Ministry of Health incurred expenditures of US$155 million. According to the World Health Organisation, these expenditures were covered by international aid (23 per cent.); domestic taxation (25-29 per cent.) and clearance revenues from Israel (42-46 per cent.).

Following the appointment of the Hamas-led Government and its failure to comply with the Quartet's conditions of renouncing violence, recognising Israel and accepting previous international agreements, all three sources of funds have declined. We are aware of reports that the Palestinian Ministry of Health does not have sufficient funds to purchase vital supplies and pay its staff. On 9 May, the Quartet invited the European Union to design a temporary international funding mechanism to help meet Palestinian basic needs. We are working closely with the European Commission to take this forward as quickly as possible, with a focus on direct funding of health sector expenditures.

Portland PR

Dr. Naysmith: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what meetings officials in his Department have had with representatives of the public relations company Portland PR; what contracts Portland PR has with his Department and agencies for which he has responsibility; and what the nature of the contract is in each case. [70134]

Mr. Thomas: The Department for International Development (DFID) does not maintain a central list of such meetings. Civil servants meet many people as part of the process of policy development and business delivery. All such meetings are conducted in accordance with the requirements of the Civil Service Code and Guidance for civil servants on contracts with lobbyists and people outside Government. DFID have no contracts with Portland PR.

Private Office Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much has been paid in (a) salary, (b) travelling expenses, (c) subsistence allowance and (d) removal expenses to special advisers in his private office in each of the last five years. [69018]

Mr. Thomas: Since 2003, the Government have published on an annual basis the names and overall cost of special advisers and the number in each payband. For information relating to the last financial year I refer the hon. Member to the written ministerial statement made by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 21 July 2005, Official Report, columns 158-61WS.

Information on special advisers for this financial year is currently being collected and will be published in the normal way when it is ready.

All official travel by special advisers is undertaken in accordance with the requirements of the Ministerial Code and the Civil Service Management Code.

Other costs are not held centrally and could be obtained only by incurring a disproportionate cost.

Promotion Boards

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many promotion boards have been held in his Department in each of the last five years. [70504]

Mr. Thomas: Since 2003, the Department for International Development (DFID) has held annual grade specific promotion boards for all grades.

This has resulted in six separate promotion boards each year.

Prior to 2003, promotion below the Senior Civil Service (SCS) was on a post by post basis and we do not hold a consolidated record of the number of boards held.

Public Consultations

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many public consultations his Department undertook in the last year; and what the cost was (a) in total and (b) of each consultation. [70503]

Mr. Thomas: Over the year 2005 the Department for International Development undertook six formal public consultations in order to inform the Department's policy development. Information on the cost of each consultation and the total cost of all consultations could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Racial Abuse

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many complaints of racial abuse have (a) been investigated and (b) upheld in his Department in each of the last five years. [70506]

Mr. Thomas: DFID did not hold a central record of discipline and grievance cases until 1 October 2004. We have no record of any complaint of racial abuse in the last five years.

St. Helena

Mr. Newmark: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will assess the merits of using amphibian aircraft to service the island of St. Helena in preference to the construction of a new airport. [71480]

Mr. Thomas: The merits of using amphibious aircraft to service the island of St. Helena were assessed as part of the 2004-05 feasibility study. This option was rejected for a number of reasons. There are no civilian seaplanes currently in operation that could provide a reliable service in the sea conditions that exist in St. Helena, where there is no shelter from the South Atlantic swells that regularly prevent cruise ship passengers from disembarking. Even if it were possible to make an acceptable safety case to the regulator for this type of operation, ticket prices would be high and unaffordable to the local population, and long flight times would discourage tourism.

St. Helena requires reliable, affordable access that islanders and tourists alike can depend upon if it is to build its economy and work towards its own goal of financial self-sufficiency. Construction of an airport that supports scheduled flights from a recognised international hub is the best and, in the long term, most cost effective way of achieving this.

Staff Surveys

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many staff surveys have been conducted in his Department in each of the last three years. [70507]

Mr. Thomas: DFID has undertaken two staff surveys of all staff over the last three financial years and is planning a third in 2006.

Sudan

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the situation of women in Sudan. [70172]

Hilary Benn [holding answer 16 May 2006]: DFID and other development partners assessed the situation of women in Sudan as part of the Joint Assessment Mission (JAM), which reported last year. Women have a vital role to play in the recovery and development of Sudan, following the signing of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement (CPA) and more recently the Darfur Peace Agreement. However, women are marginalised and poorly represented across most of society and the overall challenge is to promote gender equality and empowerment to support progress towards achieving the Millennium Development Goals. DFID promotes the interests of women within all its programmes and we are supporting a range of initiatives in governance and rule of law; gender based violence; capacity building; and basic social services where women stand to benefit.

The UK Government has also funded the Khartoum Centre for Human Rights and the Sudanese Organisation Against Torture to implement a national campaign calling for the ratification of the Convention on the Elimination of all Forms of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW). We have also supported a media campaign conducted by the UN Mission on Gender Based Violence, part of which drew attention to the deplorable crimes of rape and sexual violence in Darfur. DFID continues to assess and monitor the situation of women in Sudan, particularly in Darfur, as part of the international response. The Government of Sudan has formulated an action plan to eliminate violence against women and we continue to press for its prompt and effective implementation.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Climate Change

14. Martin Salter: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will make a statement on recent developments in the international debate on climate change. [71674]

Ian Pearson: In December 2005 Parties to the Kyoto Protocol agreed to begin negotiations on shaping a plan on climate change action for the post-2012 period. The UN Framework Convention on Climate Change parties also agreed to launch a dialogue on action to implement the Convention. The first discussions on these decisions are taking place this week in Bonn.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment his Department has made of methane emissions from trees and other plants. [70332]

Ian Pearson: Following publication of a study suggesting that trees and other plants may be a source of methane emissions, my Department assessed available scientific literature and sought expert opinion on this issue. This showed that, even if the findings of the study are confirmed, the possible methane source would offset no more than a few percent. of the carbon taken up by growing forests. Therefore, the climate change benefits provided by forests through storage of carbon far outweigh their possible contribution to global warming through methane emissions.

Coastal Access

16. Paddy Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research he has commissioned into increasing public access to coastal areas. [71677]

Barry Gardiner: Research is in hand to assess current usage and demand for costal access, as well as the economic social and environmental costs and benefits of different options for improvements. A public consultation setting out the facts and ways to increase access to the English coast will be issued in October 2006.

Single Farm Payments

17. Mr. Dunne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what progress the Rural Payments Agency has made in validating entitlement letters for single farm payments for 2005. [71678]

David Miliband: By 15 May some 71,000 out of 120,000 applicants had entitlement statements which have been issued in respect of fully validated claims. Claimants who originally received a provisional statement are being sent a confirmatory Statement once their claim has been fully validated.

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will make an application to the European Union to further delay the payment of single farm payments until October 2006. [69851]

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether he has asked the European Commission for an extension to the UK deadline for payments under the Single Payments Scheme; and if he will make a statement. [69560]

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions he has had with the EU on the extension of the Single Farm Payment. [68953]

Barry Gardiner [holding answer 11 May 2006]: 85 per cent. of the £1,500 million of expected payments for the 2005 SPS scheme year have been distributed. The residual element of payments will be made as soon as possible to those who have received a partial payment, and those who to date have not received either full or partial payment will be dealt with thereafter. Against that background and in order to safeguard the interests of UK taxpayers, a request was made last month to the European Commission to extend the EU regulatory payment window until 15 October 2006. This would ensure that any farmer whose claim remained outstanding as at 1 July should not be denied payment under the scheme.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much funding the Government holds for distribution to farmers in single farm payments. [70233]

Barry Gardiner: The Government makes payments under the single payments scheme from the funding voted annually by parliament and is then reimbursed from the Common Agricultural Policy administered by the European Commission.

The payments made are based on the National Ceilings established for each member state in accordance with the relevant EC regulation (Council Regulation (EC) No 319/2006 of 20th February 2006).

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the average waiting time was for farmers who are entitled to single farm payment scheme payments from the Rural Payments Agency in the last period for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [63057]

Barry Gardiner: The regulatory payment window for the 2005 single payment scheme (SPS) runs from 1 December 2005 to 30 June 2006. The Rural Payments Agency (RPA) announced in January 2005 that payments were unlikely to start until February 2006.

RPA met this target, with first payments made from 20 February 2006. By close of business on 4 May 2006 over 58,000 claims, representing 48.5 per cent. of the population, had been fully paid.

RPA has now made over 31,000 partial payments to claimants. 31,000 are not included in the partial payments system; 26,000 because their claim amounted to less than 1,000 Euro; and 5,000 because of a diverse range of other factors which made their cases particularly complex. Making full payments to this group of 5,000 will now be given the highest priority by the Rural Payments Agency.

The positive action being taken by RPA to make full and partial payments is set out in my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State's written statement on 9 May 2006.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many telephone calls have been made to the Rural Payments Agency's Customer Service Centre on or since 13 April 2006 to report the non-receipt of claim forms for the 2006-07 single payments scheme. [68867]

Barry Gardiner: The Rural Payments Agency's (RPA) Customer Service Centre (CSC) received 76,000 telephone calls between 13 April and 5 May 2006.

The CSC does not keep separate statistics relating to total telephone calls from customers specifically relating to the non-receipt of claim forms.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many single farm payments in (a) Tamworth constituency and (b) Staffordshire have (i) been cancelled, (ii) yet to be cancelled and (iii) been invalidated. [68353]

Barry Gardiner: 1,171 applications to the single payment scheme 2005 were rejected due to (a) an incomplete application or (b) being received after the final deadline of 10 June 2005.

The single payment scheme is not administered on a regional basis; therefore the Rural Payments Agency (RPA) does not hold information specific to Tamworth constituency or Staffordshire.

Municipal Incinerators

18. Mr. Burrowes: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many municipal incinerators he expects to be commissioned in the next five years. [71679]

Mr. Bradshaw: The number of new incinerators built will depend on the technologies and scale of facilities chosen by local authorities. We estimate that waste to energy of all types will account for about 25 per cent. of municipal waste by 2020, compared to 9 per cent. now, which is less than forecast in 2000 due to our better than expected performance on recycling.

Gum Litter

19. Alison Seabeck: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what resources his Department has allocated to local authorities selected to participate in the campaign to reduce gum litter. [71682]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Chewing Gum Action Group has provided £600,000 of funding towards the 15 local authority campaigns, the first of which began last week.

The funding has been divided between each local authority based on the advertising space available in the geographical area of the campaign, and the cost of advertising in that specific area.

Commercial Whaling

20. Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps he is taking towards preventing Japan and other whaling nations from overturning the moratorium on commercial whaling at the forthcoming International Whaling Convention meeting. [71683]

Mr. Bradshaw: Although Japan and her allies may command a simple majority at the next annual meeting of the International Whaling Commission this is insufficient to overturn the moratorium on commercial whaling. Such matters can be agreed only if 75 per cent. of those present and voting vote in favour of the motion.

Canoeing

21. Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans he has to improve access for canoeists to the rivers of England. [71684]

Barry Gardiner: Although our research shows that overall supply meets demand, there is some unmet demand for white water and canoe touring. The Environment Agency is currently working to identify what is needed and where, and to develop best-practice access agreements for canoeists on key stretches of English water.

Transport (Environmental Impact)

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the Department for Transport on the environmental impact of transport. [71675]

Ian Pearson: There are regular discussions with the ministerial team in the Department for Transport on a range of issues, including the environmental impact of transport.

Agricultural Support

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much EU funding the Government have received but not distributed to farmers in the last two full financial years. [70234]

Barry Gardiner: The funding of payments to farmers is provided by HM Treasury in the first instance and then a claim is submitted to the European Commission for the expenditure occurred after the event. Therefore the reimbursement from the European Commission is received after payments have been made to the farmers.

So at no point in time are there any funds received from the European Commission that have not been distributed to farmers.

Children's Services

Mr. Kemp: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many nursery and crèche places are provided for people working in his Department; what charges are made for the provision of such services; and what other facilities are provided for the children of employees of his Department. [67362]

Barry Gardiner: Defra is committed to childcare support both for the benefit of its staff but also as an essential element of addressing the Departmental business need. Defra's childcare provision set out in the attached table.

Defra employees are able to use a salary sacrifice scheme to reduce their childcare costs by up to £243 per month.

Consultations

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will list the consultations undertaken by his Department in the last 12 months; how many people were directly consulted in each case; how many responses were received to each consultation; what his estimate is of the cost to business of responding to those consultations; and on what assumptions his estimate is based. [71270]

Barry Gardiner [holding answer 16 May 2006]: In the calendar year 2005 the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs undertook 100 formal consultations. Details of the consultations are available on the Department's website:

www.defra.gov.uk/corporate/consult.asp

Information on the total cost of all consultations, number of people directly consulted, number of responses received, and cost to the business in responding to consultations, could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many public consultations his Department undertook in the last year; and what the cost was (a) in total and (b) of each consultation. [70542]

Barry Gardiner: In the calendar year 2005 the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs undertook 100 formal consultations. Details of the consultations are available on the Department's website:

www.defra.gov.uk/corporate/consult.asp

Information on the total cost of all consultations and cost of individual consultations could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Expenditure

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much champagne was bought for official use by his predecessor and Ministers in his Department in (a) 2003-04 and (b) 2004-05; and at what cost. [72054]

Barry Gardiner: None.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many complaints of racial abuse have been (a) investigated and (b) upheld in his Department in each of the last five years. [70545]

Barry Gardiner: The figures for this information are based on the last five financial years. The figures relate to core Defra and the following agencies: PSD, CSL, VMD, CEFAS, and SVS.

Under Defra's formal equal opportunities complaints procedures, records indicate that between April 2001 and March 2002 there was one case of bullying and racial discrimination, which was investigated, but not upheld.

Between April 2002 and March 2006 there were no formal cases of racial abuse or racial discrimination.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many staff surveys have been conducted in his Department in each of the last three years. [70547]

Barry Gardiner: There have been two full staff surveys conducted in Defra in the last three years.

Full census surveys, whereby all staff in the core-Department are invited to complete the questionnaire, are conducted at 18-month intervals. The last two were carried out in January 2004 and July 2005. The next full census survey is due in January 2007.

At quarterly intervals between the full surveys, Defra conducts "Pulse" surveys, where a random sample of staff are invited to complete the survey. This is done to enable senior Defra management to keep a closer eye on results of questions and to track trends.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many air miles have been accrued by senior civil servants in his Department on official business in each of the last three years; and how they were used. [70549]

Barry Gardiner: Central rules laid down by the Cabinet Office state that civil servants are not able to use any air miles that accrue to them through official travel on a personal basis. Any air miles must therefore be recycled for further official use or forgone. These rules are laid down on the staff Intranet.

The Department has no records of the number of air miles accrued as staff book their own travel through Defra's accredited agents and air miles are issued on an individual basis.

Equal Pay

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps are undertaken within his Department to ensure that women are obtaining equal pay to men doing work of equal value. [65849]

Barry Gardiner: In line with Cabinet Office guidelines, introduced in 2003, central Government Departments are required to conduct an Equal Pay Review at least once every 3 years.

Defra conducted and completed its first review back in 2003 and submitted this together with an action plan to Cabinet Office in April 2003. The review covered core-Defra and two of its agencies—Pesticides Safety Directorate and Veterinary Medicines Directorate—for which the core-department has pay remit responsibility.

The review found that there were no significant pay gaps within the department, provided that Defra's multi-year pay settlement was fully rolled out for future years up to and including 2005-06. The final year of the settlement was rolled out last year and runs until the end of June 2006.

Defra is now in the process of conducting a second Equal Pay Review. This will cover core-Defra and six of its agencies: Pesticides Safety Directorate, Veterinary Medicines Directorate, State Veterinary Service, Rural Development Service, Marine Fisheries Agency and Government Decontamination Service. It will examine whether the objectives of the multi-year pay settlement and the implications of the of Action Plan from the previous review have been have been met in full.

The position with regard to Defra's agencies is as follows:

Rural Payments Agency

The Rural Payments Agency (RPA) submitted an Equal Pay Review and action plan to Cabinet Office in 2003 in accordance with Cabinet Office guidelines. This Review was completed in March 2004 and found that there were no significant pay gaps as a result of gender difference. The results were subsequently discussed with RPA's Trade Union Side and a summary of proposed actions was agreed, which included reviewing Allowances paid to specialist staff to ensure no differences relating to gender existed in these additions to pay; improving levels of ethic and disability recording; and carrying out a further comprehensive Equal Pay Review in 2006, once RPA had completed its restructuring. These actions are ongoing and the full Review is now scheduled for 2007, when RPA is projected to reach its organisational 'steady state'.

Central Science Laboratory

The Central Science Laboratory completed its Equal Pay Review in April 2003 and the resultant action plan was submitted to the Cabinet Office in May 2003. No significant pay gaps were identified as a result of gender difference and subsequent pay settlements have been subject to equality-proofing. In 2005 CSL concluded a three year pay deal that invests in both the shortening of pay ranges and the delivery of an effective pay progression system to further ensure that gender related pay gaps do not emerge in the future.

Centre for Environment, Fisheries and Aquaculture Science

In line with Cabinet office guidance, the Centre for Environment, Fisheries and Aquaculture Science (CEFAS) completed an Equal Pay Review and submitted this together with an action plan to Cabinet Office in April 2003.

The review found that there were no significant pay gaps as a result of gender difference. There were individual problems as a legacy from earlier pay arrangements; these were addressed in the action plan.

The action plan was taken forward as part of CEFAS' multi-year pay deal (April 2005-March 2008). The deal was accepted through union ballots. Year two of the deal was implemented in April 2006.

Veterinary Laboratories Agency

The Veterinary Laboratories Agency completed its Equal Pay review in April 2003 and the resultant action plan was submitted to cabinet office in May 2003. The review found that there were no significant pay gaps as a result of gender difference, but the issues continue to be the subject of consultation with the Trade unions. Subsequent pay awards have been subject to equality checks and a further review will be undertaken in 2006.

Farming

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate he has made of the number of farmers who have left the agricultural sector in Suffolk in each of the past five years. [69809]

Barry Gardiner: Figures from the Agricultural and Horticultural Survey indicate labour on agricultural holdings in June each year. These figures therefore show net change only in the number of farmers.

Labour on agricultural holdings in June each year

	Number of full and part time farmers in Suffolk	Net change
2001	5,830	—
2002	5,637	-193
2003	5,498	-139
2004	5,699	+201
2005	5,633	-66

Notes:
1. Number of farmers includes partners, directors and spouses (if working on the holding).
2. Includes estimates for minor holdings.
3. Estimates have been made to non-respondents.

Source:
June Agricultural Survey

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the total projected cost is of the Farming Connect Cumbria scheme over the scheme's lifetime; how much has been allocated to the scheme by his Department; how much has been provided by other sources, broken down by source; how much has been spent by the scheme; how much has been (a) allocated for and (b) spent on grants to improve agricultural performance; how many grants have been allocated under the scheme; how much was allocated for each grant; what the projected costs are of administration over the lifetime of the scheme; how much has been spent on administration; and if he will make a statement. [71139]

Barry Gardiner [holding answer 15 May 2006]: I understand that Farming Connect is administered by Cumbria rural enterprise agency on behalf of Rural Regeneration Cumbria (RRC), using funding provided by the Northwest Regional Development Agency (NWDA). There is no Defra funding involved and no involvement by Defra or its agencies in running the scheme. Defra does not therefore hold the information requested, which the hon. Member should seek directly from Rural Regeneration Cumbria and/or the Northwest Regional Development Agency.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many registered farms there are in each Somerset constituency. [67635]

Barry Gardiner: The Rural Payments Agency (RPA) understands that this question relates to customers submitting claims under the single payment scheme with farms in Somerset.

RPA does not hold details of constituency boundaries within its customer register but has commissioned a report which will show the number of customers in Somerset as a whole. At present all available IT resources are dedicated to getting SPS payments to customers, so this report may take some months to obtain while higher priority work is carried out.

Flood Prevention

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much funding has been allocated to Wessex Flood Defence Committee in each of the last five years. [70165]

Ian Pearson: The Environment Agency is required to arrange for its flood defence functions, except for certain financial ones, to be carried out by Regional Flood Defence Committees.

I understand from the Environment Agency that the total of DEFRA grant and levies on local authorities for the area of the Wessex Regional Flood Defence Committee was £23.2 million in 2002-03, £27.2 million in 2003-04, and £39.1 million in 2004-05. Other funding for specific projects is obtained from, for example, direct beneficiaries and developers.

Gamebirds

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate he has made of the percentage of gamebirds shot on commercial shooting estates for human consumption in 2005-06. [70779]

Barry Gardiner: No such estimate has been made.

There are no compulsory government schemes collecting national statistics on the number of gamebirds shot for human consumption.

Hunting Act

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the Hunting Act 2004 in preventing wild animals being (a) hunted and (b) killed by dogs. [70738]

Barry Gardiner: The Government are satisfied with the operation of the Hunting Act 2004, which, except where carried out in accordance with the tightly-drawn exemptions set out in the Act, bans all hunting of wild mammals with dogs. DEFRA has not instituted specific arrangements to monitor the activities of individual hunts, but they are subject to the law and liable to prosecution if they breach the provisions of the Act.

Institute for Grassland and Environmental Research

Mark Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment his Department has made of the socio-economic implications of the decision to reduce financial support for the Institute for Grassland and Environmental Research. [68245]

Barry Gardiner [holding answer 8 May 2006]: Financial support is given to the Institute of Grassland and Environmental Research (IGER) by its parent Research Council, the Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council (BBSRC), through an annual core strategic grant. IGER may also secure BBSRC funding via other funding routes. Defra invests at IGER through a range of research contracts to meet specific research requirements. Some are placed with IGER as preferred supplier while others are won by IGER through open competition. In addition, IGER also undertakes research for consortia of which Defra is one of a number of sponsors, for example through LINK programmes.

Defra has made no direct assessment of the socio-economic implications of its decision to refocus research priorities into new areas and the effect this will have on the value of new contracts to the Institute of Grassland and Environmental Research (IGER).

IGER remains a very important research partner for Defra in the development and delivery of our policy objectives. This is reflected in the department's continuing significant investment at IGER, where we are already committed to investing around £5 million in research programmes in 2006-07. Further project proposals are under negotiation and we anticipate the Department's final commitment will be nearer £5.5 million, excluding our contributions to relevant LINK project consortia. By comparison, Defra's research investment at IGER in 2005-06 was approximately £5.8 million, excluding LINK projects.

Mark Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions (a) he and (b) his ministerial colleagues have had with (i) the Welsh Assembly Government and (ii) the Secretary of State for Wales on the socio-economic impact of the decision to reduce financial support for the Institute for Grassland and Environmental Research. [68249]

Barry Gardiner [holding answer 8 May 2006]: The Noble Lord Bach, had been in contact with the Welsh Assembly Government Minister for Environment Planning and Countryside about the department's decision to refocus research priorities into new areas and the effect this will have on the value of new contracts to the Institute of Grassland and Environmental Research (IGER).

Defra officials will continue to involve Welsh Assembly Government officials in discussions and decisions across the whole of Defra's research portfolio, not just those affecting IGER. Defra officials have also been in contact with the Wales Office regarding IGER.

Market Towns

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the market towns initiative. [71676]

Barry Gardiner: A significant amount of funding was delivered through the Market Towns Initiative. The Countryside Agency carried out a full assessment and concluded that it delivered a wide range of benefits for market towns and their hinterlands.

Responsibility for rural regeneration in market towns is now devolved to Regional Development Agencies, to whom Defra contributes £73 million a year.

Nitrates Directive

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what recent discussions he has had on the implementation of the nitrates directive in the UK; [68211]

(2) what discussions he has had on the effect of the implementation of the nitrates directive on the farming industry (a) in East Anglia and (b) elsewhere in the UK. [68215]

Ian Pearson: The Nitrate Vulnerable Zones (NVZs) action programme of measures for England is now under the four yearly review required by the directive and a public consultation will be issued shortly.

As part of the review, Defra has held a series of regional farmers' workshops (including in East Anglia) to discuss and develop proposals for the revised measures and to seek their views on potential impacts.

In addition, there has been ongoing dialogue with farming industry representatives, including the national farmers union, country land and business association and the tenant farmers association. That dialogue is continuing, as well as a dialogue with a wider stakeholder audience.

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what alternatives to the use of damaging fertilizers and pesticides have been considered in order to comply with the nitrates directive. [68214]

Ian Pearson: The main thrust of the directive is to control the application of nitrogen-containing material to land. Compliance is achieved through requiring farmers to apply good practice measures and nutrient management techniques and setting limits on the amount and times when fertilisers may be spread on the land. Fertilisers only cause damage to land when they are applied in excess.

Compliance with the directive encourages the use of organic fertiliser (i.e. manure) as opposed to chemical fertilisers and pesticides.

Reducing Obesity

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for (a) Health and (b) Education and Skills about reducing obesity in (i) schools and (ii) young people; and if he will make a statement. [68845]

Barry Gardiner: I have regular contact with my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Health and for Education and Skills on a range of issues including obesity.

In addition, my officials have discussed healthy eating, including obesity, with colleagues in the Department For Education and Skills and the Department of Health in the context of the Public Sector Food Procurement Initiative (PSFPI). One of the objectives for this Initiative is to increase the consumption of healthy and nutritious food.

Officials from both Departments are represented on the Food Procurement Implementation Group established by Defra to oversee the delivery of the PSFPI. They have also provided advice for the publication "Sausage and Mash and Sustainability", which is designed to raise awareness on obesity and other issues.

Further information, including this publication, is available on the Defra website at:

http://www.defra.gov.uk/farm/sustain/procurement/awareness.htm

Regional Development Agencies

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much funding the Department allocated to regional development agencies in each year since 2000-01. [70253]

Barry Gardiner: Since April 2002, the Regional Development Agencies (RDAs) have been financed through a Single Programme budget (the "Single Pot"). This consists of money from various Departments (DTI, DCLG, DfES, Defra, DCMS and UKTI).

The Defra contributions to the Regional Development Agencies Single Pot are as follows:

Financial Year	Defra contribution to RDA Single Pot (£ million)
2002-03	41
2003-04	41
2004-05	46
2005-06	77
2006-07	85

As Defra was created in June 2001, inheriting separate programme budgets and commitments from the former DETR and MAFF, figures for 2000-01 and 2001-02 are not included in the table.

The significant increase in Defra funding to RDAs from 2005 is the result primarily of the transfer of additional funding from the Countryside Agency (£21 million per annum between 2005-06 and 2007-08); and funding for RDA regional co-ordination of the Business Resource Efficiency and Waste Programme (£5 million in 2005-06 and £12 million in 2006-07).

Supermarkets

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent assessment he has made of the environmental impact of supermarkets and the food industry; and if he will make a statement. [71664]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Food Industry Sustainability Strategy published last month assesses the environmental impacts of the food industry, including the supermarkets, and sets out a series of targets to reduce them. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has today invited supermarket representatives to talks on this and other related issues.

Tallow

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs why the tallow ban was reversed; when the EU study which may redefine tallow as a fuel is expected to report; and what dispensation has been sought from the EU in the meantime. [68651]

Ian Pearson: There has been no tallow ban. Installations may burn tallow provided they comply with regulatory requirements. If, as is usually the case, the tallow is waste within the definition given in the EU Waste Framework Directive, the regulatory requirements include one for a permit issued under the Pollution Prevention and Control Regulations 2000 incorporating the requirements of the EU Waste Incineration Directive (WID).

In response to representations by HM Government, the European Commission has set up a study to help establish whether the WID controls are proportionate and necessary to the protection of the environment. The study is expected to report by the autumn, and the Government are pressing the Commission for the study to be completed as soon as possible.

I have encouraged the industry, meanwhile, to enter into technical discussions with the environmental regulators (the Environment Agency or, for smaller plants, local authorities), to determine how individual plants might move over time to comply with the WID if the study were to conclude that the WID controls are appropriate.

The study is not about whether waste tallow is a fuel—it manifestly is a fuel. However, the proposed Directive on Waste currently under negotiation in the EU contains a provision under which a technical committee could determine the point at which specified waste materials cease to be waste. The European Commission has already identified waste tallow used as fuel as a candidate for this procedure if it is included in the finalised Directive.

Waste Treatment

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations he has received from the Institute of Civil Engineers on the potential impact on climate change of improving the way in which waste is treated; and if he will make a statement. [70863]

Ian Pearson: The way in which waste is managed makes a significant contribution to UK emissions of greenhouse gases, particularly methane emissions released from landfill. Forms of waste management such as recycling or incineration with energy recovery can result in a net reduction of greenhouse gas emissions contributing to climate change.

In January 2006, the Institution of Civil Engineers (ICE) published a report entitled "The Case for a Resource Management Strategy". Defra's "Review of England's Waste Strategy-A Consultation Document" agrees that more emphasis needs to be put on using waste as a resource and that reducing greenhouse gas emissions should be a major driver behind the revised waste strategy.

Defra is currently collating responses received from the consultation, which closed on 9 May. Any representations made by ICE will be considered by the Department.

Defra officials recently met with ICE and the Institute of Mechanical Engineers to discuss ways in which they could contribute towards Defra's development of waste policy. These discussions are ongoing.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which UK companies undertake animal testing. [71680]

Joan Ryan: I am unable to provide you with the information requested. The identities of organisations and individuals licensed under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 are not published in any form by the Home Office.

The activities of a small number of animal rights extremists make it necessary to protect establishments and individuals licensed under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986, their staff, and others associated with them, from potential harassment and harm. In addition, section 24 of the 1986 Act, which prohibits the disclosure by Home Office Ministers and officials of confidential information relating to the use of animals in scientific procedures other than in the discharge of their functions under the 1986 Act, prevents the disclosure of information about individual establishments licensed under the Act that has been provided in confidence.

Although there is a need to inform the public debate about the use of animals for experimental or other scientific purposes, I do not believe it would be in the public interest to disclose information that might increase the risk of individuals, establishments or their suppliers being subjected to violence and intimidation.

John Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what proportion of the project licences granted under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 that were in force in Scotland at the end of 2004 were in (a) mild, (b) moderate, (c) substantial and (d) unclassified severity bandings; [71360]

(2) what proportion of regulated procedures under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 carried out in Scotland in 2004 were conducted without any form of anaesthesia; [71361]

(3) how many infringements of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 were recorded in Scotland at the end of 2004; and how many prosecutions resulted; [71362]

(4) how many (a) genetically modified animals and (b) animals with a harmful genetic defect were used in regulated procedures conducted in Scotland under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 in 2004; [71363]

(5) what proportion of the regulated procedures conducted in Scotland under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 in 2004 were carried out for (a) fundamental and applied studies other than toxicology and (b) toxicity tests or other safety and efficacy evaluation; [71364]

(6) how many project licences were granted under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 in 2004, in respect of work to be carried out in Scotland; and how many such project licences were in force at the end of 2004; [70959]

(7) how many places in Scotland were designated as (a) a supplying establishment, (b) a breeding establishment and (c) a scientific procedure establishment under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 at the end of 2004. [70964]

Joan Ryan: Comprehensive statistics of scientific procedures on living animals in Great Britain of animals carried out under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 are published annually. Copies of the publication for 2004 (Cm 6713) can be found in the House Library.

The data are not collected, stored or presented in a way enabling them to be easily broken down between England, Wales and Scotland as the 1986 Act is administered by the Home Office for the whole of Great Britain (it is administered separately in Northern Ireland). A special exercise has therefore been conducted to isolate the information requested in relation to Scotland.

As at 31 December 2004, there were 34 establishments in Scotland designated as places where licensed scientific procedures using animals may be conducted. Of these, 19 were also designated as breeding establishments and 10 as supplying establishments.

In 2004, 114 project licences were granted in Scotland under the 1986 Act and a total of 510 project licences were in force in Scotland at the end of 2004. Of these, 196 were categorised in the mild severity band, 288 moderate, 11 substantial and 15 unclassified.

The 1986 Act requires that all experiments shall be carried out under local or general anaesthesia unless the Secretary of State judges that the anaesthesia would be more traumatic to the animals than the experiment itself, or that anaesthesia is incompatible with the objective of the experiment.

In 2004, 61 per cent. of the regulated procedures carried out in Scotland during 2004 were conducted without any form of anaesthesia. 15 per cent. of procedures carried out in Scotland in 2004 used genetically modified animals and four per cent used animals with a harmful genetic defect. 69 per cent. of the regulated procedures were carried out for fundamental and applied studies other than toxicology. 20 per cent. were for toxicity tests, or other safety and efficacy evaluation.

Two infringements of the 1986 Act were reported from designated establishments in Scotland during 2004. No prosecutions resulted.

Asylum Seekers

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether his Department has proposed to Birmingham city council that asylum seekers accommodated by the council should be provided with free (a) televisions and (b) television licences; and whether Birmingham city council has made representations to his Department on this issue. [70857]

Mr. McNulty: Accommodation providers contracting with the National Asylum Support Service (NASS) to house supported asylum seekers are required to provide accommodation that meets the minimum standards set out in the NASS Statement of Requirements, a copy of which is in the Libraries of the House. The Statement of Requirements, which is a schedule to the NASS accommodation contract, does not require providers, in meeting those standards, to supply asylum seekers with a television or TV licence.

Birmingham city council has not made any representations to the Home Office on this issue.

Deportation

Mr. Benton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will instigate an immediate inquiry into the manner of the recent deportation of the Dar family from Bootle, Merseyside to Pakistan; and what guidance he has issued on (a) the provision of medical treatment, (b) the conduct of officials, (c) the quality of transport, (d) access to legal advice and (e) access to the relevant hon. Member with respect to deportees from the UK. [70743]

Mr. McNulty: It is not considered that an inquiry into this case is needed as there is no evidence of any deviation from the policies that should be adhered to in cases of this nature.

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps the Government is taking to deport illegal immigrants. [70746]

Mr. McNulty: The Government have a number of measures in place to tackle illegal immigrants and ensure the removal of individuals who have no basis of stay in the UK and these include; The Assisted Voluntary Returns programme: the increased use of reporting, electronic monitoring, tagging and voice recognition; joint intelligence led operations with the police to maintain contact; increased use of chartered flights; working in partnership with countries and governments overseas to secure appropriate travel documentation.

Domestic Violence

Mary Creagh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what provision is available in (a) West Yorkshire and (b) Wakefield constituency to deal with domestic violence. [54281]

Mr. Sutcliffe: I refer the hon. Member to the previous answer provided to the right hon. Member for Normanton (Ed Balls) on 5 December 2005, Official Report, column 980W. This details provision for domestic violence within both West Yorkshire and Wakefield.

Group 4 Securicor

Kelvin Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the Answer of 15 February 2006, Official Report, column 2126W, on Group 4 Securicor, what the value of contracts is expected to be in each region. [55671]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The latest available information suggests that in the financial year 2005-06 the total value of the contracts awarded to Group 4 Securicor for electronic monitoring, broken down by region, is expected to be as in the following table:

Region	£ million
North East and North West	14.7
East Midlands, Yorkshire and Humberside	11.3
South East and South West	10.0

Home Detention Curfews

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offenders in Hertfordshire were on home detention curfews (HDCs) in 2004-05; and what proportion of these offenders failed to complete the HDC period successfully. [49332]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The information requested, as recorded on the Prison Service IT system, is provided in the following table.

Number of persons released from prisons in Hertfordshire[1] on Home Detention Curfews (HDC) in 2004-05 and percentage of those offenders who failed to complete the HDC period

The Mount[2]	2004	2005	Total
Released on HDC	61	82	143
Recalls	16	21	37
Percentage recalled	26	25.6	25.9

[1] The question has been answered to give the number of prisoners released from Hertfordshire prisons; information on offenders from Hertfordshire who have been released on HDC is not held centrally.
[2] Total for Hertfordshire.

Linda Gilroy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many places were occupied in (a) probation hostels and (b) voluntary sector hostels in (i) England and (ii) Wales where the offender was known to the Multi-Agency Public Protection panel on the latest date for which figures are available. [52316]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The data in the table relate to Approved Premises, formerly bail and probation hostels, in England and Wales. Data are not collected centrally on other types of hostel accommodation outside the Approved Premises Estate which may accommodate ex-offenders.

	Number as at 30 September 2005
Residents in Approved Premises managed by the Probation Service in England who are subject to supervision by Multi-Agency Public Protection Panels	138
Residents in Approved Premises managed by the voluntary sector in England who are subject to supervision by Multi-Agency Public Protection Panels	13
Residents in Approved Premises managed by the Probation Service[1] in Wales who are subject to supervision by Multi-Agency Public Protection Panels	7

[1] All of the Approved Premises in Wales are run by probation boards.

IND Procedures

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what enforcement action is taken against those who are required to report to the Immigration and Nationality Directorate and who miss two appointments in a row; and if he will make a statement. [70968]

Mr. McNulty: The operational response to any failure to comply with a condition of temporary admission will depend upon all the circumstances of the case. Sometimes this can be achieved by writing to applicants and reminding them of their obligation to observe the conditions attached to their temporary admission, but in more serious cases detention or prosecution may be appropriate.

A programme is currently underway whereby two successive failures to report leads to expiry of the Application Registration Card and in turn to loss of access to asylum support. Access to support can be regained simply by resumption of reporting.

Leyhill Open Prison

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many escapes there have been from Leyhill open prison in each quarter since Q1 1999; what original offences were committed by each person who escaped; and if he will make a statement. [45593]

Mr. Sutcliffe: There have been 393 prisoner absconds from Leyhill prison since 1999. Data on the convictions of those who absconded are given in the following table. The total number of absconds is not equal to the total number of offences. There is a shortfall of four offences, due to double entry of incidents. The information is held on an annualised basis, and to break it down on a quarterly basis could only be carried out at disproportionate cost. The data have been extracted from the prison service incident reporting system (IRS). IRS has a number of inconsistencies and is currently under review.

As soon as a prisoner is found to have absconded from an open prison the local police are informed immediately. The prisoner's security category is reviewed when the prisoner is recaptured and returned to an appropriate closed prison.

Medomsley Detention Centre

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will establish an independent and public inquiry into the abuse of inmates at the Medomsley Detention Centre in County Durham between 1970 and 1990. [69466]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 9 May 2006]: The Government are aware of outstanding civil claims relating to abuse of prisoners at the Medomsley detention centre which closed in 1983. While these civil actions are ongoing it would be inappropriate to comment on any calls for a public inquiry.

National Offender Management Service

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effect of the introduction of the National Offender Management Service on jobs in (a) Romford and (b) Havering. [48550]

Mr. Sutcliffe: There are currently 57 probation employees in the probation borough of Barking/Dagenham/Havering of which Romford and Havering are a part.

From 1 April 2006, London Probation will be working to the Offender Management Model. This working structure is being launched in line with the National Offender Management Service (NOMS) and will apply to Probation nationally.

End-to-end Offender Management focuses on one continuous supervision approach for each offender, whether in a custodial or community setting. The emphasis is on the quality of the relationship between staff and the individual offender, and the importance of experiencing delivery of the sentence as a coherent whole.

Following a consultation process and a series of test Borough 'walkthroughs', the London Arrangements were approved by the London Probation Offender Management Project Board. The arrangements take account of the commitment given to the Prime Minister's Delivery Unit regarding the achievement of timely delivery of reports to Courts.

From November 2005 to March 2006, the end-to-end Offender Management implementation sees a phased approach, with a detailed plan, overseen by the Project Board. Within each borough, a Borough Implementation Team was created to address and manage the implementation in their borough. This covers the areas of Human Resources, IT, Health and Safety, and Premises. A Project Manager, responsible for overseeing their group of boroughs, and overall, coordinates, manages and feeds back the progresses of the Boroughs to the central Project Manager.

Mr. Anthony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the main responsibilities of regional offender managers will be under the National Offender Management Service arrangements for the financial year 2006-07; and what is the legal authority under which they carry out those responsibilities. [52239]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Regional Offender Managers will be commissioning services from prison and probation areas through Service Level Agreements from 1 April 2006. Their main responsibilities will include building relationships with providers, other commissioners and key stakeholders; agreeing and monitoring SLAs; and delivering on Reducing Re-offending Action Plans. The current legislative framework which sets out the statutory duties of probation boards remains in place, and is unchanged by the creation of Service Level Agreements. However, the SLAs are the key mechanism for introducing commissioning, and signed SLAs will demonstrate the strength of the relationships, and any legal authority derives from the fact that ROMs are Crown servants exercising the powers of the Secretary of State.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether service level agreements between regional offender managers and probation boards under the National Offender Management Service arrangements are legally binding. [53916]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Service level agreements between Regional Offender Managers and probation boards are not legally binding, but are the key mechanism for introducing commissioning.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what arrangements are in place to deal with probation boards or trusts that decline to accept a piece of work. [53917]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Probation Boards have a statutory duty to provide probation services and so are not able to refuse work. Under the proposals set out in the consultation paper "Restructuring Probation to Reduce Re-offending", the areas of work undertaken by a Probation Trust would be addressed in the negotiation and agreement of contracts with the commissioner and, thereafter, through contract management processes.

Offences Against the Person Act

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of those convicted under Section 20 of the Offences Against the Person Act 1861 since 1997 have re-offended within a year. [48880]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The most recent re-offending data for adults were published in "Re-offending of adults: results from the 2002 cohort" which is available through the Home Office's website: http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/index.htm. The report shows the re-offending rates of those offenders who start community penalties of who are discharged from prison in the first quarter of 2002.

Further analysis of the 2000 data shows that 25 per cent. of offenders sentenced under Section 20 of the Offences against the Person Act 1861 re-offended within 1 year and were subsequently convicted. The corresponding figure for 2002 is 26 per cent.

Re-offending data broken down by legislative act are not readily available for other years.

Passports

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many adults in Bassetlaw constituency do not have a passport. [69803]

Joan Ryan: The identity and passport service collects address information at the time of applying for a passport. The adult passport has a ten year validity period during which time the holder may move residence a number of times. As such, we cannot reliably identify the number of passport holders within any given area.

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the statement of 2 May 2006, Official Report, column 58WS, on passports, (1) what estimate he has made of the cost of the new interview offices in (a) their first year of operation and (b) each of the subsequent five years; [71162]

(2) what estimate he has made of the average number of hours per week during which interview offices will be open; [71163]

(3) what the furthest distance is that an individual will have to travel to reach the nearest interview office of the Identity and Passport Service in (a) England, (b) Wales and (c) Scotland; [71164]

(4) what estimate he has made of the cost of (a) employing staff in the interview offices for the Identity and Passport Service and (b) the recruitment process for staff; [71166]

(5) what estimate he has made of the expected average annual salary to be paid to (a) area managers, (b) office managers, (c) interviewers and (d) network heads in the interview offices for the Identity and Passport Service. [71167]

Joan Ryan: The cost of the premises and facilities management contract will be £55 million over three years. This and other costs for the first year of operation have been included in the estimated cost of £350 million for passport operating expenditure, excluding FCO, for 2006-07, published on 21 April in the IPS Corporate and Business Plan. Future estimates will continue to be reviewed annually as part of the regular business planning and budget setting process.

The number of days of opening per week will differ between offices from two to six days, depending on the number of applications expected. The standard hours of opening hours for all but the seven smallest offices will be 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. and all offices will be open on Saturdays. The 10 busiest offices will open for 60 hours per week over six days. Given this variation in the number of days of opening, an average figure for hours of opening could be misinterpreted. However, the arithmetical average of opening hours for the 69 offices is 35.79 per office per week.

It is not possible to give the information on furthest distances to travel in the form requested. There will be an office within 20 miles of 75.6 per cent. of the population and within 40 miles of 98.86 per cent. of the population. For people living in areas where the journey to an office would take more than an hour, the remote communities service described in the document placed in the Library on 2 May will be developed. Other than the Scilly Isles, all these areas are in Scotland or Wales.

The costs of recruitment and employment of staff are included in the estimated expenditure on passports published in the IPS Corporate and Business Plan.

The salary ranges offered for these jobs are follows:

Expected average annual salary to be paid for the Identity and Passport Service

	London area	Elsewhere in UK
Network Head	£42,969-£57,012	£41,117-£54,556
Area Manager	£29,655-£36,846	£28,471-£35,375
Office Manager	£23,764-£30,063	£22,817-£28,865
Interviewer	£18,079-£24,037	£17,377-£23,076

Averages cannot be calculated until recruitment is complete.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many adults in Tamworth constituency do not have a passport. [71240]

Joan Ryan: The Identity and Passport Service collects address information at the time of applying for a passport. The adult passport has a 10 year validity period during which time the holder may move residence a number of times. As such, we cannot reliably identify the number of passport holders within any given area.

Police (Dorset)

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the use of public panels to determine career promotion prospects for police officers in Dorset; whether he has plans to extend the scheme to other forces; and if he will make a statement. [71554]

Mr. Byrne: There is no assessment currently planned by the Home Office in respect of the approach to the internal police promotions system process adopted by Dorset police. Dorset's use of lay panels as part of their own internal system is an initiative local to the force. However, the force started a review of the scheme in May 2006 and we will be interested to see its findings. In the meantime, we have no plans to extend this approach across other forces.

Prisons

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his policy is on the transport of prisoners who are (a) pregnant and (b) suffering from medical conditions affecting mobility. [51888]

Mr. Sutcliffe: NOMS aims to transport pregnant prisoners and those with restricted mobility, as well as any other prisoners with particular medical needs, in non-cellular vehicles, whenever possible. This follows an assessment of their medical and personal needs by prison operational managers and health care professionals. The contractor should be advised of this requirement in advance of the journey.

Where this has not happened, and the prisoner declares a medical condition or that they are pregnant, the contractor must seek the advice of a health care professional as to whether a non-cellular vehicle should be used for the transfer.

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the Answer of 1 March 2006, Official Report, columns 829-30W, on prisoners, how many sets were purchased in each year between 1997-98 and 2003-04. [57875]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The supplier of television sets is only able to provide data for the last three financial years. The Prison Service does not have separate records showing the number of sets purchased between 1997-98 and 2003-04.

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what payments of compensation have been made to prisoners since 1 February 2005 and what the cause of complaint was in each case. [52545]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The following table details the compensation payments made to prisoners by the public sector Prison Service in England and Wales between January 2005 and December 2005. Data on the amount of compensation paid by contracted prison operators are not collated centrally. However, any payments would come from the operator.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of (a) remand prisoners and (b) sentenced prisoners suffering from mental problems. [45212]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Information on the number of prisoners with mental problems is not held centrally.

A survey of psychiatric morbidity among prisoners in England and Wales undertaken in 1997 by the Office for National Statistics (ONS) estimated that around 90 per cent. of prisoners had at least one of the five disorders considered in the survey. Looking at the results of this survey in more detail, some 10 per cent. of men on remand, 7 per cent. of sentenced men and 14 per cent. of all women had suffered a functional psychosis (such as schizophrenia or manic depression) in the past year. Around 59 per cent. of men on remand, 40 per cent. of sentenced men, 76 per cent. of women on remand and 63 per cent. of sentenced women had suffered from a neurotic disorder in the previous week. Rates of personality disorder were 78 per cent. amongst remanded men, 64 per cent. among sentenced men and 50 per cent. among all women.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the upgrading of governor grade positions at HM Prison Buckley Hall; on what basis the decision to upgrade was taken; whether the upgrade is permanent; from which budget the promotion is paid; and who decided (a) the basis of the upgrade and (b) the source of the finance to pay for the upgrade. [69454]

Mr. Sutcliffe: There have been two instances in which managers have been deployed in the prison who carry a more senior grade and payband than the post requires. This was partly to assist in the change of role for the prison to a male establishment, but also because of the individual circumstances of the managers. The decision to deploy these staff was made by senior Prison Service management. Any additional costs that may have been incurred would have been met from within the establishment and area budget.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many investigations there have been into alleged misconduct of prison governors at HMP Wandsworth in the last five years; what the (a) length and (b) outcome was of each investigation; and if he will make a statement. [48511]

Mr. Sutcliffe: There have been six investigations in the last five years into allegations of misconduct by governor grades at Wandsworth. Each investigation may include more than one employee and include governor grades. Two investigations required no further action and a further three required disciplinary hearings. The sixth investigation is still under way and the outcome is not yet known. The outcome of one investigation concluded in no further action but advice and guidance to the individuals was issued. Of the six investigations: two were less than six months in duration, three were between six months and a year in duration, and one is still under way.

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his policy is on the preparation of (a) adult prisoners and (b) young offenders for release from custody and rejoining their families; and if he will make a statement. [55074]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Government are committed to reducing re-offending by both adults and younger offenders. We recognise that, in the case of those released from custodial sentences, this can be achieved only through successful reintegration into the community. This, in turn, requires action from the earliest stages to address offenders' needs; examples of activity taking place in prisons include basic skills training and work to increase offenders' employability.

In recent months we have launched a series of complementary initiatives, to reduce re-offending. Last November we published the National Reducing Re-offending Delivery Plan, setting out our plans over the next 18 months for tackling re-offending, working in partnership at national, regional and local levels.

At the same time we launched three important new alliances, which will develop existing links with the corporate sector and with the faith and voluntary and community sector; we will also build on links with local authorities and other non-CJS partners, through the Civic Society Alliance. The alliances reflect the reality of our intention to develop partnerships at all levels to reduce re-offending.

Last month, we published "A Five Year Strategy for Protecting the Public and Reducing Re-offending". This sets out our wider vision of how the National Offender Management Service (NOMS) will work with its partners in the coming years, to reduce re-offending, to cut crime and to help create a safer, more secure society.

Also last month, the Youth Justice Board published its Youth Resettlement Framework Action Plan community prisons. The framework focuses on seven resettlement pathways: Case Management and Transitions; Accommodation; Education, Training and Employment; Health; Substance Misuse; Families; and Finance, Benefit and Debt. It highlights the main actions required at local, regional and national level, emphasising the need to take account of the reducing re-offending alliances.

The framework will be continually influenced by developing practice and monitored by a strategic steering group of key partners at national level. This group will provide an overview for the NOMS Programme Board and the Youth Justice Board, promoting and disseminating practice as it develops. The framework will be revisited in 12 months time when a formal review of its impact will be conducted by the Youth Justice Board. The regional reducing re-offending partnership boards will be instrumental in implementing effective resettlement for young people and links have already been established.

One of the pathways in the Reducing Re-offending Delivery Plan focuses on offenders' children and families. It will help offenders maintain family relationships and provide support while they are serving sentence and in sustaining changes in behaviour thereafter. The pathway is in the early stages of development and we are working to establish governance arrangements, including establishing a cross-Government sub-board. The sub-board will enable us to ensure our policies across government are aligned and mutually supportive, highlighting good practice while preventing duplication of effort and resources. As an important element of the work, a three year project to establish a regional pathfinder is now getting under way under the management of the regional offender manager for the West Midlands. Its objectives are to strengthen family ties, to support children and families and reduce re-offending through a collaborative approach.

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many inmates in adult prisons and young offender institutions have (a) dependent spouses or partners and (b) dependent children. [55081]

Mr. Sutcliffe: There are no routinely collected data on the number of prisoners in prison who have dependent spouses/partners or dependent children. However, a representative survey of 1,944 prisoners nearing release conducted by the Home Office in 2003 found that 31 per cent. of prisoners (not including juveniles under 18 years of age) reported living with a spouse or partner immediately before custody (no information is available on whether the partner was dependent or not). The same survey found that 16 per cent. of prisoners reported living with dependent children under the age of 18 before custody.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of (a) the number of buildings in the prison estate with leaking roofs, (b) the ages of those buildings, (c) how many rooms in those buildings are not in use as a result of leaking roofs, (d) what proportion of those buildings are the same style as X and Y blocks at HM Prison Spring Hill and (e) what proportion were built by the same contractor. [55595]

Mr. Sutcliffe: To assemble all the information requested in this question could be done only at disproportionate cost.

The latest information held on the NOMS maintenance database indicates that the total number of buildings currently in the public prison estate (dating from the 19th century to 2003) with leaks is 1,357 and that it would cost an estimated £23 million for them to be repaired. The style of block at HMP Spring Hill accounts for 2.1 per cent. of the 1,357 recorded. The block suppliers for HMP Spring Hill (Elliot Redispace) account for 1.4 per cent. of the 1,357 recorded.

This 1,357 recording of leaks includes a range of buildings experiencing varying degrees of leaking and the prisons remain operational. A series of schemes to address leaking roof problems have been undertaken in recent years to address the most pressing needs and such schemes are continuing.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many listeners there are at each prison; how many are designated as foreign nationals; and if he will list the nationalities of listeners at each prison. [62766]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The information required is not collated centrally in the requested format and could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost. 'Listeners' are Samaritan-trained prisoner peer supporters who provide emotional confidential support to prisoners. 2,650 listeners were recruited across the estate between October 2001 and March 2004.

There are currently 118 listener schemes operating in prisons in England and Wales. Where listener schemes exist listeners are made available to all prisoners, and prisons are required to ensure that prisoners have timely access to listeners. The number of contacts recorded (by Samaritans) between listeners and prisoners between July to December 2005 was 28,570.

Provision for listeners was assessed as part of Safer Custody Group's peer support project, which ran from April 2001 to March 2004, and through a three-year project undertaken by the Samaritans, funded jointly by Safer Custody Group and Active Community Unit, to review the work of listeners and Samaritans being carried out in 47 'high-risk' prisons including prisoner access to listeners.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of day release schemes for prisoners operated in other countries. [65593]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Home Office has not undertaken an assessment of day release schemes in other countries.

Release on temporary licence (ROTL) is used by prison governors to improve resettlement opportunities for prisoners and to maintain family ties. In conjunction with a stringent risk assessment process, ROTL plays a key role in the management of prisoners in the resettlement estate. This comprises 30 establishments, mainly open prisons, which provide specific regimes for longer term prisoners, including life sentence prisoners, during the final two years of their sentence. The resettlement estate provides opportunities for prisoners to address offending behaviour, educational and training needs, and to undertake unpaid community work and, finally, paid employment.

The number of prisoners released on ROTL for resettlement purposes varies slightly over time. The most recent snapshot of resettlement estate activity was undertaken in February 2006 and revealed that some 1,550 prisoners were engaged in unpaid community work and paid employment placements.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his strategy for tackling prisoner alcohol misuse and addiction. [65599]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The national offender management service published in December 2004 a comprehensive 'Alcohol strategy for prisoners'.

The strategy provides a framework for addressing prisoners' alcohol problems and acts as a benchmark for prisons to formulate their response to alcohol misuse at local level.

This strategy can be accessed at the following link:

http://www.hmprisonservice.gov.uk/assets/documents/100008 2AAddressing_Alcohol_Misuse.doc

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will reconstruct the prison regime to support prisoners working a conventional 9 am to 5 pm working day in education, vocational training or work programmes. [65610]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The national offender manager, the regional offender managers and the director of offender management in Wales commission services for offenders in custody and the community, along with other Government Departments including the Department of Health and the Department for Education and Skills. They will commission services from the public sector prison service and private sector prisons on the basis of offenders needs. These needs include employment, training and education needs. However, it is for providers—whether the prison service, private prison contractor or subcontractors to those running prisons—to construct a prison regime which fulfils offenders' employment training and education needs within available resources.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will extend the Offenders Assessment System to apply to remand and short-term prisoners. [65613]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Offender Assessment System, OASys, will be extended to include short-term prisoners when Custody Plus is implemented later this year. It would not be appropriate to extend it to include remand prisoners as it cannot properly be applied to those who have not as yet been convicted of an offence.

Probation Service

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he plans to introduce legislation to give the Secretary of State the power to contract out probation services. [48193]

Mr. Sutcliffe: We intend to bring forward legislation to restructure probation services as soon as the parliamentary timetable allows.

Prostitution

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what funding will be made available to implement the Coordinated Prostitution Strategy. [62749]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 18 April 2006]: Local activity to support the strategy, including the development of routes out for those involved in prostitution, is funded from a number of existing sources. For example, 87 Local Strategic Partnerships receive neighbourhood renewal fund to kick start the improvement of services to tackle deprivation. There are also 35 neighbourhood management pathfinders with a focus on changing the way in which key mainstream services are delivered so that they meet the needs and priorities of neighbourhoods, and 39 new deal for communities partnerships to address the priority needs of neighbourhoods.

The safer and stronger communities fund is also part of the local area agreement approach and can be used to address crime and antisocial behaviour, and to reduce the harm caused by illegal drugs.

Women trapped in prostitution frequently have a complex range of needs which can include drug treatment and other health needs, and housing. A key objective of the strategy is to ensure that these needs are recognised and that services are accessible to this group. The most urgent need for many is for drug treatment. In addition to NHS funding through primary care trusts and social services funding streams, central Government provides funding for drug treatment through the pooled treatment budget, which increased by 18 per cent. from £253 million in 2004-05 to £299 million in 2005-06. The other urgent need is for appropriate and stable housing. The strategy encourages local authorities to ensure that relevant services, such as those provided via the Supporting People programme, are made accessible to women exiting prostitution.

Other sources of Government funding are available to support this aspect of the strategy. For example, since 2004 the Home Office has placed £5.25 million into the victims fund to support the development of support services for victims of sexual offending. A number of projects involved in the provision of support for those involved in prostitution have received grants from this fund.

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prostitutes in England and Wales have received antisocial behaviour orders since their introduction. [63769]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 18 April 2006]: The requested information is not collated centrally.

Security Industry Authority

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for licences to the Security Industry Authority (a) are outstanding and (b) have been outstanding for more than (i) three and (ii) six months; and if he will make a statement. [55178]

Mr. Coaker [holding answer 2 March 2006]: Due to the number of late applications there is a four week delay checking and scanning applications onto the licensing system. Once on the system, the Security Industry Authority (SIA) aim to process 80 per cent. of applicants within six weeks. In the four months prior to Christmas, (excluding the effect of bank holidays) the SIA completed processing of 23,191 applications, 86 per cent. within the six week target.

At 28 February there were 23,191 applications with the SIA being processed. Of those 628 (2.7 per cent.) had been on their system for more than three months and 139 (0.6 per cent.) for more than six months. These circumstances are for the protection of the public and arise when the SIA or the CRB (provider of the criminality checks) are waiting for information from the applicant. The main issues are either confirmation of training or further CRB enquires where there are doubts about the identity of the applicant, often requiring fingerprint verification by the police. Other smaller numbers are where payments have failed and not been rectified or where overseas criminality checks are outstanding. Of the 628 over three months, 217 (35 per cent.) were awaiting training confirmation and 305 (49 per cent.) were awaiting further identity checks by the CRB.

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much the Security Industry Agency has cost. [58958]

Mr. Coaker: The Security Industry Authority (SIA) is required to be self-financing from the licence fee income but it was always anticipated that the SIA would not break even in its first couple of years, because of the gradual introduction of licensing, which will eventually meet all the SIA's running costs. The deficit in the first year, 2003-04, was £7.1 million as the SIA had no licence income. In 2004-05, the deficit was £13 million, and the estimated deficit for 2005-06 is about £3.5 million.

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his answer of 14 March 2006 to question 52038, on the security industry, what assumptions were made in the Security Industry Authority's estimate that current demand for door supervisors is 46,000. [59973]

Mr. Coaker: The assumptions made in the answer pursuant to question 52038 reflected original assumptions made by the Security Industry Authority (SIA) which were subsequently modified. The original SIA planning assumptions were based on the number of door supervisors registered under local authority registration schemes applicable to individuals working in premises licensed for the sale and consumption of alcohol. Such schemes extended to approximately 60 per cent. of local authorities, and numbers for England and Wales were extrapolated from this.

The SIA discussed the assumptions with specialist sector bodies. It based its current assumption on the experience in the pilot region where the numbers applying for licences were significantly lower than expectations. Once the offence date had passed the SIA obtained information through its compliance team and enforcement partners on the numbers of licensed and unlicensed individuals they were finding during visits to premises and their joint compliance operations. At the time this was approximately 80 per cent. licensed and 20 per cent. unlicensed; on this basis the SIA revised its numbers for the pilot region and extrapolated them to the other regions.

These figures have been reviewed a number of times but are believed to be the best data available. The SIA also believes, but as yet has no firm evidence, that a significant percentage of door supervisors have de-selected themselves because they would not meet the licensing criteria, and that a percentage may have been working in the informal economy.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether security industry workers who have applied for a licence to the Security Industry Authority but who have not yet received one will be able to continue in their employment. [62266]

Mr. Coaker: From 20 March 2006, it became a criminal offence for manned guards to carry out security activities without a licence under the terms of the Private Security Industry Act 2001 (PSIA). Enforcement is the responsibility of the Security Industry Authority and the police. The SIA published an enforcement policy on 7 March which stated that, while they want the private security industry to be compliant with the law as quickly as possible, they will take into account a number of factors when deciding what enforcement action to take. These factors include the progress an individual has made towards getting or renewing a licence, the current licensing processing time, the time elapsed since the activity became licensable and any previous encounters with or warnings given by the SIA or other agency.

Any individual carrying out licensable activities without a licence will be committing a criminal offence, unless they have received a license dispensation notice from the SIA under the Approved Contractor Scheme (ACS). This allows accredited firms to legally deploy a proportion of their staff who have completed their training but whose applications are still being processed. As at 11 May, it is estimated that around 30,000 individuals are being deployed lawfully under the ACS Scheme.

Sex Offenders

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how decisions for parole are reached for individuals convicted of sex offences who maintain their innocence and do not participate in the Sex Offender Treatment Programme; and if he will make a statement. [53914]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Parole Board decisions on whether or not to award parole focus primarily on the risk to the public of an offence being committed at a time when the offender would otherwise be in prison. In assessing whether the safety of the public will be placed unacceptably at risk, the board is directed to take into account that the risk of violent or sexual offending is more serious than a risk of other types of offending. This must be balanced against the benefit, both to the public and the offender, of early release back into the community under a degree of supervision which might help rehabilitation and so lessen the risk of re-offending in the future.

The Parole Board considers many factors including the nature and circumstances of the offence of which the offender was convicted, any previous convictions, the offender's attitude and response in prison, what, if any, offence-related work has been completed, reports from the Prison and Probation Service and any representations from the offender himself. On the strength of the available information it makes a judgment on the likely benefit both to the offender and society in allowing the offender to serve part of the sentence in the community.

There is no requirement for an offender to admit guilt prior to making an application for parole, nor is denial of guilt or failure to attend a sex offender programme a bar to release on parole licence.

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many convicted sex offenders in England and Wales have had electronic type tags fitted after their release from prison in each year between 2000 and 2005. [64908]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 24 April 2006]: Information on the number of prisoners released subject to an electronically monitored curfew under the home detention curfew scheme (HDC) for each year whose index offence was recorded as a sexual offence is given in the following table. Information on the number of convicted sex offenders who have had electronic tags fitted after other types of release from prison in each year between 2000 and 2005 is not held centrally. It could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Number of people released on HDC whose offence recorded was a sexual offence, England and Wales

1999	15
2000	24
2001	16
2002	14
2003	8
2004	4
2005	1
Total	82

Notes:

1. These statistics are based on information recorded on the central Prison Service IT system at 21 April 2006. Further updates and amendments may be made to records on this system in future resulting in revised figures.
2. Investigations suggest that, for HDC releases covering all offence groups, around 5 per cent. of offence types recorded on this system do not relate to the offence for which they were released on HDC but relate to offences committed after release from prison and before their licence expiry date for their sentence.
3. Of the 82 discharges recorded as relating to those serving sexual offences shown in the table, 64 were actually serving a sentence for a sexual offence at the time of their release. The last offender to be released on HDC while serving a sentence for a sexual offence was released in January 2004.
4. The statistics presented in the table will also include those sentenced for abduction which was not of a sexual nature.

Hostels

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of places in hostels run by (a) the probation service and (b) the voluntary sector in (i) England and (ii) Wales were allocated to sex offenders on the latest date for which figures are available. [52315]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The data in the table relates to Approved Premises, formerly bail and probation hostels, in England and Wales. Data is not collected centrally on other types of hostel accommodation outside the Approved Premises Estate which may accommodate ex-offenders.

All of the Approved Premises in Wales are run by probation boards. The percentage of Approved Premises residents in Wales with a conviction for a sexual offence in March 2003 was 38 per cent. This is taken from the data collected as part of the snapshot survey in 2003.

Under-age Drinking

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many fixed penalty notices were issued for (a) consumption of alcohol by and (b) selling alcohol to under-age people in (i) Cambridgeshire and (ii) Peterborough in each of the last five years. [52525]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The penalty notice for disorder scheme came into use in all police forces in England and Wales during 2004. There have been no penalty notices for disorder issued in Cambridgeshire for the consumption of alcohol by under 18s and the sale of alcohol to under 18s.

Yarl's Wood

Mr. Walter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many children have been detained for 21 days or more in (a) immigration detention centres and (b) Yarl's Wood Immigration Removal Centre in the last five years. [70279]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 17 May 2006]: This information is not available in the format requested.

During the third quarter of 2005, there were 455 minors recorded as being removed or released from detention (excluding Oakington) in the UK who were detained solely under Immigration Act powers, of whom 390 were last detained in Yarl's Wood Immigration Removal Centre. 60 of these minors were detained for a period of 21 days or more, and were all recorded as being removed or released from Yarl's Wood.

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many incidents of self-harm there were by pregnant women detained at Yarl's Wood between 1 April 2004 and January 31 2006; and what proportion of these incidents involved women in the Fast Track system. [70858]

Mr. McNulty: There have been no incidents of self-harm by women confirmed to be pregnant who were detained at Yarl's Wood Immigration Removal Centre between 1 April 2004 and 31 January 2006.

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many pregnant women are held at Yarl's Wood Detention Centre; how many were held there between 1 April 2004 and 31 January 2006; and how many of these were held for (a) up to one week, (b) between one and three weeks, (c) between three and eight weeks and (d) longer than eight weeks. [70861]

Mr. McNulty: There are currently nine pregnant women detained at Yarl's Wood Immigration Removal Centre. Two of these women are part of the Fast Track process.

180 pregnant women were detained at the Centre between 1 April 2004 and 31 January 2006. Length of stay is recorded as follows:

Length of stay	Number of pregnant women detained
Up to 1 week	116
1–3 weeks	29
3-8 weeks	30
Longer than 8 weeks	5

Young Offenders

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of people detained in young offender institutions have received rehabilitative treatment while imprisoned in each of the past eight years. [42163]

John Reid: The following table shows the number of offending behaviour programme completions and drug treatment completions in young offender institutions and juvenile establishments for each year in which data are available. It also shows the number of educational and work skills awards, which also contribute the rehabilitation of offenders.

	Completed programmes and awards

Dr. Vis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many child prisoners have been delivered to each young offenders institution after 8 pm in each of the last 12 months. [67345]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Juvenile males are aged from 15 years to 17 years and females from 16 years to 17 years. The most recent data available covering April 2005 to March 2006, for the number of juvenile prisoners returned to young offender institutions after 8 pm are set out in the following table:

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Bahamas Agreement

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library a copy of the Bahamas Agreement. [71643]

Mr. Hoon: A copy of the Bahamas Agreement was placed in the Library of the House in 1956.

Colombia

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will assess the level of violence in Colombia, with particular reference to that directed against trade unionists. [70301]

Mr. Hoon: We remain very concerned about the situation faced by civil society, including trade unionists, in Colombia. While the situation clearly remains unacceptable, we feel that some progress has been made. Figures for 2005 show that the numbers of murders, kidnappings, displacements and massacres are generally decreasing from those of 2004. But more needs to be done. We keep the human rights situation in the country under constant review, frequently raising specific human rights cases with the Colombian authorities. We regularly meet UK and Colombian trade unionists and other civil society groups, in the UK and Colombia, to hear their views and discuss how the Government can best support them.

My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, met a British trade union delegation on 6 March to discuss their recent visit to Colombia and hear their concerns about human rights. He also discussed the issue with the Colombian Foreign Minister in the fringes of the EU/Latin America and the Caribbean summit on 12 May. In February we also funded a working visit to the UK by eight senior Colombian trade unionists to demonstrate our support to civil society in Colombia and to the important role it has to play in helping find solutions to Colombia's many problems.

EU Satellite Centre

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will list the Government's requests for surveillance information from the European Union Satellite Centre in each of the last five years. [70348]

Mr. Hoon: In the last five years the UK has requested the European Union Satellite Centre to provide analysis of earth imagery for five national tasks, all in 2003. Three of these related to arms control tasking in Asia and the Middle East, and two concerned humanitarian and rescue tasking in Africa. These taskings took place before the costs of such national requests became recoverable from the member state. These national taskings should be distinguished from UK proposals for the EU to task the Satellite Centre in support of the EU's Common Foreign and Security Policy. These proposals comprised five arms control tasks across the Middle East and Asia, one imagery analysis request in the Middle East and geospatial information in preparation for the G8 meeting in Gleneagles.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the cost of the surveillance information requested from the European Union Satellite Centre in respect of the G8 summit at Gleneagles was. [70349]

Mr. Hoon: The European Union Satellite Centre has estimated the costs of information for the G8 summit at Gleneagles, including data acquisition and analysis time, at €40,000. This was paid from the Satellite Centre's annual budget, to which member states contribute.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what satellite imaging services from the European Union Satellite Centre are being used by the Government. [70351]

Mr. Hoon: The European Union Satellite Centre produces a variety of products including two-dimensional analysis of satellite imagery and three-dimensional computer models created through the combination of information from maps and earth imagery. All products requested by the European Union from the Satellite Centre in support of the EU's Common Foreign and Security Policy are copied to the UK and all other member states. These are stored by the UK and contribute to the pool of information available to aid decision making on subjects including humanitarian and disaster response, arms control, border monitoring and environmental issues.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much is allocated to (a) the running costs of and (b) buying information from the European Union Satellite Centre. [70353]

Mr. Hoon: The UK's contribution to the European Union Satellite Centre is approximately 17 per cent. of the annual running costs. This year the UK contribution will be €1.8 million. This annual funding covers the costs of tasks delegated to the Satellite Centre by unanimous EU agreement. The UK receives copies of the information provided in response to these tasks at no additional cost. It has not made any national requests since 2004, when charging for additional information requests for national use was introduced.

General Affairs and External Relations Council

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make a statement on the outcome of the General Affairs and External Relations Council on 15 May. [72056]

Mr. Hoon: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and I attended the General Affairs and External Relations Council (GAERC) on 15 May. The council discussed preparations for the June European council and a range of foreign policy issues, including the latest developments in the Western Balkans, Nepal, Africa, Iran, the Middle East Peace Process and Iraq. Defence Ministers met separately to discuss the European Defence Agency, Capabilities and EU Force for the Democratic Republic for Congo. My right hon. Friend the Defence Secretary represented the UK. In joint session Foreign and Defence Ministers discussed emergency and crisis response, civil-military co-operation and security sector reform in the Western Balkans.

For a fuller read out of discussions, I refer the hon. Member to the post-GAERC written ministerial statement, which will be issued shortly.

Iran

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what her policy is on possible military action against Iran; and if she will make a statement. [71855]

Dr. Howells: As my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary said on 8 May, 'no-one has the intention to take military action' against Iran. The international community is determined that Iran should comply with the requirements of the International Atomic Energy Agency Board of Governors and the Security Council. To that end, we are all pursuing a diplomatic process and we are working hard to make sure it succeeds.

Iraq

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate has been made of the rate of unemployment in (a) Al Basrah, (b) Al Muthanna, (c) Dhi Qar and (d) Maysan provinces in Iraq. [70967]

Hilary Benn: I have been asked to reply.

The Iraqi Central Office for Statistics and Information Technology (COSIT) is responsible for producing official statistics on the unemployment rate and has conducted three Labour Force Surveys since 2003. The latest November 2005 survey, reports an unemployment rate of 18 per cent. across Iraq (not including the Kurdish Regional Government or Al Anbar province). Unemployment rates for individual provinces are not published by COSIT or any other organisation.

It is important to note that there has been considerable debate over Iraqi employment statistics, and widely differing unemployment rates have been reported. One report from the Brookings Institution (Iraq Index, April 2006) at http://www.brookings.edu/iraqindex estimates the current unemployment rate to be between 25 and 40 per cent. The use of different definitions of unemployment may account for some of this variation. For example, Iraqi data has traditionally counted only those working 15 hours or more per week as "employed", whereas the International Labour Organisation (ILO) considers anyone working 1 hour or more per week to be employed.

Jamaica

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions she has had with the authorities in Jamaica on (a) tackling homophobia and (b) police attitudes to and treatment of gay people. [70003]

Mr. Hoon: Our position is well-known to the Jamaican authorities.

During his visit to Jamaica on 25 April, the Under-Secretary of State for International Development, my hon. Friend the Member for Harrow, West (Mr. Thomas), made the case for repeal of legislation on buggery and spoke out against the use of homophobic lyrics in popular music. There has been no recent discussion on police attitudes to homosexuality.

Minister for Europe

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs at which meetings of the Council of the European Union the United Kingdom will be represented by the Minister for Europe. [71856]

Mr. Hoon: Together with my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary, I will routinely represent the UK at meetings of the General Affairs and External Relations Council of the European Union.

Pakistan

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the strength of the Taliban in Waziristan, Pakistan. [71640]

Dr. Howells: We share President Musharraf's concern about the Talibanisation of Waziristan. The Pakistani Taliban have at various times taken control of parts of Waziristan, including the town of Miramshah, but not for extended periods. The Government of Pakistan currently has over 80,000 troops deployed in the region, who are engaged in almost daily skirmishes with al-Qaeda and Taliban elements. We take the threat posed by the Taliban very seriously and continue to work closely with the Government of Pakistan to try to contain it. This is important not just for stability in Waziristan, but also to help reduce the risk to British forces deployed in Southern Afghanistan. The exact strength of the Pakistani Taliban is difficult to assess.

Palestinian Authority

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the answer of 11 May 2006, Official Report, columns. 522-3W, on the Palestinian Authority, if she will make a statement on the discussions regarding the development of a mechanism for the payment of aid to the Palestinian Authority, which took place at the General Affairs and External Relations Council on 15 May. [72150]

Dr. Howells: At the 15 May General Affairs and External Relations Council, the EU accepted the task from the Quartet (EU, US, UN and Russia) to develop a temporary international mechanism to direct and supervise delivery of assistance to the Palestinian people. We believe the mechanism should be set up as a matter of urgency. The European Commission will consult international financial institutions, and key partners and donors, to establish the mechanism as soon as possible. The UK has played a leading role in establishing the mechanism and will continue to offer assistance.

Renditions

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the Answer of 8 May 2006, Official Report, column 55W, on rendition, since what date the Government have expected a state to seek permission for each individual rendition flight through UK airspace and UK air bases, including overseas territories. [71485]

Dr. Howells: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 88W, and to my right hon. Friend the then Foreign Secretary's (Mr. Straw) written ministerial statement of 20 January 2006, Official Report, columns 37-38WS. The expectation that a State will seek permission reflects an aspect of the principle of State sovereignty over territory, which is a longstanding principle of international law. The findings of the review of the Government's files back to 1997, which were summarised in the then Foreign Secretary's written ministerial statement, demonstrate that this has been a consistent requirement; that it has been made clear to the United States authorities; and that they have sought such permission.

Sri Lanka

Mr. Pelling: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of recent increased violence in Sri Lanka; and if she will make a statement. [71863]

Dr. Howells: We are deeply concerned at the recent upturn in violence in Sri Lanka, notably the suicide bombing of the army headquarters in Colombo on 25 April and the attack at sea on a troop-carrying vessel on 11 May. These Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE) attacks are a clear violation of the Cease-fire Agreement, break the commitment they made at talks in Geneva in February, and threaten prospects for peace. There is no excuse for terrorism. The LTTE is a proscribed organisation in Britain and is likely also to be listed by the EU as a terrorist organisation.

But the background to the violence in Sri Lanka is complex and we are also very concerned by reports of killings of civilians and the continued atrocities committed by armed groups. It is essential that the Government of Sri Lanka also live up to its responsibilities in preventing such groups from operating.

We continue to believe that dialogue is the only way to achieve a negotiated settlement to the internal conflict in Sri Lanka. Violence cannot solve internal differences nor bring sustainable peace. All sides need to exercise restraint and act in a constructive and patient way. We fully support the Norwegian facilitated peace talks and will continue to work for a settlement that takes full account of the legitimate demands of all communities within a democratic and stable Sri Lanka.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make a statement on the situation in Sri Lanka. [72086]

Dr. Howells: We are concerned at the upturn in violence in Sri Lanka. Recent Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam attacks on army headquarters and a troop carrying vessel are a serious violation of the Ceasefire Agreement and threaten prospects for peace. At the same time, we are concerned by killings of civilians and atrocities committed by armed groups. We look to the Government of Sri Lanka to prevent such groups from operating and to bring those responsible to justice. We fully support the Norwegian facilitated peace process and will work towards a settlement that takes full account of the legitimate concerns of all communities in Sri Lanka.

Trinidad and Tobago

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with the authorities in Trinidad and Tobago on investigating and prosecuting unlawful police killings. [70106]

Mr. Hoon: The law and order situation in Trinidad and Tobago has been deteriorating for some time and the Government acknowledge that the police response has been inadequate in various respects. Our concerns about both the human rights aspects and also the safety of UK citizens, especially in Tobago, are well known to the authorities. Most recently my noble and learned Friend the Minister of State for Criminal Justice and Offender Management, Baroness Scotland of Asthal, discussed Criminal and Judicial reform with Prime Minister Patrick Manning and senior ministers in Port of Spain on 3 May. These and other problems will continue to feature in our ongoing security dialogue with the leadership and security agencies in Trinidad and Tobago.

Turkey

Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made in negotiations with the Turkish Government in developing a system of documentation which would permit people in possession of UK-issued temporary travel documents to travel from Turkey to the UK. [71193]

Mr. Hoon: We are yet to identify a long term solution to the problem of suitable documentation which would permit the travel of the small number of individuals in Turkey who would otherwise be granted entry to the UK but have no passport on which to travel. We continue to engage with the Turkish authorities on individual cases.

Venezuela

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on UK-Venezuelan affairs. [69911]

Mr. Heon: I refer the hon. Member to the following comments made by my hon. Friend the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, (Dr. Howells) in the House on 8 March 2006, Official Report, columns 307-311WH:

"The relationship between the United Kingdom and Venezuela is an active one. We work effectively together in several fields, including crime, counter-narcotics and energy. We have an important commercial relationship... It is the third biggest market for the UK in Latin America. ... our policy remains to seek constructive engagement with Venezuela. We have much to gain from working together".

NORTHERN IRELAND

Absenteeism

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the absenteeism rates were for each of the workforces of each of Northern Ireland's district councils in each of the last three years. [70914]

David Cairns: The information on absenteeism rates within district councils is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, the Local Government Auditor, under the provisions in Article 26 of the Local Government (Northern Ireland) Order 2005 is in the process of collecting such information for 2005-06. This information will be published and I will let you have a copy in due course.

Agricultural Weather Aid Scheme

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much has been (a) claimed and (b) paid out under the agricultural weather aid scheme. [71928]

David Cairns: The information is as follows:

(a) Amount claimed—£4.6 million.

(b) Amount paid out—£4,065,528.53

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many applications have been (a) received and (b) accepted in relation to the agricultural weather aid scheme. [71929]

David Cairns: The information is as follows:

(a) Number of applications received—26,354

(b) Number accepted—26,059

Classroom Assistants

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what money has been allocated for the evaluation of classroom assistants in Northern Ireland. [71367]

Maria Eagle: My Department has made available £25.7 million in respect of the costs of the job evaluation exercise, including arrears, for the period to the end of the 2005-06 financial year. This money is ring fenced for those costs once a settlement has been reached between the employers and those representing classroom assistants, and cannot be used for any other purpose. Further funding will be made available in respect of ongoing costs after 2005-06.

Dentistry

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many dentists are accepting new NHS patients in each constituency in Northern Ireland. [71313]

Paul Goggins: A dentist may practice in more than one dental surgery within a constituency or in more than one constituency. The following table shows the number of actual dental practitioners who were recently registering patients for NHS treatment within each constituency.

Number of dentists[1] providing health service dentistry by constituency who accepted new health service patients in March and April 2006

Constituency	Number
Belfast East	40
Belfast North	52
Belfast South	51
Belfast West	36
East Antrim	29
East Londonderry	33
Fermanagh and South Tyrone	51
Foyle	36
Lagan Valley	35
Mid Ulster	28
Newry and Armagh	52
North Antrim	45
North Down	42
South Antrim	37
South Down	33
Strangford	34
Upper Bann	47
West Tyrone	33

[1] Excludes vocational dental practitioners and assistants.

Notes:

1. Should a dentist work in more than one practice within a constituency then they have only been counted once within that constituency but if they work across constituencies then they have also been counted once in each relevant constituency.
2. Figures will not include any dentists who may still be accepting patients but who were not approached for a registration during the two-month analysis period.

Departmental Credit Cards

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what credit cards are provided for senior civil servants by (a) each department in Northern Ireland and (b) his Department. [70492]

Mr. Hanson: No credit cards are issued to senior civil servants in Northern Ireland departments or the Northern Ireland Office.

Departmental Staff (Vetting)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on how many occasions vetting checks on foreign nationals working in each department in Northern Ireland, including the Northern Ireland Office, have revealed a criminal record in each of the last five years. [70451]

Paul Goggins: Prior to 1 August 2005 national security vetting information kept by the security vetting unit in the Northern Ireland Office in respect of the Northern Ireland Departments and the Northern Ireland Office was not recorded in a manner that would allow this question to be answered. However, a check of information dating from 1 August 2005 has not revealed any foreign national working in a Northern Ireland Department or the Northern Ireland Office and subject to national security vetting to have a criminal record.

District Police Partnerships

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average attendance was at public meetings held under the auspices of District Police Partnerships in Northern Ireland during 2005. [70438]

Paul Goggins: I have been advised by the Northern Ireland Policing Board that the records of the numbers of members of the public attending District Policing Partnership meetings in public are held directly by each District Policing Partnership.

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the 10 (a) most improved and (b) least improved district policing partnership areas in relation to incidents of reported burglaries in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [70911]

Paul Goggins: The information requested is available on the PSNI website at: www.psni.police.uk

Footballers (Intimidation)

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the police in Londonderry have reached any conclusions regarding their investigations into allegations that two footballers were intimidated during April into leaving the city. [68118]

Paul Goggins: PSNI is investigating the allegations of intimidation. However, the two men concerned have returned to Belgium and despite the attempts of local police, it has proved difficult to contact them.

Gershon Review

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made, in terms of (a) headcount reductions and (b) cost savings, in achieving the efficiency objectives set for the Department by the Gershon review. [21294]

Mr. Hain: Progress was recently reported in the 2005-06 departmental report which was published on the 11 May 2006.

Maze Prison

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what guidelines are in place in respect of (a) the use of, (b) access to and (c) press coverage of the former HMP Maze buildings and property. [71119]

Mr. Hanson: I have recently reviewed the procedure on access to the Maze/Long Kesh site and have placed a copy of the policy in the Libraries of both Houses.

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what permissions were sought by Sinn Fein in respect of its use of HMP Maze land for a commemoration of the death of Bobby Sands; [71120]

(2) what discussions (a) he and (b) his officials have had with Sinn Fein on the use of land at HMP Maze for a commemoration of the death of Bobby Sands. [71121]

Mr. Hanson: Following representation made on behalf of the families of ex-prisoners my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for NI agreed to allow each of the families of the hunger strikers who died a private visit to pay their respects on the anniversary of the death of their family member. Appropriate arrangements were made with officials. In relation to the anniversary of the death of Bobby Sands, family members did not attend. A number of former prisoners accompanied by two Sinn Fein MPs asked at official level for, and were granted, a brief private visit to the former prison hospital. I have issued revised guidance on future such visits.

Ministerial Protection

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the cost was of close protection from the armed forces for Northern Ireland Ministers in each of the last eight years. [69660]

Paul Goggins: The armed forces do not provide close protection for Ministers. Close protection for Ministers is provided by PSNI.

MOT

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many vehicles which were tested at Northern Ireland MOT test centres failed their initial test in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [71127]

David Cairns: The following table details all vehicles that failed their initial test in the last two years. Figures are not available prior to 2004-05.

Centre	2004-05	2005-06
Armagh	3,882	5,399
Ballymena	9,285	9,194

Newtownards	11,862	15,661
Omagh	5,601	7,545
Total	107,569	144,048

Newtonabbey

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for what reasons 42 Circular Road, Jordanstown, Newtonabbey was not included as an area of townscape character. [71330]

David Cairns: An objection to the non-inclusion of 42 Circular Road, Jordanstown within an area of townscape character has been submitted to the draft Belfast metropolitan area plan. As the objection will properly be addressed at the forthcoming public inquiry, it would not be appropriate to comment on the issue at this time.

Operating and Financial Review

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the implementation of the operating and financial review in Northern Ireland. [34983]

Mr. Hanson: The Accounting Standards Board's Reporting Statement "Operational and Financial Review" (OFR) is designed as a formulation and development of best practice; it is intended to have persuasive rather than mandatory force. The statement has been written with quoted companies in mind and recommends that company directors prepare an OFR, but is also applicable to any other entities that purport to prepare an OFR. This applies to Northern Ireland as in Great Britain.

For Northern Ireland Government, accounts for 2005-06 onwards prepared by departments and other entities falling within the scope of the Government Financial Reporting Manual will prepare a Management Commentary, the content of which is based upon the recommendations of the Reporting Statement Operational and Financial Review.

Police

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the total amount of police overtime was in Northern Ireland in each district command unit in each of the last three years, broken down by rank; and what the cost was in each year. [70455]

Paul Goggins: The appropriate figures for police overtime from 2003 to 2006 are included in the following tables. Only a top-level summary is available for 2003-04 as the detailed analysis figures are not available. The 2003-04 figures therefore include both DCU and Department overtime.

Police overtime cost 2003-04

	Total (£)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many officers from (a) other UK and (b) foreign police services are on secondment to the Police Service Northern Ireland. [70456]

Paul Goggins: There are currently 19 personnel seconded into the PSNI (including secondments into the Historical Enquiry Team) from other UK forces. There are no officers on secondment from foreign police services.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many temporary advances of pay are outstanding in the Police Service Northern Ireland; and what the total cost is of those advances. [70457]

Paul Goggins: The PSNI have confirmed that they currently have no outstanding temporary advances of pay.

Road Fatalities

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many road accidents in Northern Ireland which resulted in fatalities were a direct result of (a) speeding and (b) driving under the influence of (i) drink and (ii) drugs over the last three years, broken down by parliamentary constituency; and if he will make a statement. [69649]

Paul Goggins: The statistics for road accidents resulting in fatalities are provided in the following tables. This information is not recorded by parliamentary constituency but rather by district command unit. Table B provides overall figures for individuals driving under the influence of drink or drugs as it is not possible to separate these.

Rural Economy

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps Invest Northern Ireland plans to take to promote the rural economy in East Londonderry constituency. [70915]

Maria Eagle: In addition to delivery of Invest NI's full suite of programmes and services, Invest NI will continue to work closely with those stakeholders actively involved in developing rural business in the East Londonderry constituency. These include local councils and LEADER groups, for example, COLLAGE in Coleraine and Roe Valley in Limavady. For the year 2006-07 a series of workshops have been planned to help stimulate entrepreneur ship, innovation and exports in new and existing businesses. The first of these has been arranged for October 2006 on the topic of Advanced Tendering.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Air Miles

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many air miles have been accrued by senior civil servants in his Department on official business in each of the last three years; and how they were used. [70509]

Mr. Thomas: DFID staff may not use for private benefit, air miles earned on official travel. We have arranged with certain partner airlines for staff to donate their air miles to the earth miles initiative under which air miles are exchanged for contributions by the airlines to the cost of carbon offset projects. Staff are also encouraged to use air miles for official travel.

The Department for International Development (DFID) does not hold details of individual staff membership of frequent flyer schemes and therefore has no record of air miles accrued.

Asian Tsunami

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans he has to implement the recommendations of the recent report on his Department's response to the Indian Ocean disaster. [71589]

Mr. Thomas: DFID is drawing on some of the recommendations to help inform and guide DFID's support to and relationship with the UN agencies, Red Cross movement and non-governmental organisations that DFID funded in response to the disaster. DFID aims to strengthen its partners and their response capacities, seeking to build on some of the lessons identified in this review.

For example: the report highlighted how UN agencies handled co-ordination in each sector. DFID has since helped to identify and second staff to act as cluster coordinators for each UN lead agency following the Pakistan earthquake. This has led to much improved sectoral co-ordination.

DFID has also benefited from the recommendations about DFID's relationship with the UK military, placing a Civil Military advisor in Pakistan following the 2005 earthquake.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment his Department has made of the (a) role, (b) performance and (c) accountability of partners involved in channelling UK aid to areas of need in the aftermath of the Indian Ocean tsunami. [71591]

Mr. Thomas: DFID has published a "Report on DFID's Response to the Indian Ocean Disaster" containing DFID's assessment of the performance of DFID-funded UN agencies, the Red Cross movement and non-governmental organisations and recommendations for actions to be taken by DFID and its partners. It is available at http://www.dfid.gov.uk/pubs/files/report-dfid-response-tsunami.pdf.

The UK NGOs grouped under the UK Disasters Emergency Committee (DEC) has also published information on http://www.dec.org.uk/index.cfm/asset_id,1674/pr,1.

The NGOs' Tsunami Evaluation Committee report is expected to be published soon, providing more recommendations for future responses.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development who the authors were of the recent report on his Department's response to the Indian Ocean disaster; and how much the report cost to produce. [71592]

Mr. Thomas: The report was compiled by staff from DFID's Conflict, Humanitarian and Security Department (CHASE) Operations Team and a consultant. It incorporated a synthesis of field monitoring missions to Indonesia, Sri Lanka, India, the Maldives and UN agency headquarters by five staff and four consultants. The cost of this complete monitoring programme was £64,281.

Stephen Hesford: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the effect of the recent attacks by Tamil Tigers on the post-tsunami recovery process in Sri Lanka and if he will make a statement. [71637]

Mr. Thomas: The increasing violence and communal tension is a major barrier to recovery in the north and east. In the southern districts, not contested by the LTTE and not directly affected by the fighting, recovery is proceeding swiftly, and is expected to be completed by the end of 2007.

The increase in direct fighting between the Sri Lankan military, the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE) and militias associated with each side has been accompanied by an increase in communal tension. Development agencies and non-governmental organisations have evacuated staff for their security and protection and recovery programmes have been suspended. In addition, regular economic activities and recovery work undertaken in communities without external assistance has also been affected by military activity. Able-bodied men are being mobilised for LTTE service, and people are being displaced by fighting, or the fear of fighting.

The situation continues to deteriorate, as evidenced by the recent suicide bombing in Colombo and the subsequent air strikes and naval shelling in the east. Without a considerable improvement in the security situation it is unlikely that much recovery can be undertaken. The international community, including the United Kingdom, is working hard to encourage the Government and the LTTE to curtail violence and to return to the negotiating table. Once the security environment improves we will renew efforts to help ensure delivery of development assistance to communities.

Family Planning

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Buckingham of 9 May 2006, Official Report, column 129W, on family planning, why his Department is opposed to the United States Administration's Mexico City Policy; whom he consulted while developing his policy; and if he will make a statement. [72176]

Mr. Thomas: The UK Government's approach to promoting reproductive health is set out in the DFID position paper, "Sexual and Reproductive Health and Rights". Our approach to achieving the fifth Millennium Development Goal of improving maternal health is outlined in the DFID strategy paper, "Reducing Maternal Deaths: Evidence and Action". Both were published in 2004 after extensive consultation with a broad range of stakeholders, including the research community, NGOs, parliamentarians and civil society groups. A web-based consultation was also held as part of this process.

Our understanding of the so-called "Mexico City Policy" is that it requires non-US NGOs to agree that they will not perform or actively promote abortion as a method of family planning in order to receive US funding. This means, for example, that non-US NGOs who accept US funding are not allowed to use their own funds to provide information or counselling for abortion care, or to promote awareness of the benefits of legal reform. As the International Planned Parenthood Federation (IPPF) "Death and Denial: Unsafe Abortion and Poverty" report makes clear, the policy forces NGOs to choose between carrying on work to protect the health and rights of women or lose funds. No reproductive or maternal health NGOs affected by the policy work to "promote abortion as a method of family planning", and indeed this would be contrary to the global consensus reached at the International Conference on Population and Development (ICPD). What they try to do is to provide a comprehensive range of information and services that can help save women's lives, and reduce the need for abortion. The US policy means that the work of such organisations is compromised, and that is why my Department is opposed to it.

Iraq

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment has been made of progress in restoring (a) electricity, (b) water, (c) sanitation, (d) health care and (e) education services in (i) Al Basrah, (ii) Al Muthanna, (iii) Dhi Qar and (iv) Maysan provinces in Iraq. [70966]

Hilary Benn: The Government of Iraq, supported by the UK and other donors, have made significant progress with reconstruction since 2003. But there is still a long way to go. Once a relatively wealthy country with high levels of education and health care, by 2003 Iraq had suffered more than 20 years of conflict, mismanagement and chronic under-investment from a brutal regime. Continued violence, especially sabotage directed at key infrastructure, and low (but growing) levels of management capacity in Iraq's national and local government have slowed progress. The UK and international community are committed to helping the new Iraqi Government tackle these challenges.

One challenge is the lack of data, especially at the regional and provincial level. The following information therefore covers the progress that has been made across Iraq, including regional detail only where this is available.

Electricity generation is more equitably distributed across Iraq than before 2003. Nearly 5,000 megawatts (MW) have been added to the national grid since 2003, but Iraq's average electricity generation has not improved over that period. This is because at the same time as capacity is being added through reconstruction projects, breakdowns of the pre-existing dilapidated systems, shortages of fuel supplies and sabotage are reducing capacity. So Iraqis are not getting the full benefit of those extra megawatts. Demand for electricity also continues to rise dramatically, as the economy grows and more people own and use electrical goods such as fridges and air-conditioning units. The new Iraqi Government will be starting work on a long-term power sector strategy, with DFID's support.

In the south, average electricity generation levels have increased from approximately 750 MW in January 2004 to over 1,000 MW in December 2005. The south now receives its fair share of national power—whereas under Saddam's regime, power was often diverted from the south to Baghdad.

To improve power supply in the south, DFID has:

Repaired transmission lines from Hartha power station to Basra city—securing electricity supplies for 1.5 million residents;

Improved power distribution to 13 areas of Basra.

By the end of 2006, we will have:

Established point power generators to provide 15 MW of back-up supplies in Dhi Qar and Maysan;

Added or secured a further 190 MW of electricity in the south, through our £40 million Iraq Infrastructure and Services Programme.

Water supplies have improved across the south since the end of the conflict, and sewerage systems and water treatment plants are now operating again. Before the conflict, no major sewerage systems were operating. Immediate post-conflict work improved efficiency of water treatment plants and pumping stations. DFID has:

provided technical advice for a major sewage installation in Al Amarah, providing up to half the city's population with access to a piped system and replacing open sewage channels; improved the water supply to 60,000 people in Al Amtahiyah; started construction of reservoirs and water towers to benefit a further 200,000 people; constructed a water training centre which will train water engineers from Maysan, Muthanna, Basra and Dhi Qar provinces.

Health services are gradually being restored throughout Iraq. Hundreds of health care facilities have been rehabilitated and 240 hospitals and 1,200 primary health centres are now functioning. Through extensive disease control programmes, there has been a decline in the prevalence of leishmaniasis, malaria, measles, mumps, and polio. Japan and the US have rehabilitated a number of health care facilities in the south, as well as supplying essential equipment, ambulances and drugs. The US is constructing a new paediatric hospital in Basra, which will offer improved treatment to children with acute conditions across the south.

5,168 schools have been rehabilitated throughout Iraq, with a further 450 in progress. By the end of 2006, more than 133,000 primary school teachers and 47,500 secondary school teachers and administrators will have received training and technical support. In southern Iraq, the UN has rehabilitated schools and supplied textbooks, and is also rehabilitating vocational training institutes. Japan has provided textbooks to all primary schools in Muthanna. There are 465 schools operating in Maysan, and 348 in Muthanna.

Leased Land

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what (a) land and (b) property his Department (i) leases and (ii) leased in (A) 1979, (B) 1983, (C) 1987, (D) 1992 and (E) 1997 in (1) the Southend, West constituency, (2) Essex, (3) Hertfordshire and (4) the Metropolitan police area of London. [72104]

Mr. Thomas: DFID has leased the following properties, all within the Metropolitan police area of London. No other properties or land have been leased in the Southend, West constituency, Essex or Hertfordshire areas.

1979:

Eland House, Bressendon Place, London, SW1

29 Bressendon Place, London, SW1

1987:

Eland House, Bressendon Place, London, SW1

1992:

94 Victoria Street, London, SW1

1997:

94 Victoria Street, London, SW1

Current:

1 Palace Street, London, SW1

20 Victoria Street, SW1

Note:

DFID also leased Glen House, Stag Place, between 1999 and 2002.

Maternal Health

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what steps are being taken by his Department (a) to develop a comprehensive maternal health strategy and (b) to disseminate this strategy to other international donors; [68244]

(2) what recent discussions he has had with his counterparts in (a) the EU, (b) the G8 and (c) the UN about improving maternal health in developing countries; [68158]

(3) what steps are being taken by his Department to increase international action on maternal health issues. [68159]

Mr. Thomas: DFID is the only major bilateral donor to already have a specific strategy focusing on maternal health: "Reducing maternal deaths: evidence and action", which was launched in 2004. We have disseminated this comprehensive maternal health strategy throughout the international system, with other donors, the UN, and most importantly, with the developing partners we support.

The strategy provides the basis for DFID support to improve maternal health at country level, which we do through a combination of programmes to strengthen health services and improve overall reproductive and child health, along with specific maternal health programmes and HIV interventions. Long-term support for maternal health in Nepal, for example, is demonstrating significant increases in women's access to emergency obstetric care in remote areas and in a fragile state. This work highlights the importance of support for community level action to overcome cultural and socio-economic barriers to accessing care, as well as the importance of addressing infrastructure (roads, bridges) and communications issues to ensure an effective referral system. In Malawi, DFID is supporting an Emergency Human Resource Programme to address the acute shortages of health workers, an issue which has been compounded by the AIDS epidemic. Overall investments for maternal health (including reproductive health services) have increased by over 40 per cent. over the past three years, to £242.9 million in 2004-05.

The maternal health strategy also provides the platform for DFID's regular policy discussions with other donors, such as the EU, G8 and the UN, on the actions needed to improve maternal health in developing countries and the importance of doing more on maternal health. We are seeking to highlight the importance of maternal health within the current G8 process, although the prime health theme at present is infectious disease. We are also working to ensure that the new Partnership for Maternal, Neonatal and Child Health can play a useful role in advocating more action on maternal health, and to improve the way UN agencies work together on this issue.

Importantly, good advocacy is based upon good data. Getting reliable information on maternal deaths is difficult in most developing countries where maternal deaths are not recorded and where more than half of all births take place at home, without a skilled attendant but either with relatives or alone. This is why DFID, along with the United States Agency for International Development (USAID) and the Gates Foundation, supports IMMPACT, the only global research initiative which is successfully identifying effective ways in which maternal deaths can be measured and the statistics used for high level advocacy. DFID further supports a recent global partnership, Health Metrics Network, which aims to provide country level support to Governments to get better data.

Patents

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what measures are in place to ensure that the holders of traditional knowledge (a)

are made aware of patent applications and (b) are able to be fully involved in assessing intellectual applications based on traditional knowledge. [72240]

Mr. Thomas: The UK Patent Office publishes details of patent applications in its weekly publication "The Patents and Designs Journal" which is publicly available free of charge on the Patent Office Website at: http://www.patent.gov.uk/patent/dbase/index.htm.

Worldwide published applications may be viewed using "Espacenet" which is a publicly available free of charge service which lists over 45 million patent specifications including GB specifications from 1918 to the present. This is available at: http://ep.espacenet.com.

Indigenous peoples (holders of traditional knowledge) play an important role in the World Intellectual Property Organisation Inter-Governmental Committee on Traditional Knowledge, Folklore and Genetic Resources (IGC) where these matters are discussed. A voluntary fund has recently been set up to help ensure their participation in and attendance at this committee. The IGC has done important work on traditional knowledge databases and also on amending the international classification system for patents to include traditional knowledge and hence make it easier for holders of traditional knowledge to access patent applications based on traditional knowledge.

The assessment of intellectual property applications is done by patent examiners and trademark examiners in the relevant country or jurisdiction. In the UK anyone can file observations on patentability with regard to patent applications, including the holders of traditional knowledge. This will then be taken into account when the patent is examined. In a similar manner, anyone can make observations about the registrability of a trademark. Further, trademarks applications can be opposed or subsequently invalidated if the mark designates a characteristic of those goods or services, or is otherwise non-distinctive. Similar arrangements are in place in most countries and jurisdictions.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the Government's policy is on the proposals in the Trade-Related aspects of Intellectual Property Rights (TRIPS) Council to introduce a requirement for the declaration of origin of the use of genetic resources and associated knowledge into the TRIPS Agreement. [72241]

Mr. Thomas: The Government support the principle of developing countries' demands to disclose country of origin or source of genetic material within patent applications. This could assist these countries to keep track of patent applications linked to the use of their resources and check whether appropriate benefit sharing agreements are in place. The Government therefore supported the EU proposal submitted to the World Intellectual Property Organisation (WIPO) Intergovernmental Committee (IGC) in December 2004 which suggests that disclosure of country of origin or source in patent applications could be introduced on a global basis in national, regional and international patent applicants. We judged that this proposal strikes a good balance between achieving the objective of supporting developing countries' request to include disclosure of origin provisions in international patent law while ensuring that patents are not undermined and patent applicants are not overly burdened.

We must however, ensure that the system is workable in practice and achieves the desired outcome (i.e. benefits are generated and shared appropriately). Therefore, we have so far focused our efforts on discussions in the WIPO IGC, where the technical expertise resides.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what sanctions are in place to penalise intellectual property applicants who have illegally obtained genetic material or knowledge which forms all or part of their application. [72242]

Mr. Thomas: There are no measures under the laws of the UK, but a person violating the access laws of another country would be subject to any sanctions which may be provided for under those laws.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what measures are in place to inform countries named as the source of traditional knowledge or genetic resources in patent applications that such an application has been made. [72243]

Mr. Thomas: There are no official measures in place to do this in the UK. Countries can of course use the "Espacenet" database which is a publicly available free of charge service which lists over 45 million patent specifications at: http://ep.espacenet.com/

This issue is currently subject to discussions in the World Intellectual Property Organisation Inter-Governmental Committee on Traditional Knowledge, Folklore and Genetic Resources. The EU proposed a system of disclosure of origin of genetic resources and associated traditional knowledge to this committee in 2005, suggesting that

"It would be adequate to identify in particular the Clearing House Mechanism of the CBD (Convention on Biological Diversity) as the central body to which the patent offices should send the information available from the declarations on disclosure."

Countries of source could then check with this clearing house to see which patent applications have named them as source. This proposal has not yet been adopted by the committee however.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether the Government have instigated a system for informing the World Intellectual Property Organisation about the origins of traditional knowledge or genetic resources named in patent applications. [72244]

Mr. Thomas: The Government have contributed to and fully support an EU proposal for such a system. This issue is currently subject to discussions in the World Intellectual Property Organisation Inter-Governmental Committee on Traditional Knowledge, Folklore and Genetic Resources (IGC). The EU proposed a system of disclosure of origin of genetic resources and associated traditional knowledge to this committee in 2005 suggesting that

"It would be adequate to identify in particular the Clearing House Mechanism of the CBD (Convention on Biological Diversity) as the central body to which the patent offices should send the information available from the declarations on disclosure."

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps his Department has taken to assess the impact on developing countries of geographical indications of traditional knowledge and genetic resources under trade-related aspects of Intellectual Property Rights. [72245]

Mr. Thomas: DFID has been funding several efforts aiming at improving the understanding of the impact of international intellectual property rights protection on developing countries, starting with providing support to the 2002 UK Commission on Intellectual Property Rights (CIPR). In its work, the CIPR extensively investigated the impact on development of traditional knowledge and genetic resources protection. The CIPR published its findings in Chapters 3 and 4 of the report, which can be freely accessed at: http://wwwiprcommission.org, a website maintained by DFID. The report concludes that a disclosure requirement should be necessary.

DFID has since been supporting analytical work and dialogues on these issues mostly through Geneva-based governmental and non governmental organisations, notably the expert work carried out jointly by the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) and the International Centre for Trade and Sustainable Development.

Sub-Saharan Africa

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many (a) successful and (b) unsuccessful bids there were by each sub-Saharan country for grants from the Trade Related Capacity Building Fund in each of the last eight years; and how much was allocated to each successful bid. [67819]

Mr. Thomas: DFID provides Trade Related Capacity Building (TRCB) support to sub-Saharan African countries through its bilateral programmes and multilateral institutions. It does not have a stand alone TRCB Fund to which sub-Saharan African countries can bid. Therefore, we are unable to provide information on bids and their success.

Our support for Trade Related Capacity Building for sub-Saharan African countries is allocated according to their TRCB needs as identified in their Poverty Reduction Strategy Papers or national development plans and in fulfilment of the World Trade Organisation (WTO) criteria for TRCB.

For the period 1997-2005, DFID's financial records show that countries in sub-Saharan Africa received £16.2 million in support for trade and investment activities, through bilateral programmes and DFID supported multilateral institutions. Trade and investment activities are one aspect only of DFID's complete TRCB programme which includes private sector development, agricultural development, compliance with standards etc. Therefore, DFID's overall support to TRCB in sub-Saharan Africa is larger than the figure given. The difficulty in isolating the TRCB elements within large economic growth or regional programmes prevents us from providing further financial details on TRCB expenditure. Annexe A provides details per sub-Saharan African country of the DFID trade and investment expenditure for the period 1997-2005.

In terms of specific TRCB programmes in sub-Saharan Africa, DFID currently runs an £11 million Regional Trade Facilitation Programme. The programme supports two regional economic communities, the Southern African Development Community and Common Market of Eastern and Southern Africa, and their members in negotiations with the WTO and the European Commission and implementing regional integration.

Uganda

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps he is taking to promote good governance in Uganda. [72933]

Hilary Benn: I recently visited Uganda where I met with President Museveni. In this meeting I emphasised the importance of good governance to our development partnership with Uganda. I noted in particular the importance of further deepening democracy following Uganda's first multi-party elections in 25 years in February, and action on corruption.

DFID's programme in Uganda is promoting good governance. We are leading members of donor groups which have regular discussions with the Government about corruption, public service reform and public financial management and we are helping to establish the institutions required to fight corruption in Uganda. We are financing the Government's public service reform programme which is improving Government effectiveness, and the public financial management and accountability programme which is strengthening public financial management systems in both central and local government. We are also providing support to both Parliament and civil society which is helping to improve Government accountability.

UN Disaster Relief Operations

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps his Department plans to take to strengthen the capacity of the UN system for (a) leading and (b) co-ordinating multilateral disaster relief operations. [71590]

Mr. Thomas: In December 2004, my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for International Development, proposed a package of six key reforms to improve the effectiveness of emergency response, with a particular focus on the UN as the global lead. The six reforms are:

Establishment of a new global humanitarian fund;

Strengthen the UN Humanitarian Co-ordinator system;

Common donor funding for the Humanitarian Co-ordinator to deploy on the most urgent unmet needs;

Development of global benchmarks to measure humanitarian response performance;

Increased donor focus on "forgotten", or under-funded, emergencies;

Increased donor funding for Disaster Risk Reduction, and the UN International Strategy for Disaster Reduction.

The United Nations is taking forward these reforms with the support and participation of the wider donor community, including DFID, NGOs and the Red Cross movement. In December 2005, a new UN Central Emergency Response Fund (CERF) was approved by the UN General Assembly. It was launched on 9 March 2006 with $254 million from 38 donors, including $70 million from DFID. Under the direction of the UN's Emergency Relief Co-ordinator, the CERF is now enabling UN humanitarian agencies to respond rapidly to sudden disasters, such as earthquakes; time-critical responses in slow-onset disasters, such as drought; and essential life-saving actions in ongoing but under-funded crises such as in the Democratic Republic of Congo and Chad.

A number of proposals for strengthening the UN Humanitarian Co-ordinator system are being taken forward, including developing a pool of suitable candidates and associated training. Currently there are 21 trained humanitarian co-ordinators, including some from NGO or Red Cross backgrounds. Alongside this, DFID is leading seven other donors in piloting pooled country-level funding, to be used as directed by the resident humanitarian co-ordinator, in Sudan and the Democratic Republic of Congo during 2006. DFID is also providing support to the World Health Organisation (WHO) and the UN Children's Fund (UNICEF) in developing performance benchmarks for mortality, nutrition, and health. DFID has supported progress over the last 12 months in reforming the UN International Strategy for Disaster Reduction and in March this year we launched our new Disaster Risk Reduction Strategy.

In September 2005, the UN Inter-Agency Standing Committee, which deals with humanitarian issues, established a new 'cluster' system to deliver more accountable and predictable humanitarian responses. Named agencies have responsibility for co-ordinating responses in key sectors such as water and sanitation (UNICEF), protection (the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR), Logistics (the World Food Programme (WFP), and Health (the WHO), and developing networks or clusters of other agencies and NGOs to work together to improve capacity, performance, and effectiveness. DFID is currently considering, along with other donors, how best to support this initiative.

In January 2006, my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for International Development, called for further reform of the international humanitarian system by improving the quality and focus of UN Flash Appeals. This involves developing agreements for the use of military assets; and for better accountability in humanitarian funding, performance, and outcomes for beneficiary communities. We are working along with other donors, the UN, and other humanitarian organisations to develop these initiatives.

Unemployment (West Bank)

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what percentage of Palestinians on the west bank he estimates were (a) unemployed and (b) living below the poverty line in each year since 1997. [71948]

Hilary Benn: According to the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics the unemployment and poverty rates in the occupied Palestinian territories since 1997 were as follows:

	Unemployment rate (ILO definition)	Percentage Poverty rate (national poverty line)
1997	20.3	[1]—
1998	14.4	23.3
1999	11.8	[1]—
2000	14.1	[1]—
2001	25.5	33.6
2002	31.3	[1]—
2003	25.6	[1]—
2004	26.8	30.6
2005	23.5	[1]—

[1] No annual figures available.

World Food Programme (North Korea)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on the UK's contribution to plans for food aid in North Korea to be carried out by the World Food Programme; and if he will make an assessment of malnutrition in that country. [71902]

Mr. Thomas: In 2005, DFID committed over £1.2 million of humanitarian assistance to the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK). £1 million was channelled through UNICEF for water, sanitation and health care, and a further £200,000 through the International Federation of the Red Cross for disaster risk deduction.

In late 2005, the DPRK said that it would no longer accept international humanitarian assistance. Furthermore, it has increased the already significant restrictions it places on the humanitarian community, with the consequence that DFID can no longer feel confident that programmes of assistance are appropriate and are reaching those who need it most. All World Food Programme (WFP) operations are funded solely from voluntary contributions and the UK is not contributing to the one in the DPRK.

The UK has no plans to conduct a survey of malnutrition in the DPRK. Obtaining nutritional information is hampered by the constraints placed on the operations of international humanitarian agencies. The last international survey was carried out in 2004.

TRANSPORT

Aircraft Routes

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the (a) current and (b) proposed aircraft corridors are across (i) West Somerset and (ii) Sedgmoor district council areas. [70245]

Gillian Merron: On 16 March 2006 there were widespread changes to the civil aeronautical route structure over the West of England and Wales.

Prior to 16 March 2006 the air route in the vicinity of West Somerset and Sedgmoor was Airway N864 with an axis 190°/010°, a lateral extent of 10 nautical miles and with the centreline approximately over Blue Anchor Bay. The vertical limits of the route extend from FL55 (5,500 feet above mean sea level) to the north of the coastline and FL65 (6,500 feet amsl) over land to an upper limit of FL245 (24,500 feet amsl). The volume of airspace within the airway is defined as controlled airspace. Above FL245 is the Upper Airspace Control Area, which covers the whole of the United Kingdom. Within the Upper Airspace Control Area above West Somerset and Sedgmoor existed the routes UN864, UN862, UM140, UM17 and UW501.

The changes on 16 March did not affect N864, UN864, UM140, UM17 and UW501. However, a new route called N90 was introduced to the east of N864 for use between Friday evenings and Monday mornings. The lateral extent of the new controlled airspace is 12 nautical miles from the eastern boundary of N864 and with a lower limit of FL105 (10,500 feet amsl). In the Upper Control Area UN90 was introduced above N90 and UN862 was moved two nautical miles to the east to be above N862. A new Upper Air Route called UN22 was introduced parallel to and 12 nautical miles west of UN864.

Additionally, there are proposed changes to controlled airspace associated with Bristol and Cardiff airports, which are intended to introduce new controlled airspace over part of West Somerset and Sedgmoor. It should be noted that aircraft operations associated with these airports occur today and the proposed new controlled airspace is designed to provide additional protection to these flights. The proposals have been the subject of public consultation, which included Members of Parliament, local authorities, representatives of areas of natural beauty and other interested parties within the areas affected. These changes are currently subject to regulatory consideration by the CAA.

Mr. Newmark: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the approach or departure routes for aircraft using Stansted airport have changed since January 2002. [70771]

Gillian Merron: The noise preferential departure routes from Stansted have not changed; nor have there been any changes to the arrangements for aircraft approaching Stansted airport from the ABBOT and LOREL holding stacks towards the final approach tracks. Two new Standard Arrival Routes (STARs)—ABBOT 1B and ABBOT 1C—for use by some aircraft routeing from the North sea towards the ABBOT stack, were introduced as part of the Clacton airspace change, which came into effect on 18 March 2004.

Aircraft Safety

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the head of the Pilot Confidential Reporting System is required to declare relevant interests. [70773]

Gillian Merron: The Confidential Human Factors Incident Reporting Programme provides a confidential reporting process for aviation personnel, including pilots. It is an independent charitable trust sponsored by the Civil Aviation Authority.

The trust operates in accordance with the standards and recommended practices of the Charity Commission. All the trustees and employees are required, under Charity Commission rules, to declare relevant interests.

Airlines

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many airlines have been registered in the UK in each year since 2001. [70992]

Gillian Merron: The UK Civil Aviation Authority, which is the regulator for UK airlines, issued operating licences to the following number of air operators during the period in question:

	Number
2001	6
2002	16
2003	15
2004	20
2005	9
2006 (to 11 May)	3

British Transport Police

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) when he last met the Secretary of State for Wales to discuss the review of the British Transport police; what the level of involvement of the Wales Office has been in the review; and if he will make a statement; [72969]

(2) what estimate he has made of the possible costs that may fall on Welsh police forces in the event that the British Transport police is merged with or linked to the Metropolitan police or other home county forces; and if he will make a statement; [72973]

(3) what estimate he has made of the costs to (a) Welsh police forces, (b) the National Assembly for Wales and (c) Welsh local authorities in the event that the review of the British Transport police results in the policing service being operated by the industry itself. [72974]

Derek Twigg: The review of the British Transport police is ongoing and its conclusions will be reported in due course. During the course of the review, the review team have had discussions with the Welsh Assembly on a number of issues.

When my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced the review he confirmed that the Government remain committed to the principle that the costs of policing the railway should remain largely funded by the industry itself.

Building Research Establishment

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the Building Research Establishment receives funding from (a) Boeing, (b) British Aerospace and (c) Airbus. [70774]

Gillian Merron: The Building Research Establishment (BRE) is a private commercial consultancy and research organisation. It receives its income from a variety of clients, which include private companies, Government Departments, national Governments, independent public organisations, and the European Commission. BRE receives no general funding from any commercial organisation.

For reasons of client confidentiality, BRE does not disclose specific client identity.

Bus Services

Graham Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what he estimates the total public spending will be (a) per head of the population and (b) per passenger on bus services (i) including and (ii) excluding spending on concessionary travel in (A) London, (B) each passenger transport executive area and (C) the rest of England in (1) 2006-07 and (2) each of the next five years. [68692]

Gillian Merron: Expenditure on bus services and concessionary travel is largely met by local authorities from their revenue support grant. Information on the budget estimates for spending by local transport authorities outside London in 2006-07 on these items is due to be published in June. Estimates by local authority area of spend on bus support and concessionary fares in future years have not yet been made.

Levels of expenditure on bus support and concessionary travel within London are controlled directly by the Mayor of London. Transport for London's plans include, provision for the extension of free travel on London buses to cover 16 to 17-year-olds who are in full-time education from September 2006.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many bus services have been (a) withdrawn and (b) added to service in Tamworth constituency in each financial year since 1 April 1998. [71228]

Gillian Merron: The data kept by the Vehicle and Operator Services Agency on registered bus services do not differentiate between Tamworth and the rest of the Wales and West Midlands Traffic Area. For tables showing the number of bus services added and withdrawn in each traffic area since 1 April 1998, I refer the hon. Member to the answer of 16 February 2006, Official Report, column 2406W.

Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to introduce a statutory requirement for bus companies to publish reliability statistics. [71466]

Gillian Merron: There are no plans at present. The Department is keen that bus operators and local authorities work together to find practical ways of improving the punctuality and reliability of bus services, using the Punctuality Improvement Partnership model developed by the Bus Partnership Forum.

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many bus services have been (a) withdrawn and (b) added to service in (i) England and (ii) Kingston upon Hull in each financial year since 1 April 1998. [69760]

Gillian Merron: The data kept by the Vehicle and Operator Services Agency on registered bus services does not differentiate between Kingston upon Hull and the rest of the North Eastern Traffic Area. For tables showing the number of bus services added and withdrawn in each traffic area since 1 April 1998, I refer the hon. Member to the answer of 16 February 2006, Official Report, column 2406W.

Car Ownership

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will estimate the percentage of households owning (a) one, (b) two, (c) three and (d) four or more cars in each region of the United Kingdom in (i) 2003, (ii) 2004, (iii) 2005 and (iv) to date in 2006. [72029]

Dr. Ladyman: Data on household car availability in 2003 and 2004 by region in the United Kingdom are given in the following table. Data for 2005 and 2006 are not available.

Figures for Great Britain are based on combined data from the National Travel Survey, the Family Expenditure Survey and the General Household Survey. Data for Northern Ireland are based on the Travel Survey for Northern Ireland.

Household car ownership by Government Office Region and country: 2003 and 2004

Concessionary Fares

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what estimate he has made of the funding required to fund free off-peak travel for (a) older and (b) disabled persons on buses in Kingston upon Hull, North; [69761]

(2) how much funding the Government are providing to Kingston upon Hull council to provide free bus travel for (a) older and (b) disabled persons. [69762]

Gillian Merron: The Government are providing an extra £350 million for 2006-07 through the formula grant system. This will be sufficient in aggregate to fund the additional cost to local authorities. This funding is unhypothecated; therefore the funding for concessionary fares is not separately identified.

Concorde

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions his Department has had with British Airways on the cost of reinstating Concorde. [72449]

Gillian Merron: None. Issues concerning Concorde remain a matter for British Airways and Airbus.

Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the (a) public and (b) private sector organisations to which the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency has (i) sold and (ii) provided drivers' names and addresses in the last two years; and what the reason for the data sharing or data transfer was in each case. [70597]

Dr. Ladyman: Access to the driver database is governed by the Data Protection Act 1998 and in general, details of a record can be released only to the data subject themselves or to a third party with the data subject's consent.

DVLA has an obligation to release information from the vehicle record to those who demonstrate a legitimate right to receive it. Various other Government and law enforcement bodies have powers under different legislation to request information from DVLA for prescribed purposes. DVLA does not record the frequency of requests from each enquirer. Table 1, which has been placed in the House Libraries, lists those who are likely to have received information in the last two years and for what purpose, under various legislative powers. All are provided with the information in accordance with the relevant Act, and no fee is levied.

Table 2 outlines organisations that have received information under Regulation 27(1)(e) of the Road Vehicles (Registration and Licensing) Regulations 2002. Table 3 lists the reasons for the request. Both of these tables have also been placed in the House Libraries.

Any private organisation or individual listed will have been charged a fee of £2.50 per inquiry made. No fee is levied on public bodies.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the new arrangements for driving licence fees will come into force. [71996]

Dr. Ladyman: Proposals for restructuring DVLA's fees are currently out for public consultation. The consultation period closes on 21 July 2006. Until we have analysed the responses to the consultation and agreed a way forward we cannot give a firm date for any changes there may be to driving licence fees.

Emergency Services

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how blue light driver training will be (a) delivered and (b) certified for members of the medical profession who provide volunteer assistance to the emergency services; and if he will make a statement. [71884]

Dr. Ladyman: Subject to parliamentary approval the Road Safety Bill will provide powers for us to quality assure the content and delivery of blue light training. The Driving Standards Agency will consult with stakeholders before any decisions are made as to how such training will be delivered or certified.

However, in the absence of a regulatory regime, DSA developed an agreed set of minimum core competencies for drivers of emergency vehicles. These were published in 2001 as the "Blue Light Users Working Party Expectations Document". DSA had worked together with the ambulance and fire services, police and the Ministry of Defence to develop this document. It was agreed that each service should tailor any training based on these competencies to the needs of their own drivers and vehicles. The expectation document is available on the DSA website:

www.dsa.gov.uk

Finsbury Park Station

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans his Department has to transfer the management of Finsbury Park station to Transport for London. [72977]

Derek Twigg: The Department for Transport has no plans to transfer the management of Finsbury Park station at present.

Highways Act

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the operation of section 161 of the Highways Act 1980; what recent representations he has received about the operation of this (a) section and (b) Act; what amendments have been made to the Act; and what plans he has to amend this Act. [72181]

Dr. Ladyman: Section 161 of the Highways Act 1980 deals with penalties for causing certain kinds of danger or annoyance to users of the highway. If a person without lawful authority or excuse deposits anything whatsoever on a highway in consequence of which a user of the highway is injured or endangered, that person is guilty of an offence and liable to a fine.

In the last 12 months the Department has dealt with two representations from members of the public concerning this section.

The Highways Act 1980 contains more than 300 sections and 25 schedules. A large number of amendments have been made to the Highways Act in the last 26 years and the cost of collating a list would be disproportionate. As there is no central record of representations received by the Department that would enable officials to identify those about the operation of the whole Act, it would also incur disproportionate cost to do so.

However, section 161 subsections (1), (3) and (4) of the Highways Act 1980 were amended by sections 38 and 46 of the Criminal Justice Act 1982. These amendments raised the level of the fines. Section 161 subsection (2) was substituted by the Highways (Amendment) Act 1986 and relates to creating criminal offences in relation to lighting fires or discharging firearms or fireworks in the vicinity of the highway.

We have no plans to amend the Highways Act 1980.

Level Crossings

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many incidents have been recorded at level crossings in each year since 1997; and how many of these resulted in (a) death and (b) injury. [69601]

Derek Twigg: The information requested is in the following table.

Incidents, death and injuries[1] at level crossings on Britain's level crossings, 1997 to 2004[2]

	(a) Incidents	(b) Deaths	(c) Injuries
1996-97	33	3	35
1997-98	34	14	31
1998-99	37	11	34
1999-2000	32	13	28

2004[3]	26	11	56

[1] These figures do not include suicides.
[2] Figures taken from HMRI's annual reports on railway safety.
[3] This is a nine-month report period as part of the transition to a European requirement that rail accident statistics be published on a calendar year basis.

Ministerial Travel

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what the total cost was of overnight accommodation for Ministers of State in his Department on foreign visits in each of the last three years; [69079]

(2) on how many occasions Ministers of State in his Department stayed overnight in (a) five-star, (b) four-star and (c) three-star hotels on foreign visits in each of the last three years. [69080]

Dr. Ladyman: The total costs of accommodation outside the United Kingdom for all four Ministers in the Department for Transport undertaking official business, including the costs of any accompanying Private Secretaries, for each of the last three financial years are:

2003-04: £6,907

2004-05: £2,423

2005-06: £9,094.

Information about the category of any hotels at which Ministers have stayed is not held centrally.

Ministerial travel is conducted in accordance with the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers. When travelling on official business Ministers are expected to make efficient and cost-effective travel arrangements.

Since 1999 the Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year, this information includes accommodation costs. Copies are available in the Library.

MOT Fee

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether it is his policy that the maximum MOT fee will remain constant during the lifetime of this Parliament. [71821]

Dr. Ladyman: No. We intend to continue current policy which is to review MOT fees annually to take account of changes in cost such as inflation and any changes in the time it takes to conduct an average MOT test.

Motorways

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many (a) vehicles and (b) heavy goods vehicles used the M6 toll motorway in each of the last 24 months; [72918]

(2) how many (a) vehicles and (b) heavy goods vehicles travelled on the M6 toll motorway on average each day in the last period for which figures are available. [72919]

Dr. Ladyman: The available information is contained in the following table. The figures have been taken from information provided on the website of Midlands Expressway Ltd., the operators of the toll road.

The company does not provide separate figures for heavy goods vehicles. The table gives average traffic figures for each month, broken down for workdays and weekends/public holidays, covering the period from the opening of the M6 Toll in December 2003 to April 2006.

Month	Workdays	Weekends/public holidays	All days

April 2006	51,811	36,954	45,868

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the opening dates of each junction of (a) the M25 and (b) the M1. [72030]

Dr. Ladyman: Opening dates of each junction on the M1 and M25 can be found at www.iht.org/motorway/openings.htm

Pass Plus Certificates

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many Pass Plus certificates have been (a) applied for and (b) issued by the Driving Standards Agency in each of the last eight weeks. [71563]

Dr. Ladyman: During the eight weeks since 20 March 2006, the Driving Standards Agency issued the following number of Pass Plus certificates:

Week commencing:	Number
20 March 2006	2,399
27 March 2006	32
3 April 2006	1,224
10 April 2006	1,405
17 April 2006	1,719
24 April 2006	2,950
1 May 2006	1,973
8 May 2006	2,603

The agency does not retain data on the number of applications received for Pass Plus certificates but receives on average 300 per day.

Rail Services

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to reduce cancellations by train operating companies (TOCs); and if he will consider rescinding franchises from those TOCs with a poor record of punctuality. [71408]

Derek Twigg: The number of trains cancelled on the network has decreased in each year since 2000-01, and the Department continues to discuss with the rail industry how to maintain this improvement.

Franchise agreements contain minimum performance requirements, and in the case of sustained poor performance below these levels, train operating companies can incur penalties eventually leading to termination of an agreement.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will reopen the main line to Heathfield from Exeter City Basin rejoining the main line at Newton Abbott or a similar routing to provide an alternative route bypassing Dawlish Warren; and what assessment he has made of the effect of rising water levels on the incidence of line closure in winter months of the main line to Penzance. [72326]

Derek Twigg: The Government have no plans to re-open any lines as an alternative route bypassing Dawlish Warren.

Network Rail advises me that it continues to take forward a phased programme of major works to improve the safety and all year round operational integrity of the railway in the Dawlish area. Network Rail will work with Devon county council to manage the sea defences in the long term as changes occur to sea levels.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what role the Government are playing in the setting of the train timetable from Paddington to the West Country being discussed with Network Rail; and what part the Government will play in future alterations to the timetable. [72328]

Derek Twigg: The detailed construction of the timetable from Paddington to the West Country is a matter for First Great Western (FGW) working within the framework provided by the Department for Transport's (DfT) specifications. In doing so, FGW is taking into account comments received from its timetable consultation exercise, and is working with Network Rail in line with the standard rail industry timetabling processes. The DfT would play the same role in relation to any future changes which might happen to the timetable.

Road Building Costs

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the average cost per mile was of (a) building and (b) maintaining (i) three lane motorways, (ii) dual carriageways and (iii) single lane roads in each of the last 10 years. [71561]

Dr. Ladyman: I refer the hon. Member to my answer to the hon. Member for Orkney and Shetland (Mr. Carmichael) of 4 May 2006, Official Report, column 1737W, which gave the average costs per mile of building motorways and dual carriageways. Additionally single lane roads cost the Highways Agency £10 million per mile, based on schemes completed in each of the last five years. Insufficient projects have been opened to traffic in each year to provide averages for the last 10 years.

I also refer the hon. Member to my answer to him on 28 February 2006, Official Report, column 675W, which set out the costs to the Highways Agency of maintaining the network. Costs broken down by road type are not available.

The costs of building and maintaining various types of non-trunk roads are held by the local highway authorities responsible for them. This information is not collated centrally.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the average difference between road building tender costs and road building outturn costs has been in each of the last 10 years. [71566]

Dr. Ladyman: The following table records the average percentage difference, in each of the last 10 years, between works tender cost and works forecast outturn for completed publicly funded trunk road and motorway improvement projects, costing more than £5 million, for which the Highways Agency is responsible.

Average percentage variance between works tender cost and works forecast outturn for completed major projects

	Percentage
1996-97	48
1997-98	38
1998-99	28
1999-2000	43
2000-01	30
2001-02	10
2002-03	18
2003-04	12
2004-05	9
2005-06	6

The Highways Agency does not hold the information to enable a similar comparison to be made for privately funded design, build, finance and operate projects.

Non-trunk roads projects are the responsibility of the relevant highways authority and the information requested is not collated centrally in relation to those schemes.

Road Charging

Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to announce which local authorities have been chosen to run the planned road-charging pilot schemes; and if he will make a statement. [71039]

Dr. Ladyman: The Transport Innovation Fund (TIF) has been established, in part, to support packages of measures to address congestion, including road pricing schemes. Funding is available from 2008-09. Decisions on which schemes will receive funding from TIF can be made only once robust and workable proposals, consisting of a full scheme business case, have been submitted to the Department for Transport (DfT) by local areas. Guidance on the operation of the TIF was published in January 2006 (a copy is available in the Library of the House).

The funding decisions will be conditional on any necessary powers or consents being obtained. Any non-Greater London Authority road pricing scheme in England cannot start until the local authority concerned has made a scheme order containing the details of their scheme and submitted it to the Secretary of State and it has been confirmed, as set out in Part 3 of the Transport Act 2000. The Secretary of State cannot pre-judge any applications that might be made to him in the future.

Road Fuel

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what steps he has (a) taken and (b) plans to take (i) to make ethanol cheaper than petrol and (ii) to encourage motorists to convert their car to use ethanol; and if he will make a statement; [71958]

(2) if he will introduce an interest-free loan scheme to allow motorists to convert their car to use ethanol; and if he will make a statement. [71959]

Dr. Ladyman: The Government already support the use of bioethanol as a transport fuel by means of a 20 pence per litre fuel duty incentive. Since this was introduced in January 2005, sales of bioethanol in the UK have increased from zero to a monthly average of some 7 million litres. We have also announced that we will introduce a Renewable Transport Fuel Obligation in 2008, which will require all transport fuel suppliers to ensure that biofuels account for a certain percentage of their total fuel sales. In 2010, the level of the obligation will reach 5 per cent., which should mean that annual sales of bioethanol reach over a billion litres a year.

European Union fuel quality standards currently allow 5 per cent. ethanol to be blended into petrol, and all petrol vehicles are already capable of running on these blends. Above that level, a number of technical modifications are required to vehicles and to refuelling points. We introduced a new grant programme in 2005 to support the installation of alternative refuelling infrastructure, and through this we are supporting the installation of a small number of high-level ethanol pumps. In addition, the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced in the March 2006 Budget that cars manufactured to run on high-level ethanol blends will qualify for the reduced rate of Vehicle Excise Duty for alternatively fuelled cars. Beyond that, the Government have no current plans for other incentives.

Road Fund Licence

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many applications for road fund licences were received (a) in total and (b) by means of the internet on each working day in the two months before and including 22 March in (i) 2006, (ii) 2005 and (iii) 2004. [72592]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested is as follows.

Vehicle relicensing	Total	Electronic
January, February and March 2004	10,543,187	453
January, February and March 2005	10,216,572	112,029
January, February and March 2006	10,691,531	626,817

Road Funding (Somerset)

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much central Government funding has been allocated to Somerset county council for road improvement in each of the last five years. [70166]

Gillian Merron: The Department has allocated Somerset county council £92 million of central Government funding in the last five years, through its Local Transport Plan for highways capital maintenance and transport improvement schemes (each costing less than £5 million). It is up to Somerset county council to determine exactly how it spends this money. These figures are broken down in the following table.

Somerset county council has also received £12 million of funding for the North West Taunton Package. The North West Taunton Package consists of a new road bridge crossing the railway line as well as a 600 space park and ride site. It also includes bus priority and traffic calming measures.

Somerset county council has also received Government funding support for its day-to-day roads activities through revenue support grant. Revenue support grant provides support for a range of local services and does not include a specific allocation for roads.

£ million

Nature of capital funding	2002-03	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06	2006-07
Highways Maintenance	12.306	10.763	12.766	15.958	15.958
Integrated Transport Block	4.881	5.001	5.841	4.058	4.294
Total	17.187	15.764	18.607	20.016	20.252

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much central funding has been allocated to road signage in Somerset in each of the last five years. [70167]

Gillian Merron: The Department has allocated Somerset county council £92 million of central Government funding in the last five years, through its Local Transport Plan for highways capital maintenance and transport improvement schemes (each costing less than £5 million). Details are contained in my answer to question No: 70166. It is up to Somerset county council to determine exactly how it spends this money, but this funding support can be used for capital works on signs.

Somerset county council has also received Government funding support for its day-to-day roads activities (including related to signs) through revenue support grant. Revenue support grant provides support for a range of local services and does not include a specific allocation for roads.

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much funding Kingston upon Hull council received from his Department (a) in total, (b) per mile of road and (c) per head of population in each year since 1997-98. [69759]

Gillian Merron: The following table shows the total funding allocated to the Kingston upon Hull city council in the local transport capital settlements between 1997-98 and 2005-06 (inclusive) in terms of totals, per mile of road, and per head of population.

Kingston upon Hull council

£000

	Total funding	Funds (£000) per mile[1]	Funds (£ per head)[1]
1997-98	3,711	8	14.9
1998-99	3,012	6.5	12.1
1999-2000	3,778	8.2	15.2

2003-04	7,478	16.3	30
2004-05	8,732	19	35.1
2005-06	7,865	17.2	31.6

[1] The population and road mileage for the year 2004 has been used in the calculations, the road mileage being 458 miles and the population 248,500.

Road Safety

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many accidents have been attributed to vehicles skidding in each year since 1997. [71829]

Dr. Ladyman: The number of personal injury road accidents in Great Britain reported to the police involving one or more vehicles skidding in the years 1997 to 2004 (the latest year for which figures are available) is given in the following table.

The number of accidents involving a vehicle skidding: Great Britain, 1997-2004

	Number
1997	56,820
1998	55,274
1999	54,065
2000	53,216
2001	54,026
2002	52,213
2003	49,279
2004	48,069

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many head-on collisions have led to (a) fatalities and (b) serious injury in each year since 1997. [71830]

Dr. Ladyman: The number of personal injury road accidents reported to the police involving two vehicles with frontal impacts, leading to (a) fatalities and (b) serious injuries, is shown in the following table.

Number of road accidents leading to fatalities and serious injuries involving two vehicles with frontal impacts[1]: Great Britain, 1997-2004

	Fatal accidents[2]	Serious accidents[2]
1997	486	5,229
1998	480	4,914
1999	473	4,921
2000	478	4,582
2001	466	4,470
2002	478	4,220
2003	461	4,111
2004	433	3,765

[1] May include a minority of road accidents where both vehicles had frontal impacts but not necessarily with the other vehicle.
[2] The severity of the most seriously injured casualty in the accident.

Road accidents involving more than two vehicles have been excluded because head-on collisions cannot be accurately identified from the information held in these cases.

Roads (Suffolk)

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the total mileage travelled on roads in Suffolk by (a) all vehicles and (b) cars in each of the past 10 years. [72531]

Dr. Ladyman: The following table gives the information requested for each year from 1995 to 2004 (the latest year for which estimates are available):

Estimated distance travelled in Suffolk

(million vehicle miles)

	All motor vehicles	Cars
1995	3,182	2,529
1996	3,262	2,587
1997	3,369	2,652
1998	3,403	2,656
1999	3,472	2,712
2000	3,476	2,706
2001	3,531	2,748
2002	3,610	2,806
2003	3,657	2,827
2004	3,709	2,861

Royal Flight

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the Government's policy is on the use of fixed wing aircraft BAe146 by members of the Royal Family for private purposes. [72025]

Gillian Merron [holding answer 18 May 2006]: The BAe146 and HS125 aircraft of 32 Squadron may be used by senior members of the Royal Family (HM the Queen, HRH the Duke of Edinburgh and HRH the Prince of Wales) for private journeys with the cost of the journey reimbursed at a commercial rate.

Safety at Sea

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures he has taken since 1997 to improve safety at sea within United Kingdom territorial waters; and if he will make a statement. [72031]

Dr. Ladyman: The Government take maritime safety seriously. Since merchant shipping is very largely an international activity, the UK plays a leading role in the International Maritime Organization (IMO) and in the EU on a range of safety measures aimed at improving the safety of ships. From 1997 those measures have included:

Date	Action taken
1997	Introduction of the International and Domestic Safety Management Codes.
1999	Introduction of controls on the working hours of seafarers.
2000	UK initiated action at IMO to increase the compensation limit for a shipping accident by 50 per cent. to £177 million.
2000	UK supported EU maritime measures on improved port state control and monitoring of classification societies.
2000	UK supported the international Quality Shipping Campaign which led to the introduction of the EQUASIS on-line quality shipping database providing safety-related information on the world's merchant fleet.
2001	Number of Emergency Towing Vessels (ETVs) in UK increased to four and on station all year round.
2001	UK helped secure international agreement to accelerate the phase out of single hull oil tankers.
2003	UK helped secure international agreement on a further acceleration in the phasing out of single hull oil tankers.
2003	UK supported EU legislation on improved stability requirements for Ro-Ro ferries, harmonised seafarer training, and introduction of a vessel traffic monitoring and information system.
2005	UK promoted the introduction of the IMO Member State Audit Scheme to assist IMO Member States' implementation and enforcement of IMO requirements.
2005	UK Presidency began work on new directives on vessel traffic monitoring and port state control (work continues under the Austrian Presidency).

Most merchant shipping in United Kingdom territorial waters (in transit or calling at UK ports) is engaged on international trades and will be subject to international safety regulation. Ships which are engaged on domestic voyages only are subject to the international regulations where appropriate or to a domestic equivalent reflecting the nature of voyages and the UK sea areas in which the ships operate. An example of the latter is the domestic version of the International Safety Management Code.

Thameslink 2000

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to his answer of 26 January 2006, Official Report, columns 2278-9W, on Thameslink 2000, whether the inspector has presented his report to him; and whether the TravelWatch report has been completed. [72454]

Dr. Ladyman: We received the inspector's report on the re-opened Thameslink 2000 inquiry on 21 February 2006 and the London TravelWatch report on the related rail closures on 20 April 2006. Both of these reports are currently being considered by the Department.

Transport Expenditure

Graham Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the total projected public expenditure per head of population for transport is for (a) London, (b) each of the English passenger transport executive areas and (c) each of the English regions for (i) 2006-07 and (ii) each of the following five years. [69163]

Gillian Merron: Information on the Department's identifiable expenditure by region per head, planned for 2006-07 and 2007-08, was published in the Department's Annual Report 2005 (Cm 6527), table A8. No other regional breakdown of total public expenditure for transport in future years has been made.

Graham Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the projected central Government expenditure is per head of population for local public transport for (a) London, (b) each of the English passenger transport executive areas and (c) each of the English regions in (i) 2006-07 and (ii) each of the following five years. [69169]

Gillian Merron: Table 9 of the Department's Annual Report 2005 (Cm 6527) includes the Department's identifiable expenditure on local public transport by region for 2003-04. No comprehensive projections of central Government expenditure for local public transport in future years have been made, as the allocation of funding to different functions depends on decisions made by individual authorities.

Graham Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what the public expenditure per head of population was for local public transport for (a) London, (b) each of the English passenger transport executive areas and (c) each English region in each of the last 10 years; and what the basis is for his calculations; [69171]

(2) what the public spend per head of population for local transport overall was for (a) London, (b) each of the passenger transport executive areas in England and

(c) each English region for each of the last 10 years; and on what basis this was calculated. [69172]

Gillian Merron [holding answer 8 May 2006]: The information requested on public expenditure for local transport is not collected centrally in the form requested.

Trunk Roads (Litter)

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to improve litter collection on trunk roads in Northumberland under the control of the Highways Agency; and if he will make a statement. [72530]

Dr. Ladyman: The Highways Agency is responsible only for the A1(T), A19(T) and A69(T) in Northumberland.

Under the provisions of the Environmental Protection Act 1990: Code of Practice on Litter and Refuse, the responsibility for clearing litter on the A1(T) and A19(T) in Northumberland lies with local authorities. In the case of the A1(T) and A19(T), the Highways Agency works with local authorities in Northumberland and is currently negotiating agreements to undertake litter picking on their behalf. In addition, it is also the Highways Agency's policy to collect litter during routine grass cutting operations and let local authorities know when traffic management is in place so that they can make use of this for clearing litter. Routine grass cutting operations in Northumberland are scheduled to begin in June this year.

The A69 is a Design Build Finance & Operate (DBFO) route and responsibility for the removal of litter rests with the DBFO Company Roadlink (A69) Ltd. under the terms of its contract.

Unfilled Rail Posts

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action he is taking to reduce the number of unfilled rail posts in his Department; how many such posts are vacant; and whether he is considering outsourcing to the private sector. [71426]

Gillian Merron [holding answer 17 May 2006]: The Department for Transport's Rail Directorate currently has 11 vacant posts.

Five of these posts are in the process of being advertised internally. One post is being advertised externally following an unsuccessful internal recruitment exercise. Recruitment into the remaining five posts is on hold.

There are currently no plans to outsource the work currently undertaken by the Rail Group to the private sector.

Uninsured Motorists

Mrs. Riordan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what his Department's estimate is of the number of uninsured motorists driving on public roads in each of the last five years; and what percentage of all drivers this represented in each year. [72312]

Dr. Ladyman: Our latest estimate is based on a comparison of the vehicle register, maintained by the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA), and the motor insurance database. It is that there are about 2 million vehicles (about 6 per cent. of the UK vehicle fleet) being driven by uninsured drivers. There are no similar comparisons for earlier years.

Vehicle Excise Duty

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many people in Greater London were fined for non-payment of vehicle excise duty in (a) 1997-98 and (b) 2004-05. [72254]

Dr. Ladyman: Vehicle excise duty (VED) prosecution figures are not held prior to the 1999-2000 financial year.

During the period April 2004 to the end of March 2005, a total of 39,186 cases were convicted in court for vehicle excise duty evasion by DVLA London offices. A further 25,120 people settled out of court.

A VED offence is prosecuted in the area in which it is detected wherever the driver is resident. A breakdown of cases by reference to the driver's residence could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Agricultural Support

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what funding the Department has allocated to the dairy industry to promote dairy products in each of the last five years. [70248]

Barry Gardiner: Grants have been available during each of the last five years through the Agriculture Development Scheme for the promotion of greater efficiency throughout the food chain, the Processing and Marketing Grant for assistance with processing and marketing of agricultural products, and through the Rural Enterprise Scheme for the marketing of quality agricultural products and for small-scale on-farm processing projects. A number of dairy processors and dairy marketing organisations have benefited from funding from each of these schemes.

I will write to the hon. Member shortly with the details of funding for the dairy industry.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much the Department has allocated to supporting organic farming in the last five years; and how much of this was to assist transition of farms to organic farming. [70249]

Mr. Bradshaw: The amount allocated over the last five years to support organic farming under the Organic Farming Scheme (OFS) and its predecessor, the Organic Aid Scheme (OAS), including support for conversion was £49.8 million.

The OFS closed to new applications at the end of March 2005. It was replaced by Organic Entry Level Stewardship (OELS). Under OELS, the cash spend to date is just over £753,000. Some £9.8 million has also been committed over the next three years to fund the cost of conversion under this new scheme.

Over the last five years DEFRA has also provided funding for the Organic Conversion Information Service (OCIS), a free advice service for farmers interested in converting to organic farming, at a cost of £1.3 million.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much financial support the Soil Association received from the Department in each of the last five years. [70251]

Mr. Bradshaw: For each of the financial years 2001/2002 until 2005/2006 the following grant payments were made to the Soil Association and its associated certification companies, Soil Association Certification Limited and ASCISCO.

(a) Payments made by Defra to Soil Association Certification Limited and ASCISCO as part of the partnership agreement with organic certification bodies in connection with the implementation of the EU Organic inspection regime

	Amount (£)
2001-02	261,827.50
2002-03	278,964.00
2003-04	283,820.25
2004-05	296,662.80
2005-06	284,274.40

(b) Grant payments to the Soil Association under the Rural Enterprise Scheme (RES) and Vocational Training Scheme (VTS) and the England Objective 1 programme

	Amount (£)
2001-02	146,262.88
2002-03	274,689.60
2003-04	365,917.08
2004-05	341,676.62
2005-06	588,648.98

Air Passenger Duty

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment has been made of the environmental impact of the current structure of air passenger duty. [71327]

John Healey: I have been asked to reply.

No formal assessment of the environmental impact of its current structure has been made, but the Government will continue to explore options for developing economic instruments, including air passenger duty, through which improved environmental performance in the aviation sector can be incentivised.

Angling

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the cost was of the Environment Agency's survey of Public Attitudes to Angling 2005; and what response has been made to its findings. [71205]

Barry Gardiner: The Environment Agency's Public Attitudes to Angling 2005 survey cost £14,000.

In response to the findings the agency has produced local and regional angling guides and made them widely available. They are working with angling governing bodies to develop more angling coaches, and supporting initiatives including National Fishing Week. The agency will also continue to work with partners to develop further opportunities for angling participation.

Asda

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 24 April 2006, Official Report, column 813W, on Asda, if he will list the participants at the meetings that took place between his Department and representatives of Asda, including Asda's parent company Wal-Mart, on (a) 22 July 2005, (b) 11 November 2005, (c) 8 December 2005, (d) 8 February 2006 and (e) 3 March 2006. [70867]

Barry Gardiner: Data privacy legislation makes it inappropriate to list the participants in those meetings.

Avian Influenza

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the compatibility of the use of ventilation shutdown as a method of killing birds for the purpose of disease control with Annexe E and Article 3 of Council Directive 93/119/EEC on the protection of animals at the time of slaughter or killing; and if he will make a statement. [71749]

Mr. Bradshaw: The use of ventilation shutdown as a method of killing birds for the purpose of disease control is compatible with EU Directive 93/119/EC. The directive allows for disease control methods not specifically listed in the text of the directive, provided any pain or suffering to the birds is unavoidable. Appropriate measures must be taken to kill the animals as soon as possible and before they regain consciousness. Nothing can be done to the animals before it is ascertained they are dead.

Any use of ventilation shutdown as a method of killing diseased birds would be compliant with these requirements and be restricted to circumstances where no other method, as outlined in Schedule 9 of the Welfare of Animals (Slaughter or Killing) Regulations 1995 (as amended), could be practicably employed for the killing of large numbers of birds on a specific farm.

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what assessment has been made by his officials of the animal welfare implications of the use of ventilation shutdown as a method of killing birds for the purpose of disease control; and if he will make a statement; [71750]

(2) in what circumstances the use of ventilation shutdown as a method of killing birds for the purpose of disease control would be authorised; and if he will make a statement. [71755]

Mr. Bradshaw: I have received veterinary advice that ventilation shutdown (VSD) is unlikely to deliver welfare standards equal to other recognised culling methods available.

The use of ventilation shutdown would therefore only be authorised as a last resort where no other method, as outlined in Schedule 9 of the Welfare of Animals (Slaughter or Killing) Regulations 1995, could be practicably employed for the killing of large numbers of birds on a specific farm for disease control purposes.

The priority in dealing with a notifiable animal disease is to ensure that public health and safety of poultry workers is protected, particularly where, as with some strains of the avian influenza virus, there is a risk of human infection. Disease outbreaks must be dealt with quickly and effectively to reduce the likelihood of further spread of disease and it remains our intention to kill birds by the most humane method possible.

We must however be prepared for all eventualities including extreme circumstances where catchers are unavailable, logistical capabilities are stretched and where a grave threat to public health exists. The risk of that may be very small but it is right that we provide for it.

To enhance our capability to kill large numbers of birds through humane means, we have developed, and continue to develop, the use of gas or gas mixtures. Such techniques have been endorsed by the Humane Slaughter Association and were used successfully in the recent disease incidence in Norfolk. We expect that such techniques will be useable in the great majority of circumstances where an outbreak occurs.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will list the occasions since September 2005 on which blood samples from birds initially tested positive for avian influenza virus types; where the birds were located in each case; what action was taken by (a) his Department and (b) the State Veterinary Service in each case; and if he will make a statement. [72287]

David Miliband: Since September 2005 approximately 5,000 blood samples, from 435 domestic poultry premises, have been tested. In October, samples taken from a number of geese on a premises in Somerset tested positive for antibodies to H5N2 and H5N7. Movement restrictions were served on the premises and a veterinary inquiry was initiated. Clinical examination revealed that the geese were healthy. Further sampling and laboratory tests did not isolate avian influenza viruses. The presence of infection with avian influenza viruses was ruled out. It is likely that the positive antibody result was due to previous exposure to low pathogenic avian influenza (LPAI) viruses. Disease was not confirmed on the premises.

In April 2006, H5N1 avian influenza was confirmed in a sample from the partially decomposed body of a swan found in Cellardyke, Fife, Scotland. Movement restrictions were put in place and a 2,500 sq km wild bird risk area was established. No further cases of highly pathogenic avian influenza H5N1 were found, restrictions in the wild bird surveillance zone were lifted on 1 May and the wild bird risk area was ended.

H7N3 low pathogenicity avian influenza was confirmed on three poultry farms near Dereham, Norfolk in late April 2006. A low pathogenic avian influenza restricted zone with a radius of 1km was imposed around the infected premises. Movement restrictions were served on the premises and the three flocks were culled. Surveillance and testing was carried out on all additional premises belonging to the owner of the infected premises.

Bonfires

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what guidance his Department produces for members of the public on dealing with nuisance bonfires; and if he will make a statement. [72464]

Mr. Bradshaw: Most complaints about domestic bonfires are dealt with by local authorities under their statutory nuisance powers under the Environmental Protection Act 1990.

Guidance for members of the public on what to do if they are suffering from smoke nuisance is available from the DEFRA website: http://www.defra.gov.uk/environment/localenv/smoke/index.htrn

Bovine Tuberculosis

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the level of sensitivity of the standard intradermal skin test for bovine tuberculosis. [70948]

Mr. Bradshaw: The single intradermal comparative cervical test (SICCT) for bovine tuberculosis is an effective test. It is the accepted standard laid down in both national and international legislation for determining the existence of disease in a cattle herd.

No diagnostic test, including the SICCT, is 100 per cent. accurate. When used as a routine screening test, the SICCT is designed to maximise specificity (identification of uninfected animals) while retaining good sensitivity (identification of infected animals). The specificity for a correctly performed SICCT is above 99 per cent.; its sensitivity is between 77 per cent. and 95 per cent.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the unit cost is for a Bovigam gamma interferon bovine tuberculosis test; and what estimate he has made of the economies of scale which would be achieved through the bulk purchase of the Bovigam test. [70949]

Mr. Bradshaw: The provisional estimated unit cost for a Bovigam IFNg (gamma interferon) bovine tuberculosis test in 2006-07 is £10.85.

It is not possible to estimate what economies of scale might be achieved through the bulk purchase of the Bovigam test until new policies for the increased use of the test are finalised.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what evidence his Department has assessed for a possible correlation between herd size and (a) the likelihood of a bovine tuberculosis outbreak and (b) the length of time that a herd is likely to be under restriction. [70960]

Mr. Bradshaw: Bovine tuberculosis (TB) has a complex epidemiology which makes it difficult to separate out the effects of individual factors.

DEFRA has carried out, at the request of the Independent Scientific Group on Cattle TB, two studies (the TB99 Epidemiological Questionnaire and the Case Control Study 2005) to investigate TB risk factors, and to identify those that appear to be key. Initial analyses of TB99 and CCS2005 data show that larger herds are more likely to have a TB breakdown.

The length of time a herd is under restriction is variable, and it is not known if larger herds remain under restriction longer than smaller herds.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what advice he has received from the Independent Scientific Group on the reasons for a positive correlation between larger herd sizes and bovine tuberculosis. [70961]

Mr. Bradshaw: The reason for a positive correlation between larger herd sizes and the occurrence of bovine tuberculosis is that there are more animals at risk of acquiring infection in larger herds.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what advice he has received from the Independent Scientific Group on using gamma interferon to control bovine tuberculosis in cattle; [70962]

(2) what assessment his Department has made of the merits of using the gamma interferon bovine tuberculosis test more widely. [70987]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Independent Scientific Group has welcomed DEFRA's intention to increase the use of gamma interferon (IFNg) as an additional testing protocol to control bovine tuberculosis, and has also agreed the priority uses recommended by the Working Group, which was established by DEFRA to prepare and deliver a policy for wider roll out of the test.

The increased use of IFNg, in parallel with the skin test, has the potential to significantly increase the detection of infected cattle in herds where TB has been confirmed. DEFRA is already using the IFNg test on an ad hoc basis in identified problem TB herds. About 9,000 such tests were undertaken in 2005.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the results were of research project SE3013 into the specificity of gamma interferon; and what implications the results have for controlling bovine tuberculosis. [70988]

Mr. Bradshaw: It was research project SB4021 (rather than SE3013) that was established to evaluate the specificity of the gamma interferon (IFNg) test. This project confirmed the findings of previous studies by concluding that the commercially available IFNg test had a specificity of between 95-97 per cent.

Findings from SB4021 supported the view that it would be inappropriate to use IFNg for routine screening purposes because it risks producing too many false positive results. However, there would be value in making greater use of it, as an ancillary test, in a variety of herd breakdown situations. DEFRA is currently using these findings to develop new policies for the increased use of the IFNg test.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research his Department has (a) undertaken and (b) commissioned into the costs for a holding facing a bovine tuberculosis breakout. [71898]

Mr. Bradshaw: In 2004, DEFRA undertook an assessment of the economic impacts of bovine tuberculosis and alternative control policies (SE3112). The survey found a large variation in the costs associated with a breakdown, ranging from £229 per farm to £103,817 per farm, depending on the number of reactors, their valuation and the length of the breakdown.

Further details, including the final report, are available on the DEFRA website:

http://www2.defra.gov.uk/research/project_data/More.asp?I=SE3112&M=KWS&V=SE3112&SCOPE=0

The Government pay compensation for all cattle compulsorily slaughtered as a result of bovine tuberculosis.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many disputed payments for bovine tuberculosis compensation have been registered since the new system began, broken down by county. [59058]

Mr. Bradshaw: A small number of farmers have disputed the level of compensation payments offered since the introduction of the table valuation system on 1 February 2006. Some of these have subsequently been resolved in discussion with the State Veterinary Service.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether wildlife unit supervisors employed by his Department in connection with the Randomised Badger Culling Trials have been served with redundancy notices; and if he will make a statement. [71142]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 16 May 2006]: The Wildlife Units at Aston Down and Polwhele have not been closed. Fieldwork in support of the trial was completed at the end of March, and staff are working to complete trial data entry and final quality checking of data.

Decisions about the future of these units will be taken following Ministerial decisions on future policy for the control of bovine tuberculosis in England. No compulsory redundancy notices have been served.

The wildlife officers who carried out the cage trapping in the Badger Culling Trial have been told that their posts are surplus, and efforts are being made to redeploy these staff. Those indicating a preference to leave have received offers of voluntary redundancy on compulsory terms. This decision was based on a cost-benefit analysis showing that state-operated culling could lead to higher costs and slower delivery compared to other options.

The remaining posts, including the field supervisors will be retained until the staffing needs to support the new policy are known.

Carcase Rendering

Charlotte Atkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what procedure companies wishing to apply for a permit for animal carcase rendering are required to follow on the expiry of existing permits issued by local authorities. [67581]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 8 May 2006]: If for any reason an animal rendering plant is without a valid permit issued under the Pollution Prevention and Control (England and Wales) Regulations 2000 or an authorisation issued under the Environmental Protection Act 1990, that plant—like any other any installation subject to the Regulations—is deemed a new plant and must apply afresh to the relevant regulator for a permit.

The application has to be advertised by the applicant and the regulator has to send copies of the application to statutory consultees. The regulator has to consider representations made as a result of these consultations in determining the application. If the regulator is minded to grant the application, it is required to advertise its draft determination. If any representations are made within 20 days of that advertisement, the regulator has to take them into account in reaching its final decision. The process is fully explained in "Integrated Pollution Prevention and Control—A Practical Guide (Edition 4)", published by my Department and the Welsh Assembly Government.

Climate Change

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what role Local Strategic Partnerships will have in devising climate change strategies; [66410]

(2) how many (a) local authorities and (b) Local Strategic Partnerships have signed the Nottingham declaration on climate change. [66411]

Ian Pearson: The Government's new Climate Change Programme, published in March 2006, recognises the important role Sustainable Community Strategies, Local Strategic Partnerships (LSPs) and Local Area Agreements have to play in tackling climate change. It includes information on the role of the Sustainable Community Strategy framework as a route for local authorities to strengthen the delivery of sustainable development at the local level, including with partners on LSPs. Further information is available at:
http://www.defra.gov.uk/ENVIRONMENT/climatechange/uk/ukccp/pdf/ukccp06-all.pdf

So far, over 100 local authorities have signed the Nottingham declaration, each pledging to actively tackle climate change within their area. We do not have information on how many Local Strategic Partnerships are also signatories. The response to the declaration is being coordinated by the Energy Saving Trust, and more information can be found on their website:
http://www.est.org.uk/housingbuildings/localauthorities/NottinghamDeclaration/

Correspondence

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the Minister of State will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for West Worcestershire of 3 March 2006, about riverside meadows near Pixham Ferry, Callow End, on the River Severn. [72299]

Barry Gardiner: I apologise for the delay in replying to the hon. Member's letter. A response will be issued shortly.

Cranleigh Brick and Tile

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations the Environment Agency has (a) made and (b) received on the Cranleigh Brick and Tile planning application in Waverley; and what assessment the Agency has made of (i) total funding and (ii) works needed to remediate the site. [70880]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Environment Agency was consulted on the Cranleigh Brick and Tile planning application and replied on 27 March 2006 to the planning authority, Waverley borough council. The Agency did not object to the proposal and gave their conditional approval. The Agency submitted a statement on the objectives and remedial options for the site, including a preliminary appraisal of the works required to remediate it. The Environment Agency has not made an assessment of the total finding of the remediation scheme as this was purely a planning consideration.

Dairy Calves

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans he has to meet representatives of the dairy industry to discuss options other than live export for the marketing of UK dairy-bred calves; and if he will make a statement. [69252]

Mr. Bradshaw: I am meeting representatives of the dairy industry in July to discuss these issues. Officials are also in discussion with the English Beef and Lamb Executive (EBLEX) and other English farming organisations.

DEFRA is committed to the welfare of all animals and we are strictly enforcing rules governing the health and welfare of livestock during transport. We also prefer a trade in meat to the long distance transport of live animals for rearing or slaughter, whether in the UK or across borders, and would like to see a lower limit for maximum journey times.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many people in his Department have been (a) disciplined and (b) dismissed for (i) inappropriate use of the internet while at work and (ii) using work telephones to access premium rate numbers in each of the last five years. [67979]

Barry Gardiner: Since DEFRA came into existence on 9 June 2001 three members of staff have faced formal disciplinary procedures for breaches of IT policy, one in each of the following years, 2002-03, 2003-04 and 2004-05. Of these, two officers (2002-03 and 2004-05), were dismissed and the other (2003-04) resigned before formal procedures were completed.

No officers have faced formal disciplinary procedures in respect of inappropriate use of the telecoms system.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many (a) EU foreign nationals and (b) non-EU foreign nationals have been employed in his Department in each of the last five years; what vetting procedures are in place for each category of staff; and whether these include liaison with foreign law enforcement agencies. [68022]

Barry Gardiner: The Department does not maintain a central record which allows DEFRA to differentiate between EU and non-EU foreign nationals. Recruitment into DEFRA is carried out in accordance with the civil service nationality rules.

The need for an individual to undergo national security vetting, and the level of vetting that is appropriate will depend on the particular post they are going to fill. Where necessary, this will include a check of time spent overseas.

The vetting procedures for DEFRA follow Cabinet Office guidelines with no distinction made between the categories of staff identified in the question.

Emissions Trading

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what his policy is on the auctioning of carbon emission permits under Phase II of the EU Emissions Trading Scheme; and if he will make a statement. [72289]

David Miliband: The Government are currently consulting on the proposal to auction (between 2 and 10 per cent. of the total amount of allowances, as part of the consultation on the draft plan for the second phase of the Scheme (2008-2012). We have proposed that these allowances should be deducted from the allocation to the Electricity Supply Industry sector. The consultation closes on 23 May 2006. A final decision on the use of auctioning in the Phase II plan will be taken alongside the final decision on the total quantity of allowances for Phase II.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions he has had with the European Commission regarding the deadline for submitting the UK National Allocation Plan for Phase II of the Emissions Trading Scheme; and if he will make a statement. [72290]

David Miliband: The EU Emissions Trading Scheme Directive states that the Phase II National Allocation Plan (NAP) should be submitted to the Commission by 30 June 2006 and the final allocation decision by 31 December 2006.

I wrote to Commissioner Dimas last week and am meeting him on 22 May 2006 for the first time since taking office. I expect to cover a number of issues. My officials have already had discussions with their counterparts at the Commission regarding the deadline.

This is a challenging deadline and in order to learn lessons from Phase I and to expand the Scheme to cover the activities set out in the revised Commission Guidance, the UK Government recognise that it will not be possible to collect and process the data in time to meet the first of these deadlines. The Government are however aiming to submit its NAP as soon as possible after the June deadline and to submit our final allocation decision by 31 December 2006.

Environment Agency

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will make a statement on Environment Agency special sites. [70881]

Mr. Bradshaw: To help address the legacy of land contamination, the Government brought into force part IIA ("contaminated land") of the Environmental Protection Act 1990. This places local authorities under a statutory duty to inspect their areas to identify contaminated land as defined in the Act, and to secure its remediation, in accordance with the detailed provisions of the regime. They are required to take a strategic and prioritised approach to the duty of inspection. A local authority must designate contaminated land as a "special site" if it meets specific legal definitions. Where a local authority designates a site as a special site, the Environment Agency will become the enforcing authority for the site. In broad terms, the regime addresses unacceptable risk arising from land contamination in situations where other statutory regimes cannot be applied.

As of 1 May 2006, 23 special sites in England had been designated by local authorities.

Environmental Liability Directive

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which UK Biodiversity Action Plan species do not fall within the scope of the Environmental Liability Directive and would not be protected under UK implementing laws unless its scope were to be extended. [71456]

Barry Gardiner: UK Biodiversity Action Plan species that are not subject to protection under existing EU Directives (Council Directive 79/409/EEC on the conservation of wild birds; Council Directive 92/43/EEC on the conservation of natural habitats and of wild fauna and flora) would not be covered by UK legislation implementing the Environmental Liability Directive, unless the Government exercised the discretion provided in that directive.

I shall write to my hon. Friend with the detailed information on those species.

Farming (Bassetlaw)

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many (a) owner and (b) tenant farmers there were in Bassetlaw in 2005. [71891]

Barry Gardiner: Numbers of farmers and holdings for Bassetlaw constituency at June 2005 are as follows:

	Holdings	Farmers
(a) Wholly owned holdings	234	250
(b) Wholly rented holdings	59	82
Total[1]	469	555

[1] Including mixed tenure and seasonally rented holdings.

Note:
Farmers includes full and part-time farmers, partners, directors and spouses (if working on the holding.)

June Agricultural Survey

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many UK citizens work in the agriculture sector in Bassetlaw. [71892]

Barry Gardiner: Nationality data is not collected by the June Agricultural Survey. Total labour force on agricultural and horticultural holdings in Bassetlaw constituency was 1,198 in June 2005.

Source: June Agricultural Survey.

Fisheries

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 15 February 2006, Official Report, column 2041, on fisheries, if he will list the (a) countries and (b) authorities which record estimates of discards; and what those known figures are for the last available year. [68583]

Mr. Bradshaw: Since 2002 all EU countries have been required to collect data on discarding under Council Regulation 1543/2000 but the information is not yet compiled systematically. Last year, the European Commission's Scientific, Technical and Economic Committee for Fisheries (STECF) requested data on discards from the North Sea and Skaggerak, Kattegat, Eastern and Western Baltic, West of Scotland, Irish and Celtic Seas. The UK, Germany, Sweden, Latvia, Denmark and the Netherlands provided data. UK data for Northern Ireland vessels were not available.

From the available data, STECF produced estimates of total discards as follows:

Estimates of discards in 2004 (tonnes)

	North Sea/Skaggerak	West of Scotland
Cod	7,058	90
Haddock	16,845	4,944
Whiting	45,239	2,617
Plaice	62,089	0
Sole	2,683	0
Nephrops	No estimate	No estimate
Saithe	9,001	0

Data on discarding remain scarce and these estimates should be treated with caution.

STECF has begun work to develop a "Discards Atlas"—a compendium of available information from member states on discards as a resource for fisheries science. Member states will be asked to provide data by the end of this year and after database creation, quality checking, compilation, mapping etc. it is hoped that the atlas will be available in 2007-08.

Gamebirds

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many (a) pheasants, (b) partridges and (c) ducks are being kept for (i) meat production, (ii) showing, (iii) breeding for shooting, (iv) rearing for shooting, (v) releasing for shooting and (vi) other purposes at premises listed in the Great Britain Poultry Register; and how many such premises there are, broken down by species kept. [70780]

Mr. Bradshaw: The information requested is set out in the following table:

	Duck		Pheasant		Partridge
Production type	Bird	Premise	Bird	Premise	Bird	Premise
Reared for meat	4,137,400	557	111,088	26	82,650	11
Breeding for meat	129,333	183	4,162	23	47,142	9
Showing	26,562	466	7,390	86	5,216	18

Total	6,443,768	7,660	39,828,642	10,840	14,430,827	4,882

This information was produced using data from the Great Britain Poultry Register taken on 12 May 2006. All data are subject to change.

The GB Poultry Register allows people to register themselves as a commercial hatchery without necessarily indicating which species they hatch, hence the unknown category. It is also possible that premises may have registered themselves as having an incubator capacity but have not registered that they use this for commercial purposes.

The GB Poultry Register captures data under the Avian Influenza (Preventive Measures) (No. 2) Regulations 2005. Registration is mandatory for premises with 50 or more birds kept for commercial purposes. In addition, the register also includes voluntary registrations for non-commercial premises and those where fewer than 50 poultry are kept.

The completeness of the data is dependant on the level of compliance with the legislation as specified above. Owners are required to de-register if they no longer keep poultry.

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many premises listed in the Great Britain Poultry Register in respect of the keeping of (a) pheasants and (b) partridges receive (i) live birds and (ii) eggs from outside Great Britain. [70782]

Mr. Bradshaw: The information requested is set out in the following table:

Species	Number of premises
Pheasants	191
Partridges	131
Both	118

This information was produced using data from the Great Britain Poultry Register taken on 12 May 2006. All data are subject to change.

The Poultry Register combines the import of birds and eggs from outside GB into one single question.

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many premises listed in the Great Britain Poultry Register in respect of the keeping of (a) pheasants and (b) partridges have a pond, lake or open reservoir within the boundary of the premises or next to the premises. [70783]

Mr. Bradshaw: The information requested is set out in the following table:

Species	Number
Pheasants[1]	6,099
Partridges[2]	2,777
Both	2,660
Total	11,536

[1] No partridges.
[2] No pheasants.

Greenhouse Gases

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the greenhouse gas emissions are in carbon equivalent per kilometre of the most commonly used aircraft in the United Kingdom; what the carbon equivalent emissions per passenger kilometre would be in each case if the aircraft were fully loaded at its normal passenger capacity. [71326]

Ian Pearson: The Government are currently in discussion with our contractors to determine whether UK specific aircraft emissions data can be generated. The Department will communicate this information if it becomes available in due course.

The most recent related figures on aircraft emissions come from the DEFRA Guidelines for Reporting on Greenhouse Gas Emissions, published in July 2005. This is available at:

http://defraweb/environment/business/envrp/gas/envrpgas-annexes.pdf

These show that, averaged out, emissions of CO_2 per passenger kilometre are 0.11 kg on a typical long haul flight. On a short haul flight the figure is 0.15 kg. Assumptions for a long haul flight refer to a 5,000 km journey on a typical 450-seat capacity aircraft, with a 70 per cent. load factor. Assumptions for a short haul flight refer to a 500 km journey on a typical 128-seat capacity aircraft, with a 65 per cent. load factor.

Harmful Gas Emissions

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the percentage change was in (a) carbon dioxide and (b) other harmful gases arising from energy efficiency measures taken in each of the last 30 years; and what the planned reduction in harmful gas emission through energy efficiency measures is over the next 10 years. [68031]

Ian Pearson: In relation to carbon dioxide, I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 8 February 2006, Official Report, column 1282W. This refers to an exercise carried out for the household sector, depicting carbon changed for the period 1970 to 2001. Copies of this report are held in the Library.

With reference to other harmful gases, emissions of air pollutants are estimated in the UK National Atmospheric Emissions Inventory. These data are available from the National Atmospheric Emissions Inventory website:

http://www.naei.org.uk/

Future targets for energy efficiency are focused on 2010. The 2006 UK Climate Change Programme sets out how energy efficiency will save 10.2 million tonnes of carbon (MtC) per year by that date, with savings split between the business sector (5.1 MtC), the household sector (4.8MtC), and the public sector (0.3MtC).

In addition, the 2004 Energy Efficiency Action Plan includes a residential energy efficiency aim (as required by the Sustainable Energy Act 2003) to save 3.5 MtC from homes in England by 2010 through energy efficiency measures.

Home Working

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many people in his Department have been enabled to work from home in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [67980]

Barry Gardiner: The Department currently has 2,000 registered users for dial-up network access and 1,000 registered users for network access via broadband. Of these, about 300 are registered for both, so the total is about 2,700 staff who are currently enabled to work from home.

We do not have historical data for previous years, nor are specific data held on the precise extent of home working.

Migrant Labour (Farms)

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent estimate he has made of the number of farmers whose profitability is dependent on migrant labour. [69778]

Barry Gardiner: The Government do recognise that migrant workers have a role to play in meeting the agricultural sector's need for labour, and temporary and seasonal labour in particular. The current Seasonal Agricultural Workers Scheme has existed to meet this need. However, the scheme is being phased out in 2010 given the availability of labour from the new member states of the EU.

Research commissioned by the Home Office into the use by employers of migrant labour[1] indicates that migrant workers have become an important source of labour, particularly in agriculture and the hospitality sector. Some of the employers interviewed as part of this research said that their businesses would suffer or could not survive without migrant labour.

The summary report of this research can be viewed on the Home Office's website at the following address: http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs06/rdsolr0306.pdf

[1] Employers Use of Migrant Labour, Institute for Employment Studies—March 2006.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many meetings his Department has had in the last three years in which he or his predecessors discussed with the National Farmers' Union (a) extending and (b) speeding up the process for migrant work permits. [69781]

Barry Gardiner: DEFRA Ministers have not specifically discussed extending and speeding up the process for work permits for migrant workers at any of their meetings with the NFU in the past three years.

However, Ministers have attended meetings with the NFU and other stakeholder organisations in recent years at which the Seasonal Agricultural Workers Scheme (SAWS) was discussed. SAWS is a long-standing quota-based scheme which operates outside the normal work permit rules. The scheme allows students from non-EU countries to take up agricultural work in the UK without the need to obtain a work permit for periods of up to six months.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate he has made of the contribution of migrant workers to the rural economy in 2005. [69805]

Barry Gardiner: My Department does not hold this information.

Research commissioned by the Home Office into the use of migrant labour[1] by employers indicates that migrant workers have become an important source of labour, particularly in agriculture and the hospitality sector. This is supported by research commissioned by DEFRA in 2005 to inform the implementation of the Gangmasters (Licensing Act) 2004[2]. This research suggests that in the food manufacturing industry, which represents an important part of the rural economy, some 90 per cent. of agency workers are migrants.

In addition a recent study published by the Joseph Rowntree Foundation[3] shows that employers are successfully recruiting migrant workers to take up jobs which traditionally have been hard to fill in the agriculture, construction and hospitality industries.

Employers said that they value migrant workers for their reliability and strong work ethic. There is much anecdotal evidence from SAWS (seasonal agricultural workers) operators that migrant workers have a positive effect on the local economy in their use of local services such as shops, banks, etc.

Milk Quotas

Mr. Curry: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether milk quotas may be traded between member states of the European Union. [70315]

Mr. Bradshaw: Milk quotas cannot be sold or leased between member states. Council Regulation 1788/2003 specifies total quota levels for each member state. Our view is that any attempt to transfer quota to another member state would be contrary to that legislation. In recent discussions the EU Commission confirmed it shared our view.

Ministerial Flights

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will list the flights taken by Ministers in his Department since 2001; and what measures to offset the carbon emissions were taken for each flight. [68938]

Ian Pearson: All ministerial travel is undertaken in accordance with the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers, copies of which are available in the Library. Since 1999, the Government have published on an annual basis a list of all overseas visits by Cabinet Ministers costing in excess of £500. Copies of the lists are available in the Library. Information for 2005-06 is currently being compiled and will be published when it is ready.

All central Government ministerial and official air travel is being offset from 1 April 2006. Departmental aviation emissions are calculated on an annual basis and subsequently offset through payments to a central fund. The fund purchases Certified Emissions Reductions credits from energy efficiency and renewable energy projects with high sustainable development benefits, located in developing countries. In addition, offsetting the flights of DEFRA Ministers have been backdated to 1 April 2005.

Other detailed information on flights could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Ministerial Visits (Accommodation)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the total cost was of overnight accommodation for Ministers of State in his Department on foreign visits in each of the last three years. [69090]

Barry Gardiner: All ministerial travel, including overnight accommodation, complies with the terms of the 'Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers'. When travelling on official business Ministers make efficient and cost-effective travel arrangements. DEFRA's financial records for ministerial travel do not separate out overnight accommodation and this information could be generated only at disproportionate cost.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on how many occasions Ministers of State in his Department stayed overnight in (a) five star, (b) four star and (c) three star hotels on foreign visits in each of the last three years. [69091]

Barry Gardiner: All ministerial travel, including overnight accommodation, complies with the terms of the 'Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers'. When travelling on official business Ministers make efficient and cost-effective travel arrangements. DEFRA's financial records for ministerial travel do not include details of the rating of hotels at which Ministers stayed on foreign visits and this information could be generated only at disproportionate cost.

Nappies

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what progress has been made towards the Waste and Resources Action Programme Real Nappy Campaign's target of diverting 35,000 tonnes of waste from landfill by April 2006; [72308]

(2) what plans he has to establish further targets for the Waste and Resources Action Programme Real Nappy Campaign. [72309]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Waste and Resources Action Programme (WRAP) reports annually on its overall progress in meeting targets, including work under the Real Nappy Programme. WRAP's latest annual achievements report will be published towards the end of July.

At the start of the programme, 91 per cent. of expectant parents said they intended to use disposable nappies. Work done for the Environment Agency suggested the figure could be as high as 94 per cent. WRAP will survey parents again at the end of the programme to establish the level of change in intended behaviour. An estimate of the level of diversion will also be made and published at that time, taking account of the survey and other quantitative evidence.

There are no further plans to establish targets. The Real Nappy Campaign was funded for three years from April 2003 to March 2006, although some funding has been provided for 2006-07 to meet existing commitments.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what funding his Department allocated to Real Nappy Week 2006; and what assessment he has made of the impact of the event. [70930]

Mr. Bradshaw: Real Nappy Week is supported by the Waste and Resources Action Programme (WRAP) as part of their Real Nappy Initiative and receives funding from DEFRA and the Scottish Executive. The budget for all aspects of the week's events was £250,000.

This year marked the 10th Anniversary of Real Nappy Week. More than 500 events were planned throughout the UK and a record number of supporters signed up to back the event. This included over 90 per cent. of all UK local authorities and 155 MPs, MSPs, MEPs and Welsh AMs.

WRAP will provide a full report on Real Nappy Week once all the information has been collated. This is expected in June.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether his Department's review of England's Waste Strategy will address the promotion of reusable nappies. [70931]

Mr. Bradshaw: The review of England's Waste Strategy will discuss a range of waste minimisation and prevention measures. It is too early to state whether re-usable nappies will specifically be addressed.

North Sea Ministerial Meeting

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which Ministers were present for each day of the North Sea Ministerial Meeting on the Environmental Impacts of Shipping and Fisheries in Gothenburg, Sweden on 4 and 5 May; what discussions his Department has had with the Scottish Executive on the meeting; and if he will make a statement. [71925]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 18 May 2006]: The list of attendees at the North Sea Ministerial Meeting on the Environmental Impacts of Shipping and Fisheries held in Gothenburg, Sweden on 4 and 5 May can be found at http://www.seas-at-risk.org/pdfs/SAR_GothenburgPressRelease_03.pdf

Nuclear Power

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will list the meetings (a) he and (b) Ministers in his Department have had with (i) representatives of and (ii) advisers to the nuclear power industry in each of the last two years; who he met on each occasion; and what the purpose was of each meeting. [72288]

David Miliband: The Secretary of State has had no such meetings. Departmental records also show no such meetings.

Oak Trees

Mark Tami: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps his Department is taking to promote the planting of oak trees. [71581]

Barry Gardiner: In the Action Plan for our Statement of Policy for England's Ancient and Native Woodland we promote woodland creation which extends, buffers and links ancient woodland through both the Forestry Commission's English Woodland Grant Scheme and DEFRA's Environmental Stewardship grants. In order to respect the biodiversity values of ancient woodland much of this type of woodland creation will involve the use of native species including a significant proportion of oak.

Most new woodland planting and restocking that is carried out by private landowners is grant aided by the Forestry Commission. The incentives available favour the planting of native broadleaves and a large proportion of these will be oak.

In England the Forestry Commission has embarked on a programme to restore 15,000 hectares of ancient semi-natural woodland on the public forest estate by 2020 and this will include planting and regenerating native tree species, including oak. In addition most new planting by the Commission will be with native broadleaves and, where site conditions are suitable, oak will be well represented in these new woodlands.

Mark Tami: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate he has made of the number of mature oak trees in England and Wales in each of the last five years. [71617]

Barry Gardiner: A national woodland survey is carried out by the Forestry Commission at intervals of between 15 and 20 years. The most recent report for England was published in 2001 and for Wales in 2002.

The survey reports include estimates of: (a) the area of oak woodland; (b) individual oak trees; and (c) numbers of oak trees growing in small groups or narrow linear features.

An estimate of the planting year is included in the reports where woodland is, or could become, capable of producing wood of a size and quality suitable for sawlogs (High Forest Category 1).

This information for England and Wales is reproduced in the following tables:

All oak woodland and trees (i.e. groups a-c above)

England
Oak woodland over 2.0 hectares in size	147,847 hectares
Oak woodland between 0.1 hectare and 2.0 hectares	10,818 hectares
Oak trees outside woodland	6,872,800 trees
Wales
Oak woodland over 2.0 hectares in size	38,092 hectares
Oak woodland between 0.1 hectare and 2.0 hectares	4,826 hectares
Oak trees outside woodland	1,569,100 trees

Private Office Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of his private office staff is (a) male, (b) female and (c) disabled. [69098]

Barry Gardiner: For all ministerial private offices in DEFRA the proportions are:

(a) 23 per cent.

(b) 77 per cent. and

(c) 0 per cent.

Recruitment

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much (a) his Department and (b) its agencies spent on recruitment, search and selection agencies in each of the last five years. [68341]

Barry Gardiner: This information is not held centrally within the Department, and therefore could be made available only at disproportionate cost.

Recycling

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate he has made of the average cost per tonne of recycling waste material in (a) Swindon and (b) England in each of the last three years. [71652]

Mr. Bradshaw: DEFRA does not gather information on individual recycling schemes or the costs of recycling waste material. These will vary depending on a number of factors, including the collection method used by a local authority, the materials collected and the market for recycled materials.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will list the schemes used by local authorities which have achieved the highest recycling rates for household waste. [69940]

Mr. Bradshaw: Government sets statutory recycling and composting targets for all waste collection authorities in England. Each individual authority is free to choose its own method of collection (i.e. the type of recycling scheme). However, DEFRA does not collect this information from local authorities.

The top 10 performing local authorities for household recycling and composting in 2004-05 used a range of DEFRA-funded and supported schemes, including the National Waste Minimisation and Recycling Fund (NWMRF), the Local Authority Support Unit's Direct Consultancy Support Programme (LASU DCS), the Household Incentives Scheme, New Technologies Supporter Programme and the Waste Performance and Efficiency Grant (WPEG). In addition, the Waste and Resources Action Programme's (WRAP) ROTATE service is resourced by DEFRA to provide impartial support to authorities on kerbside collection of recyclables.

The following table provides a breakdown of schemes used:

Region	Local authority	DEFRA-funded schemes used
Eastern	St. Edmundsbury	NWMRF, WRAP, LASU DCS, Household Incentives, WPEG
Eastern	Forest Heath	NWMRF, WRAP, LASU DCS, Household Incentives, WPEG
Eastern	South Cambridgeshire	NWMRF, WRAP, LASU DCS, New Technologies Supporter Programme, WPEG, Household Incentives
West Midlands	Lichfield	NWMRF, WRAP, LASU DCS, WPEG
East Midlands	Harborough	NWMRF, LASU DCS, WPEG, Household Incentives, New Technologies Supporter Programme
East Midlands	Rushcliffe	NWMRF, Household Incentives, WPEG
East Midlands	Daventry	NWMRF, WRAP, LASU DCS, WPEG
South East	Cherwell	NWMRF, WRAP, LASU DCS, New Technologies Supporter Programme, WPEG
North West	Vale Royal	LASU DCS, NWMRF, WRAP, Household Incentives, WPEG
East Midlands	North Kesteven	LASU DCS, WPEG

Reprocessed Fuel Oil

Alison Seabeck: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if his Department will take steps to enable the classification of reprocessed fuel oil as a product rather than waste. [72307]

Mr. Bradshaw: Whether or not a substance is "waste" within the meaning of Article 1(a) of the Waste Framework Directive (WFD) (2006/12/EC) is a matter that must be determined on the facts of the case and the interpretation of the law is a matter for the courts. It is not a function of the Government to classify or to declassify any particular substance as waste or non-waste.

The Environment Agency is designated as a "competent authority" for the purpose of implementing the WFD in England and Wales and is required to give effect to the directive's definition of waste, as interpreted by the European Court of Justice and our national courts.

Guidance available on the Department's website at http://www.defra.gov.uk/environment/airquality/lapc/aqnotes/pdf/aqi04-06.pdf confirms that, on the facts of the case and taking account of case law by the courts, the Environment Agency's view is that recovered fuel oil (RFO) has not been fully recovered within the meaning of the WFD and does not cease to be waste until used as a means to generate energy.

Nevertheless, organisations are free to present to the Environment Agency any significant, new information about RFO which would satisfy the Agency that it falls within the very limited circumstances in which waste may cease to be waste before being used as fuel.

Single Farm Payments

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many farmers in Milton Keynes (a) have been and (b) remain to be paid their single farm payment. [68138]

Barry Gardiner: The Rural Payments Agency does not have the data available on a regional basis, as the scheme is not administered in this way.

Stewardship

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many complaints regarding the entry level stewardship scheme have been received, broken down by (a) subject of complaint and (b) region. [68578]

Barry Gardiner: The number of complaints received by the Rural Development Service regarding the Entry Level Stewardship Scheme, according to records up to 1 April 2006, is as follows:

Region	Rural land register or mapping delays	ELS application delays	Policy	Payment delays
East	35	17	1	21
East Midlands	35	0	1	3
North East	1	1	0	1
North West	0	0	0	0
South West	1	1	0	0
West Midlands	2	0	1	5
Yorks and the Humber	2	1	0	3
HQ/SDID	8	2	8	2
Total	89	22	17	35

It is important to note that there is an overlap between the first two categories of complaint, with the first often leading to the second. Where mapping delays have been specified, the complaint has been allocated to that column. Otherwise application delays have been allocated to column 2. No individual complaint has been recorded more than once.

The relatively high figures under the rural land register heading for Eastern and East Midlands regions reflect a higher degree of mapping issues associated with larger farms in the East of England.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many and what proportion of farmers have been paid (a) on time and (b) late under the entry level stewardship scheme in each month for which records are available. [68579]

Barry Gardiner: At 11 May 2006 progress with payments under entry level stewardship was as follows:

		Payments made		Not selected for payment
	Payments due	Number	Percentage	Number	Percentage
February	6,200	5,824	93.9	376	6.1
March	1,546	1,414	91.5	132	8.5
April	1,351	1,205	89.2	146	10.8

Those not selected for payment are for a variety of reasons including cases where agreements require amendment prior to payment or where warnings need to be resolved.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many farmers have signed up for the entry level stewardship scheme. [68580]

Barry Gardiner: As of 15 May 2006 some 19,784 farmers and land managers had entered into entry level stewardship agreements. Of these, 694 are taking part in the organic strand of the scheme.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much and what proportion of the budget allocated for farm payments has been disbursed under the entry level stewardship scheme. [68581]

Barry Gardiner: At 11 May 2006 the value of payments made under entry level stewardship was some £15.5 million. This represents 28 per cent. of the budget available for entry level stewardship for the year 2006-07. In 2006-07, over £55 million has been allocated to ELS, including the organic ELS, to cover the cost of signed agreements that will be accounted for in this financial year.

Sugar Beet

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will re-assess agreements reached by his predecessor on the price of sugar beet to enable sugar beet farmers to develop a sustainable sector. [71399]

Mr. Bradshaw: Under the European Union's common agricultural policy, minimum prices paid to beet growers are determined by qualified majority decision of the Council of Ministers. Agreement on prices in the 2006 to 2010 period was a key element in the sugar reform package negotiated under the UK presidency in November 2005 and formally adopted in February this year. An unreformed sugar sector would have been completely unsustainable, and the measures due to come into effect from 1 July will provide a viable basis for efficient industries in the future.

Tallow

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the economic impact of constraints on the use of tallow for fuel. [67905]

Ian Pearson: There may be several constraints on the use of tallow as fuel, such as its availability and the availability of suitable plant or equipment in which to burn it.

As the law currently stands, the burning of waste tallow is also subject to the Waste Incineration Directive (2000/76/EC) which imposes strict operating and monitoring conditions on any plant incinerating or co-incinerating waste. My Department consulted in 2002 on draft legislation to transpose those requirements. The consultation paper contains a regulatory impact assessment of the implementation of those requirements and is available on the DEFRA website:

http://www.defra.gov.uk/environment/consult/wasteincin/index.htm

Upland Areas

Mr. Dunne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much funding was made available by English Nature through management agreements to (a) farmers and (b) commoners to assist in the management of upland areas and commons in each year since 2001. [71329]

Barry Gardiner: English Nature has provided funding for land managers in the uplands, primarily, through the Wildlife Enhancement Scheme. In addition, additional funds were provided through the Sheep and Wildlife Enhancement Scheme. This was a special two-year project that commenced in 2004, and targeted the particular problems in the uplands arising from overgrazing by sheep.

	Total amount (£)
Financial year	Upland	Upland commons
2001-02	1,955,000	669,000
2002-03	2,368,000	909,000
2003-04	4,635,000	2,306,000
2004-05	5,149,000	3,126,000
2005-06	3,254,000	1,312,000

The figures for upland commons are a subset of the figures for the uplands.

Water Metering

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the merits of allowing water companies discretion in selecting households for water metering. [67899]

Ian Pearson: The Government examined the effects of metering in its review of water charging in 1997-99. The findings informed the development of the Water Industry Act 1999, which provides domestic customers with the option of a measured water bill or to remain on an unmeasured charging basis for water used only for normal household purposes in their present home.

DEFRA is currently leading work on metering in the context of the Water Saving Group. This involves targeted action to increase metering in water stressed areas, and to improve the understanding and delivery of metering generally. As part of this work, DEFRA is assessing how the balance between company discretion and customer choice should be struck.

White Papers

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many White Papers were published by his Department in 2005; how many included an animal health or welfare component; and if he will make a statement. [68259]

Mr. Bradshaw: DEFRA published eight White Papers within the Command Papers series in 2005. The following is a list of these:

Draft Bill—Modernising Rural Delivery;

New UK Sustainable Development;

Departmental Report;

Government Rule of Strategy and draft Natural Environment and Rural Communities Bill;

Government Response to the Environmental Audit Committee (EAC) Inquiry to the International Challenge to Climate Change;

Government Response to EFRA Report on Waste Policy and the Landfill Directive;

Autumn Performance Report;

Annual Review: Controls on Imports of Animal Products: April 2004–March 2005 (this Command Paper included an animal health or welfare component).

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Postal Services

Mr. Dismore: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission, what recent assessment he has made of the (a) daily and (b) annual volume of hon. Members' post dispatched from the House; and if he will make a statement. [71335]

Nick Harvey: The volume of mail dispatched from the House daily or annually is not recorded as there is no business need to do so. The best available estimate is that around five van loads of mail a day are dispatched from the House, suggesting around 18,000 items a working day.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission, pursuant to his answer of 10 May 2006, Official Report, columns 291-92W, on House mail services, what percentage reduction on the normal price of first and second class postage is given by the Royal Mail for Parliament's mail service; and if he will make a statement. [71343]

Nick Harvey: No percentage reduction is offered to commercial customers by Royal Mail using standard tariff letters. Reductions are available only if bulk posting arrangements are followed or if mail is meter franked.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission, pursuant to the answer of 10 May 2006, Official Report, columns 291-92W, on House mail services, if the Commission will consider negotiating with Royal Mail a bulk purchase or business mail discount for hon. Members' post dispatched from the House, and for use by hon. Members who are prepared to bring their constituency post to the House for posting; and if he will make a statement. [71344]

Nick Harvey: In order for House mail to qualify for bulk purchase or business mail discounts, the mail dispatch would at a minimum have to be consolidated and sorted into postcoded bundles; carry typed addresses only; be fully postcoded; have all letters, flats and packages separated and consolidated into postcode area; and be posted before 3 pm each day, rather than the current cut-off of 7 pm each day. These conditions are incompatible with the working practices of individual Members.

Stationery Supplies

Mr. Dismore: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission, pursuant to his answer of 10 May 2006, Official Report, columns 291-92W, on stationery supplies, if the Commission will make arrangements for hon. Members to obtain stationery of a less high quality and at a lower price than that presently provided; if the Commission will consider negotiating a stationery contract which does not rely on next day delivery and encourages hon. Members to order stationery well in advance but which maintains emergency supply arrangements; and if he will make a statement. [71368]

Nick Harvey: The House moved to next day delivery of stationery in 1997 to reduce the requirement for individual stockholding that led to over ordering, wastage and eventually obsolete stationery. This is a service which many Members and their staff welcome, particularly those with constituency offices in remote locations.

The present stationery range includes environmentally friendly paper in particular sizes and weights so that it can be used in a range of printers. The addition of lower quality paper would be unlikely to result in cost savings, given the consequent reduction in the volume of each type of paper ordered.

Vote Office Print Unit

Mr. Amess: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission, if he will list the parliamentary publications produced by the Vote Office Print Unit in each of the last six months for which information is available; what his estimate is of the savings to the House by the use of the Vote Office Print Unit during this period to produce publications previously printed by other sources; and if he will make a statement. [71969]

Nick Harvey: Parliamentary publications in all the following categories were produced or reprinted by the Print Services Unit in each of the last six months: House of Commons and House of Lords Bills and Explanatory Notes; House of Commons and House of Lords Debates; Standing Committee Debates ('Brown Covers'); House of Commons Papers; Select Committee transcripts of evidence. In total 1,491 titles were printed and 27,309 copies produced. The estimated savings by the use of the Print Services Unit during this period to print items previously printed by other sources is £103,650.

Mr. Amess: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission, how many staff are employed by the Vote Office Print Unit, broken down by grade; if the Commission will increase the number of staff in the Unit; and if he will make a statement. [71970]

Nick Harvey: I refer the hon. Member to the written answer I gave him on 12 July 2005, Official Report, column 859W. There are no plans to increase the number of staff in the Unit.

Mr. Amess: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission, what the average printing costs of the Vote Bundle per printed page were during the 2005-06 financial year; and if he will make a statement. [71971]

Nick Harvey: The average printing costs of the Vote Bundle per originated printed page during financial year 2005-06 were £69.52. This represents a 6 per cent. reduction from the costs for financial year 2004-05, which were supplied to the hon. Member in the written answer I gave him on 12 July 2005, Official Report, column 859W.

PRIME MINISTER

Connexions

Mr. Amess: To ask the Prime Minister what representations he has received during each of the last six months from members of the public about the Connexions programme; how many (a) supported and (b) opposed the programme; and if he will make a statement. [70389]

The Prime Minister: Since December 2005, my Office has received approximately 6,000 campaign cards on Disconnect Connexions.

Gleneagles Action Plan

Mr. Soames: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the progress of the Gleneagles Plan of Action. [72338]

The Prime Minister: Implementation of the Gleneagles Plan of Action is being overseen by the Gleneagles Dialogue on Climate Change, Clean Energy and Sustainable Development. The second ministerial meeting of the Dialogue, involving 20 countries with significant energy needs, will be held in Mexico in October. This will further explore the key themes of development and transfer of technology, market mechanisms and economics of climate change and adaptation identified at the first ministerial meeting in London last November. The Gleneagles Dialogue will report back to G8 leaders under Japan's Chairmanship of the G8 in 2008.

I also refer the hon. Member to the Gleneagles Implementation Plan for Africa, which is updated monthly and placed in the Libraries of the Houses.

Government Bills

Mr. Amess: To ask the Prime Minister what criteria are used by him in selecting Government Bills that he will not co-sponsor; and if he will make a statement. [72045]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 11 July 2005, Official Report, column 643W.

Leased Land

Mr. Amess: To ask the Prime Minister what (a) land and (b) property his Department (i) leases and (ii) leased in (A) 1979, (B) 1983, (C) 1987, (D) 1992 and (E) 1997 in (1) the Southend, West constituency, (2) Essex, (3) Hertfordshire and (4) the Metropolitan Police area of London. [72128]

The Prime Minister: For these purposes my office forms part of the Cabinet Office. I have therefore asked my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office (Hilary Armstrong) to reply. A copy of the reply will be placed in the Library of the House.

Ministerial Residences

Mr. Amess: To ask the Prime Minister what the (a) name and (b) location is of each official ministerial residence which is in his gift; which official residences were in the gift of the Prime Minister in (i) 1976, (ii) 1978, (iii) 1979, (iv) 1983, (v) 1987, (vi) 1992 and (vii) each year between 1993 and 2004; and if he will make a statement. [70874]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 9 March 1998, Official Report, columns 19-20W and on 17 May 2006, Official Report, columns 984-86W.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Prime Minister to which Ministers the official residences in his gift are allocated; to which Ministers they were allocated in January 2006; and if he will make a statement. [70875]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Members for Hemel Hempstead (Mike Penning) and Meriden (Mrs. Spelman) on 2 December 2005, Official Report, column 816W and the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Shipley (Philip Davies) on 16 March 2006, Official Report, column 2394W.

Private Office Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Prime Minister how much has been paid in (a) salary, (b) travelling expenses, (c) subsistence allowance and (d) removal expenses to special advisers in his Office in each of the last five years. [69249]

The Prime Minister: Since 2003, the Government have published on an annual basis the names and overall cost of special advisers, and the number in each pay band. For information relating to the last financial year I refer the hon. Member to the written ministerial statement I made on 21 July 2005, Official Report, columns 158-61WS. Information on special advisers for this financial year is currently being collected and will be published in the normal way when it is ready.

Further information is not available in the format requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate costs.

All travel by special advisers is undertaken in accordance with the requirements of the Ministerial Code and the Civil Service Management Code.

Security Staff

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Prime Minister which Government Department or Agency employs security staff who protect Ministers; how many are employed; what the cost was in 2005-06; and what criteria are used to decide (a) which hon. Members are given protection and (b) for how long protection is provided after the individual leaves office. [71835]

The Prime Minister: It has been the practice of successive Governments not to comment on security matters.

West Papua

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister whether during his visit to Jakarta he discussed with the President of Indonesia the situation in West Papua. [71278]

The Prime Minister: In the joint statement following my meeting with President Yudhoyono on 30 March 2006 I expressed the UK's support for dialogue to settle internal differences on Papua. I also refer my right hon. Friend to the Press Conference I held with President Yudhoyono. A transcript of this is available on the Number 10 website.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Amess: To ask the Solicitor-General if he will make a statement on the operation of the Crown Prosecution Service Inspectorate Act 2000; and what recent representations he has received about the operation of this Act. [71019]

The Solicitor-General: None. The Crown Prosecution Service Inspectorate Act 2000 came into effect on 1 October 2000 and established the remit for HM Crown Prosecution Service Inspectorate which is an independent statutory body reporting to the Attorney-General. The legislation has operated satisfactorily. However, the Police and Justice Bill presently being considered by Parliament transfers the functions of the Inspectorate to a Justice, Community Safety and Custody Inspectorate in line with Government policy for rationalising the inspection arrangements of public services.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Solicitor-General what representations he has received regarding the use of counsellor's notes by the Crown Prosecution Service in childhood sexual abuse cases. [71057]

The Solicitor-General: I have not received any representations on this issue.

Where counselling is received, crown prosecutors should review any notes made as these may contain information that may impact upon the decision to prosecute. Wherever possible, prosecutors will safeguard the confidentiality of counselling sessions. However, the notes may contain a statement made by the complainant that would be valuable evidence of the first complaint of the abuse. Alternatively, the notes might contain information that must be disclosed to the defence because it either undermines the prosecution case or assists the case for the defence.

The Crown Prosecution Service, Home Office and the Department of Health have jointly issued two guidance booklets, which aim to assist therapists, including counsellors, in making decisions about therapeutic help for witnesses prior to a criminal trial. These appear at: http://www.cps.gov.uk/publications/docs/pretrial adult.pdf; http://www.cps.gov.uk/publications/docs/therapychild.pdf.

Portland PR

Geraldine Smith: To ask the Solicitor-General what meetings officials in the Law Officers' Departments have had with representatives of the public relations company Portland PR; what contracts Portland PR has with his Department and agencies for which he has responsibility; and what the nature of the contract is in each case. [70045]

The Solicitor-General: The Departments for which I am responsible do not maintain central lists of such meetings. Civil servants meet many people as part of the process of policy development and business delivery. All such meetings are conducted in accordance with the requirements of the civil service code and guidance to civil servants on contacts with lobbyists and people outside Government.

I am unaware of any contacts by my Departments with Portland PR.

DEFENCE

Iraq

12. Mr. John MacDougall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, what the outcomes were of the talks held during his recent visit to Iraq; and if he will make a statement. [72206]

Des Browne: I had a number of discussions with a range of interlocutors in southern Iraq, including senior British officers and Iraqi officials. Our discussions covered the security situation, governance in the Multi National Division (South East) area and economic reconstruction.

15. David Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, what assessment he has made of the effect of human rights legislation on the ability of members of the UK armed services to respond to incidents on active duty in Iraq with due regard to their own safety. [72209]

Des Browne: British military personnel deployed on operations overseas who come under attack are lawfully entitled to defend themselves including, where necessary, by the use of lethal force. The enactment of the Human Rights Act 1998 has not affected this position.

19. Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the security situation in Iraq. [72214]

Des Browne: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for North-West Leicestershire, (David Taylor) and the hon. Member for South-West Bedfordshire, (Andrew Selous).

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the British Army has conducted an inquiry into the strength of the Badr organisation in Almal and elsewhere in South East Iraq. [61853]

Des Browne: There has been no inquiry into militia numbers. However, militias are something we routinely monitor. Assessments suggest that there are up to 10,000 people with various affiliations to the Badr organisation in southern Iraq.

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many British soldiers injured in Iraq since March 2003 have sustained a (a) severe, (b) moderate and (c) mild traumatic brain injury as a result of (i) being wounded in action and (ii) a vehicle or other accident. [65913]

Des Browne: The best centrally available records do not allow us to specify types of injury, such as head injury, for UK personnel who have served on Operation Telic. Nor do they separately identify the number of UK personnel injured in vehicle related or other accidents. However, information on those wounded in Iraq can be obtained on the MOD website at www.mod.uk/DefenceInternet/FactSheets/OperationsInIraqBritishCasualties.htm.

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many attacks on multi-national forces were recorded in (a) Al Basrah, (b) Al Muthanna, (c) Dhi Qar and (d) Maysan province in Iraq in (i) January, (ii) February, (iii) March and (iv) April 2006. [70936]

Des Browne: The following table outlines the number of attacks by province on multi-national forces in Multi-National Division (South-East) in 2006:

	Al Muthanna	Basrah	Dhi Qar	Maysan
2006
January	5	21	2	8
February	2	20	3	16
March	1	43	3	10
April	4	71	5	23
May	0	25	1	6

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what level of co-operation exists between multi-national forces and Iraqi (a) police, (b) military and (c) local council officials in (i) Al Basrah,(ii) Al Muthanna, (iii) Dhi Qar and (iv) Maysan provinces in Iraq; and if he will make a statement. [71046]

Des Browne: Multi-national forces work closely with the Iraqi police, military and local council officials across the four provinces in Multi-National Division (South East). We have re-established full co-operation with Basrah Provincial Council following its decision earlier this month to end its boycott of UK forces. Elements within Maysan Provincial Council have withdrawn their co-operation with multi-national forces on a personal basis, but there is no official or widespread boycott in operation. Our work with the Governor of Maysan, many of the council officials and the Iraqi security forces has continued unimpeded.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what commitment has been given by the UK Government regarding the reconstruction of the Serious Crime Department building destroyed in the Jamiyal district of Basra in September 2005. [71461]

Mr. Ingram: The Consul General and Provincial Governor have agreed that, as the Jameat police building itself has been deemed structurally unsound, it would be preferable to relocate the facility, rather than refurbish it. Both parties have agreed that it would be sensible to move into a number of sites already partially or wholly funded by the UK as part of the Security Sector Reform process in MND(SE).

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what the average daily operational ability is of (a) the Warrior fleet, (b) Snatch Land Rovers and (c) soft skin Land Rovers based in Iraq; [71706]

(2) how many (a) Warrior Armoured Fighting Vehicles, (b) Snatch Land Rovers and (c) soft skin Land Rovers are based in Iraq. [71712]

Mr. Ingram: For reasons of operational security, we do not release details of military capability. On average, however, UK armed forces conduct a total of some 120 to 140 patrols by road vehicle per day across Multi-National Division (South-East).

Veterans' Badge

13. Laura Moffatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, who is eligible to apply for the UK armed forces veterans' badge. [72207]

Mr. Watson: All those who served in HM Forces up to 31 December 1954 are currently eligible to apply for the HM armed forces veteran's badge, as are war widows and widowers who are in receipt of a war pension where their deceased spouse served over same period. Applications from those who served between 1 January 1955 and 31 December 1959 will be accepted from 27 June 2006. Further extensions to eligibility to cover those who served more recently will be made at the earliest practicable opportunity.

23. Barbara Keeley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many veterans' badges have been issued since the badge was introduced. [72218]

Mr. Watson: There have been 240,222 veterans' lapel badges issued up to and including 12 May 2006.

Fleet Submarines

17. John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, how many fleet submarines are operational. [72212]

Mr. Ingram: Two types of submarines make up the Royal Navy Submarine Service. There are 10 fleet submarines, of which eight are operational. There are four ballistic missile submarines, of which three are operational.

Trident

18. Dr. Vincent Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, what expenditure he plans to make available in the next five years for preliminary work on renewal of the Trident missile and submarine systems prior to a decision on its future. [72213]

Des Browne: No decisions have been taken on any replacement for the Trident system but we continue to keep options open for the future. We expect to spend around £5 million this year, and a similar amount in 2007-08, on initial preparatory work on possible options for any future deterrent. There is also some additional expenditure on elements of the current system to keep options open but it is not possible precisely to distinguish between elements of this expenditure that support the current system and those necessary to keep options open.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to publish his recommendations on the future of Trident. [70925]

Des Browne: Decisions on any replacement for Trident are likely to be necessary in the current Parliament, although they are still some way off.

Veterans' Day

20. Mary Creagh: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps his Department is taking to encourage the marking of Veterans' Day in West Yorkshire. [72215]

Mr. Watson: We are keen to encourage communities throughout the UK to mark the first Veterans' Day on 27 June. The Ministry of Defence has undertaken a comprehensive publicity campaign to promote the day and to highlight the funding available to assist local communities to organise their own events. This has included letters to all hon. Members, to 14,000 schools and to around 3,000 councils and lord lieutenants. We have also placed information on the internet and have worked closely with the main ex-service organisations.

EU Defence Co-operation

21. Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he is taking to take forward EU defence co-operation. [72216]

Des Browne: During the UK presidency of the European Union last year, we took forward an assessment of the military capabilities the EU needs and assisted partners in developing these capabilities to ensure that EU battlegroups are able to respond rapidly to crises. We also encouraged the EU to adopt a comprehensive approach to missions, better integrating the civil and military contributions that the EU can make to crisis management and disaster response. This year we have encouraged member states to consider what contribution they can make to increasing the amount of strategic lift available for both EU and NATO operations. We will continue to support the development of a European Security and Defence Policy able to complement and reinforce NATO.

Hercules Aircraft

22. Mr. Devine: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of UK Hercules aircraft deployed in Iraq and Afghanistan have been fitted with anti-explosive foam; and if he will make a statement. [72217]

Mr. Ingram: A programme is currently under way to fit a number of our Hercules aircraft with explosion suppressant foam, but revealing the numbers or types of Hercules being fitted might prejudice the security of our armed forces. The first aircraft fitted is expected to be ready for operational deployment within the next few months.

Afghanistan

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his assessment was of the security situation in Helmand province in January 2006; what his current assessment is; and if he will make a statement. [71909]

Des Browne: The security situation in the south of Afghanistan is less benign than in the north. In the south, authority and the rule of law have yet to be firmly established and, at present, insurgents, drug traffickers and a range of illegally armed groups all pose a threat to security, as they did in January 2006. As anticipated, there has been an increase in attacks in the south as the numbers and profile of NATO troops has increased with the deployment of forces for stage 3. We remain committed to the expansion of the international security assistance force (ISAF) across all of Afghanistan.

Apache Bowman Connectivity

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether Apache Bowman Connectivity will be implemented for the deployment to Helmand Province, Afghanistan. [52305]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 16 February 2006]: Elements of 16 Air Assault Brigade, the formation currently deployed to Helmand Province, completed part of the conversion to the Bowman family of radios at the end of 2005. Full conversion will not take place until next year although it has received the Bowman capabilities necessary for the operation.

Arms Trade Treaty

Willie Rennie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps his Department plans to take to make progress on international talks on an international arms trade treaty in the next six months. [71132]

Des Browne [holding answer 15 May 2006]: As part of a cross-Whitehall team the Ministry of Defence (MOD), the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the Department for Trade and Industry and the Department for International Development are working together towards an international arms trade treaty.

The MOD is fully supportive of this initiative and will continue to play an active role. When opportunities arise to further progress and raise awareness of this treaty the MOD will seek, as will other Departments, to act.

Army Retirements Board

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the membership of the Army Retirements Board. [71505]

Mr. Watson: The composition of the Army Retirements Board is as follows:

Position
Chair	Deputy Military Secretary
Members	Colonel Manning (Army) Colonel Personnel Services 2 (Army) Head of Land Forces Secretariat
Secretary	Staff Officer 1, Occurrence Wing, Army Personnel Centre
Statistics Secretary	Staff Officer 2, Terms of Service Officer, Directorate of Manning (Army)

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many pleas of conscientious objection to military service have been (a) considered, (b) approved and (c) rejected by the Army Retirements Board on behalf of the Defence Council in each of the last five years. [71506]

Mr. Watson: Fewer than five cases from officers, which have cited conscientious objection to military service in the Regular Army or Officer Reserves, have been presented to and accepted by the Army Retirements Board within the last five years. To break down this figure any further would contravene the rules of disclosure as individuals could be identified.

No cases citing such reasons have been rejected by the Army Retirements Board within the last five years.

Astute Submarine

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what options have been explored to adapt future Astute submarines to fire (a) Trident D5 and (b) D5(A) missiles. [70775]

Des Browne: I have nothing to add to the answer given by the then Secretary of State for Defence, my right hon. Friend the Member for Airdrie and Shotts (John Reid) to the hon. Member for North Devon (Nick Harvey) on 19 April 2006, Official Report, column 674W.

Campaign Medal (Iraq)

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service (a) men and (b) women have received the Accumulated Campaign Service Medal following service in Iraq. [71521]

Mr. Watson: This information is not held in the format requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Defence Export Services Organisation

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 4 May 2006 to Question reference 68593, on the Defence Export Services Organisation, if he will make a statement on the purpose of the Saudi Armed Forces Project and the number of (a) British based and (b) Saudi based full-time equivalent staff working on the project. [71437]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 3 November 2003, Official Report, column 437W, to the hon. Member for North Norfolk (Norman Lamb). The Saudi Armed Forces Project currently employs 111 staff in the UK and 62 in Saudi Arabia.

Departmental Procurement

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to conclude a Strategic Partnering Agreement for helicopters. [71483]

Mr. Ingram: Good progress has been made towards agreeing a Strategic Partnering Arrangement with AgustaWestland. We expect to conclude these discussions shortly and make an announcement thereafter.

European Union Satellite Centre

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what services available from the European Union Satellite Centre are being used by his Department; [70382]

(2) what information was (a) requested and (b) received from the European Union Satellite Centre prior to the 2003 invasion of Iraq. [70350]

Des Browne: The European Union Satellite Centre purchases imagery from commercial satellite owners to produce both analysis and geographic information in response to requests from member states. Where the European Union as a whole agrees that requesting information from the Satellite Centre is valuable, this information is designated a "Council Task" and products are made available to both European Union institutions and member states at no additional charge. The Ministry of Defence routinely receives these products.

The Ministry of Defence did not task the European Union Satellite Centre with any requirements prior to the 2003 invasion of Iraq. The Ministry of Defence did receive some products requested by other member states designated as Council Tasks.

Far East Internees

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made in finalising the settlements for Second World War Far East civilian internees. [72195]

Mr. Watson: Ministry of Defence officials have drafted detailed rules for the new 20-year residence criterion and held initial discussions on these with the Chairman of the Association of British Civilians in the Far East Region. Revised rules reflecting these discussions will be considered by the working group which my predecessor, my hon. Friend the Member for Islwyn (Mr. Touhig) announced on 28 March 2006, Official Report, columns 681-90, at their meeting on the 25 May. We aim to implement the new criterion as soon as possible.

Financial Data

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of his Department's (a) chart of accounts and (b) resource account codes for financial year 2006-07. [71562]

Mr. Ingram: I plan to do so in the near future.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library copies of the monthly forecasts of payment and receipts provided by his Department to the Treasury under its cash management scheme for the second half of 2005-06. [71564]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 1 December 2005, Official Report, column 676W, to the hon. Member for Aldershot (Mr. Howarth). The answer provided monthly forecasts of payments and receipts from February to October 2005. I have placed copies of the forecasts for November 2005 to April 2006 in the Library of the House.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library copies of his Department's monthly financial submissions to the Treasury's general expenditure monitoring system for the second half of 2005-06. [71565]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Helicopters

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many times an Army Air Corps (a) Lynx and (b) Gazelle needed a component (i) repaired and (ii) replaced in each of the past three years. [71911]

Mr. Ingram: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Improvised Explosive Devices

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what (a) (i) vehicle armour and (ii) infantry protection has been issued and (b) tactics have been implemented to protect the UK's armed forces against improvised explosive devices; [66280]

(2) to what extent the armed forces are co-operating with other coalition partners on tactics aimed at countering improvised explosive devices. [66282]

Mr. Ingram: We are not able to detail our counter-improvised explosive device (IED) measures, as disclosure would or would be likely to prejudice the security of our armed forces. British Forces deployed on operations are equipped with a range of protective procedures and equipment. We co-operate fully with our coalition partners to counter the threat posed by IEDs.

Joint Maritime Exercises

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the cost of joint maritime exercises. [72362]

Mr. Ingram: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Military Aircraft

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many times (a) Canberra, (b) Nimrod and (c) Tornado GR4A aircraft were cannibalised in (i) 2003, (ii) 2004 and (iii) 2005. [71910]

Mr. Ingram: The removal of serviceable parts from one aircraft for use on another is a routine and temporary measure to ensure that the maximum number of aircraft (which are safe, reliable and capable of performing their designated tasks) are available to the front line.

The number of these instances over the last three years for the aircraft specified is given in the following table.

	2003	2004	2005
Canberra[1]	92	63	23
Nimrod[2]	[3]464	376	309
Tornado GR4A	[4]281	298	207

[1] Figures include PR9 and T4.
[2] Figures include Nimrod R1 and Nimrod MR2.
[3] Estimated for Nimrod R1.
[4] Records for 2003 are incomplete (reporting anomalies).

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many times an RAF (a) VC-10, (b) Tristar, (c)

Hercules C-130J, (d) Hercules C-130L and (e) C-17A Globemaster aircraft needed a component (i) repaired and (ii) replaced in each of the past three years. [71912]

Mr. Ingram: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Military Medical Staff

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the availability of medical staff in the (a) Royal Navy, (b) Royal Marines, (c) Army and (d) Royal Air Force; and if he will make a statement. [70199]

Mr. Watson [holding answer 15 May 2006]: The Defence Medical Services (DMS) are responsible for the delivery of deployable medical operational capability in support of UK military operations and for providing health care to UK Service personnel to ensure they are "fit for task" and ready to deploy when needed.

Operational medical support required by UK troops deployed on operations is designed to be the most appropriate and robust to enable the commander to complete his mission. This is determined by a rigorous medical estimate of the military tasks to be undertaken. DMS manning requirements are regularly assessed with the aim of ensuring that we have sufficient medical staff to meet these key military requirements.

Manning levels in the DMS vary across different specialities and Services. In some areas we are very well manned, whilst in others we are experiencing shortfalls. However, there is no question of British forces being deployed on military operations without appropriate medical support. Manning shortfalls are being continually addressed through a package of remunerative and non-remunerative measures.

RAF Leconfield

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much has been spent on constructing a new search and rescue hangar at RAF Leconfield; what he expects the total final cost will be; and if he will make a statement. [71422]

Mr. Ingram: The construction costs incurred so far for the project total £8.6 million inclusive of VAT. Due to ongoing commercial negotiations, I am unable to provide an expected total final cost.

I will write to the hon. Member with an expected total final cost at the earliest opportunity.

Non-Proliferation Treaty

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent steps the Government have taken to implement its disarmament obligations under Article VI of the Non-Proliferation Treaty. [71522]

Des Browne: The UK is fully committed to its obligations under the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, including those on disarmament under Article VI, and has made significant disarmament steps since 1992. For example, the UK has given up both the nuclear Lance missile and artillery roles we undertook previously with US nuclear weapons held under dual-key arrangements, along with our maritime tactical nuclear capability, so that Royal Navy surface ships no longer have any capability to carry or deploy nuclear weapons. In 1998, the UK withdrew and dismantled the last air-launched nuclear weapon, the Royal Air Force's WE117 nuclear bombs. The dismantlement of the last remaining Chevaline (Polaris) warheads occurred in April 2[redacted], so that Trident is now our only nuclear weapons system.

In all, there has been a reduction of the UK's operationally available stockpile of nuclear weapons to fewer than 200 warheads, representing a reduction of more than 70 per cent. in the potential explosive power of our nuclear forces since the end of the cold war. Only one Trident submarine is on deterrent patrol at any one time and that submarine is normally on several days 'notice to fire' and its missiles are not targeted at any specific country.

In addition, the UK announced in 1995 that we had stopped the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices, and we continually press for negotiations to begin on a fissile material cut-off treaty at the conference on disarmament in Geneva. We have also been more transparent about our nuclear and fissile material stockpiles, publishing an historical account of plutonium stockpiles, along with an account of our highly enriched uranium earlier this year.

We are the only nuclear power that has so far been prepared to take such important steps on the route to nuclear disarmament.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent discussions he has had with (a) the United States and (b) other states on fulfilling disarmament obligations under Article VI of the Non-Proliferation Treaty. [71523]

Des Browne: The UK holds regular discussions with the US and other states on a wide range of security and international issues including the fulfilment of obligations under all articles of the NPT. The fulfilment of obligations under Article VI has most recently been discussed in a multilateral format at the United Nations Disarmament Commission in New York, last held between 10 and 28 April 2006, and at the standing Conference on Disarmament in Geneva earlier this year.

Nuclear Weapons

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether it is his policy that UK nuclear weapons should not be used against a non-nuclear state. [71942]

Des Browne: The United Kingdom's policy has not changed since 1998. I refer the hon. Member to paragraph 31 of Supporting Essay 5 to the 1998 Strategic Defence Review.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the explosive yield is of the Trident warhead. [71943]

Des Browne: I am withholding the information requested because it relates to national security and defence of the UK.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether UK nuclear scientists are involved in the research and development of new US nuclear weapons, with particular reference to the Reliable replacement warhead. [71944]

Des Browne: The Reliable replacement warhead project is a purely US national programme.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the (a) present and (b) future role of Trident, with particular reference to the potential development of a low yield warhead. [71945]

Des Browne: The Government's policy on nuclear weapons remains as set out in the 1998 Strategic Defence Review (SDR) (Cm 3999) and the 2002 SDR New Chapter (Cm 5566). The UK's nuclear weapons have a continuing use as a means of deterring major strategic military threats and they have a continuing role in guaranteeing the ultimate security of the UK. We would only ever contemplate their use in extreme circumstances of self-defence.

The Atomic Weapons Establishment is not engaged in the development of any new warheads.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether it is Government policy that first strike use of UK nuclear weapons is ruled out. [71989]

Des Browne: The United Kingdom Government would be prepared to use nuclear weapons only in extreme circumstances of self-defence. We would not use our weapons, whether conventional or nuclear, contrary to international law.

A policy of no first use of nuclear weapons would be incompatible with our and NATO's doctrine of deterrence. We have made clear, as have our NATO allies, that the circumstances in which any use of nuclear weapons might have to be contemplated are extremely remote. Our overall strategy is to ensure uncertainty in the mind of any aggressor about the exact nature of our response, and thus to maintain effective deterrence.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for how long he estimates the UK Trident nuclear capability could remain operational were US technical support withdrawn. [71991]

Des Browne: We have not undertaken a detailed assessment of this hypothetical situation, as we have no reason to believe that the withdrawal of US technical support for Trident is remotely likely. However, we anticipate that, in this highly unlikely scenario, the main impact on the UK would be in terms of the cost of maintaining the system rather than on its operational effectiveness.

Pension Entitlement (Service Widows)

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans his Department has to reduce the pension entitlement of widows of servicemen following a successful compensation claim for death in service. [71528]

Mr. Watson: It has been the policy of successive governments, applied to all public sector schemes and in accordance with common law principles, that an individual cannot receive double payment for loss of earnings and support where such compensation has been awarded by two different routes for the same incident. The Ministry of Defence has no plans to change that policy.

The armed forces occupational pension schemes pay death benefits regardless of whether the death was caused by service. This standard level of widows pension is not reduced by any common law compensation award.

Where the death of the serviceman has been caused by service in the armed forces, the widow may receive compensation. Where the cause of death was on or before 5 April 2005, this would be by way of a War Widow's Pension under the War Pensions Scheme (WPS). This pension is paid in full. In addition, an enhanced rate of widows pension under the occupational pension scheme may be paid, which includes an element for loss of earnings and support. It is only this final element that may be affected by a common law compensation settlement, where that settlement also includes an element for loss of earnings and support.

Where the cause of death was on or after 6 April 2005, the widow may receive compensation under the Armed Forces Compensation Scheme (AFCS), which replaces both the WPS and the enhanced elements of the occupational scheme. Because the AFCS benefits will normally be paid before any common law compensation settlement, arrangements are in place to reduce the common law compensation instead of seeking to claw back the AFCS benefit that would already be in payment.

Predator Unmanned Vehicles

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what involvement British officials have had in the (a) collection and analysis of data gathered by and (b) operation of US predator unmanned aerial vehicles; [64244]

(2) what information (a) he and (b) his officials have received on the use by US forces of predator unmanned aerial vehicles for the purpose of military attacks in (a) Afghanistan, (b) Iraq and (c) Pakistan. [64374]

Mr. Ingram: UK embedded staff regularly receive information on the use by US forces of US predator unmanned aerial vehicles. UK military personnel are mandated, however, to only get involved in the planning or execution of operations that are within UK rules of engagement and/or comply with British domestic and international law obligations. In this manner, UK personnel have only been involved in five unmanned aerial vehicle strikes in Iraq, and one in Afghanistan.

Redress of Grievance Cases

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many redress of grievance cases in respect of (a) officers, (b) non-commissioned officers and (c) other ranks in each of the armed forces are outstanding after more than eight weeks. [68518]

Mr. Watson: The information requested is shown in the following table.

	Army	RAF	RN
Officers	73	32	11
NCOs	33	21	[1]14
Other ranks/ratings	121	8	[1]

[1] The RN figures do not differentiate between non-officer categories.

The figures show those cases under consideration now at second or third level where the complaint was originally made more than eight weeks ago. Records are not kept centrally of complaints under consideration at first (commanding officer) level.

Service Accommodation

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent representations he has received on accommodation charges for service (a) men and (b) women. [71520]

Mr. Watson: Accommodation charges are the same for both male and female service personnel in the same circumstances. Charges are set by the Armed Forces Pay Review Body (AFPRB) as part of their deliberations on, and recommendations for, pay and charges for service personnel. The AFPRB listens to the views of service personnel, the services and (where appropriate) families during regular visits to a range of units across all services, some of whom have commented on recent increases to accommodation charges. There has also been correspondence with the chairman of the Army Families Federation on this subject.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many complaints his Department has received about service accommodation in the UK in the last 12 months. [71525]

Mr. Watson: Defence Estates (DE), the Ministry of Defence (MOD) agency responsible for Service Family Accommodation (SFA) in the UK, received 338 complaints between 1 April 2005 and 31 March 2006. An additional 2,249 complaints regarding SFA have been received by MODern Housing Solutions (MHS), the MOD's Housing Prime Contractor since the contract commenced in January 2006. A proportion of these complaints relate to the backlog of work assumed by MHS from the previous contractual arrangements. 1,949 have now been closed.

There have been no complaints sent to DE with regard to single living service accommodation in the UK during the last 12 months.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans are there to upgrade service family quarters at RAF Scampton. [71526]

Mr. Watson: Service Family Accommodation upgrades are currently planned at Scampton within the next three to five years, reflecting the station's position in the Defence Estate's Housing Upgrade Priority List. This list is kept under review in the light of changing priorities.

Submarine Programme Management Organisation

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the establishment of a unified submarine programme management organisation. [71489]

Mr. Ingram: Submarine programme management within the Ministry of Defence has recently been unified under the Director General Nuclear, who is responsible to both the Chief of Defence Procurement and the Chief of Defence Logistics for managing delivery of the submarine acquisition programme from concept to disposal. This organisation will also promote and manage any changes in the re-alignment of the submarine build and support industries that will emerge from implementation of the Defence Industrial Strategy in the Maritime sector.

War Widows' Pensions

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many war widows' pensions have been awarded to widows of British nuclear test veterans since 2000. [71441]

Mr. Watson: The Veterans Agency is aware of a small number (fewer than five) of specific cases where war widows pensions have been awarded to widows of British nuclear test veterans since 2000 (though not necessarily because of their participation in the tests), but does not hold definitive data. It is possible that other such cases exist, but it would not be possible to produce a definitive figure without incurring disproportionate cost.

Weapons of Mass Destruction

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many UK forces are trained to render weapons of mass destruction safe and secure. [54376]

Mr. Ingram: There are currently 463 Explosive Ordnance Disposal (EOD) Operators qualified and in-role for all three services who are trained and authorised to deal with biological and chemical ordnance natures.

Of these in-role EOD operators, a limited number have been specifically trained to deal with biological, chemical and non-fissile radiological devices in a counter-terrorist context. Precise numbers are not disclosed as this would prejudice the capability, effectiveness or security of our forces.

SCOTLAND

Air Miles

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many free air miles have been accrued by senior civil servants in his Department on official business in each of the last three years; and how they were used. [70629]

David Cairns: The Scotland Office does not hold this information; however, air miles accrued on official business by senior civil servants must be used for official purposes, donated to charity or foregone.

Departmental Credit Cards

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what facility is available for senior civil servants in his Department to use credit cards supplied by the Department. [70628]

David Cairns: None.

Foreign Prisoner Releases

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with the Home Secretary on the release of foreign prisoners due for deportation from Scottish jails. [72929]

David Cairns: My right hon. Friend has regular discussions with Cabinet colleagues on a range of issues affecting Scotland.

Ministerial Visits (Accommodation)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discounts are available in relation to hotel accommodation used by (a) civil servants and (b) special advisers in his Department. [69103]

David Cairns: Where staff use the Office's travel agent to organise hotel accommodation, the agent arranges such accommodation within the prescribed daily financial limit.

Private Office Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much has been paid in (a) salary, (b) travelling expenses, (c) subsistence allowance and (d) removal expenses to special advisers in his private office in each of the last five years. [69104]

David Cairns: Since 2003, the Government have published, on an annual basis, the names and overall cost of special advisers and the number in each pay band. For information relating to the last financial year, I refer the hon. Member to the Written Ministerial Statement made by my right hon. Friend, the Prime Minister, on 21 July 2005, Official Report, columns 158-61WS. Information on special advisers for this financial year is currently being collected and will be published in the normal way when it is ready.

No expenditure on removal expenses has been incurred. The costs of travel and subsistence were as follows:

	Travel	£ Subsistence
2001-02	24,818	10,648
2002-03	25,787	12,694
2003-04	8,583	8,258
2004-05	12,318	4,738
2005-06	11,419	6,078

WALES

Cardiff Millennium Stadium

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received on crowd crushes due to the collapse of safety rails outside the Cardiff Millennium Stadium on 13 May 2006; and if he will make a statement. [71955]

Mr. Hain: None.

I understand that Millennium Stadium management are conducting an internal inquiry into the incident which occurred at gate 2 prior to kick off on Saturday, in which some 'channelling barriers' were damaged. This will include examining CCTV footage to identify the cause.

Fortunately it appears that no crush injuries were reported as a result of the incident.

The Millennium Stadium has an excellent record of hosting major sporting events and many fans have expressed their appreciation for the stadium and the host city of Cardiff.

Ministerial Visits (Accommodation)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discounts are available in relation to hotel accommodation used by (a) civil servants and (b) special advisers in his Department. [68976]

Mr. Hain: In June 2003 the Wales Office became a separate entity within the Department for Constitutional Affairs (DCA), and therefore adopts DCA's Travel and subsistence guidance, which sets the accommodation ceiling of £90 a night for London and £72 for other cities in the UK.

The Wales Office does not have its own arrangement for discounts on hotel accommodation.

Racial Abuse Complaints

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many complaints of racial abuse in his Department have (a) been investigated and (b) upheld in each of the last five years. [72896]

Mr. Hain: None.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Coeliac Disease

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in Northern Ireland have been diagnosed with coeliac disease. [72513]

Paul Goggins: The number of people diagnosed with coeliac disease in Northern Ireland is not available.

Information is available on the number of those suffering with coeliac disease admitted as inpatients to hospitals in Northern Ireland.

During 2004-05 (the latest year for which information is available), there were a total of 532 admissions to hospitals in Northern Ireland, for patients with coeliac disease.

It should be noted that any individual could have been admitted to hospital more than once over the course of a year and would therefore be counted more than once in the figures.

Departmental Publications

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) press notices and (b) consultation documents were issued by his Department during the summer recess. [19586]

Mr. Hain: I apologise for the delay in responding to this question. This was due to an administrative error. During the summer recess, 28 July to 10 October 2005 inclusive, the NIO issued the following:

	Number
Press notices	44
Consultation document	1

Prisons

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what advice was given to the governor of HMP Magherberry about the advisability of granting compassionate parole to James Joseph McEvoy. [71601]

Paul Goggins: Decisions on granting compassionate temporary release are matters for Prison Service headquarters acting on the basis of information from the establishment. Mr. McEvoy was returned to custody on 15 May. Following this incident a review of the procedures is in hand.

Police Service of Northern Ireland

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what resources are available to the Head of Human Resources of the Police Service of Northern Ireland to enable him to answer correspondence from hon. Members; [65468]

(2) what the average time taken was by the Police Service of Northern Ireland's Head of Human Resources to reply to correspondence in each of the past 12 months. [65469]

Mr. Woodward: This parliamentary question falls under the direct operational responsibility of the Chief Constable, rather than Government policy, and I have therefore asked the Chief Constable to respond directly to the hon. Lady.

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 11 May 2006, Official Report, column 507W, on police; how many police trainee constables were recruited in financial year 2004-05. [72622]

Paul Goggins: I am advised that 531 police trainee constables out of a total of 11,801 applicants were recruited in financial year 2004-05.

Public Consultations

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many public consultations (a) each Northern Ireland Department and (b) the Northern Ireland Office undertook in the last 12 months; and what the cost was (i) in total and (ii) of each consultation. [70459]

Mr. Hanson: Details of the number of public consultations undertaken by the Northern Ireland Office and the 11 Northern Ireland Departments between April 2005 and March 2006 and associated costs have been placed in the Library of the House.

Costs include figures for each consultation and a total for each Department. All costs indicated are external and do not include, for example, internal costs such as staff time. The costs reflect the scale of each consultation and the methods used to carry out the consultation whether in writing or electronic form.

Rates

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of an average (a) domestic rates and (b) water rates bill in Northern Ireland from April 2007. [70577]

Mr. Hanson: The Secretary of State determines the level of the regional rate in NI. The average domestic regional rate bill in 2007-08 is expected to be around £395. In addition to this, district councils each strike a district domestic rate independently from central Government. Based on current trends, the average district domestic rate next year will be £313.

On 8 December 2005, my hon. Friend the Member for St. Helens, South, the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (Mr. Woodward) announced the introduction of domestic water and sewerage charges in Northern Ireland. Bills will be set in line with average domestic bills in England and Wales. Charges will be phased in over a three-year period which means that the average domestic water and sewerage bill in April 2007 will be just over £100.

My hon. Friend also announced the introduction of an affordability tariff which will ensure that eligible low-income households spend no more than 3 per cent. of their income on water and sewerage charges. No-one on the tariff will pay more than £60 in 2007-08 regardless of the value of the property in which they live. Up to 200,000 households in Northern Ireland will benefit from the tariff.

Review of Public Administration

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether local councils in Northern Ireland will be prevented from utilising cash reserves in the run-up to the implementation of the findings of the Review of Public Administration. [72624]

David Cairns: Councils may earmark reserves for specific statutory or policy purposes or for contingencies and it is for them to decide how they utilise these funds. Nevertheless, the Local Government Taskforce Finance Sub-Group is currently considering all aspects of local government finance and any recommendations made by this group will ultimately be a matter for Ministers.

Road Safety

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the Department of Environment will set out the new measures to be taken to reduce fatalities on the roads. [71886]

David Cairns: Several new measures are currently being progressed to reduce fatalities on the roads.

New primary road traffic legislation, on which the Department of the Environment (DOE) consulted from October 2005 to January 2006, will be introduced in due course.

The Department will be making an announcement later in the year on the compulsory wearing of seat belts/restraints on buses, coaches, cars and goods vehicles. A new TV publicity campaign to highlight the dangers of not wearing seat belts is planned for September.

The Department is currently preparing a new Highway Code which will be published in March 2007.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will establish a Road Safety Authority in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [71887]

David Cairns: The Northern Ireland Road Safety Strategy 2002-2012 provides an integrated approach to the planning, co-ordination and delivery of Government's road safety activities and it requires the three main statutory bodies with responsibility for road safety in Northern Ireland (the Department of the Environment, the Department for Regional Development's Roads Service and the Police Service of Northern Ireland) to work together closely in partnership.

A Road Safety Steering Group, comprising senior management from each of the three partners, is responsible for coordinating delivery of the strategy and ensuring cohesive and complementary education, enforcement and engineering road safety activities.

These partnership arrangements are working well and are making a significant contribution to casualty reductions and there are no plans at this time to change this approach.

Small Change Big Difference

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps his Department and its agencies have taken following the launch of the Government's Small Change Big Difference campaign. [72011]

Paul Goggins: Discussions have been held between officials in the Department of Health Social Services and Public Safety in Northern Ireland and officials within the Department of Health in England, in relation to the extent to which social marketing campaigns being developed by the Department of Health, including the Small Change Big Difference campaign, could be applied to Northern Ireland.

A number of public information campaigns have been developed by the Health Promotion Agency for Northern Ireland to promote healthier lifestyles, as part of Northern Ireland's public health strategy, Investing for Health. In March 2006, the Health Promotion Agency launched, "Every Step is a Forward Step", to promote the health benefits of physical activity and to encourage members of the public to undertake regular, moderate physical activity.

Traffic Wardens

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many traffic wardens in Northern Ireland were assaulted in the course of their duties in each year between 2000 and 2005. [65313]

Mr. Woodward: To obtain this information would require a manual trawl of assault cases at disproportionate cost.

Waste Transfers

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what his estimate is of the amount of waste from the Irish Republic being transferred to Northern Ireland in each of the last three years. [70440]

David Cairns: Waste can be transferred into Northern Ireland under the Transfrontier Shipment of Waste Regulations (1994).

Between March 2005 and February 2006, the total tonnage for waste movements from ROI to NI moved under the regulations and notified to the Department was 14,610 tonnes. However, a significant proportion did not remain in NI, but continued on to GB.

The total quantities of green listed waste (for example, for paper only) transported under these regulations are unknown, as the movement of such waste does not have to be notified.

The Department's Environment and Heritage Service (EHS) has detected some examples of sham recovery, where companies claim to be recycling the waste they ship out, when in fact they send it to landfill. EHS is investigating these cases and its Environmental Crime Team will be increasingly focusing on this area.

Estimates suggest that up to 250,000 tonnes of household waste from the Republic of Ireland (ROI) were illegally deposited on land within Northern Ireland (NI) between October 2002 and the end of 2004.

To date, 57 illegal landfill sites have been discovered in NI containing ROI waste. It is not possible to determine how much waste was deposited in a given year as in many cases the waste is decayed to the point of being untraceable.

ELECTORAL COMMISSION COMMITTEE

Local Election Reports

Mr. Pickles: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission what the Electoral Commission's timetable is for publishing its reports on the local elections held on 4 May 2006. [70645]

Peter Viggers: There is no statutory requirement for the Electoral Commission to report on the administration of the recent local government elections other than in respect of its evaluations of the 15 different electoral pilot schemes that took place in 21 English local authority area elections on 4 May 2006. The Commission has informed me that those reports will be available by the statutory deadline of 4 August 2006.

The Commission informs me that it has also scheduled a series of review activities in relation to the conduct of the local government elections held in England on 4 May 2006, in exercise of its power under section 6 of the Political Parties, Elections and Referendums Act 2000 to keep matters relating to local government elections under review. It intends to publish its conclusions in the summer.

Press Releases

Mr. Heald: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission (1) what steps the Speaker's Committee has taken to satisfy itself that the Electoral Commission's press release of 16 May 2006 on mock elections represents an efficient and effective use of its resources; [72429]

(2) what guidance the Commission has given to its press office on ensuring impartiality in its press releases; [72430]

(3) what discussions the Commission had with political parties prior to issuing its press release of 16 May 2006 on mock elections; [72431]

(4) what discussions the Commission had with political parties on the supporting materials and manifesto guides to the political parties produced for its mock election 2006 campaign prior to the distribution of these materials to schools. [72432]

Peter Viggers: The statutory duties of the Speaker's Committee do not require it to satisfy itself that any specific action of the Electoral Commission represents an efficient and effective use of its resources. It is not therefore its practice to do so.

I have asked the Electoral Commission to write to my hon. Friend, and to place a copy of its letter in the Library of the House.

Voter Registration Campaigns

Mr. Pickles: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission how much the Electoral Commission spent in (a) 2005 and (b) 2006 on campaigns to increase voter registration, including grants to local authorities. [70644]

Peter Viggers: The Electoral Commission informs me that it spent approximately £2.05 million in Great Britain and Northern Ireland in 2005 on campaigns to increase voter registration and, to date, in 2006 has spent approximately £1.88 million on campaigns in Great Britain. The Commission makes its campaign materials available to local authorities at no cost.

CABINET OFFICE

Freedom of Information

Mr. Heald: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what steps her Department is taking to improve its response rate to Freedom of Information requests. [70004]

Hilary Armstrong: Valuable experience has been gained over the first year of the Freedom of Information Act 2000 and overall the Cabinet Office is performing well and in line with other departments. It is, however, often necessary to extend the time for responding to a request where a qualified exemption applies to the information being sought and the public interest is engaged. The Cabinet Office is seeking to improve its performance wherever possible and this is reflected in the quarterly statistics published by the Department for Constitutional Affairs that show the 'in time' figure for the Cabinet Office rising from 80 per cent. in Q1 (January-March 2005) to 94 per cent. in Q4 (October-December 2005).

Mr. Heald: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many Freedom of Information requests her Department has received since 1 January 2006. [70005]

Hilary Armstrong: The number of Freedom of Information requests received by Cabinet Office between 1 January and 31 March 2006 will be published by the Department for Constitutional Affairs in its quarterly monitoring bulletin. For 2005, the Cabinet Office received a total of 1,337 requests under the Freedom of Information Act 2000.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many Freedom of Information requests her Department has not answered within the 20-day deadline since 1 January 2006. [70006]

Hilary Armstrong: The number of Freedom of Information requests answered within the 20-day deadline by the Cabinet Office between 1 January and 31 March 2006 will be published by the Department for Constitutional Affairs in its quarterly monitoring bulletin. Departments are allowed to extend the deadline to consider the public interest and it is appropriate that they take the time necessary to reach the correct decision: that is, to protect information that is legitimately exempt and to release information where the balance of public interest lies in its disclosure.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many representations she has received about her Department's handling of Freedom of Information requests. [70007]

Hilary Armstrong: Complaints about the Cabinet Office's handling of requests made under the Freedom of Information Act 2000 are dealt with under the Department's internal review procedures. Details of internal reviews in 2005, where the requested information was initially withheld, will be published by the Department for Constitutional Affairs in its annual report, copies of which will be available in the Library.

Planning Applications

Mrs. Dean: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many planning applications have been submitted by the Duchy in each of the last five years; how many planning applications are under consideration; and when each current application was submitted. [70666]

Hilary Armstrong: The Duchy of Lancaster currently has 10 planning applications awaiting decisions—three submitted in January, one in February, four in March, one in April and one in May 2006.

To provide full analysis of the applications submitted over the last five years would not be possible without incurring disproportionate cost.

Small Change Big Difference

Anne Milton: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what steps her Department has taken following the launch of the Government's Small Change Big Difference Campaign. [71952]

Hilary Armstrong: The Cabinet Office have a number of initiatives that encourage their employees to make changes advocated by the Small Change Big Difference Campaign examples of which include:

Wellbeing Fitness Centre—available for all Cabinet Office employees to use to increase their levels of physical activity. The centre offers a number of additional services such as lifestyle consultation and nutritional advice.

The staff canteen offers a variety of menu choices, healthy options are clearly indicated and are cooked with no added oils with all vegetables steamed. Additionally a new light and healthy option is now available each day.

The option of working flexibly so that employees can effectively manage their work with outside commitments and remote access service that allows employees to work from home.

Cabinet Office have recently launched two Well-Being pilots. These have taken a holistic approach focusing on improving organisational effectiveness and employee well-being.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Adult Education

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many (a) men and (b) women are attending an adult community education course in each parliamentary constituency in Derbyshire; [61499]

(2) what assessment she has made of the likely impact of Derbyshire Learning and Skills Council's proposed funding allocation for the Adult Community Education Service in 2006-07 on the provision of services; and if she will make a statement; [61545]

(3) how many adult community education learning (a) courses and (b) venues have been in operation in Derbyshire in each year since 1997; and how many she estimates will be in operation in (i) 2006-07 and (ii) 2007-08 in each case; [61581]

(4) how much funding Derbyshire's Adult Community Education service has received in each year since 1997; and what the allocation is for (a) 2006-07 and (b) 2007-08. [61582]

Bill Rammell: On 21 October 2005, I made an announcement, setting out the Government's strategic direction for the learning and skills sector for 2006/07 and 2007/08. The main purpose for doing so was to ensure the 2006/07 funding allocations process began with a clear and concise message on the principles that will underpin funding over the next two years. In addition, the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) published 'Priorities for Success'—a document that sets out the funding strategy for the next two years in more detail. This document is available on the LSC's website. These clear messages develop priorities further outlined in my Department's Grant letters to the LSC for 2004-05 and 2005-06 and in the White Paper 'Further Education: Raising Skills, Improving Life Chances' published on 27 March 2006.

Although more public funding will be going into the sector, we will focus funding even more strongly on key priorities of raising participation and achievement 14 to 19 and driving down the skills deficit in the adult workforce.

I reaffirmed our commitment to safeguard the funding for Personal and Community Development Learning in mainstream Further Education and Local Authority funding adult education (Adult and Community Learning) with a budget of £210 million in 2006/07, including family learning, family literacy, language and numeracy and neighbourhood learning in deprived communities.

In addition in the White Paper 'Further Education: Raising Skills, Improving Life Chances' we set out our intention to reinvigorate this type of learning to improve its planning, its quality and to gear it more to the needs of local communities.

The Department allocates funds for the post-16 education and training sector to the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) working through 47 local offices. As this is a matter for the Learning and Skills Council, Mark Haysom, the Council's Chief Executive, has written to the hon. Member with this information and a copy of his reply has been placed in the House Library.

Letter from Mark Haysom, dated 19 April 2006:

Derbyshire Adult Learning Service's Funding Allocation 2006/07

I am writing in response to the four Parliamentary Questions which you raised recently regarding the funding allocation made to Derbyshire County Council's Adult Learning Service (ALS) for 2006/07.

Before answering the specific questions in detail, may I first assure you that the formula by which both the Further Education (FE) and the Personal and Community Development Learning (PCDL) budgets for Derbyshire ALS have been allocated has been consistently applied to all FE and ALS providers across the East Midlands region. Colleagues at Derbyshire ALS accept that this is the case. You will also be aware that whilst overall funding is increasing, resources to fund the FE sector are finite and priorities have to be set. In our allocations for 2006/07, we have therefore asked providers to concentrate core funding on four key priorities that make the biggest impact towards delivering the Government's Skills Strategy.

These are:

Education and training for 16 to 18 year olds;

Young people taking Apprenticeships;

People who need to improve their basic skills of literacy and numeracy;

People undertaking their first level 2 qualification.

The Personal & Community Development Learning (PCDL), including Family Learning and Family Literacy & Numeracy funding allocation for 2005/06 is £4.140 million (this comprises Adult & Community Learning, Family Learning and Family Literacy & Numeracy). The PCDL indicative allocation for 2006-07 is £3.758 million. Whilst the PCDL budget for 06/07 has been safeguarded nationally at 05/06 rates (£210 million) this obviously does not mean that each individual provider will receive the same allocation as in 05/06, particularly since £33 million of this £210 million is within FE colleges and not in Adult Learning Services.

Derbyshire Adult Learning Service also receives FE funding. In 2005/06 the FE funding allocation is £4.1 million, including £230,000 for Additional Learner Support. The Indicative allocation for 2006/07 is £3.516 million, including £236,000 for Additional Learner Support. In addition, the LSC will be allocating £582,000 growth funding for adult delivery within FE across Derbyshire and the Derbyshire Adult Learning Service, alongside the other deliverers of adult learning across the county, are able to bid for these funds.

In addition to these figures, the LSC is currently discussing with Derbyshire Adult Learning Service the possibility of additional transitional funding for 2006/07 in order to help manage the impact of the reduced allocations. Furthermore, the LSC has also agreed to support the investment of £405,000 to create a new Adult & Community Education Centre in Bolsover in partnership with the Derbyshire Adult Learning Service, which is contributing £255,000. In the last four years the LSC has also invested over £4 million in capital improvements in the learning infrastructure for Derbyshire Adult Learning Service, including money to adapt community premises so that they are more accessible for disabled learners.

As outlined above, it is too early to say how many cou , and venues will form part of the offer from September 2006 for the 2006/07 academic year - the LSC is currently in dialogue with Derbyshire Adult Learning Service around funding allocations and the proposed mix and location of the adult learning offer for 2006-07.

The following table shows the number of adult community education courses and venues from 1997 to 2005/06. The number of outreach centres increased significantly in 2003/04 owing to the development of several family learning centres, including those within school premises. However the reduction of external funding such as Single Regeneration and ESF budgets in 2004/05 saw a reduction in some outreach work that year.

[1] Estimated end of year figures

In terms of 2006-07 and 2007-08, it is too early to say how many courses and venues will form part of the offer from September 2006; the LSC is currently in dialogue with Derbyshire Adult Learning Service around funding allocations and the proposed mix and location of the adult learning offer from September 2006. Although indicative funding allocations have been outlined to the Derbyshire Adult Learning Service, the published timescale for confirmation of final allocations is by the end of May 2006.

The funding allocations for the Derbyshire Adult Learning Service since 1997 are detailed below. Prior to 2000, Adult & Community Learning allocations to the ALS were determined by the Local Education Authority and we have no details of these. The NDTC allocation relates to provision transferred to the Adult Learning Service when North Derbyshire Tertiary College was closed.

Areas of education and training outside these priority areas - such as part-time courses for adults that do not lead to basic skills or first level 2 qualifications - will inevitably feel the funding pressure.

This dialogue will consider very carefully the impact of the reduced allocations on service delivery and will be reviewing what transitionary funding may be available to alleviate the same. As part of this review, the LSC will also consider the progress made byerbyshire Adult Learning Service in its ongoing efforts to review the relevance, appropriateness and fit with key government targets of its overall adult offer. This is in he context of significant increases in funding for adult learning across Derbyshire during the 2006-07 period.

There will also be fee income opportunities which Derbyshire Adult Learning Service will want to pursue to reflect the appropriate balance of contributions between the individual and the state for some of this provision - such as part-time courses for adults that do not lead to basic skills or first level 2 qualifications - and in the light of the increasing fee assumption that will apply for 2006/07

Unfortunately we do not hold information on the number of men and women attending adult courses broken down by parliamentary constituencies within Derbyshire. However, the number of learners accessing adult community education across the whole of Derbyshire in 2004/05 totalled 11,955, comprising 9,577 female learners and 2,378 male.

Clearly this is only part of the overall picture, with a further 87,247 adult learners funded via FE across Derbyshire, an additional 4,673 through work-based learning programmes, 6,584 through the Employer Training Pilot and a further 20,303 engaged on ESF-funded projects.

Naturally I am concerned about the impact of the 2006/07 allocation on Derbyshire's Adult Learning Service, and as I mentioned we will be looking to help ameliorate the effects via the provision of transitionary funding. Verity Bullough, the LSC's Regional Director for the East Midlands and Peter Brammall, Executive Director for Derbyshire, are meeting with colleagues from the ALS to discuss this issue more fully.

I trust that this answers the questions you raised in Parliament but if you require any further detail or explanation please do not hesitate to contact me again.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills by what percentage the budget for adult further education changed in each of the local Learning and Skills Council areas between the start of the academic years 2004-05 and 2005-06. [58880]

Bill Rammell [holding answer 16 March 2006]: Our strategic priorities for adult learning outlined in Priorities for Success are to: support adults who lack basic skills or the platform of skills for employability; ensure a wide range of opportunities at Level 3; and, ensure the continued availability of a wide range of opportunities for personal and community development. Our investment in adult learning will remain broadly stable and focused on these key priorities.

The funding allocated by my Department for the Learning and Skills Council's (LSC) major education and training programmes for adults for 2005-06 is £2,851 million, an increase of £183 million or 7 per cent. on the comparable figure for 2004-05. My Department does not hold details of funding at local level. Mark Haysom, the LSC's Chief Executive has written to my hon. Friend with the information requested and a copy of his reply has been placed in the House Library.

Letter from Mark Haysom, dated 19 May 2006:

I write in response to your recent Parliamentary Question regarding the budget for adult further education.

As requested please find attached data showing the movement between the academic years 2004-05 and 2005-06 for further education adult learning, broken down by local LSC area. I have also included data which shows the movement in funding for both youth learning and additional learning support, some of which will apply to adult learning.

These three elements comprise the totality of further education funding allocations which are made to further education colleges and other further education providers. These figures do not however include funding paid to these providers under other programmes which benefit adult learners, for example adult and community learning, and employer training pilots/train to gain.

Each provider's funding allocation will have been determined individually in discussion with the provider concerned, taking account of the provider's performance data and the LSC's national, regional and local priorities. The differing levels of movement in funding allocations will be due to a number of factors, including:

Demographic changes creating greater demand for youth learning in the locality;

Providers' prior performance, in terms of delivering both numbers of learners and the quality of the learning;

Historic levels of adult learning and youth participation; and

The type of learning being delivered, for example, whether it contributes towards Government priorities or supports learners with learning difficulties and/or disabilities.

Although funding for adult learning has decreased within further education, within the reduced total significantly more funding is now concentrated on priority adult learning. Further education providers should also now receive more funding from the collection of increased fees and from other funding streams, notably train to gain, subject to their ability to provide training which meets the needs of employers. In 2006-07 alone this new adult learning [illegible]me has a budget of 230 million.

I trust this information is helpful.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many different adult education courses were offered in Bath in each year since 1997; how many adults in Bath registered for an adult education course in each year; and how much was spent by the Government on adult education provision in Bath in each year; [62944]

(2) if he will take steps to replace the adult education courses available to Bath residents which have been lost as a result of his Department's re-allocation of funding priorities towards 16 to 19-year-olds. [62946]

Phil Hope: Our White Paper 'Further Education: Raising Skills, Improving Life Chances' sets out a comprehensive programme of change that will transform our FE system and achieve its potential as a powerhouse of economic prosperity and social mobility. Its central purpose is to equip both young people and adults with the skills for productive and rewarding employment in a modern economy. In England we will continue to spend between £2.8 billion and £2.9 billion a year of taxpayers' money on support for adult learning. The broad volumes of publicly funded education and training will be maintained; however the balance will shift. We believe that it is right to focus help more on those who need it most,—that is, those without the basic skills or a full level 2 qualification needed if individuals are to become effective and fulfilled members of the work force, their families and local communities.

This does mean that those outside our priority areas may have to pay more for their courses. It does not mean that courses which are valued by learners and providers should close because public funding is reduced. The experience of many colleges, for example the City college, Brighton and Hove, is that it is possible to increase fees and the number of enrolments at the same time as providing safeguards for those adults on benefits. I would look to providers in other areas, including Bath, to follow these examples.

In the White Paper 'Further Education: Raising Skills, Improving Life Chances' we reaffirmed our commitment to safeguard funding for Personal and Community Development Learning with a budget of £210 million in 2006/07, including family learning, family literacy, language and numeracy and neighbourhood learning in deprived communities. In addition we set out our intention to reinvigorate this type of learning to improve its planning, its quality and to gear it more to the needs of local communities.

As to the specific questions of funding in each area, the Department allocates funds for the post-16 education and training sector to the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) working through 47 local offices. As this is a matter for the Learning and Skills Council Mark Haysom, the council's chief executive, has written to the hon. Member with this information and a copy of his reply has been placed in the House Library

Letter from Mark Haysom:

I write in response to your recent Parliamentary Questions regarding adult Education.

Firstly, I provide a breakdown of the information you requested on adult education courses in Bath and North East Somerset (B&NES) and the reallocation of funding priorities towards 16 to 19 year olds.

Personal and Community Development Learning (PCDL) allocations in B&NES 2005/06 and 2006/07

Adult and Community Learning (ACL) funding to B&NES for 2005/6 was £378,715. This can be broken down as follows:

	Amount (£)
Funding for family learning activities (FLLN and WFL)	109,766
Funding for neighbourhood learning in deprived communities (NLDC)	28,802
Main ACL funding covering personal and community development learning and first steps (learning intended to engage the individual and progress them towards level 2).	240,147

In 2006/07 the decision has been taken nationally to protect FLLN&WFL and NLDC activities by supporting them at 100% of the cash value for 2005/06 and to reduce the total budget available to PCDL and first steps' to approximately 90% of its 2005/06 cash value.

This approach has been applied to all providers receiving these funding streams throughout the South West region. It delivers the safeguards on these learning activities laid out in "Priorities for Success" (page 14, paragraph 50) and fully consumes the regional budget for these activities.

Total funding for B&NES in 2006/07 is currently set at £354,897 - please note that this figure is indicative at this stage.

Broken down into:

	Amount (£)
Funding for family learning (FLLN and WFL)	109,766
Funding for neighbourhood learning in deprived communities (NLDC)	28,802
PCDL and first steps	216,329

For comparison the four Unitary Authorities within the West of England LSC area received the following:

Unitary authority	Total allocation (£) 2005/06	2006/07	2006/07 percentage of 2005/06
Bath and NE Somerset	378,715	354,897	93.7
Bristol	104,5534	979,779	93.7
North Somerset	378,715	354,897	93.7
South Gloucestershire	520,441	487,710	93.7

Further Education (FE) Allocations in B&NES

FE funding information is shown for B&NES and then separately identified for City of Bath College and Norton Radstock College.

We have provided the funding levels for the adult budget for 2004/5, 2005/6 and 2006/07 but please note that 2006/07 is indicative at this stage.

	19+ allocation 2004/05	2005/06	2006/07 19+ indicative allocation
B and NES	6,084,717	6,799,830	6,289,303
Bath	3,900,993	4,418,220	4,108,375
Norton Radstock	2,183,724	2,381,610	2,180,928

The main reasons for the decrease in 2006/07 are as follows:

a) Impact of "Priorities for Success" in that the LSC is no longer funding certain adult courses e.g. courses under nine hours and employer mandatory qualifications.

b) The amount of funding is decided upon a number of factors including historical levels of funding, the potential for providing priority provision i.e. Skills for Life and full level 2 qualifications, provider performance and of course affordability.

c) The amounts of funding do vary by Unitary Authority, but this is to be expected as factors outlined in paragraph b) above, also vary.

Secondly, you asked about the activity and funding allocated to adult education in Bath in each year since 1997.

Prior to the establishment of the LSC in 2001 funding for further education in England was provided by the Further Education Funding Council (FEFC).

The FEFC allocated funding to a different cohort of providers using a different funding methodology to the LSC and therefore it is not possible for us to provide the information you require for adult education between 1997 and 2001.

The funding of adult and community learning was passed to the LSC in 2002/03. Prior to that the planning and funding of this activity was subsumed within local authorities. It is therefore also not possible to supply you with the data you request for between 1997 and 2001.

I attach therefore a breakdown of the information requested for the Bath and North East Somerset area from 2002/03 to 2006/07. The figures show the number of enrolments taken up, the number of distinct learners who accessed learning and the total funds earned. The figures for 2005/06 are an estimate based on current activity and the figures for 2006/07 are still under negotiation.

Child Protection

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what progress has been made since the statement of 19 January in investigating the 13 cases of sex offenders in which information was not complete; and in what respect the data on two of these was inconsistent. [47064]

Alan Johnson: In my predecessor's statement of 1 March she made clear that each of the 13 cases had been considered further. In 10 of the 13 cases the individuals concerned had been assessed and, where necessary, additional information has been sought from the police. None of these 10 individuals is considered to pose a risk to children and no further action is now being taken.

In the remaining three cases Sir Roger Singleton advised considering the possible barring of the individuals concerned. On the basis of the most recent information Sir Roger Singleton has advised that in two of the cases there is no reason to proceed further, and the cases are closed. One case has been reopened and additional information will enable us to consider whether this individual should be barred. Police know the whereabouts of this individual and have assured us that the individual is not working with children or in our schools.

The inconsistent data related to reconciliation of information relating to offences in two cases held by Departmental Officials with Police information. Verification was not completed by the time of the Parliamentary Statement, but was subsequently completed.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many people on List 99 have been given permission to teach in an establishment which does not admit female pupils. [47285]

Alan Johnson: List 99 does not give permission to teach. Employers should satisfy themselves that an individual is suitable and a List 99 check is one element of this process. Other checks should include Criminal Records Bureau checks and following up references from previous employers or training establishments where appropriate.

Returning to the question it is not possible to provide this information in the format requested. As my predecessor said in her statement of 19 January there are 210 people listed on List 99 as being partially barred. As set out in the statement of 19 January an expert panel will review all cases involving a sexual offence or allegation which resulted in a decision not to include on List 99, or which resulted in a restriction or partial bar. Sir Roger Singleton's panel, the membership of which was announced in the statement of 1 March, will conduct a review of all cases resulting in a partial bar or restriction and will be reporting back in due course.

I should add that under previous legislation an individual identified as a risk to a particular age group or gender could have a restriction imposed preventing them from working with that particular group, but not with others outside of that group. However, under current legislation (introduced in October 2000) if an individual is perceived to be a risk to children they are barred on the grounds of unsuitably. Barring them on this ground prevents them from working in the education sector in any capacity and also disqualifies them from working with children in other sectors.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many people on List 99 have been given permission to teach in schools but not to reside in a boarding school. [47286]

Alan Johnson: List 99 does not give permission to teach. Employers should satisfy themselves that an individual is suitable and a List 99 check is one element of this process. Other checks should include Criminal Records Bureau checks and following up references from previous employers or training establishments where appropriate.

Barring them on this ground prevents them from working in the education sector in any capacity and also disqualifies them from working with children in other sectors.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills under what exceptions people on List 99 have been allowed to teach children. [43929]

Alan Johnson: Under previous legislation an individual could have a restriction placed on them on grounds of health or misconduct. The nature of the restriction will vary according to individual circumstances. Under current legislation (introduced in October 2000) if an individual is perceived to be a risk to children they are barred on the grounds of unsuitably. Barring them on this ground prevents them from working in the education sector in any capacity and also disqualifies them from working with children in other sectors.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to her oral statement of 19 January 2006, Official Report, columns 966-70, on safeguarding children, for what reason each of the 210 people are on List 99; and what type of ban each person is under. [45368]

Alan Johnson [holding answer 24 January 2006]: As my predecessor said in her statement of 19 January there are 210 people listed on List 99 as being partially barred. She made clear at the time of her statement that an expert panel would review all cases involving a sexual offence or allegation which resulted in a decision not to include on List 99, or which resulted in a restriction or partial bar. Sir Roger Singleton's panel, the membership of which she announced in her statement of 1 March, will conduct a review of all cases resulting in a partial bar or restriction and will be reporting back in due course.

Broadly speaking there are three categories of behaviour which cover the 210 individuals on List 99 with restrictions on their employment; 204 are on the list on grounds of misconduct, which may relate to sexual or non-sexual impropriety and 6 for health reasons.

I should add that under previous legislation an individual identified as a risk to a particular age group or gender could have a restriction imposed preventing them from working with that particular group, but not with others outside of that group. However, under current legislation (introduced in October 2000) if an individual is perceived to be a risk to children they are barred on the grounds of unsuitably. Barring them on this ground prevents them from working in the education sector in any capacity and also disqualifies them from working with children in other sectors.

City Academies

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the projected capital cost is of each of the City Academies that were announced as being in the pipeline in the press release issued on 16 March. [67850]

Jim Knight: 27 Academies are currently open. Of the remaining 73 Academy projects announced as being in the pipeline, 23 have signed funding agreements which include a figure for the capital cash limit. Those figures are:

Academy	Current agreed capital cash limit (£)	Total planned pupil numbers	Capital cash limit per (projected) pupil (£)

Average	29,933,875	1,281	23,370

[1] Thomas Deacon Academy replaces 3 existing schools.

It is not possible to give an estimated capital cost for Academies which are still only in feasibility, as these may change in terms of their size, scope and location. However, the average cost of a completed Academy with 1,300 pupils and a sixth form in a high-cost inner-city area is £25-30 million. The average cost of a new secondary school of this size and location is similarly £25-30 million. For example, the average cost per pupil of new build voluntary aided schools which the Department is currently funding is £23,886, and the total cost of these new VA schools ranges up to £35,578,800.

Classroom Assistants

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what his policy is on the use of classroom assistants to cover for the planning, preparation and assessment time allocated to a school's fully qualified teachers; and if he will make a statement. [71398]

Jim Knight: It is for schools to determine what arrangements they make to staff classes when teachers may be out of the classroom having their planning, preparation and assessment (PPA) time. A number of options are available to them, including using other teachers and support staff (such as teaching assistants). We and the other signatories to the National Agreement on Raising Standards and Tackling Workload, believe that well-trained and experienced support staff (such as higher level teaching assistants), can, under the direction and supervision of a teacher, play a valuable role in taking whole classes, while teachers are undertaking PPA activities. However, we are absolutely clear that teachers and support staff are not interchangeable.

Where support staff do take whole classes, they will be able to help pupils progress with their learning, based on their knowledge of the learning outcomes planned by the classroom/subject teacher. We have made clear, through the regulations and guidance that we have published, that head teachers must satisfy themselves that support staff carrying out this role are suitably trained, and have the relevant skills, expertise and experience.

Connexions

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much the Connexions Card Project has cost; how much (a) has been paid and (b) remains to be paid to Capita for the IT component of the project; and how many cards have been issued in each year since the scheme has been in operation, broken down by local authority. [71716]

Beverley Hughes: The total cost of the Connexions Card Project up to 17 May 2006 is £72.38 million of this, £66.14 million has been paid to Capita. The IT element of the Connexions Card service is not paid for as a separate element. The remaining Connexions Card budget for payment to Capita is £41.48 million until December 2008.

The following table shows how many cards were issued each year from the start of the project in 2001 to April 2006, broken down by local authority.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many learning centres are distributing the Connexions Card; and how many of them are returning attendance data. [71717]

Beverley Hughes: 2,684 learning centres have distributed the Connexions Card and 1,301 are currently returning attendance data.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills why the introduction of the Connexions Card was not combined with the introduction of education maintenance allowance. [71718]

Beverley Hughes: Connexions Card and education maintenance allowance are different Government projects which were introduced in different years. Elements of both were contracted out under separate tendering processes in line with Government procedure.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the expected length is of the contract with Capita for (a) the Connexions Card Project and (b) the education maintenance allowance. [71719]

Beverley Hughes: The Connexions Card contract with Capita was signed in July 2001 and is due to expire in December 2008. The education maintenance allowance is a five-year contract signed in July 2003 and is due to expire 31 July 2008, with an option to extend for a further two years.

Consultants

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will list the reports commissioned by his private office from consultants since he took up his post. [68628]

Alan Johnson: No reports have been commissioned by members of my private office from consultants since 16 December 2004.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what mechanisms are in place in his Department to monitor payment of external consultants; what guidelines apply to their use; who is responsible for monitoring the cost-effectiveness of using consultants; and if he will make a statement. [68629]

Alan Johnson: There are a range of mechanisms in place for the Department to monitor payment of external consultants.

The Department has a number of contract managers and budget officers who are delegated the responsibility for monitoring the payment of external consultants and the cost-effectiveness of using consultants, both individually and across their budgets as a whole. In addition, the Department holds a set of consultancy framework agreements which are monitored both individually and centrally.

Contract managers and budget officers have access to web-based guidance and practical support on relevant Government policy and regulations and, specifically, on how to identify and establish the need for consultancy support, how to appoint a consultant and how to get the best from consultancy.

Following a review in March 2005 on the engagement and use of consultants by the Department's internal audit division and the National Audit Office (NAO), a good practice guide was published by the NAO. This also forms a part of the Department's internal guidance on consultancy. A copy has already been placed in the House Library.

Correspondence

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when he will answer the letter to him dated 6 March from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Adele Reynolds. [67483]

Alan Johnson: My predecessor responded to my right hon. Friend's letter on 3 May.

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when she will answer the letter to her dated 16 March from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Joane Carr. [67486]

Alan Johnson: My predecessor responded to my right hon. Friend's letter on 3 May.

Departmental Initiatives

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the departmental initiatives for each year since 2000 which required bids for funding from (a) voluntary organisations and (b) local authorities together with the total resource allocated to each initiative in each year; how many successful bids there were in each year; what proportion this figure represents of the total bids received; and what assessment she has made of the costs of (i) preparing bids for each initiative and (ii) assessing those bids. [66017]

Mr. Dhanda: The following tables list money allocated to Departmental initiatives between 2000-01 and 2005-06 requiring bids from local authorities and voluntary organisations.

Table 1: Departmental initiatives requiring bids from local authorities (£000)

[1] Bids from local authorities were not taken every year.
[2] This was a two year scheme but in the second year it moved from a bidding process to an allocation of funds by formula.
[3] This scheme that was only run for two years.
[4] Figures for earlier years can only be provided at disproportionate cost because of Machinery of Government changes to Children's Services.
[5] The 14-19 Pathfinder Programme ran for the three years from 2002-03 to 2004-05 but bids were only made in the first two years.

Table 2: Departmental initiatives requiring bids from voluntary organisations (£000) [1,2]

Name	2002-03	2003-04	2004-05	Amount spent 2005-06

Total [2]	—	—	26,930	33,312

[1] Some grants cover a period greater than one year so money allocated to any one year is different from money bid for by voluntary organisations.
[2] Figures for earlier years can only be provided at disproportionate cost because of Machinery of Government changes to Children's Services. No figures are available for 2000-01.
[3] This scheme has become the Sure Start VCS Grant in 2005-06.

Information on the number of successful bids in proportion to the number of bids received and the costs of assessing and preparing each initiative are not kept centrally within the Department. To gather all the information required would involve disproportionate cost.

Departmental Policies

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the Answer of 30 March 2006, Official Report, columns 1165-7W, on departmental policies, what measures are being investigated by his Department for disseminating information about the effects of his Department's policies at local level; what discussions have taken place to ensure political neutrality is maintained; what the target audience will be; and what budget will cover such operations. [68754]

Jim Knight: The Department continues to give a high priority to the release of information about education and skills in all local areas on its own research and statistics[1] website and In Your Area[2] website. Officials in the Department also work closely with the Office for National Statistics and the Department for Communities and Local Government to develop the Department's response to the Neighbourhood Statistics Service by publishing increasing levels of information about local areas on the Neighbourhood Statistics[3] website and other dissemination vehicles. The information released on these websites complies with the National Statistics Code of Practice and is objective and politically neutral. The political neutrality of data is guaranteed by the Department's chief statistician who reports to the Office for National Statistics on such matters. On the recommendation of the National Audit Office the Department has introduced template driven commentaries to ensure that information about local areas is accompanied by consistent and objective commentary that complies with the National Statistics Code of Practice. Additional steps have also been taken to make it clear to users of the information that the commentary accompanying statistics about local areas refers to the national picture.

The Department provides information required by a wide ranging audience for a variety of uses. Customers include members of the public, academics, practitioners, local authorities, other front line organisations and other government departments. In this regard the Department is continually looking to improve its range of statistical products by reviewing the relevance, quality, timeliness, content and presentation of its statistical products. The content of much of the local information released to data has been developed in response to demand from customers and many of the statistics and geographies displayed are relevant to the information requirements and priorities of the Neighbourhood Statistics and Neighbourhood Renewal programmes. My Department will continue to work closely with customers including the Office for National Statistics and the Department for Communities and Local Government to increase the range of information about education and skills in all local areas.

The release of information about local areas is covered by the Department's administrative budget with additional administrative and programme funding provided by the Office for National Statistics and Department for Communities and Local Government.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of the staff in his Department is (a) male, (b) female and (c) disabled, broken down by grade. [69042]

Mr. Dhanda: The information is given as follows:

Responsibility level	Male	Female	Percentage Declared disabled
AA	54	46	7
AO	32	68	5
EO	35	65	5
HEO	43	57	6
SEO	44	56	3
G7/6	51	49	4
SCS	60	40	2
Total	42	58	5

Departmental records of disabled staff are based solely on the voluntary declaration of disability under the Disability Discrimination Act, 1995.

Drug Abuse

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what action he has taken to reduce drug abuse in schools since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [71986]

Mr. Dhanda: Since 1997 the Department has introduced a number of measures to reduce drug abuse in schools. This has included: funding of £70 million for Local Authority School Drug Advisers and improvements in the quality of drug education; training for teachers through the drug, alcohol and tobacco training package and the PSHE certification programme; the National Healthy School programme which includes standards for drug education; and the production of guidance on all matters relating to drugs within schools and materials for classroom teachers. Additionally, in partnership with the Home Office and Department of Health, the Department has supported a major research programme to evaluate the effectiveness of a drug prevention initiative in schools and the FRANK drug awareness campaign.

The Department is committed to reducing Class A drug use and the frequent use of any illicit drug among the under 25s. Ensuring all young people, including the most vulnerable, have access to credible drug education and information is key to this. The responsibility of schools in relation to educating and supporting young people on drug issues and ensuring schools are drug-free was made clear in "Drugs: Guidance for Schools (2004)".

Education Maintenance Allowance

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the budget was for education maintenance allowance payments in West Lancashire in 2005-06; and what proportion of post-16 students are in receipt of the allowance. [64120]

Bill Rammell: This is a matter for the Learning and Skills Council, who operate education maintenance allowances for the DfES and hold the information about take-up of the scheme. Mark Haysom, the Council's Chief Executive has written to the hon. Lady with the information requested and a copy of his reply will be placed in the Library.

Letter from Mark Haysom, dated 25 April 2006:

I am writing in response to your Parliamentary Question that asked "what the budget was for education maintenance allowance payments in West Lancashire in 2005-06; and what proportion of post-16 students are in receipt of the allowance."

The full EMA budget for financial year 2005-06 was £425 million. EMA is a national scheme and there are no regional budget allocations. All young people who meet the criteria are eligible to receive EMA.

By the end of March 2006, 416,184 young people nationally had received one or more EMA payment in the academic year 2005/06. Information on the number of young people who have applied, enrolled and received EMA is available at local education authority (LEA) level, but not at constituency level. In the Lancashire LEA area 10,250 young people applied, enrolled and received EMA.

For the academic year 2005-06, we estimate that around 55 per cent. of students will be eligible for EMA on income grounds.

Home Working

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many people in his Department have been enabled to work from home in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [68000]

Mr. Dhanda: The information requested is not collected centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

I can however confirm that home working is available to all staff in the Department for Education and Skills and currently 1,814 people can access the Department's IT infrastructure from home.

Indian Students

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many students from India his Department expects to study at educational institutions in England in the next five years. [67194]

Bill Rammell: Latest data from the Higher Education Statistics Agency (HESA) shows that there were 16,685 Indian domiciles enrolled at UK HE institutions (13,555 at English HE institutions) in 2004/05. The Department does not make projections of future numbers of students from individual countries.

The Government wish to encourage Indian students and those from other countries to study in the United Kingdom. On 18 April, the Prime Minister announced the second phase of his international education initiative, which aims to attract an additional 100,000 international students to the UK and encourage partnerships between universities and colleges here and their counterparts overseas.

Learning and Skills Council

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 27 April 2006, Official Report, column 1259W, on the Learning and Skills Council (LSC), how the estimates of redundancy costs arising from the restructuring of the LSC were calculated (a) when the estimate was given by the LSC in evidence to the Public Accounts Committee in October 2005 and (b) for the purposes of the figure given in the answer. [70325]

Bill Rammell [holding answer 12 May 2006]: At the Public Accounts Committee in October 2005 my right hon. Friend the Member for Swansea, West (Mr. Williams) asked about

'the redundancy costs to the LSC to date.'

Mark Haysom replied as per the following table:

	Statutory redundancy	Reshaping and redundancy	Total
2001-02	3,083,274	—	3,083,274
2002-03	307,646	—	307,646
2003-04	386,408	11,799,561	12,185,969
2004-05	185,995	52,996	238,991
2005-06	105,231	16,007	121,238
Total	4,068,554	11,868,564	15,937,118

Please note that the data only includes redundancy or voluntary severance payments to employees and excludes the cost of early retirement. This data excludes other associated redundancy costs such as outplacement consultants or tribunal costs as well as costs associated with the current re-structuring exercise.

The LSC's estimated cost of £32 million for redundancy associated with restructuring is based on the maximum numbers of possible redundancies at each band level multiplied by the estimated average redundancy cost. The average redundancy was calculated by taking the greater cost for each individual of the Civil Service Compensation Scheme or four weeks salary for every year of service (actual sample of size of over 3,500 current staff), totalling these for each band and dividing by the number of cases in the sample.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many members there are of learning and skills councils; and what political affiliation each has declared. [70498]

Bill Rammell: On 31 March 2006 there were 710 members of the Learning and Skills Council: this includes the LSC National Council and its 47 local Councils. Information on political affiliation is not collected. However, 107 (15 per cent.) of these declared a political activity on their application for Council membership.

Appointments to the LSC are made through fair and open competition, in accordance with guidance issued by the Office of the Commissioner for Public Appointments. Members are appointed on the basis of a wide range of appropriate experience, regardless of any declared political activity.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether a decision has been made to transfer the powers of the learning and skills councils in London to the Mayor of London. [70501]

Bill Rammell: The Government are considering the results of the consultation on the powers and responsibilities of the Mayor of London and the London Assembly. Its response to the consultation will be issued in due course.

Middlesbrough Academies

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what (a) revenue and (b) capital support has been provided to (i) the King's Academy, (ii) the Unity City Academy and (iii) the Macmillan Academy in Middlesbrough since their formation. [67186]

Jim Knight: The following table shows the capital support for King's, Unity City and Macmillan Academies since their formation until 31 March 2006. Capital covers the costs of construction and any further capital work.

	2001-02	2002-03	2003-04	2004-05	£ 2005-06

MOSAIC

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when the results of the pilot programme using MOSAIC in local learning and skills councils will be available. [65432]

Bill Rammell: A wide range of methodologies, including MOSAIC, are used to help planners and providers develop an accurate profile of their learners. The Learning and Skills Council (LSC) has been piloting MOSAIC and is evaluating its effectiveness. Mark Haysom, the LSC's Chief Executive has written to my hon. Friend with more information and a copy of his reply will be placed in the Library.

Letter from Mark Haysom, dated 16 May 2006:

I write in response to your recent Parliamentary Question regarding the LSC pilot project on Mosaic.

Socio-economic Data

The LSC has always used socio-economic data, through snapshot reports for each LSC region and local area. These reports, which are at a set point in time limit how the data can be used and currently does not allow a direct interface with out large datasets, such as the Individualised Learner Record (ILR). The pilot was initiated by the increased interest of local LSCs, providers and policy makers in the use of postcode analysis as a means of better understanding educational markets. Mosaic software is one such tool that provides this detailed integration and analysis.

Mosaic Pilot

The Mosaic pilot project is being delivered by the Learning and Skills Network (LSN), previously the Learning and skills development Agency (LSDA) on behalf of the Learning and Skills Council. The project is trialling the use of the standard Mosaic UK package in adding value to analysis of learning and skills sector datasets, to help inform strategic planning. The research question being explored in this pilot project is;

"How can the application of the Mosaic UK postcode classification system assist understanding of patterns of post-16 participation, retention and achievement, so as to assist local LSC planning?"

The project objectives that have been agreed are set out below:

To link the time series data from the post-16 education sector with Mosaic UK thereby deriving a breakdown of postcodes according to their patterns of participation, retention and achievement.

To develop a database that enables the national, regional and local profiles to be updated annually.

To pilot the use of Mosaic UK analysis with four local and one Regional LSC and consult on the provision of other information to provide more effective support for their respective remits, in particular those aspects relating to widening participation and raising achievement. The piloting exercise will involve support to Regional and local LSC staff from LSDA and Experian (the suppliers of Mosaic UK).

For one local LSC already familiar with Mosaic UK, there is also an equivalent pilot exercise using Education Mosaic.

Potential of Mosaic within the Sector

The application of Mosaic UK segments to learner databases, along with the development of detailed summary tables at the regional LSC level, should enable more useful intelligence to be available to providers. The potential of this work is especially promising for initiatives aimed at widening participation in a more focused and cost effective manner.

Project Outputs

Detailed tables for each LSC area will be produced, along with a database that allows yearly updating with new LSC information. In addition a report will be produced on the impact of the analysis in the pilot LSCs.

Online Child Protection Task Force

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many meetings of the online child protection taskforce have been attended by representatives from his Department since its inception. [72504]

Mr. Dhanda: Officials do not keep formal records of attendance at taskforce meetings but my Department has been represented at most meetings of the taskforce either by officials and/or by staff from the British Educational Communications and Technology Agency (Becta). Becta is the Department's strategic partner on technology in education.

Postgraduates

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will place in the Library a list of titles of research projects being undertaken by postgraduate students from (a) Iran, (b) Syria, (c) the Sudan, (d) China, (e) Arab Palestine and (f) North Korea into (i) nuclear physics, (ii) biochemistry, (iii) pollution dispersal, (iv) genetics, (v) ballistics, (vi) rocketry and (vii) explosive reactions; and if he will indicate the research funder in each case. [71400]

Bill Rammell: This information is not collected centrally.

Public Consultations

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many public consultations his Department undertook in the last 12 months; and what the cost was (a) in total and (b) of each consultation. [70473]

Mr. Dhanda: A list of consultations my Department has consulted the public on can be found at www.dfes.gov.uk/consultations/ Over the year 2005 the Department for Education and Skills (DfES) undertook 36 formal public consultations in order to inform the Department's policy development. Information on the cost of each consultation and the total cost of all consultations could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Runaways

Helen Southworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what development projects have been established to test services for children and young people who run away or go missing from home or care. [72154]

Mr. Dhanda [holding answer 18 May 2006]: Following the recommendations of the SEU report on Young Runaways (2002), six development projects have tested how best to provide safe, flexible and responsive community-based services to young runaways that can be easily incorporated into mainstream children's services. We are currently analysing the evaluations from the projects in order to disseminate the lessons learned to local authorities.

In addition, DfES is monitoring the progress of a "Talk Don't Walk" project in Warrington, funded through the 'Treasury's Invest to Save' initiative, working on similar issues for young runaways. This project will run until 2008, and lessons from this will also be disseminated.

More widely, all local authorities have responsibilities to minimise and respond to 'missing from care' incidents as part of their wider duties to safeguard and promote the welfare of children in their care. They are also required to appoint a senior manager to monitor missing from care incidents, so that local trends in children being absent from care can be identified and any necessary action to respond to these can be taken, to identify and address any patterns of young people going missing.

School Finance

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the total schools budget is of each local education authority for 2006-07; and what proportion is delegated to schools in each authority. [72359]

Jim Knight: The information requested is not yet available. The Department is awaiting a complete dataset relating to the 2006-07 financial year. I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as the information is to hand.

Dr. Blackman-Woods: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the funding per pupil in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools is in each (i) region of England and (ii) local education authority in the north-east region; and if he will make a statement. [72554]

Jim Knight: Detailed information on 2006-07 is not yet available. In 2005-06 the relevant funding was:

	Funding per pupil (£)
Government region	3-10	11-15
North East	3,830	4,770
North West	3,780	4,680
Yorkshire and the Humber	3,750	4,620

Notes:
1. Total 2005-06 Education Revenue Funding per pupil (£s) aged 3-10 and 11-15, cash terms. Figures include the pensions transfer to EFS.
2. Figures reflect relevant sub-blocks of Standard Spending Assessment/Education Formula Spending (EFS) settlements. Figures include the pensions transfer to EFS.
3. Total funding also includes all revenue grants in DfES Departmental Expenditure Limits relevant to pupils aged 3-10 and 11-15 and exclude Education Maintenance Allowances (EMAs) and grants not allocated at LEA level.
4. The pupil numbers used to convert m figures to per pupil are those underlying the EFS settlement calculations.
5. Figures are provisional as some grants have not yet been finalised/audited. Figures are rounded to the nearest £10.

School Leavers

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pupils left school without basic (a) arithmetic and (b) English language skills in 2005. [68634]

Jim Knight: The answer to this question is based on the English and mathematics indicators that were piloted as part of the 2005 Achievement and Attainment tables.

The following table shows the number of pupils ending Key Stage 4 without the following qualifications in mathematics or English in 2005.

	Pupils	Percentage
Number of Pupils at the End of Key Stage 4	633,464	—
Number not achieving A* to C in GCSE mathematics	301,671	47.6
Number not achieving A* to C in GCSE English	265,678	41.9
Number not achieving level 2 functional mathematics	300,309	47.4
Number not achieving level 2 functional English	264,333	41.7

	Pupils	Percentage[1]
Number not achieving A* to G in GCSE mathematics	47,088	7.4
Number not achieving A* to G in GCSE English	45,691	7.2
Number not achieving level 1 functional mathematics	46,286	7.3
Number not achieving level 1 functional English	44,829	7.1

[1] Of the number of pupils at the end of Key Stage 4.

The trend over the last ten years is of continued improvement in achievement. The 14 to 19 White Paper placed achieving functional skills in English and mathematics at the heart of the 14 to 19 phase. We will expect more teenagers to achieve five plus A* to C grade GCSEs including English and maths and will toughen the Achievement and Attainment Tables to encourage this. We will ensure that no-one can get a GCSE grade C or better without mastering the functional elements; where a teenager achieves the functional element only, we will recognise that separately.

School Statistics

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will list the 20 lowest performing (a) primary and (b) secondary schools over the last five years. [69790]

Jim Knight: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

School Transport Subsidies

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether he plans to issue guidance to local education authorities on the provision of transport subsidies to faith schools in their area; and if he will make a statement. [72157]

Jim Knight: The Department made draft guidance to local authorities on school travel available to Committee Members scrutinising the Education and Inspections Bill. This includes advice to local authorities on their duties and powers relating to travel arrangements to schools preferred on grounds of religion or belief.

The draft guidance will be subject to formal consultation later this year, and final guidance will be published in early 2007.

Schools (Energy)

Helen Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what requirements there are for new schools (a) to use renewable sources of energy and (b) to maximise energy efficiency under the Building Schools for the Future programme. [70811]

Mr. Dhanda: Schools built under Building Schools for the Future need to comply with the new Part L of the Building Regulations which came into force in April 2006. It requires low and zero carbon energy sources and renewable energy to be considered and to be used where feasible on all new build projects over 1,000 square metres in size. The 2006 edition of Part L also requires buildings to be energy efficient so that they emit 25 per cent. less carbon than buildings built to the previous 2002 edition. Where it is not feasible to use low and zero carbon energy sources Part L requires an increased energy efficiency to deliver the same carbon target as would have resulted from 10 per cent. of the energy being provided by on-site renewable energy sources. Many Planning Authorities are also making the 10 per cent. contribution from on-site generated renewable energy a condition of planning.

In addition, the Energy Performance of Buildings Directive requires the energy certification of both new and existing schools over 1,000 square metres in area. This will lead to increased energy efficiency as a result of improved operational performance.

Helen Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what his assessment is of the contribution of the Building Schools for the Future programme to achieving the Government's targets on reducing carbon emissions. [70812]

Mr. Dhanda: DfES have not made an assessment of the contribution of the Building Schools for the Future programme to achieving the Government's targets on reducing carbon emissions. However, schools built under Building Schools for the Future need to comply with the new Part L of the Building Regulations which came into force in April 2006. Part L requires buildings to be energy efficient so that they emit 25 per cent. less carbon than buildings built to the previous 2002 edition.

Southend-on-Sea (Schools)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what are the names and addresses of (a) primary schools and (b) secondary schools in Southend-on-Sea; what the (i) name of the head teacher and (ii) number of pupils attending is in each case; and on what date each was last inspected by Ofsted. [71962]

Jim Knight: The following table provides the information requested for maintained primary and secondary schools in Southend-on-Sea local authority. The pupil numbers are as at January 2006 (provisional).

The head teacher names are the latest available. It is possible that the Department has not been notified of some head teacher changes.

Teaching

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the starting salary of a (a) teacher and (b) classroom assistant in Hartlepool constituency was in (i) 1997 and (ii) 2005. [72615]

Jim Knight: The Department does not hold local information about teachers or support staff pay. The School Teachers' Pay and Conditions Document sets out national pay scales for teachers. From April 1997 the minimum starting salary for qualified teachers with a good honours degree was £14,280 and from December 1997 was £14,463. From April 2005 the minimum starting salary for a qualified teacher was £19,023 and from September 2005 was £19,161.

Salaries for support staff are determined locally and records are not available centrally with regard to the Single Status Agreement which was introduced by the National Joint Council for local government services.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will list which maintained schools teach Mandarin. [71557]

Jim Knight [holding answer 17 May 2006]: Information is not collected on the subjects taught in schools. However, it is possible to provide figures on the number of schools where at least one pupil has been entered for a particular subject. It is not possible, however, to say whether the school has actually taught the subject or whether the pupil has been entered privately.

The number of maintained schools where at least one 15-year-old[1] pupil was entered for a GCSE full course in Chinese[2] in 2005[3] was 500. A full list of these schools has been placed in the House Library.

[1] Age at start of academic year i.e. 31 August.

[2] GCSE Chinese qualifications are accessible to both Mandarin and Cantonese speakers.

[3] Includes attempts by these pupils in previous academic years.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children in maintained schools in England are being taught Mandarin. [70799]

Jim Knight [holding answer 15 May 2006]: The Department does not hold information on how many children learn languages, only the number taking these exams in England. In 2005 there were 822 15-year-olds[1,2] taking GCSE Chinese[3] in maintained schools.

[1] Age at start of academic year i.e. 31 August.

[2] Includes attempts by these pupils in previous academic years.

[3] GCSE Chinese qualifications are accessible to both Mandarin and Cantonese speakers.

Mrs. Maria Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many mathematics teacher vacancies there are in each (a) local authority area and (b) region in England; and if he will make a statement. [71376]

Jim Knight [holding answer 18 May 2006]: The following table provides the number of mathematics teacher vacancies in maintained secondary schools by local authority and Government office region, in January 2005 and January 2006. Information for 2006 is provisional and is not yet available at local authority level.

The mathematics vacancy rate in maintained secondary schools in England for January 2005 was 1.2 per cent. compared to the provisional 2006 figure of 1.0 per cent.

University Staff (Pay Dispute)

Mark Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will take steps to ensure that the pay dispute involving university academic staff does not have an adverse impact on students. [72377]

Bill Rammell: It is a matter for higher education institutions (HEIs) to consider how best they can minimise the adverse effects on students of the current dispute, including making contingency arrangements for examinations and other assessments. HEIs, as autonomous bodies, are responsible for determining their own academic and administrative affairs, including deciding what to pay their own staff. Pay and conditions of service are subject to negotiations between employers, their staff and their representative trade union bodies. The Government plays no part in this.

While this is a matter for unions and employers, I am disappointed that this has come to industrial action and that students' progress is being threatened by this dispute. The employers have made an offer of 12.6 per cent. over three years, which I believe the academic unions should now formally put to their members with a view to ending this damaging dispute.

Unspent Budget

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much of the budget for his Department remained unspent in the 2005-06 financial year. [70472]

Alan Johnson: The 2006 Departmental Annual Report (Cm 6812) published on 16 May shows an estimated outturn of £30,342 million for programmes lying within the Departmental Expenditure Limit. This gives an overall underspend of £468 million—approximately 1.5 per cent. of the Department's budget. The majority of the underspend relates to capital programmes where resource has been committed to local authorities, schools and others but will not now be spent until 2006-07. Final figures for the year will be published in the Public Expenditure Outturn White Paper in July.

Violence

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the incidence of reported violence towards (a) staff and (b) pupils was in the 100 (i) primary and (ii) secondary schools with the (A) highest and (B) lowest percentage of children receiving free school meals in each of the last three years. [66089]

Jim Knight: The information requested has been placed in the House Library.

Young Carers

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps he is taking to ensure that further and higher education establishments support young carers. [69984]

Bill Rammell: Further and higher education institutions are self-governing independent bodies. Each institution is responsible for its own arrangements to widen participation and to facilitate their students' access to learning. Most institutions provide a range of student services for existing students who need particular help.

Carers may also be eligible for financial support from further and higher education establishments. Awards from the Learner Support Fund are made by further education colleges on the basis of individual need, using locally defined criteria. For students in higher education, the Access to Learning Fund, a non-repayable discretionary fund, covers students with caring responsibilities. Information on the extent to which young carers have benefited from these funds is not collected at national level.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Ministerial Duties

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many times he has visited Wales on official duties in the past 12 months; and for what purposes. [70149]

The Deputy Prime Minister [holding answer 11 May 2006]: I have not visited Wales on official duties in the past 12 months.

Ministerial Office/Staff

Mrs. May: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) how many civil servants work in (a) his private office and (b) his office; where they are located; and where his ministerial office is located; [71063]

(2) how much the relocation of his ministerial office and staff cost. [71074]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Rugby and Kenilworth (Jeremy Wright) on 17 May 2006, Official Report, column 983W. These administrative support arrangements are still being finalised.

Ministerial Responsibilities

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether his responsibilities as Deputy Prime Minister give rise to a budget for (a) entertainment and (b) travel; and if he will make a statement. [69970]

The Deputy Prime Minister [holding answer 11 May 2006]: I shall continue to receive a budget in the usual way to enable me to carry out the role that my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister has asked me to fulfil.

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the answer of 17 May 2006, Official Report, column 983W, on ministerial responsibilities, what the forecast total annual cost to the public purse is of the execution of his duties and responsibilities for each of the next three years. [73139]

The Deputy Prime Minister: The administrative arrangements to support me in the role that my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister has asked me to fulfil are still being finalised.

Surveys

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will co-ordinate across Government Departments measures to reduce the number of surveys sent to private businesses. [71055]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 17 May 2006, Official Report, columns 984-86W.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Anhydrite Mines

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the answer of 24 March 2006, Official Report, column 924W, on anhydrite mines, how many bids there were for funding in the current round of the Land Stabilisation Programme; what the total amount was of such bids; and what the total value is of the Land Stabilisation Programme. [67388]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

Since 1 April 2005 English Partnerships has received two applications for funding totalling £4.16 million through the Land Stabilisation Programme.

The current Land Stabilisation Programme budget is £236 million, which encompasses expenditure since the start of the Programme in 1999 and funding already committed and forecast to the end of the Programme in 2011.

Areas of Great Landscape Value

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what plans the Government have (a) to remove and (b) to abolish Areas of Great Landscape Value designation. [70702]

Yvette Cooper: Areas of Great Landscape Value are local designations established by local authorities. Government policy on such designations is set out in Planning Policy Statement 7 (PPS7) Sustainable Development in Rural Areas (2004). While recognising the value of local landscapes, the Government believe that carefully drafted criteria-based policies in development plans provide sufficient protection for such areas without the need for rigid local designations that may unduly restrict acceptable sustainable development and economic activity that underpins the vitality of rural areas. Such designations should therefore only be maintained, or, exceptionally, extended where it can clearly shown that criteria-based policies cannot provide the necessary protection. PPS7 indicates that the Government expect planning authorities to consider rigorously the justification for retaining such designations when preparing local development documents, and to ensure that such designations are based on a formal and robust assessment of the qualities of the landscape concerned.

Arm's Length Management Organisations

Mr. Rogerson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will list the forthcoming Audit Commission inspections of arm's length management organisations. [72278]

Mr. Woolas: This is an operational matter for the Audit Commission. I will ask the chief executive to write to the hon. Member and to ensure the answer is made available in the Library of the House.

Brownfield Development

Greg Clark: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what the statistical basis is of the estimates given in the statements on brownfield development attributed to a spokesman from his Department in The Daily Telegraph on 22 April 2006; [67957]

(2) what percentage of new homes built on brownfield sites were built on previously residential land in each year for which figures are available. [68037]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

The estimates given in the statement were based on information from Land Use Change Statistics (LUCS). The latest LUCS show that in 2004, 72 per cent. of new dwellings, including conversions, were built on brownfield land (technically known as 'previously-developed' land). Claims that two-thirds of new dwellings built on brownfield land are on gardens are contradicted by the statistics in LUCS.

Of the dwellings built on brownfield land in 2004, 22 per cent. were on land that was previously used for residential purposes (which includes buildings and the land associated with those buildings). This is 15 per cent. of all new dwellings built.

There are no statistics on how much of this residential previously-developed land comprises the footprint of the previous homes on the site and how much is the surrounding area. Nor are there detailed statistics on what area of the land is covered by new buildings and what is surrounding open space and garden. It is therefore incorrect to suggest that even 15 per cent. of new homes are built on gardens.

LUCS are derived from information on individual sites recorded by Ordnance Survey during their map revision work and supplied to the Department for Communities and Local Government.

Information relating to the percentages of new dwellings, including conversions, built on all brownfield land and on land that was previously used for residential purposes is set out in the following table for 1986 onwards.

The majority of new homes built in the last few years have been on non-residential brownfield land.

Casinos

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment his Department has made of future trends in the number of planning applications for new casinos under the Gambling Act 2005. [62257]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has made no assessment of future trends in the number of planning applications for new casinos under the Gambling Act 2005. However, the Gambling Act permits only one regional, eight large and eight small casinos. The independent Casino Advisory Panel will recommend the areas where the 17 new casinos permitted by the Act should be located.

Concessionary Bus Travel

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government which local authorities in the county of Tyne and Wear made representations concerning the formula used to distribute the sum of money allocated to cover the cost of the concessionary bus travel scheme announced in the 2005 Budget. [72182]

Mr. Woolas: We received such representations from Gateshead, Newcastle, North Tyneside, South Tyneside and Sunderland.

Council Tax

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the average (a) band D and (b) overall council tax bill was in 2005-06. [72775]

Yvette Cooper: Details of the average Band D council tax and overall council tax bill in 2005-06 in England are published in a statistical release "Council Taxes in England 2005-06", which is available on the Department for Communities and Local Government website at: http://www.local.odpm.gov.uk/finance/ctax/data/sr056.pdf.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what her estimate is of the number of second homes claiming a council tax discount in (a) Torbay and (b) Devon. [72019]

Mr. Woolas: The number of properties designated as second homes and eligible for a discount in council tax as at 19 September 2005 in the Devon area (including Torbay) are shown in the following table.

	Number
East Devon	2,399
Exeter	468
Mid Devon	292
North Devon	1,533
South Hams	4,375
Teignbridge	1,241
Torridge	1,186
West Devon	521
Torbay DA	1,550
Plymouth UA	1,248

Dr. Blackman-Woods: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will introduce proposals to make landlords of student properties liable for council tax on those properties. [71116]

Mr. Woolas: The Government will consider what, if any, changes to make to the council tax system in the light of Sir Michael Lyon's Independent Inquiry into Local Government which is due to report at the end of the year.

Decent Homes Standard

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will make a statement on progress towards the decent homes standard for social housing in each region of England. [71431]

Yvette Cooper: Data on the progress towards the decent homes target are measured through the English House Condition Survey. Data for 2001 are published on our website at: www.communties.gov.uk/ehcs. Updated regional data for 2003 will be published in the summer.

Departmental Initiatives

Lynne Jones: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the departmental initiatives for each year since 2000 which required bids for funding from (a) voluntary organisations and (b) local authorities together with the total resource allocated to each initiative in each year; how many successful bids there were in each year; what proportion this figure represents of the total bids received; and what assessment he has made of the costs of (i) preparing bids for each initiative and (ii) assessing those bids. [66016]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

The Special Grants Programme provides funding for innovative work by voluntary and community organisations exploring diverse ways of involving people in improving the quality of our public spaces, and delivering on the issues to create cleaner, safer and greener communities. No bidding round was held for 2006-07. No assessment has been made on the cost of preparing or assessing bids.

Deprivation

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to her answer of 8 May 2006, Official Report, column 85W, on deprivation (Somerset), if she will list the areas referenced by Super Output Area code which are amongst the 30 per cent. most deprived areas of England. [70237]

Mr. Woolas: A spreadsheet containing a full list of Lower Layer Super Output Areas (SOAs) that fall within the 30 per cent. most deprived SOAs in England has been made available in the Library of the House.

Home Condition Inspectors

Mr. Rogerson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how he plans to monitor the performance of home condition inspectors; and what estimate he has made of the cost of conducting such monitoring. [64343]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

Responsibility for monitoring the effectiveness of the performance for Home Inspectors will be a matter for the relevant Certification Scheme. Schemes will operate to standards laid down by the Secretary of State and published later this year.

Mr. Rogerson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether home inspectors' qualifications will need to be certified by the Award Body for the Built Environment. [64344]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

Home Inspectors will be required to hold a qualification that complies with the National Occupational Standards in Home Inspection. The Diploma in Home Inspection offered by the Awarding Body for the Built Environment has been approved by the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority and is recognised by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister as delivering the appropriate Standards. It is open to other prospective awarding bodies to develop qualifications compliant with the National Occupational Standards.

Home Information Packs

Mr. Rogerson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how long he estimates it will take to put together a Home Information Pack. [64429]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

The Home Information Pack will need to be available before the first point of marketing of the property. We expect at this stage most Home Information Packs to be put together within five days, and we shall review that estimate in the light of the experience of practitioners as part of the dry run.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the likely impact on (a) house supply and (b) house prices if sellers are required to produce a Home Information Pack. [64666]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

The number of properties available for sale at any one time and the price at which they are sold will depend on a range of factors, including interest rates and the strength of the economy. Home Information Packs will help to ensure that house prices are set realistically and buyers are not faced with unexpected repair bills and other commitments they cannot afford.

Michael Gove: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many commercial insurers have agreed to provide professional indemnity insurance in relation to the contents of Home Information Packs. [64945]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

Regulations to be made under part 5 of the Housing Act 2004 will provide that Home Condition Reports must be produced by a Home Inspector where work is covered by suitable indemnity insurance. Discussions with insurers indicate that such cover will be available in the market. Surveyors are able to get professional indemnity insurance for the surveys they currently carry out.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what estimate he has made of the level of participation in the dry run for home information packs (HIP) prior to June 2007; and what the legal status will be of a voluntary (a) HIP and (b) Home Condition Report; [66228]

(2) whether the dry run for home information packs will start before the Home Information Certification Scheme is in place; [66227]

(3) what assessment his Department has made of whether mortgage lenders will be able to take part fully in the dry run of home information packs prior to June, including participating in electronic access to the Register of Home Condition Reports. [66230]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

The first phase of the dry run is already in progress with 49 organisations in England and Wales providing more than 2,500 home information packs on a voluntary basis. More than 150 organisations who plan to offer voluntary home information pack related services prior to 1 June 2007 have already approached the Department to become involved in the dry run and we expect the number to increase as we approach the second phase of the dry run.

The legal status of a voluntary home information pack, with the exception of the home condition report, will be same now as after 1 June 2007 with all components retaining their existing indemnity. Home condition reports will not be included in voluntary home information packs until the second phase of the dry run, which is due to commence in October 2006, after the first certification scheme has been set up. This will ensure that home condition reports will only be produced by home inspectors who are members of a Government approved certification scheme.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what powers the Government have to delay the implementation date of home information packs. [66233]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

Home information packs will be commenced by order, under the power in Part 5 of the Housing Act 2004. We expect to make such an order early in 2007 in order to implement Home Information Packs on 1 June 2007.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what legal redress home buyers will have against inaccurate or misleading information in a Home Information Pack once the packs are introduced. [66491]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

Under the new arrangements home buyers will have the right to rely on information in the Home Information Pack, including that in the Home Condition Report, and to seek redress against those principally responsible for its provision. Home Inspectors will need to be members of a certification scheme and to have professional indemnity insurance. We are currently discussing with industry and others the detail of how best to ensure that both sellers and buyers can action redress arrangements as quickly and simply as possible.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether (a) the police and (b) local authority trading standards will be responsible for enforcing the requirement to produce a home information pack before selling a home. [70603]

Yvette Cooper: Local authority trading standards officers will be responsible for enforcing the home information pack duties.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what local authority searches will be required to produce material for home information packs. [70613]

Yvette Cooper: The home information pack will include a search of the local land charges register and the standard additional enquiries that are currently contained in the Law Society form CON.29 Part 1. All these are currently required and paid for by buyers under the existing system.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will place in the Library a copy of the (a) presentation and (b) handout produced by Mr. Denis Purshouse for the seminar on home information packs on 29 March 2006. [70634]

Yvette Cooper: A copy of the presentation has been deposited in the Library. There was no handout.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether (a) home condition reports and (b) home information packs will be required for (i) right to buy property transactions and (ii) sale or extension of a leasehold. [70636]

Yvette Cooper: As right to buy properties will not be openly marketed they will not require either a home information pack or a home condition report. However, the Government are considering whether tenants exercising their right to buy would benefit from receiving some of the information available in home information packs.

The sale of a leasehold property will require both a home condition report and a home information pack before first point of marketing, unless they are covered by those exemptions outlined in Part 5 of the Housing Act 2004. An extension to a leasehold will not require a home information pack as the property is not being marketed.

Hotels

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many hotels registered for business rates are on the Ratings List in England; and what the average rateable value is for such a business in the Ratings List category for hotels. [70604]

Mr. Woolas: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 10 May 2006, Official Report, column 347W. Neither the Valuation Office Agency nor the Department for Communities and Local Government make estimates of the average rateable value for such businesses.

Housing

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what research the Government have commissioned on the use of geographic information systems for mass appraisal of residential property in the last five years; and if she will make a statement. [70574]

Mr. Woolas: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister commissioned, in 2003, the development of a generalised land use database (GLUD), which identifies the location of nine land use types, including residential. Further details of this ongoing work can be found on the Department for Communities and Local Government (DCLG) website under Research and Statistics, Planning Research and Statistics, Planning Statistics, Generalised Land Use Database (URL: http://www.communities.gov.uk/index.asp?id=1146084).

In addition to GLUD, DCLG have explored, and continue to explore, the suitability of a range of geographic information, including commercial products, new build intelligence from Ordnance Survey and the collation of local authority planning information to improve assessments of residential development.

The Valuation Office Agency has commissioned no research on the use of geographic information systems for mass appraisal of residential property in the last five years.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what plans the Government have (a) to increase density targets for new residential development and (b) to reclassify the brownfield designation of gardens in residential properties. [70695]

Yvette Cooper: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Meriden (Mrs. Spelman) on 7 February 2006, Official Report, columns 1140-41W, and to my right hon. Friend the Member for North Tyneside (Mr. Byers) on 6 March 2006, Official Report, column 1164W.

We will make a final decision on this issue when we publish revised planning policy statement 3: 'Housing' later in the year.

Mr. Rogerson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what plans there are to assist councils which do not have access to existing investment options to meet the decent homes standard. [71023]

Yvette Cooper: The Government have increased investment available for all councils to invest in their stock. Since 1997 the cash available to councils for repairs, maintenance and refurbishment has increased by 30 per cent. per house. 94 local authorities are able to meet the decent homes standard on the basis of this investment. On top of this the Government have made available further options for bringing in additional investment through Arm's Length Management Organisations, Private Finance Initiative or stock transfers. There will be a further bidding round for these options.

John Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what initiatives she is pursuing to encourage affordable housing developments in Easington constituency; and if she will make a statement. [71054]

Yvette Cooper: The Government are working in partnership with local authorities in the region, including Easington district council, to achieve a better balance between housing availability and the demand for housing, including improving affordability. Among the measures which have been employed in Easington has been the successful transfer of their housing stock to East Durham Homes and successful on-going progress towards achieving the decent homes standard. The work has allowed housing which was previously vacant to be brought back into use and has improved the quality of the stock generally.

In addition to this, the Housing Corporation have made available £7 million over the last three years to provide 140 new affordable housing units in Easington. English Partnerships are working with the Durham Coalfield Housing Renewal Partnership with strategic proposals to assist in the regeneration of settlements within the former coalfield areas. A strategy is being drawn up which should facilitate significant investment in these areas including the provision of affordable housing.

The Government have also introduced changes to lessen the impact of Right-to-Buy through the Housing Act 2004 through extending the initial qualification period, extending the period that owners need to repay all or some of their discount and the requirement for owners selling homes within 10 years to offer the properties back to a local social landlord. The Government Office for the North East continues to work with Easington district council and other partners including the Regional Housing Board to address housing issues in the area.

Mr. Rogerson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether she plans to impose sanctions on councils who do not meet the Decent Homes Standard by 2010. [71000]

Yvette Cooper: Ministers will decide on a case by case basis how best to respond to situations where councils fail to meet the decent homes standard.

Margaret Moran: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what was the level of Housing Corporation grant available for (a) general needs housing and (b) sheltered/OAP housing in each of the last five years. [67751]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

The following table shows Approved Development Programme (ADP) expenditure for each of the past five years for social rented housing, and for rented sheltered housing for elderly people.

Approved development programme expenditure by year (£ million)

	General needs	Of which: sheltered housing for OAPs
2001-02	646	34
2002-03	760	41
2003-04	1,171	72
2004-05	1,050	52
2005-06 provisional	960	57
2006-08 planned	2,938	159

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many individuals resided in Government-subsidised housing in Milton Keynes in each of the last eight years. [68142]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

Information on the number of individuals in Government-subsidised housing is not available centrally. Information on the number of council homes and Registered Social Landlord units and bed spaces is published on the ODPM website. Table 115 gives the RSL rented stock by local authority from 1997 and is available at:

http://www.odpm.gov.uk/pub/21/Table115Excel96Kb_idl156021.xls

Table 116 gives the local authority rented stock by district from 1994 and is available at:

http://www.odpm.gov.uk/pub/22/Table116Excel127Kb_idl156022.xls

Andrew George: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much of the £970 million for shared equity housing announced by the Chancellor in his Budget statement on 21 March was new money not previously announced or budgeted for before that announcement. [63872]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

The £970 million forms part of the 2006-08 Regional Housing Pot of which Regional Housing Boards recommended that around £3.9 billion be channelled through the Housing Corporation's Affordable Housing Programme for the provision of affordable housing between 2006-08. The announcement provided details on how one element of the Affordable Housing Programme would be spent.

Liverpool City Council

Jane Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what resources are being deployed by the Audit Commission to ensure that Liverpool city council social services department complies with national standards of service delivery in care of (a) the elderly and (b) vulnerable adults. [72461]

Mr. Woolas: The Audit Commission is not the body responsible for ensuring national standards are being met in Liverpool city council's social services department. That responsibility falls to the Commission for Social Care Inspection, which is the independent inspectorate in England responsible for regulating and inspecting all social care providers, whether in the public or independent sector.

Local Government

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what recent assessment she has made of the impact of councillors' allowances on the efficient operation of local government in England and Wales; and if she will make a statement. [69955]

Mr. Woolas: No assessment has been made of the sort referred to. It is a matter for each local authority to draw up its own scheme for councillors' allowances, having regard to the recommendations of its remuneration panel.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what steps the Government are taking to ensure that local authorities are (a) efficient, (b) transparent and (c) accountable. [70075]

Mr. Woolas: Councils have an annual 2.5 per cent. efficiency target. A guide to the assistance available and update on the substantial progress made is contained in the report "Delivering Efficiency in Local Services: One Year On", published February 2006 and available at: www.rcoe.gov.uk/rce/aio/16537

Local government is indeed transparent and accountable for efficiency. Annual efficiency statements are published by each council and may be accessed at: www.communities.gov.uk/index.asp?id=1134484

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what guidance the Government have given to local authorities on (a) contract compliance and (b) imposing conditions in the procurement process unrelated to cost, quality or quantity of services. [70654]

Mr. Woolas: Section 17 of the Local Government Act 1988 prevents authorities from introducing "non-commercial" considerations, such as the political affiliations of contractors, into the procurement process.

There is a range of advice and guidance on good procurement which local authorities can draw on. Sources include the Office of Government Commerce (OGC), the Public Private Partnership Programme (the 4ps) and the Improvement and Development Agency (IDeA). Specific guidance on local government procurement includes the joint ODPM/ Local Government Association 'National Procurement Strategy for Local Government'. This makes clear that council requirements can also include social, environmental and other strategic objectives that are relevant to the subject of the contract.

Mr. Rogerson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment she has made of the impact on a local authority of entering into a local area agreement. [71034]

Mr. Woolas: My Department has commissioned a consortium led by the Office for Public Management to evaluate the negotiation process and initial impacts of pilot and second round local area agreements (LAAs). The first report is available at http://www.odpm.gov.uk/index.asp?id=1161635. A second report will be published in the summer.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Meriden of 26 April 2006, Official Report, column 1198W, on local government finance, if she will place in the Library a copy of the accompanying manual and documentation for the toolkit in (a) hard copy and (b) CD-rom. [70559]

Mr. Woolas: There is no manual or documentation to accompany the toolkit.

My Society

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how much funding was allocated to My Society in each of the last five years; and what other support has been provided to the organisation. [70153]

Mr. Woolas: A grant of £250,000 was allocated to West Sussex county council under the Local e-Government e-Innovations Round 1 Programme in 2004-05 for My Society.

Further support of £163,150 was made available to the organisation through the e-Innovations Product and Marketisation strand via Kirklees MBC who were grant aided to carry out this role on behalf of the Local e-Government Programme.

Parliamentary Questions

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government when she will reply to question 63872, on shared equity housing, tabled by the hon. Member for St. Ives on 30 March. [72741]

Yvette Cooper: I have answered the hon. Member's question today. I apologise for the delay in replying.

Passenger Transport Authorities

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what measures are being taken by her Department to avoid a shortfall in funding for individual passenger transport authorities to cover the cost in future years of the concessionary bus travel scheme announced in the 2005 Budget. [72162]

Mr. Woolas: Funding for the concessionary bus travel scheme announced in the 2005 Budget has been distributed to councils through formula grant, which is unhypothecated. It is up to councils to decide how to use their resources, consistent with delivering their statutory responsibilities. In the case of Tyne and Wear, I have had a number of discussions with stakeholders to explore whether a local solution can be found to address particular local issues.

Pedestrianised Town Centres

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what estimate she has made of the number of towns in England which pedestrianised their town centres and subsequently opened them up to (a) all vehicles and (b) buses and taxis only; and if she will make a statement. [69872]

Gillian Merron: I have been asked to reply.

Information about the number of authorities which have been pedestrianised is not held centrally and the answer could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Planning

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment her Department has made of the effect of the implementation of special protection areas on the planning process. [70694]

Yvette Cooper: Special protection areas (SPAs), designated under the EC birds directive, receive statutory protection through the Conservation (Natural Habitats &c.) Regulations 1994. Since 1994 planning policy has reflected the statutory protection given to SPAs, and planning permission for development which will have a significant effect on them can only be given in tightly defined circumstances. Details are set out in the joint ODPM/DEFRA circular: "Biodiversity and Geological Conservation—Statutory obligations and their impact within the planning system" (ODPM June 2005, DEFRA January 2005).

For the Thames Basin Heaths SPA, the Government have been working in partnership with English Nature, the South East England Regional Assembly, local authorities and other stakeholders to develop a strategic approach to the assessment of planning applications that could impact on the SPA. The Government's aim is to ensure the delivery of much needed housing, while ensuring that the SPA is given appropriate protection.

Mr. Rogerson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will list the planning applications called in by her Department and its predecessor since 1997. [71033]

Yvette Cooper: A list of all planning applications called in by the Department for Communities and Local Government and its predecessor departments since 1 April 1999 has been placed in the Library of the House. Information on cases called in before 1 April 1999, when the Planning Inspectorate database became operational, could only be compiled at disproportionate cost.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what estimate she has made of the amount which will be raised by the proposed planning gain supplement to fund local infrastructure. [72422]

John Healey: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Meriden (Mrs. Spelman) on 6 February 2006, Official Report, column 1034W.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what changes the Government have made to planning fees since 2001. [70717]

Yvette Cooper: Planning fees were increased by 14 per cent. in 2002 and again by an average 39 per cent. in April 2005. Fees were increased on both occasions to enable authorities to recover more of the costs of handling planning applications.

Regional Government

Mike Penning: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the annual cost of regional-level government is for each region. [68507]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

The Greater London Authority (GLA) will receive £37.868 million this year (2006-07) from central Government for the core GLA itself (through the General GLA Grant). The Mayor is also expected to raise a further £26.9 million for the core GLA from the GLA precept on London council tax payers, putting the annual cost of the GLA at £64.8 million.

For details of 2006-07 central Government grant to the eight regional assemblies outside London, I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 121W.

Register of Home Condition Reports

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what private sector organisations will have access to the register of home condition reports. [66223]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

Access to the registers of home condition reports will be controlled by regulations. This will be limited to buyers and sellers, their advisers and mortgage lenders, and those monitoring the performance and quality of the reports.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what discussions his Department has had with the Information Commissioner on the proposed register of home condition reports electronic database. [66229]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

We have discussed the proposed home condition report register with the Information Commissioner's Office, who have confirmed they are satisfied with the proposals. Access to the register will be tightly controlled by regulations. Only sellers, buyers, their advisers and mortgage lenders and those monitoring the performance and quality of home condition reports will have access.

Science Cities

Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government when her Department expects to be presented with implementation plans from the regional development agencies for the development of Science Cities; and if she will make a statement. [71040]

Margaret Hodge: I have been asked to reply.

Science Cities is a policy initiative led by the regional development agencies. RDAs are working with other Science City partners to develop detailed implementation plans for Science Cities, in line with regional economic development strategies. The six Science Cities—Birmingham, Bristol, Manchester, Newcastle, Nottingham and York—will present progress reports at the Science Cities National summit, to be held in Manchester at the end of May. The summit will also provide an opportunity to share best practice and consider how national and regional policies can best support Science Cities.

Social Services

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the standard spending assessment was for social services in the south-west in each year since 1997. [72786]

Mr. Woolas: The following tables show the standard spending assessment, formula spending share and relative needs formula for children's social care. Standard spending assessments were replaced in 2003-04 by formula spending shares. A new system of relative needs formulae was introduced for 2006-07. All these formulae look at an authority's relative needs on a particular service.

The Government do not regard any of these measures as an assessment of how much an authority should spend on a particular service.

	Standard spending assessment for personal social services (£ million)
1997-98	641.764
1998-99	682.035
1999-2000	717.628

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the social services standard spending assessment was for children's services in Cornwall in each year since 2001. [72788]

Mr. Woolas: The following tables show the standard spending assessment, formula spending share and relative needs formula for children's social care. Standard spending assessments were replaced in 2003-04 by formula spending shares. A new system as introduced for 2006-07. The relative needs formulae look at an authority's relative need to spend on a particular service and are therefore not expressed in pounds.

Please note that during this period none of these measures were the Government's assessment of how much an authority should spend on a particular service nor were they grant. They are simply formula based on the socio-economic and demographic characteristics of an authority.

Special Advisers

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many special advisers her Department will employ. [70585]

Angela E. Smith: My Department will employ three special advisers.

Thames Basin

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the population density is of the Thames Basin Heaths Special Protection Area. [70178]

Mr. Woolas: The best approximate estimate that can be given is 1 per hectare.

Trees

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much money the Government have spent on producing research published within the Research for Amenity Trees series. [67029]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

A total of £1.95 million was spent on producing research published within the Research for Amenity Trees series. The cost for each publication is set out as follows:

Research for amenity trees series

Number	Title	Date	Cost of research (£)
1	Trees in Towns	1993	184,188
2	Diagnosis of Ill Health in Trees	1994	[1]769,750

Underground Electricity Cables

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what estimate she has made of the likely additional cost of requiring new houses to be serviced by underground electricity cables. [69978]

Yvette Cooper: Most new urban houses have access to electricity services via low-voltage underground cables, although some developments in rural areas may have a mix of underground and overhead service connections. The cost of providing underground electricity distribution lines to particular housing developments will vary from case to case. Due to the numbers and variability of new development, this information is not practical to collate centrally.

Valuation Office Agency

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will place in the Library a copy of the (a) presentation and (b) handouts produced by Diane Leggo, Director of Council Tax for the Valuation Office Agency, for the lecture on 23 November 2005 at the CPD Foundation. [66322]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

A copy of the presentation has been placed in the Library of the House. The handouts were a copy of this presentation.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the answer of 27 March 2006, Official Report, column 826W, on housing, whether the Valuation Office Agency will have access to the Register of Home Condition reports to assist them in the performance of their statutory duties. [66397]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

No.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to the answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Meriden of 26 April 2006, Official Report, columns 1200-01W, on the Valuation Office Agency (VOA), why publication of the VOA document "Dwellinghouse Coding—An Illustrated Guide" would breach privacy; what advice she has requested from the Information Commissioner on whether publication would breach privacy; and what categories of personal information the document contains. [70561]

Mr. Woolas: The document—which is for the use of Valuation Office Agency listing officers and their staff only—contains photographs of individual properties. There is potential for the privacy of the occupiers of these properties to be breached if the illustrated guide is placed in the public domain. No advice has been sought from the Information Commissioner.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to the answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Meriden of 27 April 2006, Official Report, columns 1283-84W, on the Valuation Office Agency, whether the Tenet IT Mapping software includes photographic data and vector data; and what data sources are used to provide the mapping information. [70562]

Mr. Woolas: The Tenet IT Mapping software used by the Valuation Office Agency (VOA) does not include (a) photographic data but does include (b) vector data in the form of Land Line and MasterMap products.

The source data that underpins the Tenet IT Mapping software comprises the following map layers provided by Ordnance Survey: Land Line; MasterMap; 1:10,000 Scale Black and White Raster Map; 1:25,000, 1:50,000 and 1:250,000 Scales Colour Raster Map; Postcode Map; Boundary-Line; and Address Point.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to the answer of 26 April 2006, Official Report, columns 1203-04W, on the Valuation Office Agency, if she will place in the Library a list of the 10,000 localities in England. [70564]

Mr. Woolas: To list the localities is a task that would involve disproportionate cost. Each of the localities would need to be given an identifiable name—their existing reference numbers are meaningless in isolation—and this task would need to be undertaken for each of 354 local authority areas in England.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to the answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Meriden, of 25 January 2006, Official Report, column 2190W, on the Valuation Office Agency (VOA), whether the VOA has supplied information to Ordnance Survey relating to domestic properties. [70566]

Mr. Woolas: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given, to the hon. Member for Meriden (Mrs. Spelman), on 25 January 2006, Official Report, column 2190W. The Valuation Office Agency has recently supplied samples of addresses drawn from the council tax valuation list, followed by compilations of similar data covering the whole of England and Wales.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what use the Valuation Office Agency makes of people's panels for (a) business rates and (b) council tax purposes. [70579]

Mr. Woolas: The Valuation Office Agency has not used people's panels for business rates purposes. The Agency has used them for council tax purposes to better understand council taxpayers' understanding and perceptions of the valuation and banding system and to explore reactions to communications material under development to ensure that this would achieve its objectives of being clear and readily understood.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will list the (a) data and (b) software the Valuation Office Agency uses that is provided by Ordnance Survey. [70650]

Mr. Woolas: The data provided by Ordnance Survey for use by the Valuation Office Agency (VOA) in its mapping software is: Land Line; MasterMap; 1:10,000 Scale Black and White Raster Map; 1:25,000, 1:50,000 and 1:250,000 Scales Colour Raster Map; Postcode Map; and Boundary-Line. The Ordnance Survey does not provide any software to the VOA.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will place in the Library a copy of the guidance that the Valuation Office Agency uses to assess and value composite/mixed hereditaments. [70693]

Mr. Woolas: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Meriden (Mrs. Spelman) on 19 January 2006, Official Report, column 1546W, and the answers given to him on 26 April 2006, Official Report, column 1203W, and 8 May 2006, Official Report, columns 79W and 96W.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how much the Valuation Office Agency has paid in each of the last five years for (a) products and (b) information from Ordnance Survey. [70727]

Mr. Woolas: The Valuation Office Agency pays for access to Ordnance Survey's digital mapping products. This is the only material purchased by the Agency.

The total amounts paid by the Valuation Office Agency for these products provided by Ordnance Survey in the last five years are as follows:

2001-02	[1]—
2002-03	[1]—
2003-04	375,000.00
2004-05	375,000.00
2005-06	375,000.00

[1] Details not available—could be provided only at disproportionate cost

Valuebill Project

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what electronic data the Valuation Office Agency will receive from local authorities as a consequence of the rollout of the Valuebill project. [70642]

Mr. Woolas: Electronic data the Valuation Office Agency will receive from local authorities as a consequence of the rollout of the Valuebill project is as follows:

Billing authority name

Billing authority identity code

Process date (of file)
Entry date and time (of file creation)
Number of records
Date sent
The BA transaction
BA identity number
BA report number
Type of tax
Indicated date of change
Property plan reference
Source of update
Remarks
Reason for report
The property address
The current Valuation or Rating List entry
Occupier contact.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Advertising

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much was spent on advertising by her Department in each of the last three years. [70483]

Mr. Lammy: The Department's spend on advertising in each of the last three years is as follows:

	Spend (£)
2003-04	20,987
2004-05	37,085
2005-06	139,578

Art Theft

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent discussions she has had with the Home Secretary about the theft of stolen works of art from private collections. [72294]

Mr. Lammy: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has had no recent discussions with the Home Secretary about the theft of stolen works of art from private collections.

Correspondence

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she will reply to the letter of 24 January from the hon. Member for Aylesbury to the then Under-Secretary on the impact of the Licensing Act 2003 on Longwick Village hall. [71169]

Mr. Woodward: I will reply to the hon. Member shortly. I am sorry that there has been a delay in responding.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Isle of Wight dated 15 April 2006 concerning the Osborne Estates Act 1902. [72494]

Mr. Lammy: I replied to the hon. Member's letter on 20 May.

Departmental Advisers

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much has been paid in (a) salary, (b) travelling expenses, (c) subsistence allowance and (d) removal expenses to special advisers in her private office in each of the last five years. [69124]

Mr. Lammy: Since 2003, the Government have published on an annual basis the names and overall cost of special advisers and the number in each payband. For information relating to the last financial year I refer the hon. Member to the written ministerial statement made by my right hon. Friend, the Prime Minister on 21 July 2005, Official Report, columns 158-61WS. Information on special advisers for this financial year is currently being collected and will be published in the normal way when it is ready.

The following table shows available data on expenditure on travel and subsistence. An analysis by type of expenditure rating is not recorded on the Department's accounting system and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Financial year	Travel and subsistence (£)
2005-06[1]	6,821.47
2004-05	1,838.15
2003-04	1,156.93
2002-03	2,569.52

[1] Subject to final resource accounting.

All official travel by special advisers is undertaken in accordance with the requirements of the Ministerial Code and the Civil Service Management Code.

Hunting

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether (a) she, (b) Ministers and (c) an official instructed that hunting be omitted from her Department's sponsored cultural icons survey. [72519]

Mr. Lammy: No Ministers or officials in the Department for Culture, Media and Sport, has instructed the editorial team at the ICONS project on what to exclude from the list of nominated items. Such decisions are entirely a matter for the project's editorial team governed by an independent Advisory Board. Fox-hunting as an icon has not been omitted from the ICONS project. Following a meeting of the Advisory Board on 4 May, fox-hunting is still under active consideration and may well feature in a future release.

Information Technology

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the (a) originally estimated, (b) most recently estimated and (c) outturn cost, was in each of the five largest information technology contracts agreed with outside suppliers over the last five years. [71802]

Mr. Lammy: My Department has not agreed any information technology contracts of this kind over the last five years.

Ministerial Visits (Accommodation)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the total cost was of overnight accommodation for (a) civil servants and (b) special advisers in her Department staying overnight in (i) mainland Great Britain, (ii) Northern Ireland, (iii) the Republic of Ireland and (iv) other countries in each of the last three years. [69122]

Mr. Lammy: The following table shows departmental expenditure on travel and subsistence in each of the last three years. An analysis of expenditure by nation and region is not recorded on the Department's accounting system and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Financial year	Civil servants UK T&S	Civil servants overseas T&S	Special advisers UK T&S	Special advisers overseas T&S
2005-06	271,566.53	283,747.83	2,693.82	4,127.65
2004-05	217,415.85	278,761.80	1,838.15	0
2003-04	238,273.33	235,210.16	1,156.93	0

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discounts are available in relation to hotel accommodation used by (a) civil servants and (b) special advisers in her Department. [69123]

Mr. Lammy: While the Department can obtain Government discounted hotel accommodation rates through the hotel booking agent Expotel, the main criterion is best value for money. An analysis of full and discounted rates is not recorded on the Department's accounting system and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Municipal Sports Facilities

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the effect on municipal sports facilities of increased energy prices; and if she will make a statement. [70981]

Malcolm Wicks: I have been asked to reply.

I take the recent increases in energy prices very seriously and the Government are very concerned about the impact on all sectors in the UK. In the past year global fossil fuel prices have increased and this has fed through to the UK. Over the past decade energy prices in the UK have been amongst the cheapest in the EU, but I do recognise the serious recent difficulties for all sectors. However, I remain optimistic about investment by local authorities in sports facilities, which will amount to some £1 billion over the next three years. In addition, since 1997 Government and lottery distributing bodies between them have invested over£3 billion in physical activity and sport.

The DTI and Ofgem have been holding a number of seminars to educate energy buyers of all types about the options for purchasing gas and electricity in these times of high prices. In addition, Energywatch has set up a Business Services Team to provide information and guidance to small and medium sized enterprises, and runs a joint campaign with the Federation for Small Businesses called "Make the Connection". For the public sector, the Office for Government Commerce has been developing advice and models for energy purchasing for both local authorities and central government, and these are being rolled out nationally.

Public Service Agreement 2

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps her Department has taken to compensate for slippage on its public service agreement 2 target; and if she will make a statement. [71880]

Mr. Lammy: My Department is working closely with Arts Council England on its Delivery Plan for the current PSA 3 target. This will take account of lessons learned from the experience of work on the previous PSA 2 target.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment her Department has made of the impact of the slippage on its public service agreement 2 target on Exchequer funding for the arts made available by the next Comprehensive Spending Review; and if she will make a statement. [71881]

Mr. Lammy: No decisions have yet been taken on the outcomes of the Comprehensive Spending Review.

Regulatory Impact Assessments

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what guidance she offers to (a) her Department's agencies and (b) those who receive funding from her Department on undertaking regulatory impact assessments before implementing changes of regulations; what such assessment was undertaken by VisitBritain before undertaking changes to the classification system for hotels and guest houses in England; if she will estimate the cost of such changes to the industry; and if she will make a statement. [72155]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 18 May 2006]: My Department's sponsored bodies and agencies, in common with those across Government, are made fully aware of the need to assess the possible effects of changes in policy on businesses in their sectors. This includes formal Regulatory Impact Assessments where appropriate, as well as wider cross-Government work on Better Regulation. The tourism sector is also represented on my Department's Better Regulations Task Group.

The Quality Assurance Schemes operated by VisitBritain, the Automobile Association, VisitScotland, and the Wales Tourist Board, are voluntary in nature. Participating businesses pay to be quality inspected, and derive marketing and other benefits from inclusion in the Schemes. The Schemes have, from May 2005, been improved and standardised following work commissioned by VisitBritain and led by Alan Britten CBE. Both inbound and domestic visitors now have confidence in a standardised inspection regime across Britain. This has led to some changes in classification as it affects the descriptions used by hotels and guest houses in their own signage and promotional material.

The changes to the Quality Schemes followed wide industry consultation, and assessments of the cost and benefits to affected businesses. My Department is satisfied that the consultation carried out was more than adequate to reflect the views of affected businesses. The general consensus across the industry was that the changes in classification were highly beneficial in terms of improved consumer certainty when booking accommodation. In addition, my Department considers that the resulting changes to the VisitBritain Quality Scheme (which is funded through grant-in-aid) were primarily operational in nature. It was not, therefore, considered necessary to conduct a formal Regulatory Impact Assessment in these circumstances.

Royal Parks

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the backlog of maintenance works in the Royal Parks. [72334]

Mr. Lammy: The Royal Parks, with DCMS, have conducted a review of the way in which the maintenance liability is assessed using BS 3811:1984 (the British standard for building maintenance). They have prioritised the list of works requiring repair and developed a works programme accordingly.

By end June 2006, the Royal Parks will have a costed plan in place for tackling the backlog, with clear performance milestones and measures.

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what guidance she has issued to the Royal Parks Agency on large-scale commercial events in the Royal Parks. [72335]

Mr. Lammy: Ministers endorsed the Royal Parks Events Strategy in February 2004. Which was drawn up after extensive consultation with stakeholders and seeks to balance the demand for events with protecting the fabric of the parks.

The number of major events is limited and the impact on the park and park users is always taken into account in considering possible events and weighed against the benefits that the event brings. Event organisers are required to take out a bond to fund any reinstatement necessary after an event.

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what objectives she has set for the Royal Parks Agency for the next five years. [72336]

Mr. Lammy: The Royal Parks corporate objectives for 2006-07 to 2008-09 have been set and are listed as follows:

The Royal Parks objectives

To protect and enhance our "world class" natural park environment for the enjoyment of families, children and visitors;

To understand and respond to the needs of our audiences, reflecting diversity of needs and use; enriching lives and enhancing access to culture and sport;

To work with other organisations and volunteers to deliver clear education, health, sport and participation offers;

To conserve and enhance the historic built environment of the Royal Parks;

To deliver greater value for money for the taxpayer through increased income generation and reduced dependency on vote funding; and

To demonstrate organisational excellence.

The Public (West Bromwich)

Mr. Bailey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans the Arts Council has to support redundant arts workers from The Public in West Bromwich. [71748]

Mr. Lammy: Although Arts Council England was consulted about the redundancies at The Public, the decision itself was taken by the administrators. The administrators are now managing the day-to-day operation of the building and therefore have responsibility for personnel issues.

Lynda Waltho: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much the Arts Council England has paid the firm Robin and Gorringe in relation to the arts organisation, The Public in West Bromwich, in each of the last 10 years. [69179]

Mr. Lammy: The information requested in this question is commercial-in-confidence and should not be disclosed. In addition, as The Public is currently in administration, it would not be appropriate to release the information at this time.

Mr. Ian Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what arts activity is planned for The Public building in West Bromwich; and if she will list the works under commission. [71730]

Mr. Lammy: Since The Public went into administration, the funders and administrators have been working together to establish a revised and sustainable business plan for the building within the funding envelope available. Work continues on this business plan.

The following works have been commissioned for The Public:

Access by Marie Sester

Lanscopes by Golan Levin and Zachary Lieberman

Flower of my Secret by Usman Haque

Flypad by Blast Theory

Audio Bounce by Tomas Roope, Andrew Allenson and Rolf Gelhaar Telematic

Embrace by Paul Sermon

Datafall by Miguel Carvalhais and Lia

Regional Voices by Kevin Carter

Tourism

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what progress has been made in achieving the Government's target of increasing revenue from tourism to £100 billion per annum by 2010. [70974]

Tessa Jowell: The UK tourism industry's total revenues were £74.2 billion in 2003, the last year for which complete data are available. Although inbound tourism receipts reached a record level of £14.3 billion in 2005, the overall growth target of £100 billion by 2010 remains a stretching aspiration. My Department continues to work towards achieving the target in partnership with VisitBritain and the industry, especially in improving tourism marketing, product quality, and workforce skills.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Arms Control

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps her Department is taking to promote worldwide arms control. [72410]

Dr. Howells: The Government have been at the forefront of international efforts to strengthen the regulation of the arms trade and to counter the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction. We were instrumental in securing an EU Code of Conduct on Arms Exports, and are leading the way towards revision of the code, and we regularly urge other countries to adopt stricter and more transparent arms export policies. We are active members of all the key multilateral regimes that work to prevent the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction, including the Missile Technology Control Regime, the Nuclear Suppliers Group, the Australia Group (which deals with chemical and biological weapons), and the Wassenaar Arrangement, which promotes transparency in conventional arms transfers. The UK is also a member of key arms control treaties, such as the Ottawa Convention on Landmines, the Nuclear Non Proliferation Treaty, the Chemical Weapons Convention and the Biological and Toxin Weapons Convention.

The Review Conference of the UN Programme of Action on Small Arms and Light Weapons (SALW) is to be held this June, and the UK, in co-operation with a wide range of other partners, has made positive progress in building support for agreement there minimum common criteria to underpin controls on transfers of SALW.

The Government are committed to pursuing an international arms trade treaty that includes all conventional arms. We believe that such a treaty needs to include a wide range of signatories, including the world's major arms exporters. We are engaging on this with other countries at various levels, including through ministerial contacts, specific events, direct expert-level talks and by using our network of overseas posts. This work will continue with the aim of building the consensus needed for the start of a formal process at the UN later this year.

Belarus

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of reports that Belarus has sold arms illegally to Iran. [68196]

Dr. Howells: The Government take a close interest in all reports of arms transfers to and from countries whose current activities give rise to issues of potential concern. We are aware of media reports alleging Belarus has re-exported arms brought from Russia to Iran and are monitoring the situation.

British Indian Ocean Territories

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions she has had with the Government of Mauritius on the sovereignty of the British Indian Ocean Territories; and if she will make a statement. [72979]

Mr. Hoon: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has had no recent discussions with the Government of Mauritius on sovereignty.

The Government do not recognise the claim by Mauritius to sovereignty over the British Indian Ocean Territory. However, we have recognised Mauritius as the only state which has a right to assert a claim of sovereignty when the United Kingdom relinquishes it own sovereignty, and successive Governments have given undertakings to the Government of Mauritius that the territory will be ceded when no longer required for defence purposes.

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the income has been from fishing licences in the British Indian Ocean Territories for each of the last three years; and what the expected income is for (a) 2006-07 and (b) 2007-08. [72980]

Mr. Hoon: Income from fishing licences in the past three years in the British Indian Ocean Territory was as follows:

Financial year	Income (£)
2003-04	566,318
2004-05	657,844
2005-06	720,641

Income for the financial year 2006-07, to date, is approximately £45,000. It is difficult to predict exactly the expected level of income for the rest of this year, or for 2007-08. But it is likely to be of a similar level to previous years.

China

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the effect upon religious (a) institutions and (b) activity of the new regulations on religion which came into effect in China and Tibet on 1 March 2005; and if she will make a statement. [72963]

Mr. McCartney: The Government are concerned about limitations on freedom of religious belief in China and the treatment of religious practitioners. We regularly raise these concerns with the Chinese Government. We assess that the regulations that came into effect in China on 1 March 2005 are aimed primarily at limiting and controlling the development of religion and religious institutions. Freedom of religion was a focus of the last round of the EU-China human rights dialogue in October 2005. The EU Troika raised freedom of religious practice in demarches on the Chinese Government in Beijing on 29 December 2005 and 15 February 2006. We will continue to raise our concerns about religious freedom with the Chinese authorities.

Cyprus

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the prospects for a new initiative to resolve the Cyprus problem; and if she will make a statement. [72084]

Mr. Hoon: A comprehensive settlement of the Cyprus problem remains a priority for the UK. We welcomed the recent agreement to begin bicommunal discussions on a number of issues of common concern to the two communities. But I would echo the call of the UN Secretary-General Kofi Annan for the gap between words and actions to be bridged by the leaders of the two communities. We look forward to further developments and remain ready to do anything we can to facilitate progress towards a settlement.

Democratic Republic of Congo

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what tracking she undertakes of asylum seekers returned to the Democratic Republic of Congo after failing to be accepted into the UK. [70302]

Mr. McCartney: As with returns to all countries, neither the Home Office nor the Foreign and Commonwealth Office routinely monitor the treatment of individual Congolese nationals once removed from the UK. However, our embassy in Kinshasa has found no evidence to suggest that unsuccessful asylum seekers are mistreated by the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC) authorities on return for claiming asylum. The DRC Government have stated that they have no policy of mistreating failed asylum seekers returning from abroad. Members of the embassy staff and official visitors regularly monitor the general security conditions and human rights situation, including for returned asylum seekers, in the DRC. They would not be removed if it were considered likely that they would suffer persecution on their return.

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what monitoring her Department undertakes of the treatment of repatriated asylum seekers in the Democratic Republic of Congo; and what her latest assessment has been of their treatment; [71419]

(2) what evidence her Department has received of persecution of repatriated asylum seekers by the authorities in the Democratic Republic of Congo. [71420]

Mr. McCartney: The Congolese Government have stated that they have no policy of mistreating failed asylum seekers returning from abroad. Staff from our embassy in Kinshasa and official visitors regularly monitor the general security conditions and human rights situation, including for returned asylum seekers, in the Democratic Republic of Congo. They have found no evidence to suggest that unsuccessful asylum seekers are mistreated by the Congolese authorities on return for claiming asylum. As with returns to all countries, neither the Home Office nor the Foreign and Commonwealth Office routinely monitor the treatment of individual Congolese nationals once removed from the UK. They would not be removed if it were considered likely that they would suffer persecution on their return.

Departmental Budget

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much of the budget for her Department remained unspent in the last financial year. [70533]

Margaret Beckett: The final figure for the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's budgetary spend will be published in the Provisional Outturn White Paper, which will be published before the summer recess in July. A copy of the White Paper will be placed in the Library of the House.

Diplomatic Posts

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans her Department has to improve facilities available at the British high commission in Harare; and if she will make a statement. [70932]

Mr. McCartney: We plan to complete work on a new embassy in Harare in 2008, offering better public access and better and more secure working conditions for staff.

EXPO 2010

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what preparations her Department has made for EXPO 2010 in Shanghai; and if she will make a statement. [70798]

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 15 May 2006]: The Chinese Government have formally invited 160 countries, including the UK, to participate in the 2010 EXPO. We are considering that invitation. UK Trade and Investment has prepared a business case for UK participation and has had discussions with a wide range of possible stakeholders including other Government Departments, Devolved Administrations, VisitBritain, the British Council, city authorities and with many private sector companies.

Gibraltar

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will publish the preamble to the new draft constitution for Gibraltar prior to a referendum being held in the territory. [72053]

Mr. Hoon: I am aware of the importance the people of Gibraltar attach to agreeing and publishing the preamble to the Constitution prior to a referendum being held. I will be discussing this matter further with the Chief Minister in London on 22 May.

HIV/AIDS (UK Citizens)

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions she has had with her US counterpart on entry restrictions for UK citizens with HIV/AIDS. [71734]

Mr. McCartney: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has not had any discussions with her US counterpart on entry restrictions for UK citizens with HIV/AIDS.

Indigenous Peoples

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the Government's policy is on the UN Convention on the collective rights of indigenous peoples. [72604]

Mr. McCartney: The Government have been participating in the UN Working Group elaborating a draft Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples for the past 11 years. It is likely that the international community will seek action on this text at the first session of the new Human Rights Council in June 2006. The UK had a number of concerns with the original draft of the Declaration, including on the issue of collective rights, but have participated fully in negotiations and worked with partners to seek solutions to the real and difficult issues in the text for both states and indigenous peoples. We believe that the concerns of parties on both sides of this debate have now been accommodated in the draft Declaration. If the Declaration is put forward for adoption at the forthcoming session of the Council, the UK will support it.

Indonesia

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps his Department is taking to encourage good relations between Muslims and Christians in central Sulawesi, Indonesia. [67665]

Mr. McCartney: Through our embassy in Jakarta and our contacts with the Indonesian embassy in London, we continue to encourage the Government of Indonesia to ensure freedom of religion across Indonesia. The Interfaith Dialogue Conference held in Bali in July 2005, and co-chaired by the UK and Indonesia, is one prominent example of our work in support of good relations between faiths, both in Indonesia and other Association of South East Asian nations.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations she has made to the Government of Indonesia about the (a) trials and (b) planned execution of Fabianus Tibo, Dominggus da Silva and Marianus Riwu; and if she will make a statement. [70344]

Mr. McCartney: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave her on 9 May 2006, Official Report, column 179W.

Since my reply, the Supreme Court has turned down a second appeal by the three men. The review panel reached a unanimous verdict stating that there was no new evidence to warrant a further review of the case. Unless new evidence comes to light the three have no further recourse for appeals in Indonesia.

We will support further representations made to the Indonesian Government through the European Union.

Iran

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with her (a) US and (b) Russian counterpart on the US Administration's call for Russia to cease its support for the Iranian nuclear reactor at Bushehr; what the UK Government's position is on the US Administration's call; and if she will make a statement. [68208]

Margaret Beckett: As set out in the 5 August 2005 proposal to Iran by the Governments of France, Germany and the UK, with the support of the High Representative of the EU, the Government fully support long-term co-operation in the civil nuclear field between Iran and Russia within the context of an overall and mutually acceptable agreement on long-term arrangements.

The Bushehr reactor issue was raised during the discussions in which I participated during my visit to New York on 9 May.

This is part of ongoing diplomatic negotiations and it is a matter for the US, Russia and Iran.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what her latest assessment is of the threat posed to regional security by Iran's nuclear programme. [73070]

Dr. Howells: The United Nations Security Council reaffirmed in Resolution 1540 that the proliferation of nuclear, chemical and biological weapons as well as their means of delivery constitutes a threat to international peace and security. The proliferation of nuclear weapons in the Middle East would be deeply damaging for stability and security in the region and beyond, and for the multilateral non-proliferation system.

We have serious concerns about the nature of Iran's nuclear activities, its history of concealment and inadequate co-operation with the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA), and its failure to take the steps that the IAEA Board and the Security Council have deemed essential. These have all contributed to the international community's lack of confidence that the aims of the Iranian nuclear programme are, as Iran claims, exclusively peaceful.

These concerns are only heightened by Iran's ballistic missile programme, threatening rhetoric towards Israel, and its links to Lebanese Hizballah and Palestinian rejectionist groups.

We are working, with our partners, to ensure that Iran meets in full the requirements of the IAEA Board and the Security Council, including reinstating a full suspension of all enrichment related and reprocessing activities, and returns to a negotiation on long-term arrangements.

Israel

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when she plans to visit the state of Israel; and if she will make a statement. [72039]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary is keen to visit Israel and the Occupied Territories. However, foreign engagements for my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and other Ministers are kept under constant review. It is not our practice to announce such visits until they are finalised. Because of the unpredictable nature of world events, final decisions on overseas visits are often not possible until very shortly before the day of travel.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many British citizens (a) visited and (b) emigrated to Israel in each year since 1997. [72040]

Dr. Howells: According to the Israeli Bureau of National Statistics, the following numbers of UK citizens visited Israel between 2001 and 2005:

	Number of UK tourists (Thousand)
2001	157
2002	140
2003	97
2004	104
2005	146

Figures for the number of British citizens who have emigrated to Israel are not available. However, between 2004 and April 2006, the Israeli Ministry of Immigrant Absorption has reported that a total of 2,289 people have emigrated from western Europe to Israel:

	Number of emigrants from western Europe
2004	654
2005	830
2006 (to April)	805

The number of British citizens who have visited and emigrated to Israel in other years since 1997 is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions she has had with (a) Ministers and (b) officials from other Government Departments about British relations with the state of Israel; and if she will make a statement. [72041]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has not held discussions with Ministers or officials from other Government Departments about UK relations with Israel.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether it is the policy of the Government to refuse to recognise Hamas so long as it retains its intent to destroy the State of Israel; and if she will make a statement. [72043]

Dr. Howells: We support the three principles set out by the Quartet (EU, US, UN and Russia) and that EU Foreign Ministers made clear on 30 January. These are that Hamas should renounce violence; recognise Israel; and accept previous agreements and obligations, including the Roadmap. Hamas needs to start implementing these principles and make clear the path they intend to take. We recognise Hamas's democratic mandate as a result of free and fair elections. But with this mandate comes responsibilities. The full text of the Quartet statement of 30 January is available on the Foreign and Commonwealth Office website at: http://www.fco.gov.uk/servlet/Front?pagename=OpenMarket/Xcelerate/ShowPage&c=Page&cid=1138869357937.

Kenya

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions she has had with the Government of Kenya on (a) sexual equality and (b) tackling homophobia. [70002]

Mr. McCartney: The UK engages bilaterally with the Kenyan Government on human rights issues as they arise. Our high commissioner in Nairobi most recently emphasised the importance of promoting gender equality and tackling violence against women during a speech on 8 May at the Nairobi Women's Hospital.

Kenya has ratified most of the international human rights treaties and regional human rights instruments. These cover non-discrimination, including on the basis of sexual orientation. However, homosexuality is illegal in Kenya. We are concerned that this cuts across Kenya's international human rights obligations.

The EU is in the process of relaunching its discussions with the Government of Kenya, under the provisions of Article 8 of the Cotonou Agreement. These discussions are wide-ranging and cover economic and political governance, including human rights.

Maldives

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what measures her Department is taking (a) to assist and (b) to encourage President Gayoom of the Maldives to complete his promised democratic reforms; and if she will make a statement. [71882]

Dr. Howells: We welcome the important democratic changes that the Government of the Maldives have already introduced, including the legalisation of political parties in June 2005 and a recently published Roadmap for reform, which usefully set out some clear timescales. But we remain concerned about the pace of this and about the human rights situation in the Maldives, including freedom of expression and association and the right to fair trials conducted with due legal process. Some recent trials of political activists appear to have political motivations.

We monitor developments in the Maldives closely, regularly making clear both bilaterally (most recently Foreign and Commonwealth Office officials met the Maldivian Minister of State on 28 April) and with EU partners to the Government of the Maldives the need for progress with existing reforms and concerns about the need for further reform and improved human rights. We also maintain regular contact with the opposition parties.

Agreement on, and implementation of, further major democratic and constitutional changes will require an inclusive process reflecting the views of political parties, civil society and the general public in the Maldives. Dialogue between the political parties is essential. We fully support the work of the Commonwealth Secretariat in facilitating dialogue on constitutional reform between the political parties.

Nepal

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many meetings the British ambassador in Nepal has had with the King of Nepal since 1 January; and on what dates each meeting took place. [68136]

Dr. Howells: None. Our ambassador in Kathmandu's last meeting with the King of Nepal was on 21 December 2005, when he accompanied General Philip Trousdell, Colonel Commandant, Royal Gurkha Rifles, at the presentation of the Annual Report on the Brigade of Gurkhas. Prior to that, the ambassador's previous audience with the King was on 25 May 2005.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the government of Nepal about (a) human rights, (b) good governance and (c) the transition to democracy. [68178]

Dr. Howells: The UK has had regular discussions with the Nepalese Government at all levels on human rights, including with the King after he took direct power of the country last year. We have also made repeated public statements deploring human rights violations by both the Nepalese security forces and the Maoists. Most recently, senior Foreign and Commonwealth Office officials met the Nepalese ambassador on 2 March and raised our concerns about the continued detention of political leaders and activists, and the restrictions on the media. We also registered our ongoing concerns about the democratic deficit in Nepal with the absence of consultations between the parties for a full return to democracy, including through elections.

In October 2005, as EU President, the UK led an EU directors level Troika delegation to Nepal. The aim of the Troika visit was to encourage reconciliation and dialogue between the King and the political parties. They discussed human rights and the return to democracy with both the Government of Nepal and the political party leaders.

We have had several discussions with the Government of Nepal, including the King, calling on them to restore democracy and pursue a negotiated political settlement to the conflict involving all of the main actors. In February 2006 a parliamentary delegation led by the right hon. Member for Tonbridge and Malling (Sir John Stanley) visited Nepal and called on party leaders and Government officials to discuss the return of democracy in Nepal. The aim of the visit was to support the democratic movement and encourage the return of democracy.

Following three weeks of violent pro democracy demonstrations the King announced, on 24 April, that he will hand power to the parties and reinstate the Parliament. On 28 April 2006 the first session of the reinstated Parliament took place. We welcome the King's announcement on 24 April and the appointment of the new Prime Minister, G. P. Koirala. On 30 April G. P. Koirala was sworn in to office and the Parliament agreed his proposals to reciprocate the Maoist cease-fire and for a constituent assembly. This represents a genuine opportunity for the restoration of peace.

democracy and human rights in Nepal. The UK stands ready, with international partners, to work with the new Government and the people of Nepal.

North Korea

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if she will make it her policy to encourage other EU member states to raise concerns about the situation of Mr. Son Jung Nam in an EU demarche to the Government of North Korea; [71155]

(2) what representations she has made to the Government of North Korea concerning the treatment of Mr. Son Jung Nam; [71156]

(3) what representations she has made to the Government of North Korea (a) to refrain from executing Mr. Son Jung Nam and (b) to call for his release. [71157]

Mr. McCartney: The EU presidency has formally raised concerns with the Democratic People's Republic of North Korea (DPRK) authorities about Son Jung Nam's circumstances and fate, as have individual member states including the UK.

We, along with other EU partners, have asked the DPRK authorities to provide further information on Son Jung Nam's circumstances and fate but they have not done so.

Foreign and Commonwealth Office officials have raised Son Jung Nam's case with the North Korean authorities. We set out our well-known opposition to the use of the death penalty and urged the DPRK not to apply it if it was in question in his case. We are deeply concerned about reports of serious human rights violations in the DPRK, but the lack of access for independent monitors makes it difficult to verify these reports.

Palestinian Authority

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps she is taking to secure the release of taxes owed to the Palestinian Authority which are held by Israel. [71947]

Dr. Howells: We, along with our EU partners, continue to call upon Israel to transfer the customs revenue that they currently collect on behalf of the Palestinian Authority. At the 15 May General Affairs and External Relations Council, the EU urged Israel to transfer this revenue. In addition to this, the UK is leading EU efforts to set up a temporary international mechanism to ensure that assistance can be delivered directly to the Palestinian people.

Public Consultations

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many public consultations her Department undertook in the last year; and what the cost was (a) in total and (b) of each consultation. [70534]

Margaret Beckett: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office undertook three public consultations in 2005-06, at a total cost of £38,510.

The cost of each consultation was as follows:

	Cost (£)
Forced Marriage	15,000
Know Before You Go Travel Safety—benchmarking survey	18,000
Support for British Nationals Overseas	5,510

Small Change Big Difference

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps her Department and its agencies have taken following the launch of the Government's Small Change Big Difference Campaign. [72014]

Margaret Beckett: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has not taken specific steps as a direct result of the launch of the Small Change Big Difference campaign, but our existing occupational health service and health promotion practice very much reflect the campaign's advice.

Strategic Export Controls

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the evidence from the Minister for the Middle-East in her Department to the Quadripartite Committee on 3 May, HC 873-vi, on strategic export controls, what steps are being taken by the Government to investigate reports of an illicit diversion of UK-exported Beretta weapons intended for legitimate use in Iraq. [71452]

Dr. Howells: The hon. Member's question refers to my evidence session before the Quadripartite Committee on 25 April 2006.

Security conditions in Iraq make it very difficult to investigate all such allegations of diversion or theft of British exports of military listed equipment. Our embassy in Baghdad has investigated these reports as far as they have been able to and have found no firm evidence to support them.

Despite the anecdotal nature of such allegations of diversion, officials do take them into account when assessing export licence applications. Whenever appropriate, we take advice from our embassy in Baghdad on the risks of diversion.

Syria

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment she has made of Syrian compliance with UN Security Council Resolution 1559; and if she will make a statement. [73069]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has taken note of the latest report on implementation of UN Security Council Resolution 1559 by the UN Secretary-General. This report concluded that a number of operational requirements derived from the resolution had been met, including the withdrawal of Syrian forces from Lebanon and the conduct of free and fair legislative elections in Lebanon.

However, the Secretary-General also noted that other requirements of the resolution remained to be implemented, particularly the disarming and disbanding of the Lebanese and non-Lebanese militia; the extension of Government control throughout all Lebanon; and the full restoration and strict respect for the sovereignty, unity, territorial integrity and political independence of Lebanon, most notably through the establishment of normal diplomatic relations and the demarcation of borders between Syria and Lebanon.

In response to the Secretary-General's report, on 17 May, the UN Security Council adopted resolution 1680, co-drafted by the UK, calling on the Syrian Government to agree to delineate their common border with Lebanon and to establish full diplomatic relations and representation in Lebanon, noting that such measures would constitute a significant step towards asserting Lebanon's sovereignty, territorial integrity and political independence, and improving relations between the two countries.

Turkey (EU Accession)

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make a statement on progress with Turkey's application for accession to the EU. [71700]

Mr. Hoon: Since the opening of accession negotiations on 3 October 2005, the Commission has been carrying out the screening process, measuring Turkey's legislation against the 35 chapters of the EU "acquis". The Commission has completed screening on 17 chapters and published screening reports for Science and Research, Education and Culture, Public Procurement and Competition. After the screening of a chapter is complete, member states decide whether to set opening benchmarks, the specific requirements the candidate country must meet before the chapter can be opened. We expect the first chapter to be opened during the Austrian presidency.

Venezuela

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) whether the visit of the President of Venezuela to the United Kingdom will be a State Visit; [69912]

(2) which Ministers and officials will be meeting President Hugo Chavez of Venezuela during his visit to the United Kingdom on 15 to 16 May. [69918]

Mr. Hoon: President Chavez of Venezuela made a private visit to the UK between 14-16 May. It was not a State Visit. There were never plans for meetings with Government Ministers or officials. The Venezuelan Government did not request any official meetings with the Government. A representative of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office met President Chavez on arrival in the UK.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether Ministers will be meeting the President of Venezuela (a) publicly and (b) privately during his forthcoming visit to the UK. [70868]

Mr. Hoon: There were never plans for meetings with Government Ministers, either publicly or privately, during this recent visit. President Chavez made a private visit to the UK and did not request any meetings with the Government.

Western Sahara

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had at the United Nations on the holding of a referendum on the future Government of Western Sahara. [72978]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has not discussed the issue of Western Sahara in the UN.

The UK supports the efforts of the UN Secretary-General and his Personal Envoy to Western Sahara, Peter van Walsum, to find a just, lasting and mutually acceptable solution to the Western Sahara dispute, which will provide for the self-determination of the people of Western Sahara. On 28 April 2006, the UN Security Council unanimously adopted UN Security Council Resolution 1675 which renewed the mandate for the UN Mission for the Referendum in Western Sahara until 31 October 2006. The UK supported this, and UK officials at the UN played an active role in the Security Council's consideration of this issue. There are, however, no plans for a UN referendum to be held in the near future.

TREASURY

Cancer

Mr. Dunne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people under the age of 18 years in (a) England and (b) Shropshire were diagnosed with leukaemia in (i) 2004 and (ii) 2005. [72138]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl, dated 22 May 2006:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many people under the age of 18 years in (a) England and (b) Shropshire were diagnosed with leukaemia in (i) 2004 and (ii) 2005. I am replying in her absence. (72138)

The most recent available figures for newly diagnosed cases of leukaemia registered in England are the year 2003. Figures for people under the age of 18 years at diagnosis for the years 2002 and 2003 are given in the table below.

Number of newly diagnosed cases of leukaemia[1] for people under the age of 18 years at diagnosis, registered in England and the county of Shropshire, 2002-03

	England	County of Shropshire

[1] Figures selected using the International Classification of Diseases, Tenth Revision (ICD10) C91-C95.

Mr. Dunne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people in (a) England and (b) Shropshire were diagnosed with (i) leukaemia, (ii) breast cancer and (iii) prostate cancer in (A) 2004 and (B) 2005. [72140]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl, dated 22 May 2006:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many people in (a) England and (b) Shropshire were diagnosed with (i) leukaemia, (ii) breast cancer and (iii) prostate cancer in (A) 2004 and (B) 2005. I am replying in her absence. (72140)

The most recent available figures for newly diagnosed cases of cancer registered in England are the year 2003. Figures by selected cancers for the years 2002 and 2003 are given in the table below.

Numbers of newly diagnosed cases of selected cancers[1], registered in England and the county of Shropshire: 2002-03

2002
Leukaemia	5,608	32
Breast cancer (females)[2]	34,319	243
Prostate cancer	26,811	218
2003
Leukaemia	5,741	22
Breast cancer (females)[2]	36,509	250
Prostate cancer	26,798	209

[1] Figures selected using the International Classification of Diseases, Tenth Revision (ICD10), all leukaemias coded as C91-C95, breast cancer as C50 and prostate cancer as C61.

[2] Figures provided here are for female breast cancer. However, there are around 300 cases of male breast cancer diagnosed each year.

Children's Trust Funds

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will list the (a) banks and (b) building societies which do not apply an administration charge to individual child trust funds; and if he will make a statement; [71921]

(2) what recent discussions he has held with (a) banks and (b) building societies on administration charges on individual child trust funds; and if he will make a statement. [71922]

Ed Balls: All providers of child trust fund accounts, including banks and building societies, take administration charges into account when setting the rate of return they offer.

For the stakeholder child trust fund product only, these charges are capped at 1.5 per cent. a year. The stakeholder charge cap was subject to consultation prior to the launch of child trust fund and the Government continue to monitor that this cap is adhered to. The Government keep the operation of the child trust fund under review and, as a matter of course, meet regularly with providers and distributors.

Coins

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the UK coins that cost more to mint than their face value; and if he will make a statement. [72357]

John Healey: None of the coins currently being issued for circulation cost more than their face value.

Correspondence

Steve Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will reply to the letters of 20 April and 27 April from the hon. Member for Northavon, regarding a constituent, Mrs. Hughes. [72763]

Dawn Primarolo: I have done so.

Departmental Estate

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what (a) land and (b) property his Department (i) leases and (ii) leased in (A) the Southend, West constituency, (B) Essex, (C) Hertfordshire and (D) the Metropolitan Police area of London in (1) 1979, (2) 1983, (3) 1987, (4) 1992 and (5) 1997. [72482]

John Healey: In 1997 the Treasury held a lease on a property in Allington Street, London SW1.

Electoral Roll

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many and what proportion of those on the electoral register are (a) Irish citizens, (b) Commonwealth citizens and (c) non-UK EU nationals. [72349]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Jil Matheson, dated 22 May 2006:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question concerning what proportion of those on the electoral register are (a) Irish citizens, (b) Commonwealth citizens and (c) non-UK EU nationals. I am replying in her absence. (72349)

The attached table provides figures for 1 December 2005 on the percentage of the local government electorate who are entitled to vote through European Union citizenship. These figures do not include citizens of Malta and Cyprus who qualify under commonwealth status or Irish citizens.

Data on Irish citizens and Commonwealth citizens are not collected separately on electoral returns. Therefore, it is not possible to calculate the proportion of those oh the electoral register.

Total European/Local Government Electorate and Electorate Entitled to Vote through European Citizenship, 1 December 2005

	Electorate Qualifying through European Union Citizenship	Total European/ Local Government Electorate	Percentage of European/Local Electorate Qualifying through EU Citizenship
England	522,050	37,656,402	1.4
Wales	10,788	2,247,164	0.5
Scotland	24,393	3,884,464	0.6
Northern Ireland	3,620	1,156,991	0.3
United Kingdom	560,851	44,945,021	1.2

Euro

Mr. Brady: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment his Department has made of the statement made by the EU Commissioner for Economic and Monetary Affairs that all the current EU member states will adopt the euro within 10 years; and whether he has responded to the Commissioner's statement. [72256]

Ed Balls: Article 122 of the EC Treaty provides the procedure by which the derogation of relevant member states from the third stage of economic and monetary union is abrogated, thereby allowing them to adopt the euro. Under the Protocol on certain provisions relating to the UK, the UK does not have a derogation. The Protocol recognises that "the United Kingdom shall not be obliged or committed to move to the third stage of economic monetary union without a separate decision to do so by its government and parliament".

Government policy on membership of the single currency is unchanged. It remains as set out by the Chancellor in his statement to the House of Commons in October 1997, and again in the Chancellor's statement on the Five Tests assessment in June 2003.

Financial Services Ombudsman

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will take steps to enable the Financial Services Ombudsman to increase the period of time during which a complaint can be filed. [72671]

Ed Balls: The Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (FSMA) sets out the broad framework and the respective responsibilities of the Financial Ombudsman Service (FOS) and the Financial Services Authority (FSA). The power to determine the detail of the scope of the Financial Ombudsman scheme, how it operates and other detailed matters is split between the FSA and the FOS. Both organisations are operationally independent of Government.

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will increase the discretionary powers of the Financial Services Ombudsman. [72672]

Ed Balls: The Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (FSMA) sets out the broad framework of the Financial Services Ombudsman. The Financial Ombudsman Service (FOS) gained statutory powers on 1 December 2001. These powers were subject to extensive consultation before introduction.

There are no plans to review the powers of the Financial Services Ombudsman at this time.

Flat Income Tax

Andrew George: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate his Department has made of the level at which a flat income tax would need to be set in order to generate the same anticipated Government income for (a) 2005-06 and (b) 2006-07 as the present banded income tax system. [63871]

Dawn Primarolo: Assuming that all personal allowances and reliefs remain at their current levels, a flat rate of income tax on earnings of 24 per cent. would be approximately revenue neutral in both 2005-06 and 2006-07, costing about £0.6 billion and £1.1 billion in each year respectively.

This assumes a flat rate of tax on earnings only but that the rates for savings and dividends income remain unchanged.

This revenue neutral estimate has been obtained from the survey of personal incomes 2003-04 and projected forward to 2005-06 and 2006-07 in line with March 2006 Budget assumptions.

The revenue neutral estimate excludes any behavioural response to the tax changes, which could be significant given the scale of the changes.

An estimated 17 million households would lose out under this system, while only 2 million would gain. Of the households gaining, around three-quarters would be in the richest 10 per cent. of households.

Andrew George: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will reply to Question 63871, on a flat rate of income tax, tabled by the hon. Member for St. Ives on 30 March. [72742]

Dawn Primarolo: I have done so.

HM Revenue and Customs

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the conferences held abroad attended by staff from HM Revenue and Customs in the last 12 months. [70675]

Dawn Primarolo: Comprehensive information is not available. All overseas travel on official business is conducted in accordance with the provisions of the civil service code.

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what daily subsistence allowance is payable to staff of HM Revenue and Customs working away from home where receipts (a) are provided and (b) are not provided. [71727]

Dawn Primarolo: Travel and subsistence allowances for staff in HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC) have not yet been fully harmonised, but work on this is continuing.

(a) Day subsistence allowances where receipts are required:

Receipts are required for payments relating to meals taken during official travel.

Both former C and E and IR pay:

Over five hours, but not more than 10 hours—the actual cost of one main meal on a train or boat;

Over 10 hours—the actual cost of one main meal on a train or boat, together with the over five hour subsistence rate of £4.25, or the actual cost of two main meals;

Former IR pays:

£4.25 where an early start renders breakfast at home unreasonable. If this is claimed, the actual receipted cost up to two main meals on a train or boat may also be claimed.

(b) Day subsistence allowances where receipts are not required:

Both former C and E and IR pay:

Day subsistence allowances to staff on official business away from their normal office (except when the receipted meals above can be claimed):

absences over five hours—£4.25 for one meal, absences over 10 hours—£9.30 for two meals absences over 12 hours—£9.30 plus 4.25 if breakfast purchased due to early start rendering breakfast at home unreasonable.

Former C and E:

late meal allowance—£3.25.

Information Technology

Chris Huhne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the (a) originally estimated, (b) most recently estimated and (c) outturn cost was in each of the five largest information technology contracts agreed by his Department with outside suppliers over the last five years. [71814]

John Healey: The information requested is in the following table.

IT system	Contract	Original estimate	Most recent estimate	£000 Outturn cost
COINS—Integration of three government financial data systems to form a Single Data System (SDS).	Descisys for software	1,527	1,678	1,678
	G-Cat supplier for hardware	60	60	60
JIGSAW—Enhancing Electronic Document and Records Management system (EDRMS)	Computacenter for software	477	477	477
	Computacenter for hardware	149	149	149
ACME / TRiP—Replacement of the computer system TACSYS which supports the operational accounting and cashflow forecasting work of the Treasury Exchequer Funds and Accounts team.	City Financials for software	462	462	462
	G-Cat supplier for hardware	109	109	109

Note:
Values incl. VAT. Annual 'Running costs' are not included in the above figures and have been answered previously in the answer given to the hon. Member for Chipping Barnet (Mrs. Villiers) on 16 January 2006, Official Report, column 1158W.

Low Earnings

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the change was between 2000 and 2005 in the number of people employed part-time or full-time and earning less than £10,000 per annum. [72621]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl, dated 22 May 2006:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question to ask what has been the change in the numbers of people between 2000 and 2005 who are employed part-time or full-time and are earnings less than £10,000 per annum. I am responding in her absence (72621)

Currently average earnings are estimated from the Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings (ASHE), and are provided for employees on adult rates whose pay for the survey period was not affected by absence. This is the standard definition used for ASHE. The ASHE does not collect data on the self employed and people who do unpaid work.

The actual numbers of people are not available from ASHE data. Therefore I attach tables showing proportions of those earning less than £10,000 per annum for the years 2000 and 2005 for Employees on Adult Rates.

The ASHE survey is carried out in April of each year and is the most comprehensive source of earnings information in the United Kingdom. They are based on a one per cent sample of all employees who are members of pay-as-you-earn (PAYE) schemes.

Gross annual (£) pay for all employee jobs[1]

	Proportion earning less than £10,000
2000	26.4
2005	20.6

Gross annual (£) pay for full-time employee jobs[1]

	Proportion earning less than £10,000
2000	8.8
2005	4.2

Gross annual (£) pay for part time employee jobs[1]

	Proportion earning less than £10,000
2000	81.2
2005	68.8

[1] Employees on adult rates whose pay for the survey pay-period was not affected by absence.

Notes:

1. Guide to quality: The Coefficient of Variation (CV) indicates the quality of a figure, the smaller the CV value the higher the quality. The true value is likely to lie within +/- twice the CV e.g. for an average of 200 with a CV of 5 per cent., we would expect the population average to be within the range 180 to 220.
2. The above estimates all have a CV of less than 5 per cent.

Mortality Statistics

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many deaths there were of people aged (a) under one, (b) one to five, (c) six to 10, (d) 11 to 17, (e) 17 to 24, (f) 25 to 35, (g) 36 to 40, (h) 41 to 50, (i) 51 to 59, (j) 60 to 64, (k) 65 to 69, (l) 70 to 74, (m) 75 to 79, (n) 80 to 84, (o) 85 to 89 and (p) 90 years and over from (i) 1 April to 30 September 1997, (ii) 1 October to 30 April 1998, (iii) 1 April to 30 September 2001, (iv) 1 October to 30 April 2002, (v) 1 April to 30 September 2004 and (vi) 1 October to 30 April 2005; and what the death rate per 1,000 was in each case. [72160]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl, dated 22 May 2006:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent question concerning how many deaths there were of people in the age group (a) under one, (b) one to five, (c) six to 10, (d) 11 to 17, (e) 17 to 24, (f) 25 to 35, (g) 36 to 40, (h) 41 to 50, (i) 51 to 59, (j) 60 to 64, (k) 65 to 69, (l) 70 to 74, (m) 75 to 79, (n) 80 to 84, (o) 85 to 89 and (p) 90 years and over from (i) 1st April to 30th September 1997, (ii) 1st October to 30th April 1998, (iii) 1st April to 30th September 2001, (iv) 1st October to 30th April 2002, (v) 1st April to 30th September 2004 and (vi) 1st October to 30th April 2005; and what the death rate per 1,000 was in each case. I am replying in her absence. (72160)

The latest year for which figures are available is 2004. Numbers of deaths for the age groups and time periods requested are included in the table below. Age group "18 to 24" has been used to avoid double counting deaths with age group "11 to 17".

ONS does not routinely calculate death rates for sub-annual periods. Annual death rates by sex and five-year age groups can be found in Table 4 in the publication series, "DH2, Mortality Statistics, Cause". Copies of these can be found in the library of the House and, from 1999 onwards, on the National Statistics website at:

http://www.statistics.gov.uk/statbase/Product.asp?vlnk=618.

National Insurance Contributions

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of people who will retire in the next 12 months without being told what pension they will receive due to HM Revenue and Customs not recording national insurance contributions. [70230]

Dawn Primarolo: National insurance records are updated annually when HMRC processes employers' returns. Any apparent shortfall in the final relevant year is followed-up by DWP with employers.

All people reaching pension age will receive a Retirement Pension pack from DWP four months prior to reaching their pension age. This pack includes a State Pension forecast detailing the amounts of State Pension they will receive based on the amount of national insurance contributions recorded. If the amount shown in the State Pension forecast is not what an individual expects, DWP's Pension Forecasting Team will advise the customer to contact HM Revenue and Customs who will check and, where appropriate, update the national insurance record to ensure that the correct State Pension is paid. Relatively few people are affected in this way.

Non-fossil Fuels

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 4 May 2006, Official Report, column 1742W, on non-fossil fuels, if he will summarise the legal argument which led him to conclude that funds in the non-fossil fuel obligation fund were hereditary revenues. [71380]

John Healey: The legal advice concerned was that the funds representing the non-fossil fuel obligation surplus are hereditary revenues and as such are required by law to be paid in the consolidated fund.

Olympics

Mrs. Villiers: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what account the Office for National Statistics has taken in its analysis of the public sector net debt of the guarantees given to the International Olympic Committee to underwrite the Olympic Games. [71391]

John Healey: Under reforms to the public spending framework introduced in 2000 the UK Government are one of the few in the world that have a statutory obligation to report liabilities in the same way as private companies, and whose accounts are subject to independent audit.

Contingent liabilities, such as those referred to in the question, are reported in departmental accounts on the same basis as UK GAAP, as well as to Parliament. They are defined as being contingent on an event, or a set of events, whose likelihood of occurring has been accepted by independent auditors as being remote. They are not, by their definition, actual liabilities, and so it would not be right to include them in measures of public sector net debt.

Petrol Prices

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average price was of a gallon of (a) leaded and (b) unleaded petrol in each country of the UK in March 2006. [71212]

Malcolm Wicks: I have been asked to reply.

The average price of leaded petrol is no longer available due to the low volume of sales of this fuel. The average price of unleaded petrol is given in the following table:

Country	£/gallon
Northern Ireland	4.10
Scotland	4.07
Wales	4.10
England	4.09

Population Statistics (Hartlepool)

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many girls under the age of 16 years in Hartlepool constituency gave birth in each year since 1990. [72602]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl, dated 22 May 2006:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your question about how many girls in Hartlepool constituency under the age of 16 years gave birth in each year since 1990. I am replying in her absence. (72602)

The latest year for which figures are available is 2005. The table below shows the requested figures for the years 1990 to 2005 In order to protect confidentiality, counts of less than five have been suppressed.

Registered Electors

Chris Ruane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many and what percentage of the electorate were registered in each (a) ward and (b) constituency in (i) England, (ii) Scotland, (iii) Wales and (iv) Northern Ireland in each of the past 10 years, broken down by region. [72591]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Jil Matheson, dated 22 May 2006:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question concerning how many and what percentage of the electorate were registered in each (a) ward and (b) constituency in (i) England, (ii) Scotland, (iii) Wales and (iv)

Northern Ireland in each of the past 10 years, broken down by region. I am replying in her absence. (72591)

The information requested is not readily available on a comparable basis for the ten year period and could only be produced at disproportionate cost.

Information on the percentage of the electorate who were registered is not available for the ten year period because population estimates for wards are available only for 2001 and 2002. The information for these years has been provided previously in response to earlier Parliamentary Questions (No. 38272, 20 Dec 2005, Column 2809w, No. 41187, 19th January 2006, Column 1491w).

Ian Lucas: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many electors there were in each ward in Wrexham in each of the last 10 years. [72670]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Jil Matheson, dated 22 May 2006:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question regarding the number of electors in each ward in Wrexham in each of the last 10 years. I am replying in her absence. (72670)

The latest available Welsh ward electorate counts are for December 2005. The electorate counts for the last available 10 years (1996 to 2005) are shown in the attached tables. Table 1 shows wards within the Parliamentary Constituency of Wrexham. Table 2, shows wards for the local authority of Wrexham, including those for the Parliamentary Constituency of Wrexham (as included in Table 1).

Tax Credits

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average cost per minute is of calling the tax credit helpline number. [70255]

Dawn Primarolo: Information is not available on the cost per minute to callers using the tax credit helpline, they will vary according to their service provider.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many tax credit claimants have been informed that they were required to repay overpayments in each year since its introduction; how much has been overpaid in total; and how much has been repaid in each year. [72562]

Dawn Primarolo: The number of 2003-04 awards that were overpaid as at April 2004 is shown in the HMRC publication "Child and Working Tax Credits Statistics. Finalised annual awards 2003-04. Supplement on payments in 2003-04". This can be found on the HMRC website at:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/personal-tax-credits/cwtc-quarterly-stats.htm

The number of 2004-05 awards with overpayments as at April 2005 will be published on 31 May 2006.

Where a family has been overpaid, HMRC will recover the overpayment as explained in code of practice 26 "What happens if we have paid you too much tax credit?", available on our website at http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/leaflets/cop26.htm.

The total amount that was overpaid in 2003-04 and how much of this was recovered in 2004-05 is shown in part two of the "Comptroller and Auditor General's Standard Report on the Accounts of the Inland Revenue 2004-05". This can be found on the HMRC website at http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/about/annual_reps.htm

Information on the amounts recovered during 2005-06 will not be available until the accounts for 2005-06 have been finalised.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will extend Table 3 on page 30 of Tax credits: reforming financial support for families (March 2005) so as to show marginal deduction rates of over 50 per cent. and over 40 per cent. (a) before 1998, (b) in 2005-06 and (c) in 2006-07. [67870]

Dawn Primarolo: The following table is an extension of table 4.3 in Tax credits: reforming financial support for families (March 2005).

Marginal deduction rate (Percentage)	Before budget 1998	2005-06 system of tax and benefits	2006-07 system of tax and benefits

Over 90	130,000	30,000	35,000
Over 80	300,000	160,000	170,000
Over 70	740,000	225,000	240,000
Over 60	760,000	1,720,000	1,730,000
Over 50	760,000	1,875,000	1,890,000
Over 40	800,000	2,065,000	2,085,000

Figures for the 2005-06 and 2006-07 system of taxes and benefits are consistent with the analysis presented in Table 4.2 of the 2005 pre-Budget report and 2006 Budget report separately.

Figures are cumulative. This table shows marginal deduction rates for heads of working households in receipt of income related benefits or tax credits, where at least one person works 16 hours or more a week, where the head of the household is not disabled, and where higher earnings would lead to reduced benefits or tax credits. They include the marginal effects of income tax and national insurance contributions, and the withdrawal of tax credits, housing benefit and council tax benefit.

This analysis does not take into account the way in which tax credits respond to rises in income. Since April 2006, tax credits only respond to rises in income in the current year of more than £25,000, disregarding the first £25,000 of any rise. This means that recipients will not see their tax credits reduced as soon as their income rises, so reducing the effective marginal deduction in any one year.

As a result of the Government's reforms, around 500,000 fewer low-income households now face marginal deduction rates in excess of 70 per cent. than did so in April 1998. The increase in the number of households facing marginal deduction rates of between 40 and 70 per cent. is primarily due to the introduction of tax credits, and more recently the extension of support to workers aged 25 or over without children.

Teenage Pregnancies

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many teenage pregnancies there have been in each year since 2000, broken down by ethnic group. [71225]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 22 May 2006:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking how many teenage pregnancies there were in each year since 2000, broken down by ethnic group. (71225)

Available figures are estimates of the number of pregnancies that resulted in a live birth, stillbirth or termination.

Number of teenage conceptions in England and Wales from 2000 to 2004 (the most recent year for which figures are available), are shown in the table. Figures for 2004 are provisional. Information by ethnic group is not available.

Teenage conceptions, England and Wales, 2000-2004

	Number
2000	41,349
2001	40,990
2002	41,951
2003	42,162
2004[1]	42,150

Valuation Office Agency

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the Valuation Office Agency's council tax Automated Valuation Model uses (a) a location factor or factors in its multiple regression analysis and (b) geo-spatial statistical analysis in computer assisted mass appraisal. [70674]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

The Valuation Office Agency's (VGA) automated valuation model (AVM) uses (a) location factors in its multiple regression analysis and (b) an element of geo-spatial statistical analysis. The extent of the latter is limited to the use of National Land and Property Gazeteer (NLPG) "X-Y Co-ordinates" for precise location information. No other form of geo-spatial statistical analysis is used.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what valuation software the Valuation Office Agency purchased from Capgemini in 2005 for the council tax revaluation in England. [70676]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

The Valuation Office Agency (VOA) has worked with Capgemini, its IT supplier through the ASPIRE contract, to procure (a) a server version of OASIS, the automated valuation modelling software developed by Cole Layer Trumble and to develop (b) workflow software to support automated valuation activity in the VGA's network offices in England.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library a copy of the presentation by Diane Leggo to the management board of the Valuation Office Agency at its meeting of 26 May 2005 on council tax revaluation in England. [70678]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

The presentation by Diane Leggo to the management board of the Valuation Office Agency on 26 May 2005 includes material prepared as an input to the formulation of Government policy and cannot be made available. The council tax revaluation has since been postponed.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the conferences to be held in other countries which Valuation Office Agency staff will attend in the next 12 months. [70679]

Dawn Primarolo: The Valuation Office Agency is asked to share its expertise in the field of property valuation by sending delegates to conferences in the UK and overseas. All travel is undertaken in accordance with the provisions of the civil service code.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what geographical information system data the Valuation Office Agency's council tax automated valuation model uses. [70698]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

The Valuation Office Agency (VOA) does not have a geographical information system (GIS). The only geographical information used within the VGA's automated valuation model (AVM) is the National Land and Property Gazeteer (NLPG) "X-Y Co-ordinate" information, which indicates the precise location of a dwelling.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what domestic dwelling data the Valuation Office Agency has (a) purchased and (b) intends to purchase from Rightmove; and what the value of the contract is. [70699]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

The Valuation Office Agency (VOA), through its parent department, Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs, has a contract with Rightmove.co.uk plc (Rightmove) for a term of 34 months from 1 June 2005, with an option to extend for a further 12 months. The contract gives the VOA rights to use property records within Rightmove's current and historical database of dwellings that are, or have been, on the property market for sale.

Any future intentions, and the value of the contract, cannot be released into the public domain, as this would prejudice the commercial interests of both the VOA and Rightmove.co.uk plc.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) whether the Valuation Office Agency's council tax automated valuation model (a) uses and (b) holds data (i) from the Index of Multiple Deprivation and

(ii) on the number of criminal offences committed in an area; [70700]

(2) whether the Valuation Office Agency's council tax automated valuation model (a) uses and (b) holds local authority ward boundaries data. [70701]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

The Valuation Office Agency's (VGA's) automated valuation model (AVM) neither (a) uses nor (b) holds local authority ward boundary data.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what research the Valuation Office Agency has commissioned in the last five years on the use of geographic information systems for mass appraisal of residential property. [70688]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister commissioned, in 2003, the development of a generalised land use database (GLUD), which identifies the location of nine land use types, including residential. Further details of this ongoing work can be found on the Department for Communities and Local Government (DCLG) website under Research and Statistics, Planning Research and Statistics, Planning Statistics, Generalised Land Use Database (URL: http://www.communities.gov.uk/index.asp?id=1146084).

In addition to GLUD, DCLG have explored, and continue to explore, the suitability of a range of geographic information, including commercial products, new build intelligence from Ordnance Survey and the collation of local authority planning information to improve assessments of residential development.

The Valuation Office Agency has commissioned no research on the use of geographic information systems for mass appraisal of residential property in the last five years.

Office for Government Commerce

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what guidance the Office for Government Commerce issues to local authorities on contract compliance. [70716]

Mr. Woolas: I have asked to reply.

Section 17 of the Local Government Act 1988 prevents authorities from introducing "non-commercial" considerations, such as the political affiliations of contractors, into the procurement process.

There is a range of advice and guidance on good procurement which local authorities can draw on. Sources include the Office of Government Commerce (OGC), the Public Private, Partnership Programme (the 4ps) and the Improvement and Development Agency (IDeA). Specific guidance on local government procurement includes the joint ODPM/Local Government Association 'National Procurement Strategy for Local Government'. This makes clear that council requirements can also include social, environmental and other strategic objectives that are relevant to the subject of the contract.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Agricultural Trade Liberalisation

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has made to the European Commissioner for Trade about his recent comments on agricultural trade liberalisation; and what assessment he has made of the possible effect those comments will have on the World Trade Organisation trade talks. [69929]

Mr. McCartney: I have not had the opportunity to make representations to the European Commissioner for Trade since my appointment as Minister for Trade, or to discuss his recent comments on the Doha Development Agenda negotiations. However, my predecessors in this post had regular contact with the Commissioner for Trade on a wide range of issues.

The UK remains strongly committed to ensuring an ambitious and pro-development outcome to the Doha Round that provides real benefits to developing countries and an overall stimulus to world trade, in line with the mandate agreed in 2001. In agriculture, this means agreeing to significant reductions in trade-distorting domestic support, the elimination of export subsidies, and significant liberalisation of trade. We have made clear our view that achieving this requires movement from all the main parties, across the whole breadth of the negotiations—including, but not limited to, agriculture. We will continue to press all key parties, in the EU and beyond to show sufficient flexibility in all areas of the DDA negotiations to secure a successful outcome.

Autism

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what research projects into autism are funded by the Medical Research Council. [69402]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Details of research on autism currently funded by the Medical Research Council is provided in the following table:

University/institute	Project title
Cambridge University	An investigation of the mechanisms underlying the deficits in contextual processing in autism
Institute of Psychiatry, London	Local-global processing and cognitive style in autism and normal development: cognitive and brain bases
Institute of Psychiatry, London	A morphometric study of the neuropathology of autism
Birkbeck College	Functional brain development in human infants: perceiving the social and physical world
University College London	Autism and social cognition

University/institute	Project title
University of Oxford	Vocal and non-vocal communication in autism
Institute of Child Health, London	Characterising the cognitive phenotype of autism spectrum disorders
Institute of Psychiatry, London	Brain anatomy in autism; a multi-centre study
University of Bristol	The aetiology of traits contributing to autism and the autistic spectrum disorders
City University, London	Integration of complex spatial and temporal elements of episodic memory in adults with Asperger's syndrome
Manchester University	Pre-school autism communication trial (PACT)
Institute of Psychiatry	A population-based twin-study of autism spectrum disorders

Azores (State Aid)

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations the Government have made to the European Court of Justice in the Azores state aid case brought by the Commission against Portugal. [71462]

Mr. McCartney: The United Kingdom has made written and oral representations in support of Portugal who instigated this case. We intervened in order to protect the constitutional arrangements for tax varying powers in the Devolved Administrations. We await the Court's judgment in this matter.

Bank Holidays

Mark Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Twickenham of 26 April 2006, Official Report, column 1120W, on bank holidays, when the planned consultation will begin. [72387]

Jim Fitzpatrick: We hope to launch an initial consultation on making paid leave for bank holidays additional to the annual leave entitlement, pro-rata for part timers, in the near future.

British Gas

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much natural gas was produced by the British Gas Corporation in each year of its existence. [65836]

Malcolm Wicks: The British Gas Corporation (BGC) existed from 1973 to 1986. During this period BGC had various gas production interests, as an operator or through an interest in production licences in the Rough, Morecambe South and Indefatigable fields; the extent of the interests varied between the different fields and through time. Full details are not readily available from the Department of Energy 'Brown Books' but the total production from these fields was:

	Production (million cubic metres
	Rough	Morecambe South	Indefatigable	Total
1973	—	—	4,557	4,557
1974	—	—	5,545	5,545
1975	10	—	6,249	6,259
1976	512	—	6,355	6,867
1977	1,063	—	6,779	7,842
1978	931	—	6,450	7,381
1979	1,005	—	6,006	7,011
1980	467	—	6,878	7,345
1981	99	—	5,613	5,712
1982	101	—	5,720	5,821
1983	27	—	4,700	4,727
1984	55	—	5,590	5,645
1985	92	90	5,323	5,505
1986	7	604	6,186	6,797

Business Start-ups

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures he plans to take to encourage business start-ups in the north east region. [71093]

Margaret Hodge: The stimulation of business start-up activity involves complex and long-term issues, which need to be tackled through the coordinated efforts of a range of public, private and community sector organisations.

The Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) supports, both centrally and through agencies such as the Small Business Service and Regional Development Agency ONE NorthEast, a range of initiatives which are achieving increases in the numbers of entrepreneurs across all sectors of the community in the north east of England.

ONE NorthEast has produced the North East of England Enterprise Strategy in association with regional public and private sector partners. The strategy draws together the priorities for encouraging and developing existing and potential entrepreneurial talent across all sectors of the community, and outlines the actions, timescales and responsibilities for their delivery.

Recognising the importance of high-quality business support in enabling entrepreneurship, the DTI is leading on the restructuring and simplification of business support across Government, with the aim of reducing the number of schemes from some 3,000 to around 100. Regionally, ONE NorthEast is working with regional partners to create a single regional business support network that is easy to access and easy to use.

A number of specific initiatives in the region are also contributing to the encouragement of increased business start-up activity and promotion of opportunities within under-represented groups, including:

£26.4 million to be shared by Easington, Derwentside, Wear Valley, Sedgefield and South Tyneside under the Local Enterprise Growth Initiative (LEGI);

Some £2 million Phoenix Fund support for four Community Development Finance Institutions in the region to provide finance and support to enterprises and entrepreneurs in under-represented and disadvantaged groups;

Development of a North East Women's Enterprise Action Plan by ONE NorthEast;

Women into the Network, backed by ONE NorthEast, has already achieved success in encouraging an enhanced culture of entrepreneurship in the region by assisting the integration of aspiring women entrepreneurs into existing business networks;

The establishment of a pilot Women's Enterprise Unit to assess measures needed to accelerate rates of women's entrepreneurship in the north east of England;

The ASPIRE initiative, backed by the public and private sectors, is working to raise aspirations among young people, including the encouragement of self-employment.

Car Insurance

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will ask the Office of Fair Trading to investigate the car insurance market, with particular reference to personal injury cover; and if he will make a statement. [71688]

Mr. McCartney: It is for the Office of Fair Trading, as the UK's independent competition authority, to decide whether to investigate competition in particular markets. If anyone has any evidence of anti-competitive behaviour or market failure in the provision of car insurance they should inform the OFT directly.

Concerns about regulation of the insurance market—including car insurance—should be directed to the Financial Services Authority.

China

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with the European Union on the granting of Market Economy Status to China; and if he will make a statement. [71559]

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 17 May 2006]: The Government believes that China should be granted Market Economy Status (MES) as soon as possible and made this point to the European Commission and the member states in the run-up to the EU/China summit on 5 September 2005.

There was no consensus within the EU in favour of granting MES to China. The summit concluded with an agreement between the EU and China to launch a high-level political dialogue on MES, among other issues, with a view to achieving positive progress.

Crematoriums

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what schemes his Department is promoting to encourage crematoriums to increase their energy efficiency by recycling energy and heat generated. [69980]

Ian Pearson: I have been asked to reply.

There is no scheme specific to crematoriums, however Government provide funding to the Carbon Trust, a private company that takes the lead on business and public sector energy efficiency and encourages the development of a low carbon sector in the UK. It also provides advice to businesses on how to become more energy efficient.

Export Credits Guarantee Department Staff

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many staff were employed by the Export Credits Guarantee Department in each of the last eight years. [69864]

Mr. McCartney: The figures are:

Financial year	Staff
1998-99	371
1999-2000	361
2000-01	380
2001-02	373
2002-03	379
2003-04	366
2004-05	327
2005-06	[1]304

Export Credits Guarantee Department's Annual Review and Resource Accounts

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry for how many companies the Export Credits Guarantee Department has provided guarantees in the last eight years; and what the total value was of those guarantees. [69865]

Mr. McCartney: Between 1 April 1998 and 31 March 2006, the Export Credits Guarantee Department provided guarantees and insurance for £28.1 billion of business to 294 UK exporters and investors.

Energy Consents

Mark Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects the tripartite discussions on energy consents between the Wales Office, the National Assembly for Wales and his Department to be concluded. [71355]

Malcolm Wicks: The issues that the tripartite working group have been exploring are very complex and their discussions will need to be informed by the outcome of the Energy Review, which is due to report in the summer. I am therefore not in a position to give a precise date at this time, but I would expect the discussions to be concluded as soon as possible following completion of the Energy Review.

Decommissioning

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the cost was of decommissioning (a) nuclear, (b) oil, (c) gas, (d) coal and (e) renewables generating installations and platforms in each of the past 30 years; and what projections have been made for the next 10 years. [68027]

Malcolm Wicks: Decommissioning costs are a commercial matter for the companies concerned. However, figures do exist for the following:

Nuclear Generators

British Nuclear Fuels' annual report and accounts state that decommissioning expenditure charged against provisions since financial year 1993-94 was as follows:

	Decommissioning expenditure (£ million)
2005	256
2004	177
2003	145
2002	92
2001	82
2000	76
1999	80
1998	10
1997	1
1996	1
1995	1
1994	7

Prior to this date no decommissioning expenditure charged against provisions was disclosed in BNFL's annual report and accounts.

Between 1994-95 and 2000-01 the cost of decommissioning UKAEA's nuclear power plants amounted to £119.3 million.

Over the period 2006-07 to 2015-16 inclusive, total decommissioning costs of Generating Magnox Stations are:

Generating Magnox station	Decommissioning costs (£ million)
Berkeley	149.8
Bradwell	362.2
Calder Hall	182.7
Chapelcross	325.8
Dungeness A	355.4
Hinkley Point A	388.6
Hunterston A	359.1
Oldbury	371.2
Sizewell A	309.2
Trawsfynydd	227.6
Wylfa	253.6
Total	3,285.1

Oil and Gas Installations (including pipelines and wells)

The DTI-UKOOA Activity Survey conducted in autumn 2005 indicates gross (pre-tax) annual spend on decommissioning costs related to offshore oil and gas production activities as follows. All figures are in constant 2005 prices.

	Gross pre-tax annual spend (£ billion)
2016	0.5
2015	0.7
2014	0.9
2013	0.4
2012	0.4
2011	0.4
2010	0.4
2009	0.2
2008	0.2
2007	0.2
2006	0.1
2005	0.1
2004	0.1
2003	0.1

The actual extent of decommissioning costs and the timing of decommissioning of individual fields is inherently uncertain and these figures can at best be only broadly indicative.

Renewables Generators

For offshore renewables I understand that no decommissioning of major, commercial-scale installations is expected in the next 10 years, so costs would be limited to any decommissioning of small-scale demonstration devices that takes place.

For onshore wind farms, we do include for decommissioning in our consents. This currently works out at between £3,500 and £5,000 per turbine depending on the status of the land.

Energy Security of Supply

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the reasons were for the delays in the publication of the sixth report of the Energy Security of Supply Working Group; and if he will make a statement. [69881]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 11 May 2006]: The sixth report of the Joint Energy Security of Supply (JESS) working group was published on 16 May. Much of the information has been compiled using data already in the public domain. This includes National Grid's Ten Year Statement on gas published in December 2005 and Seven Year Statement on electricity which was updated in October 2005, information published on the Department's website, and company announcements about planned new infrastructure projects. There have also been several opportunities to update Parliament on the security of energy supply since last year's Secretary of State's report on security of gas and electricity supply. The latest JESS report pulls all this information together.

EU/ASEAN/NAFTA Trade

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the level of inter-member trade within the (a) EU, (b) Association of South East Asian Nations and (c) North American Free Trade Agreement. [69936]

Mr. McCartney: The information is as follows.

(a) Intra EU25 trade in goods in 2004 was $2,502.7 billion USD. For comparison, in 1999 intra EU25 trade was $1,600.9 billion USD (Source: Eurostat External Trade).

(b) Intra ASEAN trade in goods in 2004 was $123.7 billion USD. In 1999 it was $74.4 billion USD (Source: Association of Southeast Asian Nations). Please note these figures refer to the ASEAN 10 which includes Brunei, Cambodia, Indonesia, Lao, Malaysia, Myanmar, Philippines, Singapore, Thailand and Vietnam.

(c) Intra NAFTA trade in goods in 2004 was $739.2 billion USD. In 1999 it was $579.9 billion USD.

Fuel Prices

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the average price of a gallon of heating fuel was in each country in the UK in March 2006. [71321]

Malcolm Wicks: The calculated March 2006 heating oil prices are:

Country	£/gallon
Northern Ireland	1.59
Scotland	1.57
Wales	1.63
England	1.63

Gas Pipeline

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proportion of gas transported through the proposed LNG gas pipeline from Felindr to Tirley will be used in Wales. [66890]

Malcolm Wicks: This is a commercial matter for the companies concerned.

International Arms Trade Treaty

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what involvement he has had in the Government strategy to make progress on the international arms trade treaty. [71497]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 4 May 2006, Official Report, column 1747W.

Miners' Compensation

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many (a) vibration white finger and (b) chronic obstructive pulmonary disease claims he expects to be settled in (i) 2006 and (ii) each of the following three years. [69782]

Malcolm Wicks: The number of claims we expect to settle in each year from 2006 onward is as follows:

	Vibration white finger	Chronic obstructive pulmonary disease
2006	22,500	135,932
2007	16,000	81,650
2008	3,500	43,988
2009	[1]—	10,912

[1] All VWF claims are expected to have been settled before the end of 2008.

This is our projection based on current plans which may be subject to change.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the (a) legal and (b) other costs incurred since 1999 in defending claims for chronic obstructive pulmonary disease for surface workers. [69798]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department estimates that approximately £160,000 has been spent on legal costs and £150,000 on other costs in relation to claims for chronic obstructive pulmonary disease and surface workers.

Mr. Touhig: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many solicitors' firms have been investigated by his Department in connection with fees charged to ex-miners under the compensation scheme in (a) 2004, (b) 2005 and (c) 2006. [70886]

Malcolm Wicks: Investigations into the professional conduct of solicitors is a matter for the Law Society. The Department did contact all solicitors involved in the schemes in 2003 to encourage them to refund any fees taken from claimants' compensation payments and many have done so. The Law Society also wrote earlier this year urging solicitors who have not already done so to return to all clients any additional charges made in these cases, and is also investigating some solicitors involved in the schemes.

Mr. Touhig: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what average award has been paid in Islwyn under the Government's compensation scheme for (a) coal mining-related respiratory disease and (b) vibration white finger. [70887]

Malcolm Wicks: The average compensation figure paid in Islwyn for respiratory disease is £7,134 and for vibration white finger is £8,961.

Mr. Touhig: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with Capita about the way they handle witness statements supporting vibration white finger Group 3 claims. [70888]

Malcolm Wicks: Witness statements are an important and essential part of the verification of Group 3 claims, which Capita consider before making a decision on liability. Capita will seek to arrange a telephone interview with the witness as a means of clarification or to discuss any apparent inconsistencies in the statements made by the claimant and his witness. These interviews are recorded for quality monitoring purposes and claimants' solicitors receive a copy of the interview if so requested. DTI Officials continue to review progress with Capita to ensure they are carried out professionally.

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects alterations to the Dust Calculation Model allowing the full accession of UK Coal plc to the Claims Handling Agreement in respect of coal health compensation to be completed; and if he will make a statement. [71476]

Malcolm Wicks: The DTI and UK Coal have reached agreement on how the Dust Calculation Model should be implemented with regard to claims which have shared liability and offers which will discharge British Coal's liability are due to commence from early July.

Brian Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many (a) chronic obstructive pulmonary disease and (b) vibration white finger claims have been submitted from Tamworth constituency, broken down by district electoral ward. [71226]

Malcolm Wicks: Although I cannot provide statistics by electoral ward, I have broken down the claims submitted from Tamworth constituents by postcode [1]. The figures are as follows:

Postcode	Chronic Obstructive Pulmonary Disease	Vibration White Finger
B77	1,020	289
B78	1,155	396
B79	571	141
WS14	33	5
Total	2,781	831

[1] The postcodes listed include areas beyond the Tamworth constituency boundary.

The figures for Tamworth constituency are 1,700 chronic obstructive pulmonary disease claims and 437 vibration white finger claims submitted.

Miners' Pensions

John Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many deferred pensioners there are in the mineworkers' pension schemes. [71053]

Malcolm Wicks: As of 31 March 2006 the Mineworkers' Pension Scheme had 99,423 deferred members.

Mini-Motorcycles

Mr. Ian Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he takes to ensure that retailers act responsibly in the sale of mini-motorcycles. [62019]

Mr. Byrne: I have been asked to reply.

Police and local authorities have a number of powers available to deal with the misuse of these vehicles. The Anti-social Behaviour Unit has held Action Days to share best practice in tackling mini-moto nuisance and has provided guidance on the Together website. Local partnership approaches can usefully involve Trading Standards officials and liaison with retailers.

Northwest Regional Development Agency

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many jobs the Northwest Regional Development Agency has created in each (a) district and borough council area and (b) sector of the economy in Lancashire in the last five years. [70951]

Margaret Hodge: The number of jobs created by the Northwest Regional Development Agency in each district and borough council in Lancashire is as follows:

	Jobs created
District	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06
Blackburn with Darwen	129	420	333
Blackpool	15	20	29
Burnley	13	136	59
Hyndburn	19	3	3
Lancaster	100	35	11
Pendle	167	292	41

Rossendale	16	17	59
South Ribble	0	40	0
West Lancashire	10	29	87
Wyre	12	10	12
Grand total	523	1,135	652

The agency does not organise its output information by sector. Output figures by district/borough council are only available from 2003-04, as records were not kept prior to that.

Patents

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures are in place to ensure that parties seeking patents have gained access to genetic resources or associated knowledge in a legal way in the country of origin. [71455]

Jim Fitzpatrick: There are no measures under the laws of the UK, but a person violating the access laws of another country would be subject to any sanctions which may be provided for under those laws.

Post Offices

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many post offices have been closed in (a) Taunton constituency, (b) Somerset and (c) the United Kingdom in each year since 1997. [71639]

Jim Fitzpatrick: I understand from Post Office Ltd. that information on the post office branch network has historically only been held at a national level. More recently records have been maintained at a Government office region and at parliamentary constituency level and this level of data commenced from the end of 2001-02.

The number of post offices in the constituencies that cover Taunton constituency is as follows:

Number of post office branches

Taunton constituency	Number
2001-02	41
2002-03	41
2003-04	40
2004-05	36

Somerset constituency	Number
2001-02	218
2002-03	215
2003-04	205
2004-05	195

Information for the network of branches for the whole of the UK is available for each year since 1997 is as follows:

	Number of post office branches
1997	19,251
1998	19,008
1999	18,775
2000	18,393
2001	17,846
2002	17,584
2003	17,239
2004	15,961
2005	14,609

Power Lines

Mark Tami: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many (a) adults and (b) children were (i) killed and (ii) injured as a result of coming into contact with high voltage power lines in each of the last five years. [71580]

Malcolm Wicks: For reporting years 2000-01 to 2004-05 the figures are as follows:

Reporting year	Adult fatalities	Adults injured	Child fatalities	Children injured
2000-01	7	28	0	0
2001-02	3	42	0	3
2002-03	1	30	0	1
2003-04	2	24	0	2
2004-05	5	27	0	1
Total	18	151	0	7

Pre-payment Meters

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will take steps to ensure that customers using pre-payment meters are able to take advantage of price-capping offered by supply companies to other customers; and if he will make a statement. [72146]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government welcome the range of tariffs developed and offered by gas and electricity suppliers, but the setting and marketing of tariffs, including fixed-price or capped tariffs, are commercial decisions for the companies concerned.

Private Office Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what percentage of his private office staff is (a) male, (b) female and (c) disabled. [69007]

Mr. Darling: My ministerial private offices comprise:

(a) 56 per cent. male staff

(b) 44 per cent. female staff

I am not in a position to provide a percentage for (c) disabled staff, since individuals could be identified and in any case, declaration of a disability is voluntary.

Regional Development Agencies

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the (a) total budget and (b) administrative costs of the regional development agencies were in each region in each year since their creation; and what the projected costs are for 2006-07. [70573]

Margaret Hodge: The following tables show the regional development agencies' budgets and administration costs for the financial years 1999-2000 to 2005-06 and indicative budgets and estimated administration costs for 2006-07.

Renewable Energy

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what grants are available to domestic households to install micro generation renewable energy equipment. [70333]

Malcolm Wicks: Grants for the installation of microgeneration technologies are available to householders through the Low Carbon Buildings Programme (LCBP). This programme takes over from the Clear Skies and Major photovoltaics programmes, which finished in March 2006. The LCBP initially had £30 million to allocate—£1.5 million was used to ease the transition from the previous programmes and the remaining £28.5 million is dedicated to projects proposed by householders, communities and businesses. Further information can be found at www.lowcarbonbuildings.org.uk.

The Chancellor announced a further £50 million for the LCBP in the Budget. This additional funding will be used for projects in the public sector.

Reviews (Agencies/Bodies)

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which (a) non-departmental public bodies and (b) executive agencies for which he is responsible have been subject to a peer review in 2005-06; what the (i) purpose, (ii) terms of reference and (iii) outcome was of each review; and what reference to the outcome of the review has been made when making funding decisions for those organisations. [64002]

Mr. Darling: The Equal Opportunities Commission (EOC) had a peer review in 2005-06. Its purpose was to ensure that the EOC is fit for purpose and able to carry out agreed objectives during the period up to October 2007 when it is due to be merged into the Commission for Equality and Human Rights.

The terms of reference of the review were as follows:

Ensuring that the EOC is deploying the resources at its disposal most effectively for its purpose and able to deliver agreed objectives and priorities in the period leading up to the creation of the CEHR in 2007.

The operation of the management agreement and the financial memorandum agreed between the DTI and the EOC in November 2004 and the need for any revisions to reflect fully the interests of the Minister for Women.

Assessing competing priorities in terms of organisational capacity.

The review has now been successfully completed and the EOC is pursuing a number of recommendations.

There were no other peer reviews of DTI sponsored bodies or agencies in 2005-06.

Severn Barrage

Mark Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the likely cost of a Severn barrage energy generation scheme. [71357]

Malcolm Wicks: Between 1978 and 1994 the Government supported the most comprehensive programme of research and development on tidal energy in the world at an overall cost in excess of £20 million. These studies considered schemes for tidal energy at a number of potential sites, the largest being in the Severn estuary.

The results of the Severn barrage study were reported in Energy Paper 57 (ISBN 0 11 412952 5). In an assessment of the Government Tidal Programme published in 1994 (ETSU R-82) the capital cost of the Severn scheme was estimated to be £11.2 billion.

The most recent study of the Severn scheme carried out by the Severn Tidal Power Group and published in 2003 (available at www.dti.gov.uk/files/file15363.pdf?pubpdfdload=02%2F644) estimated the cost to be in the range of £10.3 to £14 billion (2001 prices).

Sunday Trading

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations his Department has received from the lobby group Deregulate on further liberalisation of current Sunday trading laws. [71352]

Mr. McCartney: From 13 January to 14 April, we asked for views on all aspects of relaxing restrictions on Sunday shopping hours, saying that responses could be provided in confidence. Deregulate responded to our review, asking that their submission be kept confidential. We intend to publish a summary of all the views expressed on our website (www.dti.gov.uk/consumers/buying-selling/Sunday%20Shopping), within three months of the close of the consultation.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he has taken to ensure that employees understand their rights in relation to opting out of Sunday working. [72061]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Full information about the right of shop and betting workers to opt out of Sunday working is available in the employment section of the Directgov website (www.direct.gov.uk/Employment/Employees/WorkingHoursAndTimeOff/fs/en).

Employees who have questions about their employment rights can also call a free helpline to get advice run by ACAS 08457 474747.

Telephone Cold-calling

Jeremy Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps his Department is taking to tackle telephone cold-calling from companies located outside the EU. [71631]

Margaret Hodge: The Department introduced the Telephone Preference Service (TPS) scheme in 1999, under the Telecommunications (Data Protection and Privacy) Regulations, which were updated by Privacy and Electronic Communications (EC Directive) Regulations 2003. The TPS scheme provides protection to consumers from cold-calling if they have previously notified the caller that they do not wish to receive such calls or have been registered with the TPS for at least 28 days. Those making cold calls from within the UK or on behalf of UK companies from outside the European Union are legally required not to call a number that has registered on the TPS list. However, cold calls from non-UK companies marketing a service or product are not covered by the TSP scheme, as the companies and products have no link with the UK. The Information Commissioner has responsibility for the enforcement of the TPS scheme and considers complaints about breaches.

Trade Statistics

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the level of UK trade was with (a) European Monetary Union countries and (b) the rest of the world in each year since 1991. [69925]

Mr. McCartney: In response to part (a) the following table shows UK trade (exports and imports) in goods and services with economic monetary union countries since 1991.

TV Licences

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether additional Government funding to support a continued role for the Post Office in supplying television licences was discussed with the BBC prior to the decision to end the Post Office's contract to do so. [71697]

Jim Fitzpatrick: No. Post Office Ltd (POL) failed to secure the renewal of the contract to supply television licences following a competitive tender exercise run by the BBC. The decision to award the contract to another network was a commercial one made by the BBC as the television licensing authority looking to the interests of licence fee payers and seeking to achieve value for money with its licence fee income.

UN Conference (New York)

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which (a) Ministers and (b) officials from his Department will attend the United Nations conference in New York from 26 June to 6 July 2006 to review progress made in the implementation of the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects. [71496]

Malcolm Wicks: This is a matter for the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, who will lead the UK delegation.

Union Recognition (Retail Industry)

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent discussions he has had with (a) employers and (b) retailers on union recognition. [72059]

Jim Fitzpatrick: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State has not recently held any discussions on this topic with employers or retailers.

Weights and Measures

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what guidance the Government have issued to local authority trading standards services on the use of imperial weights and measures. [70632]

Mr. McCartney: DTI provided guidance in 2004 to LACORS, which coordinates advice to the regulatory services of local authorities, on the use of switchable metric/imperial weighing machines. There is no other relevant guidance from Government specifically directed to local authority trading standards services, but DTI has issued more general guidance to the public and private sectors on the use of metric units.

World Trade Organisation Talks

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he has taken to encourage a positive outcome from the current World Trade Organisation talks. [70073]

Mr. McCartney: The Government have been and remain fully committed to securing an ambitious, pro-development outcome to the Doha Development Agenda (DDA). In support of this objective, and to press the case for an agreement that facilitates world trade and meets the needs of developing nations, my predecessors were in regular contact with the EU Trade Commissioner, their counterparts in other EU member states, with the Director General of the WTO and with the Trade Ministers of other WTO member countries. They also remained in regular contact with business, NGOs and other interested parties in the UK and internationally, in order to help build a consensus of support for an ambitious outcome to the round. I expect to do the same.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Coroners' Inquests

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what discussions took place between the Oxfordshire coroner and (a) her Department and (b) Lord Hutton before her decision to issue a death certificate for Dr. David Kelly on 18 August 2003. [70327]

Ms Harman: I did not issue a death certificate for Dr. David Kelly. It is the responsibility of the local registrar to issue death certificates or more properly certified copies of entries in the register of deaths.

Correspondence

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs when the Secretary of State will answer the letter dated 10 April from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton, with regard to Ms Nusrat Bibi. [72168]

Ms Harman: The Secretary of State replied to the right hon. Member on 19 May. I apologise for the delay.

Court of Protection

Tim Farron: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many people have died while their cases were being dealt with by the Court of Protection in each year since 1997 in (a) Westmorland and Lonsdale and (b) England and Wales. [72493]

Ms Harman: The number of people in England and Wales who have died while under the jurisdiction of the Court of Protection pursuant to the proceedings of the Mental Health Act 1983 from 1999 to 2006 are as follows:

	Number
1999	6,347
2000	5,692
2001	5,589
2002	5,055
2003	4,946
2004	4,778
2005	5,234
2006	1,911

The court only holds records for six years following the end of its involvement in the client's case and it is not therefore possible to provide reliable data prior to this period. Neither is it possible to provide this information for clients living in Westmorland and Lonsdale.

The court does not hold reliable information on the number of donors who have died while under its jurisdiction pursuant to the proceedings of the Enduring Power of Attorney Act 1985.

Court Statistics

Dr. Vis: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many black and minority ethnic people were (a) sentenced and (b) remanded by each court in (i) 2003 and (ii) 2004. [68216]

Mr. Sutcliffe: I have been asked to reply.

Information relating to the number of black and minority ethnic people sentenced and remanded for 2003 is available at www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs05/s95race04.pdf. Data relating to 2004 is not yet available.

Courthouses

Bob Russell: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs pursuant to the answer of 9 May 2006, Official Report, column 147W, if she will list (a) the locations of the new private finance initiative courthouses and (b) the companies who provided them. [72409]

Ms Harman: The 15 PFI courthouses built and the companies that provided them are as follows:

1. Hereford, Kidderminster, Worcester and Redditch[1] magistrates courts in 2001—Hereford and Worcester Courts Ltd. (equity held by Babcock & Brown Properties Ltd.)

2. Hull, Beverly and Bridlington magistrates courts in 2001—Modern Courts Humberside Ltd. (equity held by Mowlems plc and Innisfree)

3. Derby and Chesterfield magistrates courts in 2003—Derbyshire Courts Ltd. (equity held by Babcock & Brown Properties Ltd.)

4. Manchester magistrates court in 2004—UK Courts Services (Manchester) Ltd. (a consortium of Group 4 now GSL, Carillion and Societe Generale).

5. Exeter Combined courts in 2004—Enterprise Civil Buildings Ltd. (a consortium of HSBC Ltd., Alfred McAlpine Ltd. and Sodexho Ltd.)

6. Ipswich and Cambridge Crown courts in 2004—Modern Courts Holdings (East Anglia) Ltd. (equity held by Mowlems plc).

7. Sheffield Family Hearing Centre in 2004—Palecastle Ltd.

8. North Somerset (Worle) magistrates courthouse in April 2006—Services Support (Avon and Somerset) Ltd. (a consortium of Amey, Equion and Bank of Scotland).

[1] Redditch magistrates court was a refurbishment.

Departmental Legislation

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will list those (a) Acts and (b) parts of Acts which received Royal Assent between 1976 and 2006 for which her Department has policy responsibility and which remain in force. [70086]

Bridget Prentice: The information requested for the period of time covered by the question can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Electoral Fraud

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many incidents of postal vote fraud were recorded in Coventry South on 4 May 2006. [71753]

Bridget Prentice: I am not aware of any such incidents. Any allegations of electoral fraud should be reported to the returning officer and the police, who will make the appropriate investigations into them.

European Parliamentary and Local Elections (Pilots) Act

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will make a statement on the operation of the European Parliamentary and Local Elections (Pilots) Act 2004; and what recent representations she has received about the operation of this Act. [71957]

Bridget Prentice: The European Parliamentary and Local Elections (Pilots) Act 2004 (EPLE(P) Act) provided for the piloting of all-postal voting in four electoral regions at the 2004 combined European and local elections. The Electoral Commission published evaluations of each region's pilot in August 2004. At the same time, they also published an overarching report "Delivering Democracy? The future of postal voting". All of the Commission's reports are available on its website: www.electoralcommission.org.uk.

The Government published its response to "Delivering Democracy?" in December 2004 (Cm 6436).

All-postal voting in general, including the operation of the EPLE(P) Act 2004, has been debated in both Houses as the Electoral Administration Bill has progressed through Parliament. Aside from this I have received no recent representations on the operation of the Act.

Financial Review

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many applications for financial review have been made in each year since 1990; how many cases the High Court agreed to hear in each year; and in how many cases it found against the Government. [68423]

Ms Harman: The number of applications for permission/leave to apply for judicial review are set out in the following table which also shows the number of applications in which permission/leave was granted in the relevant year. As to whether the cases were against the Government and the results of those cases, this information can be obtained only at a disproportionate cost.

Judicial review civil and criminal—Applications for permission

	Received	Granted
1990	2,129	902
1991	2,089	923
1992	2,439	1,123
1993	2,886	1,049
1994	3,208	1,260
1995	3,604	1,393
1996	3,901	1,257
1997	3,739	1,278
1998	4,539	1,020
1999	4,959	1,373
2000	4,247	1,464
2001	4,732	1,400
2002	5,377	1,124
2003	5,949	1,440

Judicial review civil and criminal—Applications for permission

	Received	Granted
2004	4,207	1,036
2005	5,381	744

Free Air Miles

David Simpson: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many free air miles have been accrued by senior civil servants in her Department on official business in each of the last three years; and how they were used. [70517]

Vera Baird: The Department can provide the information requested only at disproportionate cost.

Inquests (Armed Forces)

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many inquests into the deaths of members of the armed forces as a result of military duties in Iraq have been carried out by (a) the Oxfordshire coroner, (b) the Fairford coroner, (c) the Lyneham coroner and (d) other coroners since 2003. [72151]

Ms Harman: I understand that the number of inquests opened in relation to members of the armed forces who died as a result of military duties in Iraq since 2003 are as follows:

(a) Oxfordshire coroner: 86;

(b) Gloucestershire coroner (for Fairford): 0;

(c) Wiltshire and Swindon coroner (for Lyncham) 11; and

(d) other coroners: 2 (West London and Powys).

Concluded inquests as of 15 May 2006 are

(a) Oxfordshire coroner: 29

(b) Gloucestershire coroner (for Fairford) 0

(c) Wiltshire and Swindon Coroner (for Lyneham): 0

(d) Other coroners: 1 (Powys).

Northern Ireland Legal Services

Lady Hermon: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will make a statement on the strategy for merging the Northern Ireland Tribunal Service and the Northern Ireland Court Service; and when she expects the merger to be completed. [72561]

Bridget Prentice: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland announced on 21 March that the Northern Ireland Court Service will assume administrative responsibility for Northern Ireland departmental tribunals as part of a new Courts and Tribunals Service. A Tribunals Service planning group has been established and will enter into discussions with the relevant Northern Ireland sponsor departments to agree a timescale for the transfer of responsibility of the various tribunals through a staged process which is likely to take several years.

At the same time, the Court Service will be responsible for establishing any new tribunals which are required including the proposed Rating Valuation Tribunal for Northern Ireland.

Parliamentary Boundaries

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs when she will lay the order transferring responsibility for parliamentary boundaries from the Boundary Commissions to the Electoral Commission; and if she will make a statement. [72327]

Bridget Prentice: Section 16 of the Political Parties, Elections and Referendums Act 2000 outlines the arrangements for the transfer of the functions of the Parliamentary Boundary Commissions to the Electoral Commission. The Government are still considering the timings for the transfer to take place. As the functions of the Electoral Commission are currently subject to a review Committee on Standards in Public Life, the Government will wish to take into account the findings of that review before it reaches any decisions in the timings of the transfers.

Party Funding

Lady Hermon: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will list leaders of political parties represented at Westminster to whom the Lord Chancellor has written seeking views on elements of a reporting regime of loans received further to the Lord Chancellor's statement in the House of Lords on 20 March. [68781]

Bridget Prentice [pursuant to the reply, 8 May 2006, Official Report, c. 124W]: My previous answer provided a list of those to whom the Lord Chancellor had written on 20 March seeking views on elements of a reporting regime for loans. While the Lord Chancellor did write to Lord Rogan, I incorrectly referred to him as the Leader of the Ulster Unionist Party. The Leader of the Ulster Unionist Party is Sir Reg Empey.

Postal and Proxy Voting

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what representations she has received regarding (a) postal voting and (b) proxy voting in London following the local elections. [71844]

Bridget Prentice: In relation to the recent local elections in London, I have received two representations regarding postal voting and no representations regarding proxy voting. Following on from an oral parliamentary question to me on postal voting fraud from the hon. Member for Congleton (Ann Winterton) on 9 May, the hon. Member for Huntingdon (Mr. Djanogly) referred to postal voting allegations in the recent election in the London borough of Tower Hamlets. More recently, I have received a parliamentary question from the hon. Member for Ribble Valley (Mr. Evans), which also refers to the allegations in Tower Hamlets.

Private Office Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what percentage of her private office staff are (a) male, (b) female and (c) disabled. [69031]

Vera Baird: On 31 December 2005, there were 66 permanent members of staff in the Private Office Directorate of the Department for Constitutional Affairs. This figure includes the Permanent Secretary, Special Advisers and Crown Office staff but does not include temporary staff from agencies.

Of these 66 staff:

(a) 35 were male (53.03 per cent.);

(b) 31 were female (46.97 per cent.);

(c) Under the Disability Discrimination Act, departmental records of disabled staff are solely based on voluntary declaration of disability and not connected in any way to a formal register of disability.

In accordance with civil service policy, information concerning the disability status (or the ethnic origin) of individuals may not be disclosed where the number of staff in a particular category is less than five. This is to ensure that individuals cannot be identified.

Of the 66 staff in post in Private Office Directorate on the 31 December 2006, some staff had declared themselves as disabled, some as non-disabled and others had opted to remain undeclared in respect of whether or not they had a disability.

Promotion Boards

David Simpson: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many promotion boards have been held in her Department in each of the last five years. [70512]

Vera Baird: The Department for Constitutional Affairs does not operate a promotion board system. All posts are advertised and staff apply under our job specific selection procedures. This allows staff to apply for posts on promotion or level transfer. This system has operated in the DCA for over five years and we would incur disproportionate costs to provide figures on staff promoted under these procedures.

For posts within the senior civil service applicants who are invited to attend an interview for a senior civil service post attend an assessment centre prior to a panel interview.

Property Rights

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will bring forward proposals to amend current legislation to give a spouse an absolute right to an equal share with their husband or wife in property even where his or her name does not appear on the deeds. [72298]

Ms Harman: The Government have no plans to bring forward proposals to give a spouse an absolute equal right to property. The ownership of matrimonial property is most often an issue in divorce proceedings. The Matrimonial Causes Act 1973 governs the division of property on divorce and sets out a number of factors to be taken into account by the courts when considering that division. The prime consideration is the welfare of any children. Other factors include the contribution, both financial and other, that each spouse has made and the length of the marriage. The courts often make property adjustment orders as part of an assessment based on the future needs of the divorcing spouses and the needs of any children involved. Every marriage is different and circumstances vary so much that it would not be equitable in many cases to impose an automatic equal right.

Racial Abuse Complaints

David Simpson: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many complaints of racial abuse have been (a) investigated and (b) upheld in her Department in each of the last five years. [70514]

Vera Baird: The numbers of these types of complaints investigated by the Department over the last five financial years is less than five in each of those years. The breakdown by number is therefore not disclosed on grounds of confidentiality.

The Department has an equality and diversity grievance procedure in place to deal with such complaints and trained investigating officers are appointed to investigate the allegations. The equality and diversity grievance procedure is made available to staff in the employee manual and on the intranet.

Voter Registration

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what estimate the Electoral Commission has made of the level of voter registration for local elections in England in each year since it was created. [70657]

Peter Viggers: I have agreed to reply as the question relates to the work of the Electoral Commission.

The Commission informs me that it does not make estimates of the level of voter registration for the local elections in England. However, the Office for National Statistics (ONS) collects and publishes annually information on the number of people registered to vote in such local elections.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Accidents at Work

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people were involved in an accident at work in each of the last 20 years; and what percentage of the workforce this represented in each year. [72587]

Mrs. McGuire: The number or reported injuries to workers in Great Britain 1986-87 to 2004-05 is as follows:

	Number of injuries	Percentage of workforce
1986-87	181,832	[1]—
1987-88	182,390	[1]—
1988-89	186,327	[1]—
1989-90	189,290	[1]—
1990-91	184,543	0.72
1991-92	173,404	0.70
1992-93	161,675	0.67
1993-94	155,734	0.64
1994-95	160,844	0.66
1995-96	150,968	0.61
1996-97	159,175	0.62
1997-98	166,049	0.63
1998-99	162,450	0.61
1999-2000	165,648	0.59
2000-01	163,266	0.58
2001-02	159,763	0.56
2002-03	158,554	0.55
2003-04	164,339	0.56
2004-05[2]	153,160	0.52

[1] Employment data for workers not available for these years.
[2] Provisional.

Notes:
1. Data for 1986-87 to 1995-96 reported under the Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations (RIDDOR) 1985; data from 1996-97 reported under RIDDOR 1995. Injuries comprise fatal, major and over three-day injuries to workers.
2. The annual basis is the planning year from 1 April to 31 March.
3. RIDDOR statistics are those reported by employers and others to all enforcing authorities.
4. Estimates of work-related injuries have also been available from the Labour Force Survey (LFS) since 1994-95. Comparing LFS estimates with the injuries reported suggests that not all non-fatal accidents are reported, and that the level of reporting by employers has varied between 41 per cent. and 48 per cent. However, Health and Safety Executive (HSE) does know about all fatal injuries at work.

We are pleased to note that these figures reflect a steady downward trend in the percentage of the workforce injured while at work.

We continue to deliver the HSC's risk-based strategy to improve Great Britain's health and safety performance through a targeted programme of interventions that concentrates our resources on the highest areas of incidence and the poorest performers.

Asbestos-related Deaths

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people have died from asbestos-related conditions in (a) England, (b) Scotland, (c) Wales and (d) Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years. [69687]

Mrs. McGuire: The number of deaths from mesothelioma and asbestosis combined in England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years for which data are available is given in the following table:

	1994	1995	1996	1997	1998	1999	2000	2001	2002[1]	2003[1]

[1] Provisional

Sources:
Health & Safety Executive British mesothelioma and asbestosis registers, Health & Safety Executive for Northern Ireland (HSENI) and Northern Ireland Statistics and Research Agency (NISRA)

The number of asbestos-related lung cancer deaths cannot be directly enumerated, since asbestos-related lung cancers are clinically indistinguishable from lung cancers due to other causes. Current evidence suggests that the number of asbestos-related lung cancer deaths is similar to the number of deaths due to mesothelioma. Therefore, since mesothelioma deaths account for the vast majority in the table, the total number of deaths due to asbestos is approximately double those given in the table.

Benefit/Allowance Claim Forms

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much his Department spent, excluding staff costs, on administering (a) disability living allowance, (b) attendance allowance, (c) carers' allowance and (d) incapacity benefit claim forms in the latest period for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [72528]

Mrs. McGuire: Information is not available in the format requested. The Department now accounts for its administration and benefit expenditure by Strategic Objective, as set out in its public service agreements (PSA), and by individual Requests for Resources (RfRs), as set out in the Departmental estimates and accounts.

Benefits

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer of 1 March 2006, Official Report, column 795W, on benefits, what the reasons are for the variations between the budgeted expenditure for council tax benefit in the answer and the outturn figures for expenditure on council tax benefit set out in table 8 of the pre-Budget report 2005. [66056]

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Na h-Eileanan an Iar (Mr. MacNeil), 1 March 2006, Official Report, column 796W, on benefits, for what reasons the budgeted expenditure for council tax benefit varies from the outturn figures for expenditure on council tax benefit set out in table 8 of the pre-Budget report 2005. [70388]

Mr. Plaskitt: The budgeted amounts given in my reply of 1 March 2006, Official Report, column 795W, are derived from departmental reports and reflect the provision made for expenditure in the relevant years. The figures in the outturn expenditure tables, which are consistent with pre-Budget reports, provide details of adjusted expenditure. The two sets of figures are not directly comparable.

Cold Weather Payments

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how the monitoring of cold weather temperatures for cold weather payments is carried out in each English region. [72145]

Mr. Plaskitt: Under the current cold weather payment scheme every residential postcode is linked to one of 74 weather stations, 44 of which cover England. Cold weather payments are made to all eligible customers when the average daily temperature is recorded as, or forecast to be, zero degrees Celsius or below over seven consecutive days at the weather station linked to their postcode.

Correspondence

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will take steps to ensure that the hon. Member for Walsall, North is sent a reply to his letter of 20 April 2006 to the manager of the Works and Pensions Office, St. Nicholas Street, Hereford, on bereavement benefit for a constituent. [72438]

Mr. Plaskitt: A reply to my hon. Friend's letter of 20 April was sent on 16 May.

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when the Disability Carers Service will reply to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, West's letter of 8 February 2006 with regard to his constituent, Mrs. Elaine Fordyce. [64411]

Mrs. McGuire: Terry Moran, Chief Executive of the Disability and Carers Service, replied to the hon. Member on 5 May 2006. The letter of 8 February appeared not to have been received by DCS.

Letter from Terry Moran, dated 5 May 2006:

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when you would receive a reply to your letter of 8 February 2006 about entitlement to Carer's Allowance (CA) for Mrs Elaine Fordyce of 10 Springfield Crescent, South Queensferry, West Lothian, EH30 9SB. I am sorry that your letter was not replied to but I do not appear to have received the original and only became aware you had written after you raised your concerns in the House of Commons.

The circumstances surrounding Mrs Fordyce's claim for CA have been carefully and sympathetically reconsidered but regrettably I can only confirm that her award cannot be backdated to 27 July 2004. We have considered all statutory means with which to backdate the claim but the rules governing this are clear and cannot be relaxed or varied no matter how compelling an individual's circumstances might be.

As you know we also considered whether a special payment should be made because Mrs Fordyce has lost out on entitlement to benefit as a direct result of a clear and unambiguous error made by the department. It is appreciated that without a record of the conversation held between Mrs Fordyce and the Benefit Enquiry Line it is difficult to confirm what was actually said. However, as explained, our advisors are fully conversant with the rules for claiming CA and deal with a great number of enquiries on this very issue on a daily basis. I am confident, therefore, that they would have provided the correct advice to Mrs Fordyce. In view of this a special payment could not be made.

Despite the fact that it is clearly stated on the DLA claim pack that if carer's want to claim CA they should do so straightaway, we were aware that some carers chose to wait for a decision on DLA before claiming. With new legislation, brought in from 10 April 2006, there is no longer the need to claim both benefits at the same time. As long as the claim for CA is made within three months of the decision being made on the claim to DLA the carer can request backdating to the start of the DLA award date. Although this will not help Mrs Fordyce it should ensure that this situation does not reoccur and affect other carers.

If Mrs Fordyce needs any further information or assistance in connection with her CA Nicola Moorby, the Team Leader responsible for her claim, will be pleased to help. She can be contacted by writing to The Carer's Allowance Unit, Palatine House, Lancaster Road, Preston, PR1 1ZW or by telephoning 01772 899915.

If Mrs Fordyce is unhappy with the way her complaint has been dealt with and wants to take the matter further, she can, within six months of the date at the top of this letter, contact the Independent Case Examiner (ICE) for the Disability and Carers Service who will consider complaints about our service, though not matters of law or Government policy. ICE can be contacted in writing at PO Box 155, Chester CH99 9SA, by telephone 0845 6060777 or by e-mail ice@ukgov.demon.co.uk.

I am sorry that this will be a disappointing reply for Mrs Fordyce but I can assure you that everything has been done to backdate her claim.

Departmental Bills (Amendments)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the occasions when an amendment has been moved by (a) a Labour backbencher, (b) an Opposition backbencher and (c) an Opposition front bench spokesman to a Bill sponsored by his Department that has been accepted by his Department during the current session; and if he will make a statement. [72108]

Mrs. McGuire: There has been no such occasion.

Graveyard Safety

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate the Health and Safety Executive has made of the number of headstones removed for safety reasons in the last 12 months. [70658]

Mrs. McGuire: Neither HSE nor the Department for Constitutional Affairs (DCA) has central records of the number of headstones removed for safety reasons. The Government are committed to finding a way forward on this difficult issue, which strikes a balance between safety and the sensitivities of relatives. A cross-departmental group has started work on new guidance to help burial authorities with the problem.

Housing Benefit (War Veterans)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions which local authorities in England and Wales allow a discretionary award for (a) veterans disabled during the second world war and (b) their widows in the assessment of housing benefit; and if he will make a statement. [70766]

Mr. Plaskitt: Currently, all local authorities in England and Wales allow discretionary disregards for war disablement pensioners and war widows' pensioners above the statutory £10.00 disregard. All these disregards apply regardless of when the disability occurred.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether the Government target of reducing the overall number of incapacity benefit claimants by 1 million over the next decade takes account of the number of new claimants eligible in this time span. [72944]

Mrs. McGuire: Our aspiration of a million fewer people claiming incapacity benefits over a decade does indeed take account of the volume of people making a new claim for the benefit and the number of people leaving the benefit. That is why our ambitious proposals outlined in the Welfare Reform Green Paper encompass helping people to retain the jobs they have; get back into employment where they do not have one; and help them stay in work when they get a job.

Our measures are already working, reversing a trend which saw an additional 1.7 million more people claiming incapacity benefits between 1979 and 1997.

While it is difficult to model the precise impact of our proposed measures at this early stage, the Green Paper sets out our aspiration to see a million fewer claimants of incapacity benefits over the course of a decade through the combined efforts of the Government, employers, local authorities and health professionals.

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many people received incapacity benefit in each year since 1991, broken down by the condition that enables them to claim this benefit; [68863]

(2) how many incapacity benefit recipients experienced (a) mental and (b) behavioural disorder in each year since 1992, broken down by the type of disorder. [68864]

Mrs. McGuire: Information about incapacity benefit and severe disablement allowance claimants broken down by their primary diagnosis is available from 1995. The available information has been placed in the Library.

Jobcentre Plus

Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many disability employment officers there are; where they are located; what criteria are used in deciding on their location; and whether account is taken of the number of disabled people in a particular area in determining locations. [69478]

Mrs. McGuire [holding answer 9 May 2006]: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question asking how many disability employment officers there are; where they are located; what criteria are used in deciding on their location; and whether account is taken of the number of disabled people in a particular area in determining locations. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Jobcentre Plus currently has 570 Disability Employment Advisers (DEAs) nationally. A regional breakdown of where they are located is set out in the table.

Disability Employment Advisers

	Number
East Midlands	29
East of England	37
London	73
North East	45
North West	85
Scotland	49
South East	48
South West	46
Wales	41
West Midlands	62
Yorkshire and Humberside	55
Total	570

Local managers have the maximum flexibility in deciding where to locate DEAs. Their decisions take into account local factors, such as the number of disabled people, so that resources are deployed to best meet their customers' needs.

Not all disabled people need to see a DEA. Specialist incapacity benefit personal advisers (SIBPAs) also work with such customers. Jobcentre Plus currently has 595 SIBPAs nationally. A regional breakdown of where they are located is set out in the following table.

Specialist incapacity benefit personal advisers

	Number
East Midlands	56
East of England	74
London	25
North East	63
North West	61
Scotland	89
South East	16
South West	76

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what training (a) disability employment advisers and (b) other Jobcentre Plus staff receive on awareness of the needs of (i) visually impaired people and (ii) other groups with impairments. [68317]

Mrs. McGuire: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question asking what training (a) disability employment advisers and (b) other Jobcentre Plus staff receive on awareness of the needs of (i) visually impaired people and (ii) other groups with impairments. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

A "Working with customers with a Health Condition or Disability" learning module forms a core part of training for all customer facing staff. All advisers who specialise in interviewing people with a disability or health condition, including disability employment advisers (DEAs), receive specialist training which includes this module.

The module provides an overview of health conditions and disabilities and raises staff awareness of various impairments. It looks at attitudes towards disability and suggests the appropriate approach to take in supporting our customers with disabilities. The content of this module includes specific advice on how best to help those people with visual impairments.

Since April 2006, DEAs have had to complete the generic Adviser Skills training of around 22 days, followed by the specialist DEA training.

The approach for DEA training has moved away from focussing on any specific disabilities towards giving advisers the skills to help the individual to recognise their abilities and think through their barriers to work. DEAs also have access to Work Psychologists if they need additional help and advice to assist people with specific impairments.

I hope this is helpful.

Kvaerner Pension Fund

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the implication for pensions protection of the decision of the Pensions Regulator in the case of the Kvaerner Pension Fund; and if he will make a statement. [68396]

James Purnell: This is a matter for the Pensions Regulator who has investigated the circumstances of the case.

The action taken by the regulator is in line with its statutory objective to reduce the risk of situations arising that may lead to claims for compensation from the Pension Protection Fund.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the Pension Regulator's decision to give clearance to the Kvaerner Pension Fund ceasing to be a sponsoring employer. [71170]

James Purnell [holding answer 15 May 2006]: No. This is a matter for the Pensions Regulator.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether the Kvaerner Pension Fund is eligible to enter the Pension Protection Fund at a future date. [71171]

James Purnell: The criteria for eligibility to the Pension Protection Fund (PPF) are set out in the Pensions Act 2004 and accompanying regulations. The eligibility of the Kvaerner scheme at any particular time would depend on whether it met those requirements at that time.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether he has been informed of an application by the Kvaerner Pension Fund to seek entry into the Pension Protection Fund; and if he will make a statement. [71172]

James Purnell [holding answer 15 May 2006]: Scheme entry to a Pension Protection Fund (PPF) assessment period is triggered by the occurrence of a qualifying insolvency event. The PPF has received no approach regarding entry of the Kvaerner pension scheme to the Fund.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the application by the Kvaerner Pension Fund to the Pensions Regulator to cease its responsibilities as a sponsoring employer. [71374]

James Purnell: [holding answer 16 May 2006]: None. This is a matter for the Pensions Regulator.

Mental Illness

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people have received benefits on the basis of mental illness in each of the last five years; and what the cost was. [69979]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is not available in the format requested. Information on the key benefits paid to people with a primary diagnosis within the mental and behavioural disorders or mental health or learning difficulties diagnoses groups is in the tables.

The estimates of benefit expenditure provided understates the true costs of benefit spending on those with the stated conditions, as they do not include any additional income-related benefits which may be in payment. The expenditure figures provided do not include any costs associated with administering the specified benefits.

1. Figures for incapacity benefit and severe disablement allowance relate to cases that have been diagnosed as having a mental and behavioural disorder. Diagnoses are based on the International Classification of Diseases. For attendance allowance and disability living allowance cases relate to primary diagnosis of mental health problems or learning difficulties.
2. All figures are in thousands, rounded to the nearest thousand.
3. All figures relate to financial years and are based on averages of underlying quarterly data.
4. Figures for attendance allowance and disability living allowance are consistent with Table 1.1a of the published Quarterly Statistical Enquiry, which take account of late terminations and provide a comparable series over time. Figures are subject to a degree of sampling variation.

Ministerial Cars (Fuel Costs)

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the fuel costs were for ministerial cars used by the Department in each of the last five years. [67006]

Mrs. McGuire: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 27 April 2006, Official Report, column 1226W, by my hon. Friend, the Minister of State for Transport (Dr. Ladyman).

Pathways to Work

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many individuals in (a) West Suffolk constituency and (b) the East of England are participating in the Pathways to Work programme. [72537]

Mrs. McGuire: Our successful Pathways to Work pilots have been acknowledged internationally as the best way of helping people on incapacity benefits back into work quickly. They have resulted in 21,400 Pathways job entries, including over 3,360 from voluntary customers.

West Suffolk constituency is currently not covered by the programme, but our Welfare Reform Green Paper, "A new deal for welfare: Empowering people to work", sets out our plans to roll out the programme across the whole country by 2008.

Pathways to Work pilots were rolled out in Essex, part of the East of England region, in April 2004. There have been 31,180 starts on the Pathways to Work programme in Essex.

Pension Age

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his estimate is of the cost savings from raising the state pension age to (a) 66 years by 2030 and (b) 67 years by 2040; and if he will make a statement. [70292]

James Purnell: If state pension age was raised from 65 to 66 in 2030 the estimated net savings for that year would be £5 billion. If state pension age increased from 65 to 67 in 2040 the estimated net savings for that year would be £11 billion. Figures are quoted in 2006-07 prices, rounded to the nearest £100 million, and are based on current policy.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the annual savings from raising the women's pension age from 60 to 65 years are in each year from 2010 to 2030; and if he will make a statement. [70293]

James Purnell: The information is in the table.

United Kingdom, 2006-07 prices

	Net savings in pensioner spending (£ billion)
2010	0.4
2011	1.4
2012	2.2
2013	3.2
2014	4.1
2015	5.1
2016	6.0
2017	7.0
2018	8.0
2019	9.0
2020	9.6
2021	9.9
2022	10.3
2023	10.6
2024	10,9
2025	11.2
2026	11.4
2027	11.5
2028	11.7
2029	11.8
2030	12.0

Notes:

1. All figures are given in 2006-07 prices and are based on current policy.
2. Figures are given in £billion, rounded to one decimal place.
3. The figures assume that an increase in the state retirement pension age for women would correspondingly increase the qualifying age for benefits such as pension credit, housing benefits and winter fuel payments. However, there would also be extra costs arising from working age benefits such as incapacity benefit, income support, jobseeker's allowance, bereavement benefits, and housing benefits. The net effect of these changes is shown in the table.
4. The figures cover expenditure on the bigger spending benefits only. Administrative costs, and any revenue effects, have not been considered.

The figures are based on DWP long-term projections of United Kingdom benefit spend consistent with the budget report 2006.

Pension Credit

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners have received telephone calls since September 2003 from (a) the Pension Service and (b) another agency for which his Department is responsible inviting them to explore the possibility that they may be eligible for pension credit, broken down by parliamentary constituency. [64519]

James Purnell: The information is not available in the format requested.

During September 2003 and March 2006, a total of 738,000 calls were made by the Pension Service inviting customers to apply for pension credit.

Note:

Figures are rounded to the nearest thousand.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what elements of (a) service charges and (b) management fees payable by pensioners living in leasehold flats are excluded for pension credit purposes. [68321]

James Purnell: The elements of service charges and management fees payable by pensioners living in leasehold flats that are excluded for pension credit purposes are charges for:

day-to-day living expenses, including in particular the provision of meals, laundry, leisure items, cleaning of rooms and windows (except the cleaning of communal areas or the exterior windows where the claimant or any member of their household is unable to clean them) and transport;

the acquisition of household equipment and the use of such items where the items will become the property of the claimant under an agreement with the landlord;

the provision of an emergency alarm system;

the provision of nursing care or personal care (including assistance at meal times or with personal appearance or hygiene);

general counselling or any other support services;

any services not specified which are not connected with the provision of adequate accommodation; and charges that are eligible to be met from the claimant's housing benefit.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many residents in each electoral ward in Bassetlaw receive pension credit. [69802]

James Purnell: The most recent period for which figures are available are in the following table.

Pensions credit: Individual beneficiaries for wards in Bassetlaw, November 2005

Ward name	Individual beneficiaries[1]
Beckingham	130
Blyth	120
Carlton	380
Clayworth	60
Everton	90
Harworth	525
Langold	185
Misterton	140
Rampton	75
Ranskill	125
Sturton	85
Sutton[2]	105
Welbeck[3]	165

Pensions credit: Individual beneficiaries for wards in Bassetlaw, November 2005

Ward name	Individual beneficiaries[1]
Worksop East	575
Worksop North	340
Workshop North East	360
Workshop North West	370
Worksop South	220
Worksop South East	730
Birklands	420
Meden	360
Bassetlaw total	5,440

[1] The number of individual beneficiaries includes both claimants and their partners.
[2] Welbeck Ward falls into both Bassetlaw and Mansfield parliamentary constituencies.
[3] Ward totals do not sum to Bassetlaw parliamentary constituency total due to two wards crossing parliamentary constituency boundaries.
Notes:
1. Number of individual beneficiaries are rounded to a multiple of five.
2. Sutton Ward falls into both Bassetlaw and Newark parliamentary constituencies
3. Pension credit (PC) replaced minimum income guarantee (MIG) on 6 October 2003. Existing MIG recipients were automatically converted onto pension credit on that date (assuming they still met the eligibility criteria).

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people have been employed in all forms of the administration of pension credit, savings credit and guarantee credit in each year since 2001-02; and if he will make a statement. [70308]

James Purnell: The information is not available.

Staff employed in the Pension Service administer a range of entitlements, including state pension, over 80 pensions, graduated retirement pension, state earnings-related pension, state second pension, pension credit and winter fuel payments.

Pensions

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his estimate is of the number of females of pension age in the UK who will be in receipt of a full basic state pension in 2006-07; how many were so entitled in (a) 2004-05 and (b) 2005-06; and if he will make a statement. [70287]

James Purnell: The information is provided in the following table:

	Number of females of state pension age with a full basic state pension (million)
2004-05	3.2
2005-06	3.2
2006 -07	3.2

Notes:
1. The figures include category B pension paid to widows based on husbands' contributions.
2. Figures are for Great Britain.
3. The full basic state pension as at April 2004 was £79.60 per week. The full basic state pension as at April 2005 was £82.05 per week and the full basic state pension as at April 2006 is £84.25 per week.
4. Figures are rounded to the nearest 100,000.
Sources:
1. Figures for 2004-05 are derived from March 2005 five per cent. sample.
2. Figurers for March 2005-06 and 2006-07 are derived from the DWP micro- simulation model.

Mr. Newmark: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the cost of raising the addition to the basic state pension for those aged 80 years or over from 25p to (a) £2.50 per week, (b) £5 per week and (c) £10 per week, assuming no change in the thresholds for means-tested benefits. [70768]

James Purnell: The information requested is in the following table:

Weekly rate of age addition	Gross annual cost (£ million)	Net annual cost (£ million)
£2.50	310	220
£5.00	660	460
£10.00	1,360	940

Note:
The costs:
(a) are in 2006-07 price terms for a 2007-08 policy change and are rounded to the nearest £10 million;
(b) have been estimated using the Government Actuary's Department Retirement Pension Model with income related benefit and tax offsets for net costs calculated using the DWP policy simulation model and;
(c) are based on the assumption that the increased amounts are flat rate and payable in full to all eligible pensioners in GB and overseas.

Perfluorooctane Sulphonate

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what guidance the Health and Safety Executive has issued on the use of perfluorooctane sulphonate. [70659]

Mrs. McGuire: The Health and Safety Executive (HSE) in conjunction with the Surface Engineering Association has issued guidance on the use of perfluorooctane sulphonate in chromic acid plating tanks to prevent the formation of mist containing chromium (VI). This is important for occupational health, because chromium (VI) is an established human carcinogen. Presently no practical alternative mist suppressants are available. The guidance is available on HSE's website.

Post Office Card Account

Chris Bryant: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many (a) pensioners and (b) other benefits recipients in the Rhondda draw their benefits through a post office card account. [71414]

Mr. Plaskitt: Information showing the number of DWP benefit and pension payment accounts paid by Direct Payment into a post office card account for each parliamentary constituency has been placed in the Library

Post Office Closures

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on the effect on benefit recipients of changes to the obligation on Post Office Ltd. to prevent avoidable post office closures. [72932]

Mr. Plaskitt: The policy of preventing avoidable closures of post offices in rural areas has now been extended until autumn 2006.

I have regular discussions with Trade and Industry Ministers about access to cash and the post office network.

The Government will make announcements on the future of the post office network in due course.

Poverty

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many black and minority ethnic children are living in poverty in the UK. [71232]

Mrs. McGuire: Information on the UK is not held. The available information for Great Britain is in the table.

Number of children in Great Britain living in households below 60 per cent. median income

Million

Ethnic group	Before housing costs	After housing costs
White	1.9	2.7
Asian or Asian British	0.3	0.4
Black or Black British	0.1	0.2
Other ethnic group	0.1	0.1
Total	2.4	3.4

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many public service agreement targets (a) exclusive to his Department and (b) held jointly between his and other Departments (i) have been met, (ii) are on course, (iii) are subject to slippage and (iv) have not yet been assessed. [72236]

Mrs. McGuire: The information requested can be found in Figure 1 (Summary of performance towards all PSA targets) on pages 27 to 30 of the Departmental report published on 11 May 2006 which is available in the Library.

Remploy

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what level of Government funding was provided to Remploy in each of the last three years for which figures are available; and what level of funding will be provided to Remploy in (a) 2006-07 and (b) 2007-08. [69879]

Mrs. McGuire [holding answer 16 May 2006]: Remploy is funded through both commercial activity and a grant in aid from the Department for Work and Pensions, which is to help meet the additional costs associated with supporting large numbers of disabled people. The level of Government funding therefore is linked to the commercial performance of Remploy.

Remploy's actual grant in aid in 2003-04 was £115 million, in 2004-05 it was £116 million and in 2005-06 it was £119 million. In each of these years the final grant in aid exceeded the original allocation reflecting the worsening trading conditions that Remploy have and are likely to continue to experience. For this year (2006-07) and next year (2007-08) the allocated grant in aid for Remploy is £111 million per year pending the outcome of the independent strategic review.

Single Parents

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many single parents in Tamworth constituency were in receipt of income support in each year between 2001 and 2005; and if he will make a statement. [71230]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is in the following table:

Lone parents in receipt of income support in the Tamworth parliamentary constituency: each November 2001 to 2005

	Number of lone parents
2001	1,210
2002	1,120
2003	1,050
2004	1,010
2005	970

Notes:
1. Figures have been rounded to the nearest 10.
2. Single parents are defined as single claimants with dependants aged under 60 and not receiving Incapacity Benefit or Severe Disablement Allowance.

Social Fund

Ann Keen: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to change the funding available to the social fund funeral scheme. [70261]

Mr. Plaskitt: The regulated social fund of which the funeral payment scheme is a part is not cash limited or subject to budgetary constraints.

Funeral payments from the social fund cover the cost of certain necessary charges in full; these include fees levied by burial authorities and crematoria. An additional sum of up to £700 is allowed for other funeral expenses, which give the person arranging the funeral the freedom to select items or services they consider appropriate. Although there are no plans to make changes to the funeral payment scheme at this time the level of help is kept under review.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Alcohol Misuse

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much funding Bournemouth police was allocated from the Alcohol Misuse Enforcement Campaign. [71714]

Mr. Byrne: Bournemouth Division of Dorset police was allocated £10,000 by the Police Standards Unit for the third national Alcohol Misuse Enforcement Campaign (AMEC 3), which ran from 14 November 2005 until the end of that year. For the fourth Alcohol Misuse Enforcement Campaign (AMEC 4), which is running from 8 May until 8 June 2006, the Division has been allocated a further £10,000.

Anore Mohammed

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects Anore Mohammed of Banbury, date of birth 5 May 1982, will be notified of his application for leave to remain. [69474]

Mr. McNulty: I wrote to the hon. Member on 8 May 2006.

Antisocial Behaviour Orders

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many individuals have breached their antisocial behaviour orders in Suffolk since 1 January 2004. [72533]

Mr. Byrne: Antisocial behaviour order (ASBO) breach data are currently available from 1 June 2000 to 31 December 2003 for ASBOs issued since 1 June 2000. During this period nine persons are recorded as having breached their ASBO on one or more occasions in Suffolk.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many antisocial behaviour orders have been issued for (a) antisocial behaviour in or around shopping areas and (b) behaviour involving the abuse of shop workers in each year since their inception, broken down by local authority area. [71044]

Mr. Byrne: Data collated centrally for statistical purposes does not identify the circumstances that led to the issuing of an antisocial behaviour order.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many 10 to 17-year-olds have been issued with antisocial behaviour orders, broken down by ethnic group. [71236]

Mr. Byrne: The number of antisocial behaviour orders (ASBOs) issued at all courts, to persons aged 10 to 17, as notified to the Home Office from 1 June 2000 to 30 September 2005 (latest available) is 3,135. Prior to 1 June 2000 ASBO data were collected on aggregate numbers only by police force area.

Ethnicity data are not collected centrally as part of the statistical collection of ASBOs issued.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many antisocial behaviour orders were issued in (a) Lancashire, (b) Blackpool and (c) Lancaster and Wyre in each year since 2002. [71493]

Mr. Byrne: Data on antisocial behaviour orders (ASBOs) are available at criminal justice system area and local government authority (LGA) area level only. A table giving annual data on the number of ASBOs issued at all courts, as reported to the Home Office, up to 30 September 2005 (latest available), broken down by the LGA area in which restrictions are imposed is available on the Crime Reduction website at www.crimereduction.gov.uk

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many individuals in Cambridgeshire have breached their antisocial behaviour orders in the period since 1 January 2004; and if he will make a statement. [72092]

Mr. Byrne: Antisocial behaviour order (ASBO) breach data are currently available from 1 June 2000 to 31 December 2003 for ASBOs issued since 1 June 2000. During this period eight persons are recorded as having breached their ASBO on one or more occasions in Cambridgeshire.

Application Processing Times

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average application processing time in the (a) immigration and nationality directorate, (b) national asylum support service, (c) identity and passport service and (d) UK visas was in the most recent period for which figures are available. [71694]

Mr. McNulty: The information is as follows:

(a) Immigration and nationality directorate (IND) does not hold general statistics on average process times for applications. For some workstreams, target service standards and performance against them are published on the IND website.

(b) The national asylum support service does not hold statistics on average process times for applications.

(c) For the most recent week (ending 14 May 2006) the average processing time for the identity and passport service was as follows:

4.2 working days for straightforward properly completed passport applications.

5.7 working days for all passport applications, including applications that were not properly completed by the applicant and required further identity and passport service contact.

(d) UK visas does not hold statistics on overall average processing time for applications.

Arrests

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many arrests were made in the six months (a) prior to and (b) since November 2005 in (i) Bournemouth and (ii) Dorset. [71715]

Mr. Byrne: The main arrests collection covers persons arrested for recorded crime (notifiable offences) by police force area only. Information is collected on a quarterly basis and 2005-06 data for Dorset police force area will be available in the autumn 2006.

Information for 2004-05 (latest available) can be found in the Home Office Statistical Bulletin, "Arrests for Recorded Crime (notifiable offences) and the Operation of Certain Police Powers under PACE, England and Wales", which is available on the Research and Development Statistics website:

www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pubsstatistical

Copies are also available in the Library.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many arrests were made in Shrewsbury and Atcham in (a) 2004 and (b) 2005. [72520]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not available centrally.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many unaccompanied asylum seeking children are being looked after by local authorities, broken down by (a) ethnic group and (b) local authority. [71237]

Mr. McNulty: Local authorities have reported that a total of 5,521 unaccompanied asylum seeking children were receiving support under the provisions of the Children Act as at the end of February 2006. The overall number may be slightly higher as a few local authorities have still to submit reports. It is not possible to provide a breakdown by ethnic group as authorities are not asked to provide this information. A breakdown by individual authority is set out in the following table.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many unaccompanied children have sought asylum in the UK since 2001, broken down by ethnic group; and how many such applicants are (a) successful and (b) refused. [71238]

Mr. McNulty: The number of applications from unaccompanied children who seek asylum in the UK is published on a quarterly and annual basis, broken down by nationality. The number of initial decisions on unaccompanied minors who seek asylum in the UK is published on an annual basis, broken down by nationality and decision outcome. Figures for 2001 are not available. Figures broken down by ethnic group are also unavailable. The next quarterly publication covering the first quarter of 2006 will be published on 23 May 2006. The next annual publication covering 2005 will be published on 22 August. Both publications will be available on the Home Office Research Development and Statistics website at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers there are in Bexley borough. [71316]

Mr. McNulty: Statistics are available on the number of asylum seekers who are in receipt of support from the national asylum support service (NASS) and published on a quarterly and annual basis, broken down by local authority.

The most recent publication covering the fourth quarter of 2005 and further historical publications are available on the Home Office research development and statistics website at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether it is the policy of his Department to share asylum application files of failed asylum seekers with the authorities in their country of origin. [71415]

Mr. McNulty: The Asylum Policy Instruction (API) on the "Disclosure and Confidentiality of Information in Asylum Cases", which is published on the Immigration and Nationality Directorate's website, makes it very clear that information provided by an asylum claimant will be treated in confidence. Details about the asylum claim will not be disclosed to the authorities in the country of origin without the explicit consent of the claimant.

All claimants are informed, however, that in the event their claim is unsuccessful it might be necessary for the Immigration and Nationality Directorate to contact the authorities in the country of origin to obtain an emergency travel document for their journey home. Disclosure in these circumstances is limited to that which is necessary for re-documentation purposes, such as basic information about the claimant's identity, as well as fingerprints, photographs.

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how his Department assesses whether a country is safe enough to repatriate failed asylum seekers; and how often such assessments take place. [71416]

Mr. McNulty: The Home Office continuously monitors the situation in all asylum intake countries taking into account information from a wide range of recognised and respected governmental and non-governmental organisation sources as well as current news reports. Asylum decision-makers take into account the situation in the country of origin as it affects each asylum applicant when making a decision on an asylum claim. The Home Office enforce the return of an individual only where it is satisfied that the person concerned will not be at risk and has been unsuccessful in any appeals against the decision in their particular case.

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will instruct his officials to meet officials of Peterborough city council to discuss future funding of the invest to save project in respect of asylum seekers and economic migrants; and if he will make a statement. [71941]

Mr. McNulty: The Peterborough Asylum and Migration project is funded by the Treasury Invest to Save Budget and is strictly time-limited to a three year allocation. As sponsor department, officials in the Home Office have been in frequent contact with officials in Peterborough city council, and will be discussing with them the sustainability and exit strategy for the project.

British Transport Police

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many members of the British Transport Police have transferred to the Metropolitan police force; and how many remain to be transferred. [68130]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Burglary

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many mandatory three year prison sentences for burglary were handed down in each of the last five years. [69737]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The information requested is published in Table 2.7 of "Sentencing Statistics, England and Wales, 2004" (page 28). This publication can be found in the Library and also on the Home Office website, as follows:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs05/hosb1505.pdf

Capita Group

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many tenders (a) Capita plc and (b) its subsidiaries has submitted to his Department in each of the last three years; and how many tenders were successful. [61463]

Mr. Byrne: The information is not held centrally and could not be obtained without incurring disproportionate cost.

Care Homes

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people applying for positions within residential care and nursing homes in (a) Tamworth constituency, (b) the Staffordshire police area and (c) England are awaiting clearance from the Criminal Records Bureau. [71241]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The information sought by the hon. Member for Tamworth is not available. The Criminal Records Bureau (CRB) is unable to provide information on Disclosure applications based on specific employment sectors and geographical areas.

The CRB aims to complete Disclosure applications across all sectors within the shortest time possible. Its published service standards are to issue 93 per cent. of Standard Disclosures within two weeks and 90 per cent. of Enhanced Disclosures within four weeks for all applications.

CCTV

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what further steps he is (a) taking and (b) plans to take to promote the effectiveness of closed circuit television footage in combating crime and terrorism; and if he will make a statement. [72033]

Mr. Byrne: CCTV can be an important tool in the fight against crime and disorder. However, evidence shows that its potential has not been fully realised and that a national strategy is needed. The Home Office and the Association of Chief Police Officers are undertaking a joint review of CCTV to determine how it may be used more effectively in reducing and detecting crime and terrorism.

The review's findings will be known in the autumn, and will include recommendations on the infrastructure and future use of CCTV.

Civil Service Pension Scheme

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of members of the Principal Civil Service pension scheme in his Department joined the scheme before the age of (a) 20, (b) 25, (c) 30, (d) 35, (e) 40, (f) 45 and (g) over 45-years-old. [61999]

Mr. Byrne: The information could be supplied only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his Department's employer contribution rates to the principal civil service pension scheme are; what assumed rate of return underlies those contribution rates; and what the contribution rate would be if the assumed rate of return was in line with current redemption yield on index-linked gilts. [62000]

Mr. Byrne: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary for the Cabinet Office (Mr. Murphy), on 29 March 2006, Official Report, column 1030W.

Community Service

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many hours a week must be worked by offenders sentenced to undertake a community service order. [69845]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The National Standards for the probation service require that offenders sentenced to unpaid work undertake a minimum average of six hours work per week.

Conflict Management Vehicles

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what training is provided for those employed in the use of police conflict management vehicles; and if he will make a statement. [71646]

Mr. Byrne: All police officers wishing to become authorised firearms officers go through a rigorous assessment and training programme following the National Police Firearms Training Curriculum produced by the Association of Chief Police Officers.

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what national guidelines are issued to police forces in England and Wales on the deployment of conflict management vehicles; and if he will make a statement. [71648]

Mr. Byrne: Guidance on the deployment of armed response vehicles in England and Wales is governed by Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) national guidelines. These guidelines can be found on the ACPO website (www.acpo.police.uk).

Correspondence

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when his Department will reply to the letter of 6 February from the hon. Member for Aylesbury to the Minister for Immigration, Citizenship and Nationality about the case of Mr. P. C. (reference C1142200; CTS reference M24806/5) and the National Spinal Injuries Centre at Stoke Mandeville hospital. [70147]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 11 May 2006]: I replied to the hon. Member for Aylesbury on 11 May 2006.

Crime (Sentences) Act 1997

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the operation of section (a) 28, (b) 29, (c) 30, (d) 31 and (e) 32 of the Crime (Sentences) Act 1997; and what recent representations he has received about the operation of these sections. [69639]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Sections 28, 31 and 32 of the Crime (Sentences) Act 1997 [as amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003] relate to the Parole Board's powers to direct the release of life sentence prisoners and those offenders sentenced to Imprisonment for Public Protection and the licence conditions and recall to prison of such prisoners. Section 29 was repealed by the Criminal Justice Act 2003. Section 30 allows for release in exceptional circumstances on compassionate grounds.

The main purpose of these sections is to ensure the protection of the public. There has been no indication or representations to the effect that the operation of these sections is inconsistent with this objective. The main criterion governing the Parole Board's consideration is the risk of serious harm that the lifer may be to others. The Parole Board is required to direct the release of any tariff-expired life sentence prisoner if it is satisfied that "it is no longer necessary for the protection of the public that the prisoner should be confined".

The Board plays a key role in the wider public protection arena. I am satisfied that it continues to discharge its responsibilities diligently and in line with the relevant directions and rules to which it operates. I am also satisfied that the Board recognises the need to continually improve the standards of its risk assessments and decisions in this important area.

Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of claims made to the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority have been processed within (a) six months, (b) 12 months, (c) 18 months and (d) over 18 months in each of the last five years. [40795]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The information requested is set out in the following table. It relates to the time from the receipt of an application to the issue of a decision by CICA to the claimant.

Time from receipt of application to issue of decision at claims assessment stage

Departmental Expenditure

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was spent on (a) advertising, (b) refreshments, (c) travel for Ministers and (d) stationery by the Home Office in each year since 1997. [31799]

John Reid: The information is as follows:

(a) The information on Home Office expenditure on advertising since 1997 is given in the following table.

(b) The information on Home Office expenditure on refreshments since 1997 is given in the following table.

(c) The information requested for travel for Ministers is not held centrally and to provide it would incur disproportionate costs. All ministerial travel is undertaken in accordance with the rules set out in the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers, copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

In respect of overseas travel by Ministers, since 1999 the Government have published an annual list of overseas journeys undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year. The Government have also published on an annual basis the cost of all Ministers' visits overseas. Copies of the lists are available in the Libraries of the House. These report information for the financial years 1995-96 to 2004-05. Information for 2005-06 will be published as soon as it is ready after the end of the current financial year.

(d) The information on Home Office expenditure on stationery is given in the following table.

Financial year	Advertising expenditure (£ million)
1997-98	1.4
1998-99	1.8
1999-2000	5.65
2000-01	28.36
2001-02	14.4
2002-03	9.9

2002	4,419,777
2003	4,974,960
2004	4,931,657
2005	3,483,976

Note:
Expenditure excludes paper, computer consumables and office supplies

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the total value is of (a) catering and (b) entertainment contracts let by his Department; and what value of such contracts has been let in each nation and region of the UK, including London. [37481]

John Reid: Catering services for staff in the Department's official staff restaurants are provided by the Department's facilities management contractors. The costs of meals and refreshments provided to staff are recovered through sales.

The total costs of catering, other than catering services for staff, and entertainment (including refreshments at meetings, working lunches and hospitality) for the Home Office in 2004-05 was £1,484,967. Working lunches and refreshments are offered as a normal courtesy to visitors or made available to facilitate the efficient management of meetings.

Expenditure figures for each nation and region of the UK are not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Diabetic Drivers

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to provide high-energy glucose tablets to police officers to enable them to assist diabetic drivers; when he will make such provision; what estimate he has made of the cost; and if he will make a statement. [71553]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 18 May 2006]: Provision of such items is an operational matter for individual chief officers of police. The responsibility for managing their diabetes and driving safely rests firmly with individual drivers. On issuing licences to insulin-treated drivers, the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency advises them by letter that they should make sure they have an emergency supply of carbohydrate-like glucose tablets in their car.

Domestic Violence

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans the Government have to improve the services offered to women seeking refuge from domestic violence in Kingston upon Hull, North. [69777]

Mr. Byrne: The provision for women seeking refuge for Kingston upon Hull North is the provision for Hull.

Hull had one of the first Women's Aid refuges (1972) and a purpose built hostel was opened in 1976 which is owned by North British Housing. The rent is paid by Hull city council via Supporting People monies which also provide the workers within the refuge.

There are currently 18 bed spaces within a dedicated refuge facility and protected houses scheme. In addition to this there is the 'own home initiative' where the victim and family have a choice to remain in their family home with extra security measures put in place. The manager from Women's Aid is currently on a secondment to manage the new Hull Domestic Abuse Partnership (DAP) which is working to improve the services to victims of domestic violence.

Hull DAP is a multi-agency team including police officers, a health practitioner, a social worker and a housing support worker. The team works within the same office to provide a one stop service for women in the city seeking refuge from domestic violence.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of reported cases of domestic violence in (a) England, (b) each English region and (c) the Tees Valley involved (i) women in a same-sex relationship, (ii) men in a same-sex relationship and (iii) children in each year since 1997. [71082]

Mr. Byrne: The Home Office does not collect this information.

Drug or Alcohol Rehabilitation Courses

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offenders took part in a drug or alcohol rehabilitation course in 2005-06 as an alternative to a custodial sentence. [69361]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The National Probation Service has available two substance misuse offending behaviour programmes: Addressing Substance Related Offending (ASRO) and the Offender Substance Abuse Programme (OSAP) and the Drink Impaired Drivers (DID) programme. The number of offenders who started on the ASRO, OSAP or DID programmes last year as a requirement of a community sentence or as a condition of a licence upon release from custody is shown in the following table.

It is not possible to say how many of these offenders on community sentences were considered by the courts for a custodial sentence.

Electoral Fraud

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were convicted of electoral fraud in each of the last 10 years. [70062]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Data held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform on the number of people convicted for electoral fraud offences under the Representation of the People Act 1983, in England and Wales, 1995-2004 are shown in the table.

Data for 2005 will be available in the autumn.

Electronic Monitoring

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the (a) electronic tagging and (b) satellite tracking of offenders. [58274]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Since 1999, over 250,000 people have been subject to electronic tagging, in the vast majority of cases without incident. It is an effective means of monitoring compliance with curfew requirements, and is an integral part of our strategy for managing offenders in the community.

Pilots of satellite tracking have been operating in Greater Manchester, Hampshire and the West Midlands since September 2004, and are currently being evaluated by an external research team. Over 400 offenders, mostly prolific offenders, have been tracked in the pilots so far.

Firearms

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what types of firearms are permitted for use by those who work in the agricultural industry; and if he will make a statement. [71740]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 15 May 2006]: There are no specified types of firearm for use by people in the agricultural industry. In applying to the police for a firearms certificate, they will need to establish a good reason for possessing each individual firearm they wish to possess. In the case of somebody wishing to possess a shot gun, the police will not grant a certificate if they are satisfied that the applicant does not have a good reason for having one or would represent a danger to public safety or to the peace.

Fireworks

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many penalty notices have been issued to (a) males and (b) females in relation to the illegal use of fireworks in (i) Southend and (ii) Essex since the relevant legislation was introduced. [62873]

Mr. Byrne: Data from the Penalty Notices for Disorder database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform showing the number of males and females issued with penalty notices for fireworks in Essex police force area 2004, as well as provisional data for 2005, are provided in the following table.

It is not possible to identify the number of penalty notices issued in Southend as the data are broken down by police force area only and are not available at that level of detail.

Foreign Prisoners

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whose responsibility it is to ensure that the Prison Service communicates with the Immigration and Nationality Directorate about foreign nationals leaving prison. [67456]

Mr. Sutcliffe: It is the responsibility of governors and directors, as set out in Prisoner Service Order 4630, to ensure that procedures are in place within their establishment to inform the Immigration and Nationality Directorate of all the foreign national prisoners held within their prison. I have placed a copy of the Order in the House of Commons Library.

Gurkhas

Mr. Dunne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what basis the UK has refused to grant indefinite leave to enter the UK to Gurkha personnel who had completed over four years of Crown service prior to 1 July 1997. [72136]

Mr. McNulty: 1 July 1997 represents the date that the Brigade of Gurkhas moved their headquarters from Hong Kong to the UK. Indefinite leave (settlement) is normally granted on the basis of residence in the UK. Therefore, in order to remain consistent with other settlement categories in the Immigration Rules, it was considered appropriate to enable all those discharged on or after 1 July 1997 to be able to apply for settlement in the UK.

However, in respect of applications from former Gurkhas discharged before 1 July 1997, and who would have developed close physical ties with the UK through being posted here, visa issuing posts abroad, in appropriate cases, can exercise discretion outside the Immigration Rules to grant indefinite leave to enter the UK.

Hand Guns

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to publish a list of those categories of people that have lawful access to hand guns. [72760]

Mr. Byrne: The possession of all types of firearms is governed by the provisions of the Firearms Acts. Comprehensive guidance has already been published and is available on the Home Office website under Firearms Law.

Human Rights

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to amend UK law to enable the prosecution of individuals suspected of carrying out human rights abuses abroad; and what representations he has received on this issue. [70016]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Human Rights abuses committed abroad can be prosecuted in the UK under a variety of legislation. Breaches of the Geneva Conventions can be prosecuted under the Geneva Conventions Act 1957. Genocide, crimes against humanity and war crimes can be prosecuted under the International Criminal Court Act 2001. Offences of torture can be prosecuted under the Criminal Justice Act 1988. Criminals can also be extradited to stand trial abroad. We have received no recent representations on the issue.

Immigration Service

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many individuals have been processed at and removed via the UK Immigration Service Centre at St. Ives in Cambridgeshire in each year since 2001; and if he will make a statement. [72091]

Mr. McNulty: The Local Enforcement Office in St. Ives was opened in June 2004, since then our records show that St. Ives Local Enforcement Unit removed:

	Number of individuals removed
2004 (July to December)	70
2005	252
2006 (January to April)	72

Imprisoned Parents

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many single parents with custody of dependent children have been imprisoned in each of the last five years. [69384]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Information on the family responsibilities of prisoners is not collated centrally.

Some information is available from a survey of prisoners undertaken in 2003. In this survey prisoners nearing discharge were asked about factors associated with resettlement, including family ties. The surveys were representative of prisoners nearing release in England and Wales.

In the survey 18 per cent. of female prisoners said that they were single and living with dependent children (including step-children) aged 17 or under. The equivalent figure for male prisoners was 3.5 per cent.

International Arrest Warrants

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the Answer of 10th May 2006 to Question 69808, on international arrest warrants, if he will set out the guidelines on publishing representations received from foreign governments which have been applied in this case; and to which other bodies such guidelines apply. [71394]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 16 May 2006]: Disclosure would normally be subject to consideration of whether the public interest in disclosure outweighed that of respecting the confidence of the foreign government, taking account of the prejudice which disclosure may cause to our relations with that government. This would apply equally to international organisations or international courts.

Internet (Prisons)

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what mechanisms are in place to ensure appropriate use of internet facilities within the prison estate; and if he will make a statement. [58221]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Prisoners do not have routine unfettered access to the internet. The only exception is in the area of education where prisoners gain National Vocational Qualifications to support their rehabilitation on release. Prisoner access to the internet is subject to detailed risk assessment by prison staff and is limited to pre-approved sites and prison staff closely monitor their use of these facilities. If abuse of internet access is identified prisoner access will be withdrawn.

Juvenile Crime

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many crimes were committed by juvenile offenders in (a) Peterborough constituency and (b) the Cambridgeshire area in each quarter in 2005; how many cautions were issued in relation to such cases; and how many children in the Peterborough city council area (i) were convicted, (ii) were in local authority care, (iii) received a reprimand, (iv) received a final warning and (v) were found guilty in each quarter. [72090]

Mr. Sutcliffe: It is not possible to identify the number of crimes committed by juvenile offenders since details of the alleged offender are not identified within recorded crime data.

The most recent available data on court proceedings and cautions are for 2004, data for 2005 will be available in autumn 2006.

Legislation

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the operation of section (a) 1, (b) 2 and (c) 3 of the Protection from Harassment Act 1997; what recent representations he has received about the operation of this Act; what amendments have been made to the Act; and whether he has plans to amend this Act. [70375]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Government are satisfied that these provisions operate effectively to protect people from harassment and fear of violence. Since its introduction, the Protection from Harassment Act has been amended and strengthened:

(with effect from 1 August 2001) by the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 to make clear that the legal sanctions that apply to a campaign of harassment by an individual against another also apply to a campaign of collective harassment by two or more people;

(with effect from a date to be appointed) by the Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 to extend the use of restraining orders; and

(with effect from 1 July 2005) by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 to protect people from harassment by animal rights (or other) extremists.

The more recent amendments were made in response to representations from victims of domestic violence and those working for or connected in some way to companies involved in the use of animals for scientific research. In addition to these specific representations, we receive regular requests for information about the Act from members of the public who are on the receiving end of behaviour that may constitute harassment or who have been accused of harassment. There are no current plans to amend the Act further.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the operation of section 36 of the Data Protection Act 1998; what recent representations he has received about the operation of this Act; what amendments have been made to the Act; and whether he has plans to amend this Act. [70377]

Bridget Prentice: I have been asked to reply.

The responsibility for monitoring the working of the Data Protection Act 1998 lies with the Information Commissioner, who has a statutory duty to promote good practice and to give advice to any person (including the Government) as to the operation of the Act. Section 36 of the Data Protection Act (DPA) exempts personal data from many of the Act's requirements where personal data is processed by an individual only for the purposes of that individual's personal, family or household affairs (including recreational purposes). However the Information Commissioner retains his powers of investigation and enforcement where someone appears to have exceeded the scope of the exemption.

My Department receives correspondence from a range of individuals and organisations on the day-to-day operation of the Act.

The DPA has been amended by numerous pieces of legislation. The last amendment was by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005.

We have no immediate plans for amending the legislation, but my Department, together with the Home Office, is currently considering whether custodial sentences would be an appropriate sanction for unauthorised disclosure of personal information.

Migrant Workers

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many migrant worker work permits were applied for by farmers in Bassetlaw in each of the last six years; and how many were granted. [69824]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 11 May 2006]: Approvals for individuals to work in the UK agricultural sector are granted under the Work Permit Scheme, the Worker Registration Scheme (WRS) and the Seasonal Agricultural Workers Scheme (SAWS). Please see following tables for the approval information on for each of the schemes.

Work Permit Scheme

	Approved	Refused
2002	0	0
2003	0	0
2005	1	1

Worker Registration Scheme[1]

	Approved	Refused

[1] The Worker Registration Scheme has operated only from 1 May 2004.

Seasonal Agricultural Workers Scheme

Seasonal Agricultural Workers Scheme applicants are recruited by Home Office contracted operators and information is collated only for those workers registered on the scheme. Some of those who apply may not be successful and therefore will not be registered on the scheme. Previous to 2004, records were not collected as to which area of the country the workers were deployed to and therefore information is available only for the Bassetlaw area as from that date.

Total 2004: 24

Total 2005: 35

These data are not provided under National Statistics Protocols. It has been derived from local management information and is therefore provisional and subject to change.

Ministerial Visits (Accommodation)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the total cost was of overnight accommodation for Ministers of State in his Department on foreign visits in each of the last three years. [68962]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested could not be provided within disproportionate cost. Under the terms of the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers, when travelling on official business Ministers are expected to make efficient and cost-effective travel arrangements.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions Ministers of State in his Department stayed overnight in (a) five star, (b) four star and (c) three star hotels on foreign visits in each of the last three years. [68963]

Mr. Byrne: The information could not be provided without disproportionate cost. Under the terms of the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers, when travelling on official business Ministers are expected to make efficient and cost-effective travel arrangements.

National Offender Management Information System

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information will be held on the National Offender Management Information System; and what steps will be taken to ensure confidentiality of that data. [24449]

Mr. Sutcliffe: C-NOMIS will contain data on offender demographics (including nationality, ethnicity, education, employment, disability, addresses, and other relevant personal data), their court proceedings, offences, sentences, licences, risks, interventions on which they are placed, their attendances, performance and progress on their sentences including enforcement and breach of community sentences and licences. Data will also be held on prisoner movements, incidents, adjudications, cell locations, activities and finances (including prisoner earnings). C-NOMIS will also contain data on visitors to prisoners to enable the management of visits and visiting orders.

C-NOMIS is classified as a "restricted" system under the Government Protective Marking Scheme, and the data held within it will not exceed this classification. Access is on a "need to know" basis, while also facilitating the effective sharing of information in support of end-to-end offender management.

National Offender Management Service

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of the total Prison Service budget was allocated to the administration of the National Offender Management Service in (a) 2004-05 and (b) 2005-06. [46579]

Mr. Sutcliffe: None. The Prison Services' budget is allocated from the overall budget for the National Offender Management Service (NOMS), and not the other way round.

In 2005-06 the proportion of the NOMS resource budget allocated to the Prison Service is 44 per cent. This excludes certain former Prison Service HQ functions, notably Estates, Property, IT, and Prisoner Escort and Custody Service, which have transferred to NOMS HQ from the beginning of 2005-06.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the ratio is of National Offender Management staff to prisoners in England and Wales in each year since its inception. [46582]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Information on the ratio of all staff within the public sector Prison Service against public sector prisoners since 2004 is contained in the table. The information relates to average headcount over the year against average number of prisoners. The ratio includes all staff employed by the public sector Prison Service, including Headquarters and other non-operational staff.

Equivalent information for the contracted prison estate, is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

	2004	2005
Average staff in post	48,385	48,429
Average population	67,772	68,713
All public sector staff to prisoner ratio	1:1.40	1:1.42

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) full-time, (b) full-time equivalent and (c) part-time staff are employed by the National Offender Management Service; and how many are employed at salaries in band (a) £10,000 to £20,000, (b) £20,001 to £30,000, (c) £30,001 to £40,000, (d) £40,001 to £50,000, (e) £50,001 to £60,000, (f) £60,001 to £70,000, (g) £70,001 to £80,000 and (h) £90,000 and above. [55089]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The National Offender Management Service consists of NOMS HQ, HM Prison Service and the National Probation Service. Each of these three organisations compiles their own data and statistics. In order to answer this question, the response is broken down into three component parts representing the three organisations in the following table.

NOMS HQ held on, or in process of migration to, ADELPHI

[1] Where possible payroll values have been used, and where this has proved impossible target rates for the grades at 1 July 2005 have been assigned. However in some case it has not been possible to provide salary banded information without excessive cost. Payroll salary is the basic salary excluding allowances.

Official Cars

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Walsall, North (Mr. Winnick) of 16 February 2006, Official Report, column 2412W, on official cars, if he will name the three former Ministers to whom he referred. [70318]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 12 May 2006]: No. From time to time former Ministers are provided with cars as part of protection measures necessary as a result of the Government positions that they previously held. Where these measures are taken on security grounds, it would not be appropriate to disclose the identity of the former Ministers.

Operation Pentameter

David Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many separate investigations have been carried out in Cumbria under Operation Pentameter; and how many individuals of Eastern European origin have been found during the operation. [71268]

Mr. Coaker: Cumbria police have visited three premises as part of the operation. So far no individuals of Eastern European origin have been found.

Passports

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of adults in Bexley borough who do not have a passport. [71317]

Joan Ryan: The Identity and Passport Service collects address information at the time of applying for a passport. The adult passport has a 10-year validity period during which time the holder may move residence a number of times. As such, we cannot reliably identify the number of passport holders within any given area.

Penal Policy

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the costs to public funds of re-offending by criminals after release from prison in each of the last five years. [59310]

Mr. Sutcliffe: This information is not routinely collected.

Information on the estimated costs of offences against individuals and households for 2003-04 and 2000 are published in Home Office Online Report 30/05, "The Economic and Social Costs of Crime Against Individuals and Households 2003/04". A wider range of offences is considered in Home Office Research Study 217, "The Economic and Social Costs of Crime" (for 2000). Estimates have not been calculated for other years.

Information is routinely published on prisoners reconvicted within two years of discharge from prison and the principal offence on first reconviction. This is published in Table 11.2 of Home Office Statistical Bulletin number 17/05, "Offender Management and Caseload Statistics 2004". The latest year for which estimates have been published relates to prisoners discharged in 2001.

Police

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers there were in Bexley in (a) 1997, (b) 2001 and (c) 2005. [70808]

Mr. Byrne: Figures have only been collected by Basic Command Unit since March 2002. The London borough of Bexley Operational Command Unit had 316 police officers in March 2002 and 383 in March 2005. This is an increase of 21 per cent. (67 officers) over the period.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many copies of the police complaints authority annual report 2003-04 were distributed by his Department; if he will list those who were sent copies; at what cost; how many copies were printed; at what cost; who was awarded the contract to undertake the printing; how (a) hon. Members, (b) Members of the House of Lords and (c) members of the public may obtain a copy; at what cost; when he expects the 2004-05 edition of the independent police complaints commission annual report to be published; and if he will make a statement. [70871]

Mr. Byrne: A total of 640 copies of the police complaints authority's (PCA) annual report 2003-04 were distributed to police authorities and police forces, former PCA members and current IPCC commissioners, statutory bodies such as Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary and Centrex and other interested organisations and individuals including Liberty, INQUEST and academics in the field of police oversight.

The cost of printing and publication were borne by the stationery office (TSO) which aims to recover it from sales revenue. The contract was awarded by TSO after competitive tendering. The approximate cost for distribution was £4,214.

The cost per copy is £14.75.

Hon. Members may obtain copies from the vote offices in the House of Commons.

Members of the House of Lords may obtain copies from the printed paper office in the House of Lords.

Members of the public may obtain copies from TSO's bookshops in London, Edinburgh, Belfast, Cardiff, Manchester and Birmingham and from TSO agents in the principal cities. Copies can also be ordered by telephone or mail order from TSO or by internet from TSO's online bookshop (www.tso.co.uk/bookshop). Orders will also be processed by booksellers and via Amazon.

The PCA annual report 2003-04 is also available on the IPCC website at http://www.ipcc.gov.uk/pca_a_r03-04.pdf.

The IPCC annual report 2004-05 was published on 23 November 2005. Both the report and a summary leaflet are available on the IPCC's website at: http://www.ipcc.gov.uk/index/resources/evidence_reports/corp_reports-plans.htm.

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what criteria are used in deciding to deploy (a) armed response units and (b) specialist firearms officers; and if he will make a statement. [71599]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 16 May 2006]: The use of firearms by police officers is governed by Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) guidelines. These guidelines can be found on the ACPO website (www.acpo.police.uk).

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many times (a) armed response units and (b) specialist firearms officers have been deployed in Bedfordshire in each year since 1997, broken down by police division; and if he will make a statement. [71600]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 17 May 2006]: This information is not collected centrally.

Kitty Ussher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what average length of time was taken by the police professional standards department to conduct an internal inquiry into the conduct of a police officer in the last period for which figures are available. [71632]

Mr. Byrne: Statistical information on the average length of time taken by police professional standards departments to conduct internal inquiries is not held centrally.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what purposes police helicopters are used; when police in Essex have purchased a helicopter in the last five years; at what cost in each case; and if he will make a statement. [71964]

Mr. Byrne: The principle use of police helicopters is to support police officers on the ground. The main reasons for deployment are searching for missing persons, locating people absconding from crime scenes, vehicle crime, supporting firearms and terrorist operations, evidential photographing and videoing, and crowd control.

Essex police purchased a helicopter in June 2003 at a cost of £3.1 million. The Home Office provided funding of £612,000 grant and £588,000 supplementary credit approval to support the purchase.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which police forces are below strength; by how many persons; and if he will make a statement. [71965]

Mr. Byrne: Information on vacancy levels in police forces is not collected. It is for chief officers of police in consultation with their police authorities to determine the work force mix that is employed to deliver policing.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions firearms were issued to policemen in each of the police authorities in England and Wales in each of the last seven years for which information is available; and on how many occasions they were used. [71966]

Mr. Byrne: The number of operations in which firearms were issued since 1996-97 for each force in England and Wales is shown in the table. The number of incidents when the police opened fire using conventional firearms is also shown in the following table.

Number of incidents where conventional firearms were used

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he plans to issue guidance to police forces in England and Wales on the powers available under section 52 of the Police Reform Act 2002 for the seizure of mini-motorbikes; and if he will make a statement. [72095]

Mr. Byrne: Section 59 of the Police Reform Act 2002 empowers the police to seize vehicles, including mini-motorbikes, being driven inconsiderately or carelessly on road contrary to section three of the Road Traffic Act 1988, or off-road without authority, contrary to sections 34 of the Act if at the same time they are being driven in such a manner as to cause or be likely to cause alarm, distress or annoyance to members of the public.

The Home Office issued on 1 November 2005 additional guidance to the police on their power to seize vehicles being used in an anti-social manner. This included examples of best practice where the police were working with the local authority to make effective use of the powers available to the two agencies. The Home Office has organised a number of Action Days with anti-social behaviour practitioners to share best practice around the topic of anti-social use of vehicles and has provided guidance specifically on mini-motorbike misuse through the TOGETHER website: www.together.gov.uk

Where mini-motorbike nuisance has been identified as a problem locally we would expect the local crime and disorder strategy to address it making use of the guidance issued as appropriate.

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the starting salary was of a police officer in the Cleveland police area in (a) 1997 and (b) 2005. [72594]

Mr. Byrne: The starting salary for a police constable in Cleveland on appointment and prior to the completion of initial training was (a) £15,438 from September 1997 and (b) £20,397 from September 2005.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much funding was made available to the Shropshire Division of West Mercia police for the Alcohol Misuse Enforcement Campaign. [72389]

Mr. Byrne: Shropshire Division of West Mercia police was allocated £3,000 by the Police Standards Unit for the third national Alcohol Misuse Enforcement Campaign (AMEC 3), which ran from 14 November 2005 until the end of that year. The division did not submit a bid for funding for the fourth Alcohol Misuse Enforcement Campaign, which is taking place from 8 May to 8 June 2006.

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what training is given to telephone call handlers in police call centres; and if he will make a statement. [71579]

Mr. Byrne: Forces currently provide extensive induction training to call handling staff lasting approximately four to six weeks. Training varies from force to force, but mainly consists of modules around basic call handling skills, questioning skills, caller expectation settings and also includes IT systems training, policy and procedures, minimal law training and in some forces self-care and stress management.

The National Call-handling Standard (NCHS), currently being introduced to forces, includes the provision of a detailed training package.

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were employed in (a) armed response units and (b) specialist firearms officers teams in Bedfordshire police force in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [71577]

Mr. Byrne: The number of authorised firearms officers in Bedfordshire police since 1996-97 are shown in the table. We do not hold information on whether these officers are in armed response units or specialist firearms officers' teams.

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what national guidelines are issued to (a) police firearms units and (b) specialist firearms officers teams on handling incidents; and if he will make a statement. [71582]

Mr. Byrne: National guidance on the handling of firearms incidents is contained within the association of chief police officers (ACPO) manual of guidance on police use of firearms available on the ACPO website (www.acpo.police.co.uk).

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many times the use of firearms was authorised in operations in each police force in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [71594]

Mr. Byrne: The number of operations in which firearms were authorised in each police force in England and Wales is shown in the table.

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment has been made of the impact of the proposed restructuring of police forces on the provision of (a) armed response units and (b) specialist firearms officers teams; and if he will make a statement. [71595]

Mr. Byrne: The assessment found that the resources providing the armed response function were required to be dual-function, providing other services such as roads policing. Clearly, this caused difficulties in trying to respond to simultaneous incidents. In addition, many smaller forces did not provide their own (expensive) specialist firearms services but looked to neighbouring forces to assist them as and when incidents occurred, relying on goodwill and building in a delay to what is often an urgent requirement.

The impact of restructuring will be that new forces will have sufficient resilience to provide armed response units dedicated solely to this function. This will allow them to gain greater skills and experience and have sufficient capacity to focus on not just responding to firearms incidents but also preventative work. Forces will be of sufficient size to allow them to develop their own dedicated, specialist firearms services, improving their training, expertise and experience of incidents as well as negating their reliance upon others for those services.

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many training courses have been provided by Bedfordshire police in (a) initial firearms, (b) armed response vehicles, (c) specialist firearms officers, (d) national firearms instructors, (e) tactical refreshers for authorised firearms officers and (f) firearms incident command training; and if he will make a statement. [71644]

Mr. Byrne: This information is not held centrally. Training police officers in the use of firearms is an operational matter for individual chief officers.

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received on the deployment of (a) armed response units and (b) specialist firearms officers in Bedfordshire; and if he will make a statement. [71645]

Mr. Byrne: We have received no representations about the deployment of firearms officers by Bedfordshire police. The deployment of police officers is an operational matter for chief officers.

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were employed in (a) armed response units and (b) specialist firearms officers teams in each police force in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [71649]

Mr. Byrne: The number of Authorised Firearms Officers in each force in England and Wales since 1996-97 is shown in the table. We do not hold information on whether these officers are in armed response units or specialist firearms officers' teams.

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was spent on training for members of (a) armed response units and (b) specialist firearms officers teams in each police force in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [71651]

Mr. Byrne: This information is not collected centrally. It is a matter for individual chief officers of police to decide how many trained authorised firearms officers are needed within their force, based on a thorough threat and risk assessment.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the (a) average pay and (b) average yearly percentage change in pay was of a (i) police constable, (ii) police sergeant, (iii) police inspector and (iv) chief constable in each of the last 20 years in real terms at current prices. [56210]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl, dated 22 May 2006:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question to ask what the (a) average pay and (b) average yearly percentage change in pay was of a (i) police constable, (ii) police sergeant, (iii) police inspector and (iv) chief constable in each of the last 20 years in real terms at current prices. I am replying in her absence. (56210).

Average earnings are estimated from the Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings (ASHE), and are provided for full time employees on adult rates whose pay for the survey period was not affected by absence. This is the standard definition used for ASHE. The ASHE does not collect data on the self employed and people who do unpaid work. Earlier estimates are from the New Earnings Survey (NES) which used a similar definition for earnings estimates.

I attach tables showing Average Gross Weekly Earnings and growth in pay, by occupation for the years 1986 to 2005. Estimates of changes between years are subject to sampling variations. In particular some changes prior to the introduction of ASHE in 1997 should be treated with caution. The occupational classification used for ASHE have only two levels of classification relating to police officers, which are given in the attached tables. Current prices refer to figures expressed in terms of the prices that were current for the period. Consequently figures for 2000 are in terms of prices that were current in 2000 and figure for 1990 are in terms of prices that were current in 1990.

The ASHE and its predecessor NES, carried out in April of each year, are the most comprehensive source of earnings information in the United Kingdom. They are based on a one per cent. sample of all employees who are members of pay-as-you-earn (PAYE) schemes.

[1] Employees on adult rates whose pay for the survey pay-period was not affected by absence.

[2] Discontinuities exist within NES and ASHE data over time, these have been reflected within the above time series.

[3] From 1985-97 estimates are based on the New Earnings Survey. From 1997-2005 estimates are based on the Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings.

[4] In 2004 additional supplementary surveys were introduced to improve the coverage of the Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings. Figures are presented both excluding and including the additional surveys for comparison purposes.

[5] Figures for average gross weekly earnings are discontinuous for these occupations in 2005 due to a change in the ASHE questionnaire. Figures for 2005 include allowances that were not previously included. Growths can be estimated from figures for basic pay excluding those allowances for both years.

2005 growth in basic pay:

Police officers (inspectors and above): Median: 2.6; Mean: 2.4

Police officers (sergeant and below): Median: 3.0; Mean: 2.8

Guide to quality:

The Coefficient of Variation (CV) indicates the quality of a figure, the smaller the CV value the higher the quality.

The true value is likely to lie within +/- twice the CV e.g. for an average of 200 with a CV of 5 per cent. we would expect the population average to be within the range 180 to 220.

The above estimates have a CV of less than 5 per cent.

The median replaces the mean as the heading statistic. The weighted mean is the sum of the weighted values divided by the sum of the weights. The median is the value below which 50 per cent. of employees fall. It is preferred over the mean for earnings data as it is influenced less by extreme values and because of the skewed distribution of earnings data.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received on an all-Wales police force; and how many of those representations were (a) in favour of and (b) opposed to such a force. [66024]

Mr. Byrne: The four Welsh police authorities submitted business cases in December, but at that point were unable to indicate a preferred option. They all recognise that a single strategic force for Wales is operationally viable, although they share some concerns. We have received various other representations, including from the forces, the Welsh Assembly and local authorities.

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many students are taking part in policing foundation degree courses; what the cost of the programme will be in 2006-07; if he will list the forces that have opted into the project; and if he will make a statement. [70900]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 16 May 2006]: We do not have figures as to the numbers who are taking part in foundation degrees in these or other forces.

The Government are providing forces in 2006-07 and 2007-08 with funding for the initial police learning and development programme (IPLDP) of £3,000 per police officer recruit, up to a level of recruitment that maintains officer numbers at the level that they reached at 31 March 2005. This is a national programme that provides forces with flexibility to tailor their initial police training to local needs.

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police there are in the Metropolitan police force. [68132]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is available in the "Police Service Strength publication as at 30 September 2005". This report was published on 23 January 2006 and is available in the Library of the House and on: http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs06/hosb0106.pdf

Prison

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners were released on licence during each of the last eight financial years. [48789]

Mr. Sutcliffe: For an indication of the number released since 1997, see Table 7.1 of the "Home Office Statistical Bulletin: Offender Management Caseload Statistics 2004", a copy of which can be found in the House of Commons Library. This table shows the number of receptions into prison establishments in each year since 1994. Chapter 10 of the same publication explains release arrangements for prisoners.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the earliest stage is in the criminal procedure at which evidence of an individual's nationality is requested; in what written form such information is (a) requested and (b) maintained; and on how many occasions and at what cost a translator has been used in such circumstances in each year since 1997. [69518]

Mr. Byrne: Section seven of the PACE Code on Practice on Detention, treatment and questioning of persons by police officers (Code C) requires that any person held in police detention who is a citizen of an independent Commonwealth country or a national of a foreign country, including the Republic of Ireland, may communicate at any time with the appropriate high commission, embassy or consulate. If the detainee is a citizen of a country with which a bilateral consular convention or agreement is in force requiring notification of arrest the appropriate high commission, embassy or consulate shall be informed as soon as practicable.

Establishing the nationality of a person suspected of involvement in an offence prior to this stage is not requested or required unless it is considered relevant to an offence. The information will be recorded on the person's custody record in accordance with section two of PACE Code C. Information is not held centrally on the number of such detainees or the cost of translators.

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisons run remedial programmes for inmates with personality disorders. [51917]

Mr. Sutcliffe: HMP Dovegate and HMP Grendon run large therapeutic communities while HMP Gartree, HMP Blundeston and HMYOI Aylesbury run smaller therapeutic communities. A new women's therapeutic community is being developed at HMP Send. These communities offer long term residential treatment programmes where emotional and psychological needs are addressed together with risk factors relating to offending behaviour.

For prisoners with dangerous and severe personality disorder, there are units at HMP Frankland and HMP Whitemoor. There is also a prison-based specialist in-reach service for up to 12 women who are dangerous as a result of a personality disorder which has recently opened at HMP Low Newton.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of (a) male, (b) female and (c) juvenile inmates have been diagnosed with (i) one, (ii) two and (iii) more than two mental health disorders; and if he will make a statement. [58211]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The information is not available in the form requested. The information available, from a survey of psychiatric morbidity among prisoners in England and Wales in 1997, by the Office for National Statistics, is shown in the following table.

Percentage of mental disorders by prisoner type

Number of mental disorders	Male	Female	Young offenders
One	20	19	16
Two	28	28	25
Two plus	44	42	54

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 7 March 2006, Official Report, column 1318W, on prisoners, what information his Department collects on prisoners who have Sky TV in their cells. [60351]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Prisoners' access to Sky television in-cell is based on a quarterly Incentives and Earned Privileges assessment, which incorporates records of recent behaviour and achievement. While the public sector Prison Service records relevant information on all prisoners, including their offence history and prison record, this information is not linked to records of prisoners who have access to Sky television.

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 7 March 2006, Official Report, column 1318W, on prisoners, what the cost to the Prison Service is of prisoners receiving Sky TV in their cells. [60352]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Sky television subscriptions in the four public sector prisons where it is available to some prisoners in cell cost £1,533.38 a month. However, 665 of the prisoners with access to Sky TV in cell are held in contracted-out prisons where the cost of the facility is not borne by the Prison Service.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the staff turnover rates were in prisons operated by the (a) public sector and (b) private sector in each of the last five years; what assessment he has made of the two figures; and if he will make a statement. [57760]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Information on the turnover rate of permanent staff, including retirements, within public sector Prison Service establishments is detailed in the following table. Information on staffing turnover in the contracted estate is not routinely collected and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Percentage

	Staff turnover in public sector prisons
2001	7.7
2002	7.4
2003	8.0
2004	7.7
2005	7.7

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many mobile telephones have been recovered at each prison in each of the last 12 months for which figures are available; how many of these telephones were recovered (a) as a result of mobile telephone detectors and (b) after analysis of recovered handsets; and if he will make a statement. [48422]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The information is as follows:

(a) Mobile phone detectors are now being used more readily across the prison estate although the data of these finds is not recorded centrally.

From 1 September 2005 the National Dog and Technical Support Group has been recording details of mobile phones and SIM cards that prisons have passed to them for specialist investigation. Data obtained cannot be broken down to identify those mobile phones and SIM cards found as a result of detectors.

(b) Data on the number of mobile phones found as a result of analysis of handsets is not recorded.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance (a) Ministers, (b) departmental officials and (c) the Prison Service have issued over the last 12 months regarding the role of the police in investigating the supply of contraband within the prison estate; on what date the guidance was issued; and if he will make a statement. [48423]

Mr. Sutcliffe: On 6 December 2005, the Director of Operations wrote to all governing governors of public sector prisons, reminding them that the police must be contacted whenever visitors or staff were found in possession of classified drugs. Where governors believed that referral to the police was not appropriate, the case had to be considered by a director at Prison Service headquarters.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many prison governors have faced investigation into drugs-related offences at each establishment in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement; [48431]

(2) how many prison officers at each prison establishment have been investigated for drugs-related offences in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [48499]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The information requested was not held in a form that enables a distinction between grade or by year. Investigations are registered under the main category of offence being investigated. Between 1 July 2000 and 1 February 2006, there were three investigations registered under significant drug find and 82 under trafficking.

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his policy is on the provision of visitors' facilities at adult prisons and young offender institutions in England and Wales; and what the Prison Service budget is for such provision. [55076]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Government recognise the importance of family and community ties to resettlement and the wider reducing reoffending strategy. Contact between prisoners and their friends and families is supported in a number of ways.

Facilities for visitors vary across the prison estate, depending on the location and type of prison. They include visitors' centres, play areas in visitors' centres and visits halls, family and children's visits, and family contact workers. The specific provision at each establishment, including financing, is a matter for individual governors.

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) full-time and (b) part-time (i) chaplains, (ii) rabbis, (iii) imams and (iv) clerics of other religions are employed by the Prison Service in England and Wales. [55077]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The following table details the number of directly employed chaplains within the public sector Prison Service and is broken down by the religion of the chaplain. There are no directly employed rabbis recorded as Jewish. In addition to directly employed chaplains, a large number of chaplains also work for the Prison Service on a sessional (fee paid) basis but the numbers are not recorded centrally.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what funding his Department is making available for building new prisons to replace ageing buildings in the prison estate. [55481]

Mr. Sutcliffe: I refer the hon. Member to my answer published in Hansard on 1 February 2006, Official Report, column 581.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the need for step-down facilities at HM Prison Grendon for prisoners who have completed their course; and what steps are being taken by his Department to increase access and funding for step-down facilities at the prison. [55491]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Following a recommendation in her most recent inspection report, the Chief Inspector made a recommendation that there should be specific planning to assist prisoners at Grendon reintegrate into the mainstream prison system, including follow-up support for prisoners after they move to other prisons.

A review was completed, and such an initiative would be welcome, but funding is not currently available.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the proportion of prisons that keep food premises (a) clean, (b) pest free and (c) in good repair. [60719]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Catering standards in prisons are audited by the Service's Standard Audit Unit on a two-year cycle. In 2005-06, 16 per cent. of audits against the baseline for food premises being clean, pest free and in good repair, were fully compliant. A further 44 per cent. of audits during the same period show that minor action was needed to fully meet the requirements. Action plans are agreed to correct all deficiencies identified following each audit.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of transfers of inmates between prison establishments for each year since 1997, broken down by prison establishment. [62135]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Figures on the transfer of prisoners between establishments have been centrally recorded since 2003. Details of transfers in the last three years are set out in the following table.

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how data is collected on the hours spent by prisoners undertaking purposeful activity; and what estimate he has made of the time prison officers spent collecting this information in the last period for which figures are available. [69900]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Data for purposeful activity is collected electronically from establishments. Every week each prison reports information on the number of prisoners undertaking a range of activities defined as purposeful. Specific software is available to prisons for reporting this data.

Data is not available on the amount of time spent collecting this information. This could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners have escaped from prison in England and Wales in each of the last 20 years. [70065]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The following table shows the total number of prisoners who have escaped in the last 10 calendar years and this year to date. The table contains the total number of Key Performance Indicator (KPI) escapes from prisons. A KPI escape is one where (a) the prisoner is not captured within 15 minutes or (b) the prisoner is recaptured within 15 minutes but has committed an offence other than escape before recapture. Once a prisoner is unlawfully at large the matter passes into the hands of the police.

Roger Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the expenditure was on prisoner education in each of the last two years. [70983]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Department for Education and Skills had a ring-fenced budget for offenders' learning and skills of £136 million in 2004-05 and £151 million in 2005-06. This covers learning and skills provision in prisons as well as for offenders in the community.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when work commenced on the rebuilding and refurbishment programme at HMP Chelmsford; when the work ceased due to financial problems; when work is expected to recommence; and if he will make a statement. [48371]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 6 February 2006]: The project partnering agreement that allowed the constructor to commence detailed design work was signed in March 2005. Some preliminary site set-up activities commenced in March and the actual pre-commencement activity started on 31 May 2005. This involved refurbishment of the existing old healthcare building, detailed design of the project and site preparation (fencing) for construction of the new houseblock.

No building work started on the new houseblock, visits and workshop as the costs of these works were found to be above the budget when the constructor's detailed tender costs were submitted in August 2005. The estate planning committee (the governance authority) agreed the increased budget cost of £5.5 million on 27 September 2005 and the project was authorised to continue. The finalised contract value of £26.5 million for a new houseblock, workshop and visits building together with major refurbishments of the gatehouse, old healthcare and old visits buildings was submitted by the constructor and the full commencement agreement was signed on 10 October 2005 and work fully re-commenced immediately.

The new houseblock and visits are expected to be available in December 2006 with all the elements of the project finally completing in April 2007.

Probation

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offenders on probation under a community service order have been the subject of a recommendation by the Probation Service that they should be returned to prison in the last five years; and how many were subsequently returned to prison as a result of the recommendation. [69736]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The readily available information, which relates to the number of persons breaching community orders and those sentenced to immediate custody as a result, is published in Table 4.13 of "Sentencing Statistics, England and Wales, 2004" (page 92). This publication can be found in the Library and also on the Home Office website, as follows: http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs05/hosb1505.pdf

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what complaints his Department has received from (a) individuals and (b) groups regarding the workings of the probation services in each of the last five years. [45863]

Mr. Sutcliffe: A National Complaints Procedure, agreed by the Secretary of State, enables local probation areas to handle complaints. Complaints must however, be from individuals. Each probation area will maintain their own record of complaints received and the outcome of these cases. Unresolved local complaints are escalated to the independent Prison and Probation Ombudsman.

General correspondence from individuals or groups complaining about the probation service received from people who are ineligible to complain under the procedure above, will have been answered by the appropriate unit but the Department does not collect the information in the form requested.

Public Order

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offenders were found guilty of (a) drunken and disorderly behaviour and (b) drunken and aggravated disorderly behaviour in (i) England and (ii) Kingston upon Hull, North in each year since 1997. [69774]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Data held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform showing the number of offenders convicted at all courts for 'simple drunkenness' and 'drunkenness with aggravation' in Kingston upon Hull petty sessional area and England, 1997-2004 are provided in the first table. It is not possible to separately identify convictions in Kingston upon Hull, North as the data are not collected at that level of detail.

Statistics for 2005 court proceedings will be available in the autumn of 2006.

Some drunkenness offences are now dealt with by penalty notice for disorder. Previously, such cases would have either gone to court or been dealt with by caution or informal warning. The penalty notice for disorder scheme (PND) was brought into effect in all police forces in England and Wales during 2004. Under the scheme the police are able to issue persons committing specified minor offences with a fixed penalty notice.

No admission of guilt is required and payment of the penalty discharges all liability for the offence. Data on the number of PNDs for offences related to drunkenness for 2004 and provisional data for 2005 are provided in the second table. Offences related to aggravated drunken behaviour are not included in the scheme.

Recruitment

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much (a) his Department and (b) its agencies spent on recruitment, search and selection agencies in each of the last five years. [68339]

John Reid: The information requested cannot be provided except at disproportionate cost.

Royal Commission on Criminal Procedure

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list recommendations from the Royal Commission on Criminal Procedure which were (a) accepted, (b) implemented in legislation and (c) rejected; and if he will make a statement. [71982]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Royal Commission on Criminal Procedure was established in 1977 and published its final report in January 1981 (Cm 8092). The Commission made a wide range of recommendations. For example, its report is known to have influenced legislation governing police powers in the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 and also the establishment of an independent Crown Prosecution Service in the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985. There does not appear to have been a formal published Government response to the recommendations in the report and it is not possible to supply the detailed information requested. In the 25 years since the report was published there have been a number of other enquiries, most recently, Sir Robin Auld's Review of the Criminal Courts of England and Wales in 2001.

Rural Crime

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps the Government are taking to reduce crime in rural areas; and if he will make a statement. [71596]

Mr. Byrne: Effective and responsive policing at neighbourhood level as well as robust partnership working are both essential parts of our strategy to tackle crime and to sustain the confidence and trust of the public in all parts of the country.

We introduced the Rural Policing Fund in 2000-01 specifically to enhance the visibility and accessibility of policing in rural areas. 31 police authorities with the most widespread populations have benefited from this additional funding. The annual allocation is £30 million. As part of the police funding settlement for 2006-07 and 2007-08, we have consolidated four specific grants, including the Rural Policing Fund, into a single provision for each police authority to give them more control over how they may be used. However, we expect authorities to honour commitments and agreed policy initiatives to build on the outstanding successes achieved by, for example, the Rural Policing Fund that has enhanced the visibility and accessibility of policing in rural areas.

We have invested in the police right across the country, and there are now more officers on the streets than there have ever been before. Bedfordshire police employed 121 more officers in March 2005 than it did in March 1997. Across England and Wales there were 14,072 extra officers in the same period, giving a record total of 141,230. We have also made a commitment that by April 2007, Neighbourhood Policing will have been introduced to every area in England and Wales.

There is a wide programme of work under way nationally to reduce violent crime, in both rural and urban areas. We have introduced the Violent Crime Reduction Bill, which contains new measures to ensure that police and local communities have the powers they need to tackle guns, knives and alcohol-related violence.

Three national Alcohol Misuse Enforcement Campaigns have taken place, with a fourth due to start before the football World Cup. Police operations targeting hotspots of alcohol-related disorder have included the use of fixed penalty notices, confiscation of alcohol and test purchases to address under-age sales. Bedfordshire police have taken part in these campaigns.

In Bedfordshire, a number of police operations have targeted violent crime and antisocial behaviour. Operation Coriander has seen high visibility police patrols targeting violence and antisocial behaviour in Flitwick with extra resources at peak times. Operation Lead has taken a similar approach to reducing violence in the night-time economy in several Bedfordshire towns. Additionally, alcohol exclusion zones and dispersal zones have been set up and are being enforced in several locations across the force area.

Violent crime as measured by British Crime Survey (BCS), considered to be the most reliable measure of violent crime in England and Wales, has fallen significantly in recent years. According to the BCS it has nearly halved (fallen by 43 per cent.) since a peak in 1995, an estimated 1.8 million fewer incidents. It has fallen by 34 per cent. since 1997, by 11 per cent. since 2003-04 and by 5 per cent. since 2004-05.

Security Industry Authority

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the cost of the Security Industry Authority to date. [58969]

Mr. Coaker: The Security Industry Authority (SIA) is required to be self-financing from the licence fee income but it was always anticipated that the SIA would not break even in its first couple of years, because of the gradual introduction of licensing which will eventually meet all the SIA's running costs. The deficit in the first year, 2003-04, was £7.1 million as the SIA had no licence income. In 2004-05, the deficit was £13 million, and the estimated deficit for 2005-06 is about £3.5 million.

Sex Trafficking

Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the answer of 29 November 2005, Official Report, columns 465-7W to the hon. Member for Richmond Park (Susan Kramer), on sex trafficking, what progress has been made on taking forward the necessary steps to ratify the UN convention against transnational organised crime and the related Palermo protocol. [71165]

Mr. Coaker: We recently ratified the Convention and its protocols on smuggling and trafficking, having put in place all the legislative requirements to bring our law into compliance with these instruments. The UK ratified the Convention and protocols on 9 February 2006 with an effective date of 11 March 2006.

Tagging Orders

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offenders have been found guilty of damaging their electronic tag while subject to a tagging order. [69367]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Between 1 April 2005, the start date of the new electronic monitoring contracts, and 30 April 2006, a total of 2,695 subjects breached their curfew requirements by maliciously damaging their tag.

The system is designed to ensure that any attempt to remove a tag within the curfew address automatically registers as a tamper at the electronic monitoring service provider's control centre.

Unsolicited Mail (Fraud)

Mark Tami: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions of individuals using unsolicited mail to carry out fraudulent acts there were in the most recent year for which figures are available. [71575]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Data from the Court Proceedings database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform on the number of persons using unsolicited mail to carry out fraudulent acts is not available.

US Immigration Authorities

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the names of people arrested in England and Wales are reported to US immigration authorities by (a) the police and (b) other Government bodies. [70417]

Mr. Byrne: There are no arrangements for routinely supplying arrest details to US immigration authorities by either the police or other Government bodies. However, information may be shared between agencies during joint criminal investigations.

Witness Intimidation

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been convicted of intimidating witnesses in each of the last five years. [69744]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Data from the court proceedings database held by the office for criminal justice reform for the number of people convicted of intimidating witnesses in England and Wales for the years 2000 to 2004 can be found in the following table.

Data for 2005 will be available in the autumn of 2006.

Workers Registration Scheme

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people from EU accession countries have registered on the Workers Registration Scheme in each year since its inception. [71687]

Mr. McNulty: 329,090 applicants to the Worker Registration Scheme (WRS) were issued with WRS registration certificates and cards since the scheme's inception on 1 May 2004 to December 2005. This is made up of 125,870 for 2004 and 203,220 for 2005.

The figures quoted are for applicants rather than the number of applications made. The figures do not include multiple applications, where an individual is undertaking more than one job simultaneously, nor re-registrations, where an individual has changed employers. In addition, an individual who has registered to work and who leaves employment is not required to de-register, therefore some of those counted will have left the employment for which they registered and some are likely to have left the UK.

HEALTH

Abortions

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether she has plans to review the Abortion Act 1967; and if she will make a statement. [70408]

Caroline Flint: The Government have no plans to review the Abortion Act. It is accepted parliamentary practice that proposals for changes in the law on abortion have come from hon. and right hon. Members on the back benches and that decisions are made on the basis of free votes. In addition, key organisations in the medical profession are not pressing for a review of this area, for example, both the British Medical Association and the Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists have said that they do not believe there is a case for changing the time limits for an abortion.

Abuse by Health Staff

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many inquiries into abuse by health staff were ordered by (a) her Department and (b) NHS trusts and strategic health authorities in the last five years; what the status of each inquiry was; whether the data from each inquiry have been brought together; and what plans for action were made as a result of each inquiry. [70813]

Andy Burnham: The investigation of any adverse incident involving healthcare staff is primarily a matter for the local national health service community. Where professional conduct issues are raised then the Department would also expect the relevant professional and regulatory body to be involved. In cases where there are wider concerns about the failure of the systems in place to prevent such incidents, NHS trusts and strategic health authorities may set up independent investigations but information on these is not collected centrally.

The independent Healthcare Commission and Commission for Social Care Inspection also investigate serious failures in the provision of health and social care which may also involve abuse by healthcare staff.

Since May 2001, the Department has set up the following independent investigations following concerns about healthcare professionals.

Date set up	Inquiry	Date reported
July 2001	An independent investigation into how the NHS handled allegations about the conduct of Clifford Ayling (a former Kent general practitioner) under section two of the NHS Act 1977	September 2004
July 2001	An independent investigation into how the NHS handled allegations about the performance and conduct of Richard Neale, a gynaecologist who practised in Yorkshire	September 2004
July 2001	An independent investigation into how the NHS handled allegations of about the conduct of two psychiatrists, William Kerr and Michael Haslam under section two of the NHS Act 1977	July 2005
November 2001	An independent review of paediatric neurology services at University Hospitals of Leicester NHS Trust	October 2003

The Government are awaiting the recommendations of a review by the Chief Medical Officer (CMO) of certain aspects of medical regulation, including the revalidation of doctors. The CMO is currently finalising his report and will be reporting to Ministers in the near future. Once Ministers have considered the CMO's recommendations, the Government will publish a comprehensive action programme responding to the recommendations in the Ayling, Neale and Kerr/Haslam inquiries as well as the outstanding recommendations of the Shipman Inquiry.

Both the University Hospitals of Leicester NHS Trust and the Department have produced detailed action plans to follow up the recommendations of the review of paediatric neurology services at Leicester effectively in order to minimise the risk of similar future occurrences.

Accident and Emergency Services

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which NHS hospitals had (a) a 24 hour accident and emergency department and (b) another accident and emergency facility in (i) 1996 and (ii) 2006; and in which NHS hospitals with 24 hour provision there are confirmed plans to end such provision. [67862]

Ms Rosie Winterton: National health service trusts self-report the number of accident and emergency (A and E) services they provide against definitions set by the Department for the three types of A and E. The information available is shown in the following table and this was the position at the end of December 2005.

Number of departments (England)

	Number
Type 1 (major) A and E departments	204
Type 2 (single specialty) A and E departments	85
Type 3 A and E departments (minor injury and illness services including minor injury units, including walk-in centres)	321

Source:
OMAE

Prior to 2000-01, statistics provided a count of the number of trusts providing the three different A and E services, rather than the number of each type of service. This pre-2000-01 trust data is available on the Department's website at: www.performance.doh.gov.uk/hospitalactivity

The Department does not routinely collect and hold centrally operational management information on proposals to close wards or capacity.

Advertising

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects to take a decision on the criteria that will be used in determining whether sufficient change has taken place in the nature and balance of food advertising to obviate the need for legislation. [67952]

Caroline Flint: A range of factors will be taken into account when deciding in 2007 on the need for legislation. As announced at the food and drink advertising and promotion forum on 26 April, my concerns are focused on protecting primary school aged children. We want to see a change in the nature and balance of food and drink advertising and promotion of foods to children so that the foods advertised better represent a balanced diet. We will be building on this further, including the establishment of a baseline against which we can assess what progress has been made.

Alcohol-related Conditions

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many and what proportion of people were admitted to acute hospitals in each of the regions where the primary or secondary diagnosis was an alcohol-related condition in each of the last three years for which data are available; and what percentage this was of the population of each region. [69208]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is not held centrally. However, data is available on the number of patients with alcohol related conditions admitted into acute hospitals as a percentage of the total patients admitted in the last three years which is shown in the table.

Avian Influenza

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures are in place at British ports of entry to identify those with the H5N1 virus seeking entry to Britain in the event of a major outbreak overseas. [65758]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Regulation 12 of the Public Health (Aircraft) Regulations 1979, regulation 13 of the Public Health (Ships) Regulations 1979 and regulation 8 of the Public Health (International Trains) Regulations 1994 place a duty on conveyance operators to notify the authorities if they become aware that there is a sick person on board an incoming conveyance. The regulations also provide powers for the authorities to take certain actions: for example, to examine or question persons on incoming conveyances where there are reasonable grounds for suspecting that they are suffering from or have been exposed to an infectious disease (aircraft regulation 8, ships regulation 9, trains regulation 9). These regulations apply in England and Wales, and their application in Wales is overseen by the National Assembly for Wales; Scotland and Northern Ireland have their own regulations.

The Government keeps under review the measures that might be required in the event of a flu pandemic among humans. Currently the advice from the World Health Organisation is that H5N1 is a disease of birds and there is not efficient or sustained transmission from one human to another.

Blood Samples

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate has been made of the average level among the UK population of (a) n-heptane and (b) polybrominated biphenyl in (i) blood samples and (ii) fat biopsies. [71310]

Caroline Flint: No assessments have been made of average levels of n-heptane or polybrominated biphenyls in the United Kingdom population, either in blood or fat biopsies.

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate has been made of the average level among the UK population of (a) free cell DNA in ug DNA per litre of plasma, (b) nickel DNA adducts in ng/ml and (c) beryllium DNA adducts in ng/ml. [71323]

Caroline Flint: No estimates have been made of the average levels in the United Kingdom population of free cell deoxyribonucleic acid (DNA) in microgram DNA per litre of plasma, nor of nickel DNA adducts or beryllium DNA adducts in plasma.

Bournemouth Teaching Primary Care Trust

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the revenue allocation made by her Department to Bournemouth teaching primary care trust was in (a) 2005-06 and (b) 2006-07; [70267]

(2) what the level of growth funding received by Bournemouth teaching primary care trust was in 2006-07, expressed (a) in financial terms and (b) as a percentage of its total funding allocation; [70268]

(3) how much was allocated to Bournemouth teaching primary care trust in (a) 2005-06 and (b) 2006-07; and how much and what percentage of such funding was growth funding in 2006-07. [70785]

Caroline Flint: The data requested for Bournemouth teaching primary care trust (PCT) is shown in the tables:

2005-06 revenue allocations

	Bournemouth Teaching PCT
Allocation (£000)	180,054
Increase (£000)	15,132
Increase (percentage)	9.2

2006-07 revenue allocations

	Bournemouth Teaching PCT
Allocation (£000)	212,879
Increase (£000)	16,656
Increase (percentage)	8.5

Note:
Comparisons can not be made between the 2005-06 and the 2006-07 allocations for the following reasons:
changes are made to the weighted capitation formula for each allocations round, therefore, comparisons would not be on a like with like basis; and 2006-07 is the first year that primary medical services were incorporated into revenue allocations.

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what proportion of Bournemouth Primary Care Trust's allocation for 2006-07 is being held (a) in its reserve and (b) by the strategic health authority; [70269]

(2) what proportion of Bournemouth Primary Care Trust's allocation for 2006-07 is currently being held in its reserve by the relevant strategic health authority. [70786]

Caroline Flint: The agreement of strategic health authority reserves form part of the 2006-07 financial planning process, which is not yet complete.

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the level of funding excluding the market forces factor was made available by Bournemouth Primary Care Trust to the Royal Bournemouth and Christchurch Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust as part of its legally binding contract for 2005-06; [70277]

(2) what funding was allocated by Bournemouth Primary Care Trust to the Royal Bournemouth and Christchurch Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust as part of its contract for 2005-6; and what amount will be allocated for 2006-07. [70788]

Caroline Flint: The Department does not collect information from national health service foundation trusts. The total amount of expenditure made in 2005-06 by Bournemouth Teaching Primary Care Trust to the Royal Bournemouth and Christchurch Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust will be available in the autumn from the PCT audited summarisation schedules.

However, the precise nature of this expenditure and whether it covers just contract expenditure will not be identifiable.

Figures for 2004-05, before the trust became a foundation trust, showed Bournemouth Teaching PCT reported £121,614,000 expenditure with Royal Bournemouth and Christchurch Hospitals NHS Trust and the trust reported £121,583,000 income from the PCT.

Cancer Plan

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to develop a new Cancer Plan to replace the current plan in 2010. [71273]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 16 May 2006]: The need to publish a further update or a second cancer plan is kept under review and as yet no decision has been taken.

Care Homes

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment her Department has made of changes in care home fees in the last five years; [70661]

(2) what assessment she has made of the reasons underlying increases above inflation in care home fees in the last five years. [70733]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: According to the independent social care sector analysts Laing and Buisson, in its annual "Care of Elderly People UK Market Survey 2005", in the five years up to 31 March 2005 care home fees went up as follows:

Percentage

	Residential care homes	Nursing homes
2000-01	3.8	3.5
2001-02	6.1	6.0
2002-03	8.0	7.8
2003-04	7.4	7.4
2004-05	8.3	7.4

There are a number of possible causes for the rise in fees. This includes the level of fees paid by local authorities and the national health service, which together pay 68 per cent. of the cost of residential care.

We increased total resources available for social services by an average of six per cent. a year in real terms over the three years 2003-04 to 2005-06. These increases follow a 20 per cent. increase in the level of funding for social services between 1996-97 and 2002-03. This enables local councils to purchase the services to meet their residents' needs. In its annual "Care of the Elderly: UK Market Survey's" Laing and Buisson has reported increases in the fees paid to care homes by social services of around 3 to 4 per cent. a year since 2000-01, with some authorities increasing fees by over 10 per cent.

Child Care

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many child care places are provided by the NHS for NHS employees; [72737]

(2) which hospital trusts provide child care places for employees. [72738]

Ms Rosie Winterton: A survey of child care provision in 2004 by the information centre for health and social care found national health service employers provide 11,700 nursery places for children under five years. In addition, NHS employers provide their staff with a range of child care support, including access to holiday playschemes, after school clubs and access to child care co-ordinators.

Information on hospital trusts providing child care places for employees is not collected centrally. However, of the 571 organisations who responded to the survey, 97 per cent. provided access to a child care co-ordinator.

Choose and Book System

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 24 April 2006, Official Report, column 954W, on the Choose and Book System, when she expects the trusts listed will implement fully compliant systems. [69650]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department expects that the exempt trusts will implement fully compliant systems once they have access to an economically viable compliant patient administration system (PAS). This matter is under consideration and will be determined on a case-by-case basis with the individual trusts during 2006, when planning dates will be agreed.

Trusts are currently exempt from having a compliant PAS by December 2006 for two reasons. Firstly, for it not being technically possible for them to upgrade their existing PAS to be compliant and their PAS replacement not being planned until after December 2006. Secondly, for it not being financially viable to upgrade their existing PAS, for example their PAS has a single installation base and the cost to upgrade this versus the benefit to operate this for a finite period is not viable, and their replacement PAS not being planned until after December 2006.

The number of trusts exempt from operating compliant PAS by December 2006 is fluid and may go up or down slightly, as compliant PAS roll-out plans are finalised between now and the end of the year.

Chronic Obstructive Pulmonary Disease

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many patients in each primary care trust in Hampshire have been diagnosed with chronic obstructive pulmonary diseases in each of the last five years. [71217]

(2) which primary trusts in Hampshire make available continuous positive airway pressure machines when requested by their specialist to those whose chest conditions make sleeping difficult; and which occasionally refuse a clinician's request. [71219]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is not held centrally.

Combined Contraceptive Pill

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what mortality rates are attributed to the use of combined oestrogen-progesterone contraceptive pill among women (a) in the United Kingdom, (b) in other member European Union countries and (c) in other World Health Organisation nations; and if she will make a statement; [72035]

(2) what mortality rates are attributed to the use of the intra-uterine device as a contraceptive among women in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) other member European Union countries and (c) other World Health Organisation nations; and if she will make a statement; [72188]

(3) what mortality rates are attributed to the use of the drug Depo-Provera as a contraceptive among women in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) other member European Union countries and (c) other World Health Organisation nations; and if she will make a statement; [72189]

(4) what the mortality rates directly attributed to the use as a contraceptive of the progesterone-only pill were in the latest period for which figures are available; and if she will make a statement. [72286]

Andy Burnham: Mortality rates directly attributed to the use of different methods of contraception in different countries are not available.

The yellow card scheme collects reports of suspected adverse drug reactions associated with medicines occurring in the United Kingdom. This data cannot be used to calculate mortality rates attributed to medicines for a number of reasons. Importantly, not all adverse reactions are reported and the level of underreporting differs between medicines. Furthermore, doctors are asked to report suspected adverse reactions regardless of any doubts about a causal association with a medicine. Therefore, a report of a particular adverse reaction on the yellow card database does not necessarily mean that the drug caused it, and other factors such as an underlying or new medical condition may have played a role. Any comparison between products is invalid as the usage of these products and the other factors which affect the level of reporting of suspected adverse drug reactions vary greatly between products.

The table contains the number of reports of suspected adverse drug reactions, and the number of fatal reports, received by the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency during 2005 in association with the following: Mirena—an intrauterine device (IUD) that contains progesterone; non-hormonal IUDs; Depo-Provera; the progesterone-only pill; and the combined oral contraceptive. These figures should be viewed in the context of the extensive usage of the contraceptive devices and medicines.

Contraceptive	Total reports	Fatal reports
Mirena	78	0
Non-hormonal IUDs	2	0
Depo-Provera	71	2
Combined oral contraceptives	99	2

The majority of reports with a fatal outcome relate to venous thromboembolism. An increased risk of venous thromboembolism is well recognised in association with combined hormonal contraceptives and extensive information is provided in the product information for doctors and women.

Healthcare professionals providing contraceptive services should provide accurate information about the possible side effects of each method to allow women to make informed choices as to the most appropriate method for them. This information is also included in the patient information leaflet. The benefits associated with modern contraceptive use far outweigh the side effects.

Modern methods of contraception are safe for the vast majority of women who use them and are not only highly effective in preventing pregnancy, but are also associated with other health benefits. The pill for example can reduce menstrual blood loss and relieve painful menstruation. It may also reduce the incidence of ovarian and endometrial cancer.

Dentistry

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists have left the NHS to work in private practice in each year since 1997. [64034]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Data on the destination of dentists leaving the general dental services (GDS) or personal dental services (PDS) are not held centrally.

The table, however, provides the numbers of national health service dentists who have left the GDS or PDS in England, in each year since 1997.

General dental services (GDS) and personal dental services (PDS): Number of dentists who have left the GDS or PDS in England for the 12 months ending 30 September each year

	Number
1997	947
1998	972
1999	1,037
2000	1,206
2001	1,207
2002	1,352
2003	1,236
2004	1,224
2005	1,097

Notes:

1. Leavers indicate that the dentist had an open GDS or PDS contract in September of the previous year but no GDS or PDS contract in September of the specified year.
2. Data include all notifications of dentists joining or leaving the GDS or PDS, received by the Business Services Authority, up to 8 November 2005. Figures for the numbers of dentists at specified dates may vary depending upon the notification period, for example data with a later notification period will include more recent notifications of dentists leaving the GDS or PDS.
3. A dentist with a GDS or PDS contract may provide as little or as much NHS treatment as he or she chooses or has agreed with the primary care trust. Information concerning the amount of time dedicated to NHS work by individual GDS or PDS dentists are not centrally available.
4. Dentists consist of principals, assistants and trainees. Prison contracts have been excluded.

Mr. McGovern: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what procedures are in place to ensure that primary care trusts are given clear guidance on the transitional arrangements underpinning the transfer to the new dental contract. [72337]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has made a wide range of guidance available to primary care trusts to support the transition to local commissioning of primary dental care services and the introduction of new contracts. This has included a fact sheet on 'Understanding the transitional provisions order', which explained how dentists would transfer to the new contracts. This and other fact sheets are available on the Department website at: www.dh.gov.uk/PolicyAndGuidance/HealthAndSocialCareTopics/Dental. NHS primary care contracting has provided a range of other guidance and support to primary care trusts in implementing the new contracts, both through its website at: www.primarycarecontracting.nhs.uk/89.php and through learning events and a dental helpdesk.

Mr. McGovern: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding has been provided to enable primary care trusts to provide maternity payments to dentists during the transition to the new dental contract. [72437]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Primary care trusts have been given funding allocations for national health service dentistry based on previous levels of expenditure during the reference period of October 2004 to September 2005. This included all dental expenditure in that period including any maternity, paternity or sick pay given to qualifying dentists. In dentistry, as in any other areas of NHS provision, maternity payments will vary over time but allowing for such variation is a normal part of a PCT's funding role.

Mr. McGovern: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether a dentist who was pregnant before the new dental contract was introduced on 1 April 2006 is able to claim maternity pay at the levels prescribed in the old dental contract. [72568]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Under the former general dental services contract, the level of maternity pay for a principal dentist providing NHS general dental services was based on the principal's earnings during a 12-month test period (beginning 21 months before the expected period of confinement). Under the new GDS contract that came into effect from 1 April 2006, any dentist (be they the contract holder, a partner or a practice employee) performing dental services under a national health service contract is entitled to payments in respect of a period of maternity leave. The level of the payment is based on the dentist's pensionable earnings immediately before the period of maternity leave begins.

Under the transitional arrangements, a principal dentist who was entitled to NHS maternity pay under the former GDS contract and who began her maternity leave before 1 April is entitled to continue receiving the same level of payment as before (based on the earlier test period), if this is higher than payments calculated on the basis of her most recent pensionable earnings.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many and what percentage of (a) adults and (b) children were registered with an NHS dentist in each primary care trust in Devon in (i) 1998 and (ii) 2000. [72970]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Below is the number of adults and children registered with a national health service dentist in each primary care trust (PCT) in Devon in the specified years. The percentage of those registered is not available as population figures were not collected at PCT level prior to 2001.

	1998		2000
	Adults registered	Children registered	Adults registered	Children registered
East Devon	36,422	11,489	41,547	13,538
Exeter	55,930	20,290	57,101	21,017
Mid Devon	25,356	11,556	32,087	13,798
North Devon	45,468	21,147	58,004	23,220
Plymouth Teaching	84,912	38,133	82,881	38,845
South Hams and West Devon	28,132	14,668	29,269	16,283
Teignbridge	34,323	12,110	36,234	12,685
Torbay	52,252	17,563	53,913	19,218

Notes:
1. The areas have been defined using practice postcodes within the PCT, not the patient's home address.
2. Prison contracts have not been included in this analysis.
3. Children are deemed as 17 years or under and adults as 18 years or over.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in her Department have been (a) disciplined and (b) dismissed for (i) inappropriate use of the internet while at work and (ii) using work telephones to access premium rate numbers in each of the last five years. [67983]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information is shown in the table.

Type of misuse	2001	2002	2003	2004	2005	Total
Internet	0	3	3	27	20	53
Telephone	0	0	0	0	0	0

Dismissal	0	1	1	5	2	9

Source:
Department of Health IT Security Unit

All office phones are blocked from accessing premium rate numbers. There is management discretion to lift this ban in individual cases based on need. There have been no recorded cases of disciplinary action relating to access to premium line numbers in the last five years.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in her Department have been enabled to work from home in each of the last three years; and if she will make a statement. [67984]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has a formal home-working scheme under which employees may request that home is the place of work for all or some of the working week. The current number of the Department's official home workers over the last three years is shown in the table.

	Official home worker
2003-04	6
2004-05	7
2005-06	5

The Department also provides a wide variety of arrangements which allow staff to work flexibly. These include initiatives such as a flexitime, part-time working, job sharing, part year appointments, compressed hours and special leave arrangements to cope with a variety of circumstances.

The Department also allows staff to work at home on an occasional basis at management discretion. This is becoming more widespread with the greater use of information technology.

Diagnostic Scans

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many diagnostic scans were carried out by Alliance Medical Ltd. in the NHS in County Durham (a) in each of the last 12 months and (b) in each of the previous five years. [70810]

Andy Burnham [holding answer 15 May 2006]: Alliance Medical Limited (AML) has not provided any diagnostic scans from within County Durham. An AML mobile unit does operate a service from the James Cook University Hospital in Middlesbrough. The unit has visited the hospital on eight occasions since contract commencement in July 2004. The total number of scans are shown in the table. The number referred from specific local areas is not held centrally.

Month/year	Number of scans
September 2004	65
November 2004	82
December 2004	182
January 2005	65
July 2005	119

Doctors

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many doctors employed by the NHS are from non-EU countries. [65678]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The number of doctors employed in the national health service who qualified in non-European Union countries is shown in the following table.

General and personal medical services and hospital, community health services (HCHS): All doctors by specified country of primary qualification group[1,2,3]—England as at 30 September 2005

	All countries of qualification	EU countries	Number (headcount) Non-EU countries
All doctors	119,017	85,984	33,033
All HCHS medical staff[2,3]	83,073	55,702	27,371
All general practitioners (GPs)[3]	35,944	30,282	5,662
of which:
GPs (excluding retainers and registrars)	32,738	27,979	4,759
GP registrars	2,564	1,682	882

[1] All practitioners includes contracted GPs, GMS others, PMS others, GP registrars and GP retainers.
[2] Excludes medical hospital practitioners and medical clinical assistants, most of whom are GPs working part time in hospitals.
[3] Excludes all dental staff. Information about country of qualification is derived from the General Medical Council. For staff in dental specialties, with a General Dental Council registration, the country of qualification is therefore unknown.

Electromagnetic Fields

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what estimate she has made of the number of children who are exposed to potentially unsafe levels of overhead electricity cables; [69950]

(2) when she will publish the findings of the stakeholder advisory group on the links between electromagnetic fields and child health. [69951]

Caroline Flint: In 2004, the National Radiological Protection Board (now the Health Protection Agency radiation protection division (HPA-RPD)) recommended the adoption of international electromagnetic field (EMF) exposure guidelines. The supporting review of scientific evidence stated that there is no scientific consensus that exposures to EMFs at levels below currently accepted exposure restrictions cause cancer or any other disease. However, it is their view that "the totality of scientific data and uncertainty in knowledge and/or other relevant factors indicate that consideration should be given as to whether further precautionary measures are needed" in respect of extremely low frequency (ELF) EMF.

A subsequent study by the HPA has investigated sources of residential magnetic field exposures (www.hpa.org.uk/radiation/publications/hpa_rpd_reports/2005/hpa_rpd_005.htm). Another study, published in June 2005 by Dr. Draper and colleagues, has estimated the number of children living within certain distance of overhead power lines in England and Wales (bmj.bmjjournals.com/cgi/reprint). Responding to the Draper study, the HPA noted that the majority of raised ELF magnetic fields in homes are due to variations in the electricity supply and distribution system, the presence of substations and equipment in the home rather than proximity to power lines. The HPA response statement is available on its website at: www.hpa.org.uk/hpa/news/articles/press_releases/2005/050603_childhood_cancer_voltage.htm.

In response to the HPA advice in 2004, the stakeholder advisory group on ELF EMF (SAGE) was set up to explore the implications for a precautionary approach and make practical recommendations for precautionary measures. SAGE is currently developing its advice and is expected to report later this year. Details of this process can be found on its website at www.rkpartnership.co.uk/sage.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will place in the Library copies of the (a) minutes and (b) reports on overhead power lines produced by the stakeholder advisory group on extremely low frequency electromagnetic fields. [70660]

Caroline Flint: The stakeholder advisory group on extremely low frequency electromagnetic fields (SAGE) is currently developing its first report. It is expected that the report will be published and presented to Government later this year. Details of the SAGE process can be found on the website of the independent facilitation company R K Partnership Ltd. at www.rkpartnership.org.uk/sage.

Emergency Contraception

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many girls under the age of 16 years have been prescribed the morning-after pill in each of the last five years; [69354]

(2) how many morning after pills were prescribed to girls under 16 years by pharmacies without medical supervision in 2005-06. [69946]

Caroline Flint: The information available is shown in the following table.

Occasions on which hormonal post-coital contraceptives dispensed at family planning clinics in England to girls aged under 16, 2000-01 to 2004-05

	Number (Thousand)
2000-01	25.3
2001-02	25.8
2002-03	26.8
2003-04	26.7
2004-05	24.4

Data on how many girls under 16 have been prescribed emergency hormonal contraception by general practice are not held centrally.

Emergency hormonal contraception can be legally supplied to girls under the age of 16 as a prescription-only medicine by general practitioners and also by nurses and pharmacists working under a patient group direction (PGD). A PGD is where a doctor has delegated authority and the supply will therefore always be under medical supervision.

Data on emergency hormonal contraception supplied under a patient group direction (PGD) by pharmacists and nurses are not held centrally.

Evidence-based Information

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to develop evidence-based information for both patients and clinicians. [66048]

Andy Burnham: To support choice at referral, we produced booklets tailored to each primary care trust and enhanced the nhs.uk website to give patients and clinicians information on choice and national health service provider performance taken from Healthcare Commission indicators.

We will be working with clinical leaders and key stakeholders to develop robust measures of clinical quality across all providers of NHS care. We will be building on tools such as the National Joint Registry and the new Heart Surgery in Great Britain websites at: www.njrcentre.org.uk and http://heartsurgery.healthcarecommission.org.uk/Survival.aspx.

We are also piloting patient reported outcome measures for routine elective care procedures, the results of which will be available this autumn.

In addition, the recent White Paper announced a review of the provision of health and social care information for patients and users. The outcome of the review will enable the Department to provide an information service that better meets the needs of patients and the public.

Foster Review

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she will announce her response to the Foster review of non-medical healthcare professions. [72657]

Andy Burnham: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 17 May 2006.

Funding (Northamptonshire)

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the NHS (a) revenue and (b) capital expenditure per capita in Northamptonshire was in (i) 1997 and (ii) 2005; [70816]

(2) what the revenue budget was for health services in Northamptonshire in (a) 1995, (b) 2000 and (c) 2005. [70817]

Andy Burnham: The information is not available in the format requested. However, the table shows the total revenue and capital expenditure per head by organisations within the Leicestershire, Northamptonshire and Rutland strategic health authority (SHA) area.

	Revenue expenditure	Capital[1] expenditure
1997-98	541.85	18.44
2004-05	1,093.20	48.23

	£000
1997-98	836,664
2000-01	1,091,952
2004-05	1,656,267

Notes:
1. Revenue expenditure by SHA area is taken as the total expenditure of the strategic health authority, predecessor health authorities and primary care trusts within the SHA area. Capital expenditure includes NHS trusts within the area.
2. Capital expenditure is the expenditure on the purchased additions of fixed assets.
3. Levels of capital expenditure vary from year to year depending on local investment decisions.
4. Expenditure on general dental services and pharmaceutical services accounted for by the Dental Practice Board and Prescription Pricing Authority, respectively, are excluded. This expenditure cannot be included within the figures for the individual health bodies as they are not included in commissioner accounts.

Genito-Urinary Care

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the average waiting time was for an appointment at NHS genito-urinary medicine clinics in (a) England, (b) the North East and (c) the Tees Valley in each year since 1997; [71088]

(2) what measures are being taken by her Department to minimise regional variations in sexual health care. [71089]

Caroline Flint: The genito-urinary medicine (GUM) clinic waiting times audit collects data on waiting times for all GUM clinics in England for a period of one week every quarter. All patients attending a GUM clinic with a new episode or registering for the first time are asked to complete the short questionnaire on waiting times. This audit has been chosen as the method of monitoring and improving access to GUM services. Current analysis is published on numbers seen within 48 hours. The most recent survey is for February 2006 which shows that in England 51 per cent. of attendees were seen within 48 hours. This compares with 38 per cent. in May 2004, the earliest date for which figures are available.

A summary of the data is available on the Health Protection Agency's website at:

www.hpa.org.uk/infections/topics_az/hiv_and_sti/epidemiology/results_Feb_2006.htm

Sexual health and access to GUM clinics is one of the six top priorities for the national health service in 2006-07. By 2008, everyone should be offered an appointment within 48 hours of contacting a GUM clinic. Strategic health authorities have all submitted plans to meet this target.

Health Improvement Workforce Steering Group

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the work of the Health Improvement Workforce Steering Group. [67425]

Ms Rosie Winterton: "Choosing Health" points out that the changes required to deliver its objectives will only occur if the right people, with the right skills are in place to deliver them and if barriers to change and old style professional boundaries are broken down. This means developing a work force within and outside the national health service with the capacity and capability at all levels—across the wider work force, in the leadership of organisations and among public health practitioners and specialists to contribute to health improvement.

This is why in the "Choosing Health" White Paper the Department established a health improvement work force programme board which has met regularly since July 2005. The primary function of the programme board is to monitor overall delivery of "Choosing Health" workforce commitments.

Linked to the board is a stakeholder reference group, with representation from all key strands of the public health work force across a wide range of organisations.

Health Promotion Campaigns

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment she has made of the impact of her Department's health campaign to reduce the incidence of smoking; [67327]

(2) what action her Department is taking to promote health campaigns related to (a) smoking, (b) salt, (c) mental health and (d) sexual health. [67332]

Caroline Flint: Since 1998, the Government have put in place a comprehensive strategy to tackle smoking and to reduce the deaths caused by smoking. The strategy focuses on action to discourage people from ever starting and help for all smokers, of whatever age and sex, to quit. We are aiming to create a climate where non-smoking is the norm.

We have banned almost all tobacco advertising, sponsorship and promotion; introduced clear tobacco pack warnings; run highly effective national anti-smoking education campaigns raising awareness of the health damage of smoking and second-hand smoke. People who wish to give up smoking can get help from the national health service to stop smoking—a world leading programme we set up.

The House agreed, by a very large majority, to reduce exposure to second-hand smoke by ending smoking in all enclosed public places and workplaces. This will mean every pub, club, membership club, cafe, restaurant, shopping centre, office and public and work transport will be smoke-free by summer 2007.

This strategy has helped reduce smoking rates in England from 28 per cent. in 1998 to 25 per cent. in 2004 some 1.2 million fewer smokers. These are the lowest smoking rates in England on record and indicate that the Government are on track to meet the target of 21 per cent. or lower smoking prevalence in 2010.

The Food Standards Agency is leading on a salt campaign to inform consumers of the potential consequences of too much salt in the diet and what steps they can take to reduce their intake. Phase one activity took place in 2004, phase two in 2005 and consideration is now being given to a third phase.

We have promoted mental health through standard one of the national service framework for mental health; through the White Paper "Choosing Health", which promotes the physical health of those with severe mental illness through guidance to the service on models of delivery; and through up-to-date evidence-based guidance on good practice and to support those engaged in mental health promotion across the country was published in October 2005 in "Making It Possible: improving mental health and well-being in England". The White Paper "Our Health, our care, our say" represents our further commitment to making these simple messages more widely known by ensuring that mental well-being is included in the social marketing strategy currently being developed to support "Choosing Health".

We provide support for implementation of mental health promotion at local level through the National Institute for Mental Health in England (NIMHE), part of the Care Services Improvement Partnership. Over the last 12 months, NIMHE has published quarterly "Mental Health Promotion Update" newsletters to inform and motivate mental health promotion staff across the country. The Department and NIMHE are also supporting the forthcoming national men's health week organised by the men's health forum, which this year focuses on men's mental health and well-being.

Our current plans are to aim to launch a sexual health campaign later this year. This will target 16 to 34-year-old men and women but with a concentration on the key 16 to 24 year age bracket. The campaign will focus on the risks of unprotected sex and the benefits of using condoms to avoid sexually transmitted infections including HIV and unintended pregnancies.

Health Protection Agency

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what procedures exist for the Health Protection Agency to evaluate and make recommendations on measures to deal with infection control in hospitals; and how the recommendations are reported. [72731]

Caroline Flint: The Health Protection Agency is not responsible for infection control in hospitals. It carries out surveillance on behalf of the Department, provides general advice, and in collaboration with other stakeholders, carries out research and publishes recommendations on infection control. In addition, the HPA on request, advises on the control of outbreaks and incidents.

Healthy Eating

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions she has had with (a) the Department of Culture, Media and Sport and (b) Ofcom on controlling advertising aimed at children for foods high in fat, sugar and salt. [68565]

Caroline Flint: As outlined in the Choosing Health White Paper, the Department is committed to working with the broadcasting and advertising sectors on ways to help drive down levels of childhood obesity. The involvement of the Department of Culture, Media and Sport, as the sponsor Department for the broadcasting and advertising industries and Ofcom, is crucial to progressing this work and departmental officials are in regular contact with them to discuss the food promotion agenda.

My hon. Friend, the then Minister for Creative Industries and Tourism (James Purnell), and I have also met with Ofcom to discuss further restrictions around food and drink advertising and promotion to children.

Healthy Start Programme

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many low income families have been provided with vouchers under the Healthy Start programme in each of the last 12 months for which figures are available; what the cost has been of the programme; and if she will make a statement. [67413]

Caroline Flint: Phase one of Healthy Start commenced in Devon and Cornwall on 28 November 2005. The welfare food scheme continues in the rest of England, Wales and Scotland. At present approximately 9,600 families in Devon and Cornwall are receiving Healthy Start vouchers. The cost of Healthy Start vouchers and administering the scheme in Devon and Cornwall to date is approximately £1,525,000.

Further costs incurred to date are:

£33,000 for one-off training provided to selected health professionals in Devon and Cornwall;

£275,910 to develop and produce information materials to support delivery of Healthy Start; and

£117,300 for an independent rapid evaluation of the impact of phase one, including an evaluation of the effectiveness of the training for health professionals.

The evaluation of phase one of Healthy Start is still underway and will inform phase two, roll out of Healthy Start vouchers across Great Britain, in autumn 2006.

Insulin

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 2 March 2006, Official Report, column 919W, on insulin, what steps her Department is taking to reduce the number of deaths attributable to insulin overdoses. [71545]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Safer use of medicines is a key element in the Government's drive to increase the quality and safety of care in the national health service. "Building a safer NHS for patients—improving medication safety" was published in January 2004. The report stems from our commitment, first set out in "An Organisation with a Memory", to reduce the frequency of serious medication errors by 40 per cent. and sets out some of the causes of errors, including those around insulin administration, and examples of good practice to reduce risks.

Improving medication safety is also one of the National Patient Safety Agency's (NPSA) priorities. With the developing work programme of the NPSA, and as part of our overall drive to improve quality and safety of care, these recommendations will help make drug treatment safer for NHS patients.

Leisure Centres (Food/Drink Sales)

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance she has issued to local authorities on the criteria they should apply to food and drink sold at leisure centres and other sports facilities. [70184]

Caroline Flint: No formal guidance has been issued to local authorities on this topic. The Food Standards Agency (FSA) and the Department provide advice to caterers on healthier catering practice. The Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs provides some guidance on procurement through its public sector food procurement initiative and this includes the Department's and FSA's advice on healthier food provision.

Lung Cancer

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what discussions she has had with stakeholders on increasing expenditure on lung cancer research; [71737]

(2) what the terms of reference are for the National Cancer Research Institute's (NCRI) review of lung cancer research; and when she expects the NCRI to publish its report. [71738]

Caroline Flint [holding answers 18 May 2006]: The Department is working closely with its research funding partners[1] through the National Cancer Research Institute's (NCRI) strategic planning group to enhance national research efforts on lung cancer.

The aim of the lung cancer strategic planning group is to take strategic oversight of research in the field, and to identify opportunities for appropriate action by NCRI member organisations, either collaboratively or individually, in order to have maximum impact for the benefit of patients and their carers.

The group has defined its terms of reference in relation to its role, which is to answer the following questions:

How can we maximise impact for the benefit of patients and the public?

What is the past and present state of United Kingdom research in this area?

What are likely to be future demands and opportunities in the area?

Are there any obstacles to research?

If there are obstacles, what is their nature?

How can we overcome the obstacles?

What can we learn from other countries?

The NCRI expects to publish the group's report before the end of the year.

Lupus

Mr. Dunne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in (a) England and (b) Shropshire were diagnosed with lupus in (i) 2004 and (ii) 2005. [72159]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Data on the number of people diagnosed with lupus is not collected.

Maternity Services

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the procedures recently adopted for the reconfiguration proposals of existing community hospitals also apply to (a) midwife-led and (b) other maternity units. [72433]

Andy Burnham: As stated in paragraph 25 of the White Paper, 'Our health, our care, our say: a new direction for community services', the Department aims to provide more care in more local and convenient settings.

However, decision making on specific local healthcare provision, including midwife-led and other maternity units, is a matter for primary care trusts and strategic health authorities in consultation with the local population.

ME

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of the teaching of how to (a) diagnose and (b) treat myalgic encephalomyelitis in medical schools; and what steps she is taking to ensure that such teaching is improved. [70745]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Medical schools determine their own undergraduate medical curriculum in the light of recommendations from the General Medical Council's education committee, which has the statutory responsibility to determine the extent of knowledge and skill required for the granting of primary medical qualifications in the United Kingdom.

The Department does not provide direction on the content of medical school courses. Medical schools are autonomous bodies and Ministers are precluded by legislation from intervening in their internal affairs, including curriculum content.

Medical Practitioners

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research her Department has (a) commissioned and (b) undertaken into suicide and stress among medical practitioners. [51903]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department last commissioned a research project on suicide in high risk occupational groups by Keith Hawton and colleagues at the centre for suicide research, University of Oxford, in 2000. A major component of the study has been research on suicide in doctors. The research has provided valuable findings to inform policies on education, training and management of doctors. Details of this work are available at www.psychiatry.ox.ac.uk/csr/resdoctors.html.

The Department also funds regular surveys carried out by Michael Goldacre and colleagues at the UK Medical Careers Research Group, University of Oxford, which contain some questions related to stress and job satisfaction. Details of this work are available at www.uhce.ox.ac.uk/ukmcrg/MCRG_home.htm.

Mental Health

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on progress made with proposals in the NHS plan to strengthen primary care mental health services. [69732]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The NHS Plan introduced two new types of mental health workers to the national health service. At the end of March 2005, 648 graduate mental health workers, who have been trained in brief therapy techniques of proven effectiveness, were employed to help general practitioners manage and treat common mental health problems in all age groups, including children. A further 1,520 people were employed as community gateway staff to work with general practitioners and primary care teams, with NHS Direct, and in accident and emergency departments to respond to people who need immediate help. We expect to have more up to date information of the numbers of the new workers in post from the Durham adult mental health mapping database at www.amhmapping.org.uk later in the spring.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the procedure is for getting emergency medical help when a person with a serious mental health problem has a relapse; and if she will make a statement. [69789]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The care of adults of working age who are in touch with specialist mental health services is coordinated under the care programme approach (CPA). Under CPA, service users should be provided with a copy of their care plan that specifies the actions to be taken if the user becomes very ill or their mental health is rapidly deteriorating. In most areas, crisis resolution and home treatment teams provide rapid assessments of individuals with acute mental health problems and refer them to the most appropriate service. For individuals with acute, severe mental health problems for whom home treatment would be appropriate, such teams provide immediate multi-disciplinary, community based treatment 24 hours a day, seven days a week. In areas where there is no crisis resolution and home treatment provision, help is available through general practitioners, social services emergency duty teams and accident and emergency departments.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the number of children and young people with a mental health disorder in each year since 2000, broken down by (a) age, (b) sex and (c) ethnic group. [71249]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Information is not available in the form requested. The Office for National Statistics 2004 survey, "Mental health of children and young people in Great Britain", looked at the prevalence of mental health disorders. It found that in the five to 10 year old age group 10.2 per cent. of boys and 5.1 per cent. of girls has a clinically diagnosed mental disorder. In the 11 to 16 year old age group, the prevalence among boys was 12.6 per cent. and 10.3 per cent. among girls.

The survey also found the prevalence of mental disorders among the five to 16 year old age group in ethnic minorities was as follows:

	Percentage
Black	9.5
Indian	3
Pakistani	8
Other	6.5

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what public funding has been given to Samaritans in each of the last five years. [69388]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Samaritans have received a total of £701,000 from the Department in the last five years, comprised of the following annual payments:

2001-02	51,000
2002-03	155,000
2003-04	195,000
2004-05	170,000
2005-06	130,000

Mersey Care NHS Trust

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much Mersey Care NHS Trust has spent in relation to (a) the suspension of clinical administrative staff and (b) the provision of additional staff to cover the individuals currently suspended in each of the last five years; [68441]

(2) how many staff employed by Mersey Care NHS Trust are (a) subject to disciplinary action and (b) suspended from duty; and what proportion of such staff have been suspended for (i) up to six months and (ii) over six months over the last 10 years. [68442]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not held centrally.

Mesothelioma

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which primary care trusts in Hampshire fund treatment for mesothelioma with Permetrexen; and which do not. [71216]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is not held centrally. It is for primary care trusts to ensure the services they commission meet the needs of the communities that they serve.

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients were diagnosed with (a) asbestos-related illnesses and (b) mesothelioma in each primary care trust in Hampshire in each of the last five years. [71218]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is not held centrally.

National Health Service

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the countries whose Ministers or officials have expressed an interest to her in modelling their healthcare system on the national health service in the last 12 months. [64855]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not held centrally. Officials and Ministers from a number of countries have visited the national health service to exchange information and learn more about best practice in many areas of healthcare and public health in the last 12 months.

National Patient Record Spine

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she has taken to ensure that patient records available on the National Patient Record Spine will not be used by organisations or individuals bidding for NHS contracts to inform their bid unfairly. [67945]

Caroline Flint: Only properly authenticated staff directly involved in the patient's care are able to view elements of a patient's care record held in the NHS care records service (NHS CRS). Under a protocol known as role-based access control, access to a patient's care record will be limited to only as much information as is needed for the purpose of the care or other job role being performed. Access is also limited to those with a legitimate relationship with the patient. These arrangements are explained in the NHS care record guarantee, which sets out the rules that govern information held in the NHS CRS.

Anonymised information drawn from patient records has historically been, and will continue to be used, to support NHS planning, commissioning, audit and clinical governance, performance management, research and public health, subject to strict controls to ensure the confidentiality of patient-specific data. Some anonymised information will be routinely published in the form of reports by the information centre for health and social care.

NHS Direct

Frank Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many of the nurses employed by NHS Direct are disabled; and what estimate she has made of the number of disabled nurses employed by NHS Direct who will lose their jobs in the planned reorganisation. [72563]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This information is not centrally held. It may be available from the Chairman of NHS Direct Special Health Authority.

Frank Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the NHS Direct call centres to be closed; and what the location is of the centres to which calls will be transferred in each case. [72564]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The consultation document proposes that 12 sites will close over the next 18 months:

	Closure date
Doncaster	2006-07
Scunthorpe	2006-07
York	2007-08
Chester	2006-07
Bolton[1]	2006-07
Preston[1]	2006-07
Chorley	2006-07
Southport	2006-07
Cambridge	2007-08
Croydon[2]	2007-08
Kensington[3]	2007-08
Brighton	2007-08

[1] Potential for staff to transfer to the new Bolton site.
[2] Potential for staff to transfer to Beckenham.
[3] Potential for staff to transfer to Southall.

NHS Direct uses a National Intelligent Network, a virtual call centre and call streaming technology which enables calls to be answered by the next available call handler, irrespective of new location.

Frank Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the estimated saving is from the proposed reductions in staff at NHS Direct. [72565]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The proposals set out in the NHS Direct consultation document form an important element of NHS Direct's overall drive to improve performance and efficiency. The precise savings will become clearer following the outcome of the consultation process.

Frank Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the present measures of user satisfaction with NHS Direct will be continued after the proposed reorganisation. [72566]

Andy Burnham: The present measures of user satisfaction with NHS Direct will continue to be used during and after the consultation process through their monthly caller survey. NHS Direct is continuously looking at better ways of measuring user satisfaction through feedback on the quality of the service.

Frank Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether services provided by NHS Direct will be transferred to (a) the private sector and (b) abroad. [72567]

Andy Burnham: There are no plans to transfer the services provided by NHS Direct to either the private sector or abroad.

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) nurses and (b) staff are employed by NHS Direct; and how many will be employed in each category after the proposed re-organisation. [72625]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The most recently centrally collected information is shown in the following table:

National health service hospital and community health services: Non-medical staff employed by NHS Direct by main staff group as at 30 September 2005

	Headcount
All non-medical staff	3,926
Of which:
Qualified nursing, midwifery and health visiting staff	1,909

NHS Direct began a 12 week consultation with staff and staff side representatives on 16 May 2006. The consultation period is due to end on 16 August 2006. The outcomes of the consultation will be made public thereafter.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many telephone calls were dealt with by NHS Direct in each year since it came into operation. [72836]

Andy Burnham: The information requested is shown in the following table:

Availability and use of NHS Direct

	Calls received	Thousand Visits to NHS Direct Online
1998-99	110	0
1999-2000	1,650	0
2000-01	3,420	1,5001
2001-02	5,213	2,028
2002-03	6,319	3,972
2003-04	6,405	6,542
2004-05	6,506	9,285

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the measured level of user satisfaction with NHS Direct was in each year since it came into operation. [72837]

Andy Burnham: The data is not available as an annual figure, but is collected monthly by NHS Direct. The information from the monthly survey in March each year is shown in the table.

March	Patients very satisfied and satisfied (Percentage)
2002	99.2
2003	98.1
2004	98.2
2005	98.0
2006	96.6

Source:
Patient satisfaction reports—NHS Direct.

The rates for patients who are satisfied or very satisfied remain consistently high (above 95 per cent.), although the level of calls received has risen from 5,213,000 in 2001-02 to 6,810,000 in 2005-06.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consultations were carried out with the staff of NHS Direct before the recent announcement of job cuts. [72838]

Ms Rosie Winterton: NHS Direct has commenced a 12-week consultation with staff on proposals to improve performance and efficiency. Information on any prior consultation with staff is not held by the Department but may be available from the Chairman of NHS Direct.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will set out the timetable for the review of NHS Direct. [71549]

Ms Rosie Winterton: As part of the Department's review of arm's length bodies, NHS Direct is to change its status from a special health authority to a national health service trust from April 2007 with the objective of becoming a NHS foundation trust from April 2008 or as soon as possible thereafter. NHS Direct is also changing the way it operates so that it can respond to the needs of people for advice and support in the most appropriate and cost efficient way. On 16 May it began a three-month consultation with staff on proposed changes to its management structures, skill mix and its call centre.

NHS Finance

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the effect of NHS primary care trust budget deficits on the funding of local area agreements with local councils. [66287]

Andy Burnham: Local area agreements (LAAs) are based on a number of area-specific funding streams. NHS funding is not one of these, but can be aligned locally at the decision of the primary care trust (PCT) and the strategic health authority (SHA). PCTs and SHAs have played a key role in developing the LAAs, and this is reflected in the enthusiasm and commitment with which local partners have approached health and social care outcomes within the LAA. LAAs have proved valuable in improving the efficiency and targeting of resources, developing new ways of working and agreeing a joint approach with a range of local partners to addressing local issues.

With the record levels of funding available to NHS bodies, they should all have sufficient resources to invest in national and local priorities. Where appropriate, this includes arrangements for joint working with local authorities.

NHS Logistics

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether she is placing a requirement on bidders to take over NHS Logistics to maintain all the current distribution centre; and whether such a commitment has been made. [72705]

Andy Burnham: The preferred bidder has indicated that they will take over all the current distribution centres. Their proposals indicate that they will maintain these distribution centres for the foreseeable future. There are no plans to close any of the current distribution centres over the life of the contract.

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if the Minister of State will fulfil the promise made by her predecessor to visit an NHS logistics distribution centre to discuss its operation and future plans with management and staff before reaching any decisions on the future of NHS logistics; [72706]

(2) if she will meet hon. Members representing constituents who work in NHS Logistics sites before any final decision is reached on its future. [72707]

Andy Burnham: I am happy to visit one of the distribution centres before any contract is awarded and have initiated the process to set this up.

Although my predecessors have met with hon. Members representing constituents who work in NHS Logistics sites on a number of occasions, I am prepared to meet them as well.

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether her Department has received reports of changes to the business case for outsourcing NHS Logistics and the NHS consumables supply chain during discussions with DHL/Novation; and if she will make a statement. [72708]

Andy Burnham: There have been no such reports. In March 2006, Ministers approved the full business case for the outsourcing of NHS Logistics and related parts of NHS Purchasing and Supplies Agency. Subject to final negotiation a contract could be awarded to DHL/Novation.

These final negotiations are still in hand. Once they have been completed, I will be made aware of any changes to the business case that are material.

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the likely job losses (a) in NHS Logistics and (b) in total if the NHS consumables supply chain is outsourced. [72709]

Andy Burnham: Details of known implications for staff will be included in the letter of intent from the bidders as part of the formal consultation process. This letter of intent is known as the measures letter.

We cannot be more specific at this point due to continuing commercial negotiations.

NHS Staff (Attacks)

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people were (a) refused treatment and (b) prosecuted for verbal and physical attacks on NHS staff in (i) England and (ii) the Royal Shrewsbury hospital in 2004-05. [64283]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information is not collected centrally on the number of people who have been refused treatment because they have verbally or physically attacked national health service staff or on the number of prosecutions for those people who have verbally attacked NHS staff. In 2004-05, 759 people were prosecuted for assaults on NHS staff.

NHS Staff Turnover

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the annual cost of staff turnover in the NHS in each of the last five years. [73108]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not held centrally

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many and what proportion of NHS staff in each health care profession left the service and had to be replaced in the last year for which figures are available. [73109]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not collected centrally for all health care professions. However, the number of joiners and leavers in the general practitioner workforce are tracked as part of the national health service workforce census.

In 2004 (the last year for which complete figures are available), 1,649 practitioners (excluding GP registrars and GP retainers) left the NHS in England. This equated to 5.2 per cent. of the practitioner workforce. In the same year, 2,930 practitioners (excluding GP registrars and GP retainers) joined the workforce. This equated to 9.3 per cent. of the workforce. The information collected shows only the numbers and proportion of leavers and joiners, it does not specify which of the leavers had to be replaced.

This information is not currently available for any other staff groups working in the NHS.

NHS Work Force

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the job title of each category of non-clinical job within the NHS in each strategic health authority area. [67947]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This information is not collected centrally.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what changes to job titles have occurred within each strategic health authority area in the last two years. [67948]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what changes to job coding in the NHS workforce census were made between (a) 2003-04 and 2004-05 and (b) 2004-05 and 2005-06. [67946]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: National health service workforce census uses the occupation code manual as the basis for coding the jobs of staff. The census is run recording the position of the NHS workforce at the end of September. NHS organisations require 6 months notice of any changes made to the occupation code manual before they become mandatory in the census. Changes to the occupation code manual are announced through the publication of a data set change notice (DSCN).

The following DSCNs have relevance to the NHS workforce census and were issued between 1 May 2003 and 30 of April 2006. They are as follows:

DSCN 23/2003—which was issued in June 2003

(i) Introduction of new codes for:

qualified school nurses and other nurses working in school nursing healthcare scientists working in: life sciences / pathology; physiological sciences; clinical engineering and physical sciences; and other healthcare science professions.

(ii) Deletion of scientific, therapeutic and technical codes rendered obsolete by the introduction of the new Healthcare Science codes above—in medical physics, pathology and physiological measurement.

DSCN 26/2004—which was issued in November 2004

(i) Introduction of new codes for: assistant practitioners, occupational therapy technicians and instructor/teachers in speech and language therapy.

(ii) Closure of scientist in clinical psychology and guidance for re coding assistant psychologists.

(iii) Improved guidance for: Emergency care practitioners, administrative managers, locums, pre-registration house offices, NHS Direct nursing, cadet nursing and nursing auxiliary, mental health workers.

DSCN 07/2005—which was issued in May 2005

(i) Introduction of a new specialty code for sports and exercise medicine for medical staff.

(ii) Introduction of codes for modern matrons and community matrons

(iii) Improved guidance for non-executives, general definitions for nurses and suggested re-coding for carer support workers.

DSCN 06/2006—which was issued in March 2006

(i) Recoding of ambulance matrix to allow greater level of detail.

(ii) Introduction of codes to track community matrons distinct from modern matrons.

Norfolk, Suffolk and Cambridgeshire Strategic Health Authority

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what meetings she has had with officials concerning primary care trusts in the Norfolk, Suffolk and Cambridgeshire strategic health authority area. [68928]

Andy Burnham [holding answer 8 May 2006]: There have been no specific meetings between departmental officials and my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State to discuss Norfolk, Suffolk and Cambridge. However, a range of meetings with officials to discuss primary care trust reconfiguration have taken place, which as a matter of course will have included discussions on Norfolk, Suffolk and Cambridge.

Northamptonshire Heartlands PCT

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much funding has been allocated to Northamptonshire Heartlands Primary Care Trust for the 2006-07 financial year; how much was allocated in each of the previous five years; how much is expected to be allocated in each of the next five years; and what percentage each figure represents of the Government's national standard amount in each year. [68957]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Revenue allocations were first made to primary care trusts (PCTS) in 2003-04. Prior to this, funding was allocated to health authorities (HAs).

The information requested is shown in the following table:

	Northamptonshire HA			Northamptonshire Heartlands PCT			England
	Allocation (£ million)	Allocation per head (£)	Allocation per head relative to England average (Percentage)	Allocation (£ million)	Allocation per head (£)	Allocation per head relative to England average (Percentage)	Allocation (£ million)	Allocation per head (£)

2006-07	—	—	—	336	1,196	94	64,309	1,274
2007-08	—	—	—	377	1,330	96	70,354	1,388

Notes
It is not possible to compare allocations rounds for the following reasons:
organisational changes and changes made to the weighted capitation formula for each allocations round, mean that comparisons between allocations rounds would not be on a like with like basis; services for which PCTs are responsible for funding change over time. For example, 2006-07 is the first year that primary medical services were incorporated into revenue allocations.
Allocations are informed by a weighted capitation formula. No decision yet has been made on revenue allocations post 2007-08.

Nursing

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been spent on agency nurses by (a) the Epsom and St. Helier University Hospitals NHS Trust and (b) St. Helier Hospital in each year since 1997. [71325]

Caroline Flint: The data requested are collected at trust level. Details on agency nursing spend figures for the Epsom and St. Helier University Hospitals National Health Service Trust is shown in the table.

Obesity

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the levels of obesity in (a) children and (b) adults were in each year since 1997. [71383]

Caroline Flint: The main source of data on the prevalence of obesity is the Health Survey for England (HSE). Table one and two present the most recent available data on the prevalence of obesity in children and adults, between 1997 and 2004.

Table one refers to the obesity prevalence among children aged two to 15 and table two reports the obesity prevalence among adults aged 16 and over.

Older People's Care

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the degree of independence older people have living (a) in a care home and (b) in their own home. [70131]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information needed to make this assessment is not held centrally. The Government's policy is to support people to live in their own homes, as long as it is safe to do so and accords with their wishes and assessed needs.

The White Paper, 'Our health, our care, our say: a new direction for community services', was published on Monday 30 January 2006. The White Paper sets out a new direction for improving the health and well-being of the population and focuses on a strategic shift to locate more services in local communities that are closer to people's homes. It is the product of two consultations; the adult social care Green Paper, 'Independence, Well-being and Choice', published in March 2005 and the listening exercise, 'Your health, your care, your say', which took place between September and November 2005.

The Green Paper, which is available in the Library, sets out our vision for the future of social care. It was followed by a wide-ranging consultation, involving people who use services, carers, stakeholders and the general public. The total number of people directly involved in the consultation is estimated to have been 100,000. The results, published in October 2005, are available in the Library and show that over three quarters of people wish to live in their own homes, with help, such as adaptations to properties, assistive technology and domiciliary care services being provided if necessary.

Packaged Food

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress she has made in reducing the (a) salt, (b) fat and (c) sugar content of packaged foods. [71440]

Caroline Flint: The Food Standards Agency (FSA) and the Department, working with the food industry, have made significant progress towards reducing the salt content of foods. Voluntary targets for salt reduction were published in March 2006 which will achieve real reductions in consumers intakes, while also being challenging for the industry. Scope for further reductions will be considered in 2008 to ensure continued progress towards the Government's target of a maximum population average intake of six grams of salt a day.

The FSA and the Department are currently in discussion with stakeholders to develop a strategy for reducing levels of saturated fat in packaged foods, and to help consumers maintain energy balance.

Patient/Public Involvement

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many members of patients forums have resigned since 1 December 2003; and what percentage turnover in membership this represents. [71544]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 17 May 2006]: The commission for patient and public involvement in health has only collected figures since November 2004. From November 2004 to date, 2,710 patient forum members have resigned and have subsequently been replaced. At May 2006, there are currently 4,353 forum members. This represents a 62 per cent. turnover.

Perfluorooctane Sulphonate

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance (a) her Department and (b) the Health Protection Agency has issued on the use of perfluorooctane sulphonate to tackle fires. [70731]

Caroline Flint: Neither the Department nor the Health Protection Agency has issued advice on the use of perfluorooctane sulphonate in tackling fires.

PFOS was used as an ingredient in two particular fire fighting foam concentrate ranges up until 2003 when production by the main manufacturer ceased following the evidence to suggest that it is harmful to both the environment and humans. I understand from the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs that the stocks of foams based on PFOS are diminishing but it is likely that some fire and rescue services do still hold some stocks. NCI Director's Consumer Liaison Group, jointly with the Environment Agency, will shortly be issuing guidance to the fire and rescue services requesting them to no longer use PFOS based foams and instead to consider the use of alternatives once they are satisfied the performance of these alternatives meets their needs.

Physiotherapy

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment she has made of the adequacy of places on physiotherapy courses in universities to meet the number of vacancies within the profession; and what recent discussions she has had on filling such vacancies with (a) careers advisers and (b) educational establishments. [68292]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department collects information on the number of university places commissioned by the national health service for physiotherapy students. This is used by the NHS work force review team as part of their analysis of and recommendations on future work force requirements. The commissioning for these programmes is the responsibility of local NHS organisations, who consider a range of local factors including vacancies, resources and the NHS work force review team's recommendations.

Discussions with careers advisers and educational establishments are held at local level between NHS organisations, their physiotherapy service managers and higher education institution representatives.

Pre-registration Nursing Courses

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people are enrolled on pre-registration nursing courses; how many were enrolled in each of the previous four years; and if she will make a statement. [72748]

Andy Burnham: Information on the number of people enrolled on pre-registration nurse training courses is shown in the following table:

	Number
2002-03	58,900
2003-04	64,995
2004-05	70,210
2005-06	72,930
2006-07 Forecast	73,670

Primary Care Trusts

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much funding was allocated to each primary care trust in England in each year since 2001. [64306]

Andy Burnham: Revenue allocations were first made to primary care trusts (PCTs) in 2003-04. Prior to this, funding was allocated to health authorities (HAs). The funding allocated to each HA for 2001-02 and 2002-03 and to each PCT for 2003-04 to 2007-08 in England has been placed in the Library.

Mrs. Maria Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what criteria were used to determine the size of the reorganised primary care trusts announced on 16 May. [72490] secure high quality, safe services;

Andy Burnham: Proposals for primary care trust (PCT) reconfiguration were assessed against eight criteria.

improve health and reduce inequalities;

improve the engagement of GPs and roll-out of Practice Based Commissioning with demonstrable practice support; improve public involvement;

improve commissioning and effective use of resources;

manage financial balance and risk;

improve co-ordination with social services through greater congruence of PCT and local government boundaries; and deliver at least 15 per cent. reduction in management and administrative costs.

These criteria were set out by the Department in July 2005 in 'Commissioning a patient led NHS'. Strategic health authorities consulted widely with stakeholders on reconfiguration. Options for PCTs and Ministers considered carefully the views expressed in making final decisions that balanced views expressed and the criteria.

School Nurses

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many primary care trusts have at least one full-time, year round qualified school nurse for each cluster or group of primary schools and related secondary school; if she will list the primary care trusts which do not have such provision; and if she will make a statement. [67412]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The September 2005 census showed that there were 2,887 (1,913 full-time equivalent (fte)) qualified nurses working in the school nursing service, an increase of 478 (19.8 per cent.) since 2004.

Of these 943 (665 fte) have a post registration school nursing qualification, an increase of 87 (10 per cent.) since 2004.

Data on the number of full-time qualified school nurses by primary care trust have been placed in the Library.

Sexual Health

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate the Department has made of the number of people in each region in England with undiagnosed (a) HIV/AIDS, (b) Chlamydia, (c) gonorrhoea, (d) hepatitis B and (e) syphilis. [67189]

Caroline Flint: Data on the estimated number of undiagnosed HIV infections for all adults in the United Kingdom is shown in the following table.

Results from screening asymptomatic sexually active young people, aged less than 25 years, through the national Chlamydia screening programme indicate that up to one in 10 of the target population are infected with Chlamydia. This indicates a high level of undetected genital Chlamydia infection in young sexually active people.

There are no estimates of the number of cases of undiagnosed gonorrhoea in England. It is thought that while the majority of infections among men are symptomatic, a significant proportion are asymptomatic and therefore more likely to remain undiagnosed. The proportion of asymptomatic infections is higher among women.

There are no estimates on undiagnosed cases of hepatitis B in England.

Suicidality

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will publish the research undertaken by Government agencies on the effects of certain drugs on suicidality. [69942]

Andy Burnham: The Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) has published research into the effect of selective serotonin reuptake inhibitors (SSRIs) on suicidal thoughts and behaviour. The report of the committee on safety of medicines expert working group on the safety of SSRIs was published on 6 December 2004 and is available on the MHRA's website at www.mhra.gov.uk. A copy is available in the Library. The MHRA is committed to publishing the research which underpins its decisions on safety of medicines.

Tuberculosis

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what plans the Government have to change screening arrangements for tuberculosis at United Kingdom (a) ports and (b) airports; and if she will make a statement; [67429]

(2) how many X-ray machines for tuberculosis screening are located at each United Kingdom (a) port and (b) airport; and if she will make a statement; [67430]

(3) how many immigrants were (a) screened for and (b) found to have tuberculosis in each of the last 12 months for which figures are available; and if she will make a statement; [67431]

(4) how many follow-up health checks were conducted on immigrants to the United Kingdom in each year since 1997; and if she will make a statement; [67432]

(5) what action she plans to take in response to the Health Protection Agency's report on screening arrangements for tuberculosis at United Kingdom points of entry; and if she will make a statement. [67435]

Caroline Flint: The Immigration Act 1971 gives immigration officers the power to refer people who are subject to immigration control and who are seeking entry to the United Kingdom to a medical inspector for a medical examination. The immigration officer may take the findings of the medical examination into account when deciding whether to admit the person to the UK.

The long-standing policy of successive Governments are that people who come from a country with a high annual incidence rate of tuberculosis (over 40 cases of TB per 100,000 population) and who are seeking leave to enter the UK for more than six months and port asylum claimants should routinely be referred for medical examination. In addition, immigration officers should refer for medical examination anyone who appears ill, or who mentions health or illness as a reason for coming to the UK. Because of the large numbers of travellers passing through Heathrow and Gatwick airports, there are three x-ray machines at Heathrow and one at Gatwick for taking chest x-rays.

The time pressures at points of entry mean that it is not possible, even where x-ray machines are available, to carry out there all the tests that would be desirable, or to make firm diagnoses of TB. That is why long-standing policy is that checks carried out at points of entry should be followed up by the national health service. This was reinforced by the "NICE TB Clinical Guidelines" published on the 22 March 2006, which make clear recommendations to the NHS to identify new entrants for TB screening from port of arrival reports (that is, information from medical inspectors), new registrations with primary care, entry to education (including universities) and links with statutory and voluntary groups working with new entrants. The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence also have provided screening protocols and toolkits for the NHS for new entrant screening. The Department does not routinely collect figures from points of entry on the numbers of immigrants screened for TB. Follow up health checks on immigrants may take a variety of forms, in a variety of settings, and are not identified as such in statistics about NHS activity.

As announced in February 2005, in the Home Office's five-year asylum and immigration strategy "Controlling our Borders" (Cm 6742), the Government plan to increase the number of routine TB checks that are done abroad. Checks overseas can be more thorough than those that can be made under pressure of time at points of entry, and those found to have infectious TB are required to complete treatment before entry clearance to the UK is granted. Phase one of this overseas programme began in autumn 2005 has been operational in six countries (Bangladesh, Cambodia, Laos, Sudan, Tanzania and Thailand) since spring 2006. Phase two is planned to start later in 2006.

The Department and the Home Office commissioned a review of the operational arrangements made at points of entry in England both for medical examinations under the Immigration Act and for discharging responsibilities under the Public Health (Aircraft), (Ships) and (International Trains) Regulations with a view to strengthening those arrangements. (Responsibility for the health input into operational arrangements at points of entry in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland rests with the Scottish Ministers, National Assembly for Wales, and Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety in Northern Ireland). The review was carried out by a project team led by the Health Protection Agency (HPA) and with Home Office representation. Their report is on the Agency's website at www.hpa.org.uk/porthealth/default.htm. Specific actions relevant to medical examinations under the Immigration Act 1971 that are being taken in the light of the review are that:

the Department will continue, as already planned, with an evaluation of the effectiveness of routine TB checks, both overseas and at points of entry;

the HPA will take the overall operational lead at points of entry in England to ensure that there are appropriate operational arrangements for medical examinations under the Immigration Act 1971, ensuring that this and appropriate supporting actions are reflected in its business plan;

the Home Office will take forward with appropriate consultation a proposal that the accommodation needed for medical examinations under the Immigration Act should be provided free of charge; update the relevant Immigration Directorate Instructions; and survey the impact that advice from those who carry out medical examinations has on the entry decisions taken by immigration officers; and the Department and the Home Office will seek an opportunity to modernise the legislation on medical examinations under the Immigration Act, giving the responsibility for carrying out examinations to a body with health functions (such as the HPA) rather than to individually appointed medical inspectors.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps the Government is taking to ensure that information on how to receive the BCG vaccination is available following the decision to end the school-based vaccination programme. [71486]

Caroline Flint: The Chief Medical Officer announced changes to the Bacillus Calmette-Guerin (BCG) programme via a letter to the medical profession and primary care trusts on 6 July 2005. In support of these changes an updated leaflet, factsheet, and poster were produced and sent directly to the groups listed above. All of these resources were aimed at raising awareness of tuberculosis (TB), and also informing health professionals and the general public alike, of the changes to BCG policy. All these resources were also made available to order free of charge via the Department publications line.

The 6 July 2005 policy changes also meant that the tuberculin skin test was given in a different way, with the Mantoux test replacing the Heaf test. The Department produced a flip chart and DVD for training purposes. These were made available to order free of charge via the Department publications line and sent directly to all TB clinics. Following these changes, the Department held a meeting of immunisation co-ordinators who are responsible for implementation of the BCG programme within their localities. The public information materials were shared with the co-ordinators and their views obtained.

The Department has also carried out public awareness testing on matters relating to TB and its control, and all information materials on TB and BCG are pre-tested with members of the public.

Terminal Illness

Mr. Newmark: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in (a) Witham, Braintree and Halstead Primary Care Trust area and (b) England were diagnosed with a terminal illness in 2004-05; and how many of these were given a life expectancy of less than 12 months for each area. [60460]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Trans Fatty Acids

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the health effects of trans fatty acids. [71439]

Caroline Flint: The Government are aware of the health effects of consuming certain fats, including trans fatty acids (TFAs), particularly on coronary health.

An assessment in 2004 by the European Food Safety Authority (EFSA) agreed with earlier conclusions of the United Kingdom's committee on medical aspects of food policy that TFAs may increase risk of coronary heart disease by raising blood cholesterol levels.

Uttlesford Primary Care Trust

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the financial position of the Uttlesford primary care trust. [68431]

Andy Burnham: For 2005-06 at month six, Uttlesford primary care trust is forecasting a net year-end deficit of £1.2 million.

Waiting Times

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many patients are waiting for dialysis at Dorset county hospital; [68306]

(2) what the longest time is for which a patient has been waiting for dialysis at Dorset county hospital. [68308]

Caroline Flint: Dialysis is an emergency treatment for patients with established renal failure, therefore patients are given immediate priority treatment as soon as possible following diagnosis.

The Dorset and Somerset strategic health authority has advised officials that there is a robust plan in place to increase dialysis capacity in Dorset by an additional 60 dialysis stations. The plan is being overseen by a renal programme implementation team, which includes clinical, patient and carer representatives.

Part of the proposals include the development of a new renal unit at Alderney community hospital. Other options include investigating potential alternative national health service sites and the use of a private sector unit. In addition, West Dorset general hospitals NHS trust is developing an interim capacity plan to ensure patients requiring renal dialysis receive appropriate treatment.

Ann Keen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the change in patient waiting times in the constituency of Brentford and Isleworth since 1997. [71095]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: It is for the local national health service to assess patient waiting times in the local area and to ensure that waiting time targets are met.

The table shows the number of patients waiting by time bands for the quarter ending March 1997 to March 2006 for Hounslow primary care trust (PCT), Ealing PCT and Hammersmith and Fulham PCT including the Ealing, Hammersmith and Hounslow Health Authority (HA) which existed before the creation of the PCTs.

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of waiting times for (a) speech therapy and (b) cataract operations; and if she will make a statement. [72283]

Andy Burnham: As speech and language therapy is not a consultant-led speciality, data on waiting times for this treatment are not centrally available.

The official figures on waiting times show the length of time that people currently on the list for treatment have been waiting. Those data is collected at consultant led speciality level, for example ophthalmology. It is not possible to split those data down to show waiting list data for specific operations, for example cataract operations. Therefore, the information requested is not centrally available.

However, a different source of information can be used to provide an approximate measure of the times that patients have waited for admission for specific operations such as those relating to cataracts. The most up-to-date data are for 2004-05 which are shown in the table.

Work Permit Regulations

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether the NHS will pay the work permit charges of trainee doctors from the Commonwealth; [64675]

(2) whether hospitals employing large numbers of Commonwealth doctors will be allocated extra funding to pay for new work permits. [65033]

Ms Rosie Winterton: It is the responsibility of any employer to pay for applications for work permits. No specific funding will be allocated to national health service trusts for work permits but primary care trust allocations are increasing by about 20 per cent. in 2006-07 and 2007-08.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will take steps to ensure that doctors from overseas who graduated from a UK medical school are allowed to complete all their training in the NHS. [66842]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has been working with the Home Office to put in place transitional arrangements. Those doctors and dentists who were offered a relevant training post before the changes were announced will be given the opportunity to complete their training.

Doctors from outside the European Economic Area who have graduated in the United Kingdom will have up to three years to complete their foundation training. Once the foundation course has been completed doctors will need to meet the normal requirements of the immigration rules.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consultation she held with (a) the British Medical Association, (b) organisations representing immigrant doctors and (c) hospital trusts on the recent changes to immigration rules affecting doctors. [65014]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The immigration rules for postgraduate doctors and dentists (permit-free training) were amended in July 2005. Since then officials have been discussing with the Conference of Postgraduate Medical Deans, the British Medical Association's junior doctors committee and organisations representing overseas doctors the arrangements for those already in training and to agree what further guidance and clarification is needed to deal with the new arrangements.

The Department has been working closely with NHS Employers to provide guidance to the national health service.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the impact of the new immigration regulations on the provision of locums. [65030]

Ms Rosie Winterton: No assessment has been made of the impact of the new immigration regulations on the provision of locums. The practice of employing locum doctors under the old permit-free training rules was a misuse of the system and no substitute for good work force planning.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Health Department what steps she is taking (a) to protect the position of and (b) to encourage the employment of medical graduates from the Commonwealth in the NHS from adverse effects of the new work permit requirements. [65056]

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps her Department is taking to assist non-EU doctors affected by changes to the work permit regulations. [65677]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has been working with the Home Office to put in place transitional arrangements. Those doctors and dentists who were offered a relevant training post before the changes were announced will be given the opportunity to complete their training.

Overseas doctors and dentists will still be able to come and train in the United Kingdom. They will now be considered as being in employment for immigration purposes and will need to meet the requirements of an employment category of the immigration rules.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which organisations were consulted by her Department concerning the effects on medical staff of changes to the work permit regulations due to come into force in July. [65675]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The immigration rules for postgraduate doctors and dentists (permit-free training) were first amended in July 2005. Since then officials have been discussing with the Conference of Postgraduate Medical Deans, the British Medical Association's junior doctors committee and organisations representing overseas doctors the arrangements for those already in training and to agree what further guidance and clarification is needed to deal with further changes that came into operation on 3 April 2006.

The Department has been working closely with NHS Employers to provide guidance to the national health service, including transitional arrangements.

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on her discussions with the British Medical Association regarding the impact of the work permit regulations affecting non-EU doctors which comes into force in July. [69756]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Departmental officials have been working closely with the junior doctors committee of the British Medical Association (BMA) since the changes to the immigration rules in July 2005. The Department continues to discuss with the BMA the arrangements for those already in training and to agree what further guidance and clarification is needed to deal with the new arrangements.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Asbestos Removal

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much public money was spent on the removal of asbestos from buildings identified as unsafe in each of the last three years in each parliamentary constituency in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [69653]

Mr. Hanson: In the last three years some 97,000 Work Orders were issued for Maintenance, Minor Works and Major Capital Refurbishment Projects at Government buildings, totalling approximately £174 million in respect of estimated work value. Asbestos removal work would be an item on many of these orders. It is not possible to determine the full extent of any asbestos removals with any degree of accuracy without incurring disproportionate costs.

Asbestos was, in the past, routinely used in construction by the building industry and as such, many of the older properties in the Government Estate contain this material.

In late 1987, a plan of action was instigated to prepare Asbestos Registers for many properties within the Government Estate. Asbestos Surveys commenced from 1988 onwards, involving over 1,000 properties, many of which are currently known to contain Asbestos Containing Materials (ACMs). Each Asbestos Register records the precise location, use, type and condition of all ACMs known to be present.

In the intervening years, these Asbestos Registers have been maintained through various programmes of inspections, including the introduction of effective management and control procedures. These actions have maintained Government properties in a safe and occupiable condition, ensuring that any recorded ACMs present at each location do not present any significant risk to the health and safety of staff employed there or the visiting public.

The Health and Safety Executive (NI) advises that asbestos is dangerous only if fibres are released into the atmosphere. There is no requirement to remove such ACMs if they are in good condition and unlikely to be disturbed. The HSE (NI) further advises that, where possible, ACMs should be left undisturbed, but that their presence should be effectively managed. Where ACMs are deemed in poor condition and require removal, such action is undertaken by specialist Asbestos Removal Contractors accredited by the HSE (NI), using a recognised and legislatively compliant safe system of work. Such work is also notifiable to the HSE (NI).

Government Departments do not, therefore, have a general plan to remove asbestos from their buildings, but will remove such materials where regular inspections dictate such a recommendation.

Asbestos removals, where not deemed necessary through regular inspections, i.e. as a result of planned disturbance, are normally carried out as an integral part of ongoing Maintenance, Minor Works or Major Capital Refurbishment Projects.

BBC Northern Ireland

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what meetings he has had with the Controller of BBC Northern Ireland. [34562]

Mr. Hain: I must apologise to the hon. Member for the delay in responding, owing to an administrative error with the Department. Steps have been taken to prevent a recurrence.

I have met the Controller of BBC Northern Ireland on two occasions since becoming Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Child Sex Abuse

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 19 April 2006, Official Report, column 723W, on child sex abuse, in what way the new database will trace offender clusters; how it will alert the authorities to the appearance of offender clusters; in what way offender clusters have traditionally been monitored; and how many people have been identified by way of offender clusters in each of the past three years for which there are records. [69245]

Paul Goggins: As stated in the answer to the hon. Gentleman of 23 March 2006, the Police Service of Northern Ireland is continuing to monitor the development of a new database by the UK's Police Information Technology Organisations. They have confirmed that neither this system nor the Case Administration and Tracking System will be able to identify offender clusters as they are both victim based systems.

The National Intelligence Model currently uses the Integrated Crime Information System to monitor offender clusters. This model delivers the intelligence and analysis to enable audits to be conducted on all crime related issues and to identify and determine any response to offender clusters.

No records are available for the number of people identified by way of offender clusters.

Coeliac Disease

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he is taking to ensure that general practitioners receive more appropriate training and support to enable them better to recognise and more accurately to diagnose coeliac disease. [72512]

Paul Goggins: A range of assessment tools are employed, by the Northern Ireland medical and dental training agency (NIMDTA), to determine the continuing professional development and training needs of general practitioners. The Department is issuing the recently published CREST guidelines for the diagnosis and management of coeliac disease in adults to health professionals in the HPSS and all GPs including locums, to assist with better recognition and more accurate diagnosis of the disease. NIMDTA will take account of the relevance of this work in identifying the future training needs of GPs.

Competitiveness

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the effect of (a) the cost of electricity and (b) industrial de-rating on the competitiveness of the Northern Ireland economy. [71309]

Maria Eagle: The Cost of Doing Business Survey published by the Economic Research Institute for Northern Ireland (ERINI) in December 2005 concluded that, on balance, business costs in Northern Ireland are relatively competitive when compared to GB and the Republic of Ireland. While some elements such as energy and insurance costs were found to be higher in Northern Ireland than in GB, these 'uncompetitive' costs together make up only a small proportion of business turnover.

Industrial de-rating should not add significantly to the cost burden of manufacturing. In 2004 turnover in manufacturing was around £13.7 billion and even if rates liabilities had to be met in full (which is not due to happen until 2011) this would represent less than 0.4 per cent. of this level of turnover. In addition, the revenues raised will enable significant investment in priority public services, which will benefit the economy. A policy review of industrial de-rating will take place in 2007 which will look at both its impact on manufacturers and also the implications for budgets and future levels of planned public expenditure.

Departmental Communications

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many and what percentage of communications from members of the public to the Northern Ireland Office were made by (a) post, (b) telephone and (c) email during 2004. [34446]

Mr. Hain: Information regarding telephone calls and emails is not held centrally however the NIO Departmental Report 2005, Appendix 1 Six Service Standards for Central Government sets out details of letters received from the public during 2004 as shown in the following table.

	Number of letters received
NIO Core	2,292
Northern Ireland Prison Service	929
Forensic Science Northern Ireland	157
The Compensation Agency	97,141
Public Prosecution Service	50

Disabled People

Tom Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on his Department's progress in fulfilling its statutory obligation as a public body of promoting the rights of disabled people. [66011]

Mr. Hain: As a general principle the Northern Ireland Office (NIO) fulfils its statutory obligation as a public body for promoting the rights of disabled people through its equality scheme set up under Section 75 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998 which has disability as an equality category. The Department is presently reviewing its Equality Scheme and is in consultation with the Disability Commission to determine what if any additional measures need to be incorporated to meet the requirements of the Disability Discrimination Act 2005.

At a practical level the NIO has developed it arrangements to support disabled people.

A textphone service is available in the Department to allow people with hearing or speech disabilities to make contact with us.

Arrangements for disabled people attending NIO events (e.g. Hillsborough Garden Party) have been reviewed recently in accordance with best practice guidelines on making events accessible.

We are committed to widening the diversity of the people who sit on NIO public bodies: attracting and appointing more disabled people is a key element of this aim. Public appointment opportunities are circulated to 140 community groups and 1,400 individuals who have expressed an interest in applying for public appointments in Northern Ireland.

The NIO participates in the Employment Support Scheme, run by the Department of Employment and Learning, which gives people whose disabilities would make it difficult for them to compete for and retain jobs in the open labour market the opportunity to work alongside non-disabled people.

Within the Department a number of initiatives have concentrated on better facilities for staff with disabilities which include:

A new IT System where provision was considered for disability including the appropriate software required for members of staff with sight impairment. Measures were also considered during the extensive training programme.

A bursary scheme for staff with disabilities targeted at those with the potential to reach Grade A. This scheme provides the bursary holder with targeted training, placements and a SCS mentor to assist them develop the competences needed to aim for promotion.

Promoting a working environment in the Department which actively challenges prejudice in relation to disability. This is done by raising awareness of disability issues through publicising good employment practice and the provision of disability awareness training.

The provision of a Disabled Persons' Liaison Officer to liaise with disabled staff and managers to ensure that jobs are adapted to the specific needs of individuals such as - adjustments to premises to alleviate access problems, reorganising the duties of a post to suit a particular disability, to organise the transfer of staff to a particular post suited to their disability, altering the working hours of an individual to facilitate rehabilitation or treatment, provision of information to suit the needs of staff with visual disabilities i.e. conversion to Braille, acquiring or adapting office equipment, the provision of sign language interpreters for staff with hearing difficulties and facilitation of a disability network group which is self run by disabled NIO staff who meet regularly to discuss issues affecting disabled staff in the Department.

Dissident Republican Paramilitaries

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to the answer of 19 April 2006, Official Report, column 724W, on dissident republican paramilitaries, whether the publication of the eighth report of the independent monitoring commission provided him with information on dissident republican paramilitary recruitment of which he had not previously been in possession. [70461]

Paul Goggins: In his answers of 27 February, 16 March 2006 and 19 April 2006, my right hon. Friend the Member for St. Helens, South (Mr. Woodward) advised that the recently published IMC report indicated that there is evidence that dissident republican groups are attempting to recruit members. Mr. Woodward based his information on the eighth IMC report which was published on 1 February 2006.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to the answer of 19 April 2006, Official Report, column 724W, on dissident republican paramilitaries, whether the independent monitoring commission had access to security sources in preparing its eighth report that he does not have. [70489]

Paul Goggins: The role of the independent monitoring commission is to help promote the establishment of stable and inclusive devolved Government in a peaceful Northern Ireland. It reports to the Government on inter alia activity by paramilitary groups and the normalisation of security measures. My right hon. Friend the Member for St. Helens, South (Mr. Woodward), based his assessments on the IMC reports.

Female Prisoners

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many female convicted prisoners there were in Northern Ireland on 1 January (a) 2001 and (b) 2006. [65925]

Paul Goggins: On 1 January 2001 there were nine female sentenced prisoners. On 1 January 2006 there were 10 female sentenced prisoners.

Invest Northern Ireland

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the written statement of 10 May 2006, Official Report, column 20WS, on Northern Ireland (Future Garrison Structure), whether Invest Northern Ireland plans to take steps to promote employment opportunities in the East Londonderry constituency. [72623]

Maria Eagle: Invest NI's role is to increase competitiveness in its client companies by helping them become more entrepreneurial, innovative and capable of operating in export markets. Investment in business competitiveness leads to greater wealth-creation and better employment opportunities for all. This was seen, for example, in last year's reinvestment by Seagate where Invest NI worked in partnership with the company to create 300 additional jobs in the area. The agency will continue to pursue all such opportunities within its client base.

Since 2003 Invest NI has secured over £240 million of investment into the North West promoting over 1,100 new jobs. During the last financial year the Agency secured agreements for three new Foreign Direct Investment projects to be based in the North West generating further investment of £1.5 million in the region. These projects will promote 50 new jobs and contribute approximately £700,000 to the local economy through annual salaries.

Increasing the number of new business starts is another key source of job creation and, through partnerships with local stakeholders, Invest NI is also actively promoting enterprise and business start-ups in the area. Since the Agency was established in 2002, 574 new businesses have been assisted in the East Londonderry constituency. These new businesses are forecast to create over 700 additional jobs.

The first phase of the North West Action Plan has been successfully delivered. This has resulted in additional total investment in the area of over £60 million. The second phase of the plan is currently being prepared and we will build on the success of phase 1, working with a wide range of interests, to further increase employment opportunities in the area.

The Department for Employment and Learning will support employers who are expanding their work force or creating new jobs by providing job brokering services and suitable training programmes where appropriate. The Department will also provide advice and support for all employees who lose their jobs as a result of redundancy. Staff from the local jobs and benefits office will provide advice on alternative job opportunities and access to training courses and will also ensure that those who have lost their jobs are able to access advice on a range of other issues such as benefits and taxation.

Ministerial Travel

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on how many occasions since 7 July he has used the London Underground in connection with his official duties. [35331]

Mr. Hain: I must apologise to the hon. Member for the delay in responding, owing to an administrative error with the Department. Steps have been taken to prevent a recurrence.

I have used the London Underground but not in connection with any of my official duties.

Personal Protection Weapons

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans there are to re-possess on-loan personal protection weapons in Northern Ireland. [68983]

Paul Goggins: The Chief Constable plans to withdraw on-loan personal protection weapons as the current firearm certificates held in respect of each of them expires. Those who continue to be authorised to possess a personal protection weapon will then be required to purchase their own firearm.

The Army state that Army Department PPWs issued to army personnel will be withdrawn from PPW holders on or before their last day of service. There is currently under way a review to determine whether the circumstances still remain extant for each of the present PPW holders to retain their weapons.

Prison Service staff who have been issued with a PPW under the General Threat Due to Occupation category will in future be considered under the Specific Threat Criteria when their Firearms Certificate falls due for renewal.

Police

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the original projected cost was of the police training college in Northern Ireland; and what the estimated final cost is. [69463]

Paul Goggins: The original outline business case estimated a cost of £74.6 million for construction of the college. With professional fees and land costs, this gave a total projected cost in the 2002 outline business case of £102.9 million. The 2005 outline business case estimated the cost, on the basis of prices at the fourth quarter of 2006, at £134.15 million. This business case has yet to be considered at a meeting of the project board.

Costs increased between 2002 and 2005 due to inflation, security requirements associated with the site and new requirements associated with simulated training areas.

The Government have advised the policing board and PSNI that it will make available £90 million for the college.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on recruitment to the Police Service of Northern Ireland. [65306]

Paul Goggins: In 1998 when the Patten Commission was conducting its investigation, only 8.3 per cent. of regular officers were from the Roman Catholic community. In less than five years, under the temporary 50:50 provisions Catholic composition among regular officers has risen to 19.68 per cent. with a total of 2,219 recruits having been selected for appointment on a 50:50 basis.

Our goal is to increase Catholic representation to 30 per cent. by 2010-11; the date envisaged by Patten to achieve this aim. The Government recognise that 50:50 recruitment is an exceptional means to addressing an exceptional problem and we firmly believe that these temporary provisions are justified to rectify an acute historical imbalance in the composition of the Police Service in Northern Ireland. These exceptional measures are reviewed every three years, with the next, and hopefully final, such review due later this year. While we envisage that the provisions will be renewed in March 2007, this will be subject to detailed review of the policy, extensive consultation, and debate in both houses. If the 50:50 provisions were not in place then it would not be possible to achieve our 30 per cent. target by 2010-11. I am pleased to say that we are very much on target to reach this goal with a further interim target of 23.5 per cent. set for March 2008.

In the first eight competitions there were over 28,000 applications from non-Catholics, of which 541 will have been rejected directly as a result of these temporary provisions. In other words less than 2 per cent. of all non-Catholic applicants will have been rejected as a direct result of the 50:50 provision.

Although the Patten Report focused on the imbalance between the number of Catholics and Protestants in the composition of the Police Service, it rightly recognised the importance of gender and ethnic minority representation. It is notable that female composition has risen from 13 per cent. to 20.42 per cent. and the ethnic minority background composition compares favourably with the overall level of the working age ethnic minority population in Northern Ireland and continues to rise.

In terms of the steps taken to recruit police officers, the oversight commissioner has commented that the advertising programme has been both imaginative and assiduous. It has varied between competitions, but has included press, television, billboard, cinema and online advertising, all designed to reach groups currently under-represented in the Police Service.

The responses from all communities have been extremely positive and the results have exceeded expectations. The latest campaign (10) saw the highest number of applications yet, with 7,691 applications competing for 220 places. 37 per cent. of these applications were from the Catholic community which is the highest rate to date and the number of ethnic minority applications doubled.

In addition to a large number of Northern Ireland applicants, applications have been received from Great Britain and the Republic of Ireland, as well as from a number of other countries.

Security Forces (Republic of Ireland)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on how many occasions security forces from the Republic of Ireland have crossed into Northern Ireland while on operation (a) with and (b) without the consent of UK authorities in each of the last 10 years. [70452]

Paul Goggins: The police service of Northern Ireland continue to have a good operational relationship with both the military and 'an garda siochana' in the Republic of Ireland. This relationship has involved a number of operations in which officers have crossed into Northern Ireland with the consent of UK authorities to frustrate and detect criminality. It would not be possible to quantify the number of occasions during which this has occurred in the last 10 years.

PSNI is not aware of any occasions during which operations from the Republic of Ireland have crossed into Northern Ireland without consent.

Staff Surveys

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many staff surveys have been conducted in (a) each department in Northern Ireland and (b) his Department in each of the last three years. [70491]

Mr. Hanson: The following table details the number of staff surveys undertaken by each of the 11 NICS core departments and the Northern Ireland Office during the last three years. The information has been provided on a financial year basis.

The information covers surveys undertaken at an NICS-wide, departmental, directorate, divisional and branch level unless where indicated otherwise.

Department	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06
DARD	8	9	9

Sustainable Development Strategy

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he will publish the Implementation Plan for the Sustainable Development Strategy for Northern Ireland. [70947]

Mr. Hanson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland launched the Sustainable Development Strategy on 9 May and also announced a transfer of responsibility for the Strategy to the Office of the First Minister and Deputy First Minister to place sustainable development policy at the heart of Government. I intend to publish the initial Implementation Plan as soon as possible.

DEFENCE

Aircraft

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many helicopters of each type (a) have and (b) have not been fitted with fuel tank protection, broken down by service; and if he will make a statement. [71154]

Mr. Ingram: All helicopters have some degree of fuel tank protection. Precise details of the specific fuel tank protection measures employed on particular MOD helicopter fleets are being withheld, because their disclosure could prejudice the safety of our Armed Forces.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Army aviation helicopters had full nuclear, biological and chemical protection (a) on the last date for which figures are available and (b) in 1997. [48777]

Mr. Ingram: It is not possible to protect Army helicopter airframes against nuclear, biological and chemical (NBC) contamination. However, any aircrew that operate these airframes in a NBC environment are afforded NBC protection through individual protective equipment and specialist aircrew assemblies which are not integral to the airframes themselves.

Conscientious Objectors

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what remuneration the six members of the advisory committee on conscientious objectors have received in each of the last five years. [71504]

Des Browne: As the committee has not convened in the last five years, the six members have received no remuneration.

Departmental Procurement

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he plans to publish the findings of his Department's review of the extent to which current processes and organisational constructs support, encourage, hinder and obstruct the delivery of excellence in acquisition; and if he will make a statement. [71482]

Mr. Ingram: The hon. Member refers to the Enabling Acquisition Change Review. It is our intention to publish the outcome of that review and to make a statement at that time.

Departmental Publications

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the Answer of 8 May 2006, Official Report, column 29W, on departmental publications, (1) if he will place in the Library copies of The Mole issued since 1 January 2005; [70336]

(2) if he will place in the Library the (a) latest edition of The Mole and (b) final edition of Compass. [72149]

Mr. Watson [holding answer 18 May 2006]: I will make arrangements for redacted copies to be placed in the Library of the House as soon as practicable.

Elbit

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he made of the ethical credentials of Elbit prior to awarding the UK Watchkeeper contract to the company. [71498]

Mr. Ingram: None. The contract for the demonstration and manufacture phase of the Watchkeeper programme was awarded to Thales UK in July 2005. Elbit is a sub-contractor selected by Thales UK for the supply of the air vehicle. The company is also a partner with Thales UK in a joint venture to provide major subsystems for Watchkeeper, also through a sub-contract let and managed by Thales UK.

Helicopter Search and Rescue

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to the written statement of 9 May 2006, Official Report, columns 12-14WS, on helicopter search and rescue, what assessment he has made of the cost implications of the new arrangements for the helicopter search and rescue service. [72379]

Mr. Ingram: As part of the procurement strategy assessment, an investment appraisal was conducted, which considered the full range of options available. The results were scrutinised by both the MOD and the Department for Transport (DfT) and it was concluded that a private finance initiative is likely to offer the best value for money and strategic fit for the future UK search and rescue helicopter capability.

Iraq

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what reasons the head of British forces in Iraq wears US Army rank insignia; and if he will make a statement. [70099]

Mr. Ingram: Senior Commanders in Iraq wear US rank insignia (stars) in addition to their standard rank insignia to assist Coalition and Iraqi partners to identify their position and equivalent rank. This is particularly useful for those coalition Commanders who work in, and regularly visit, Multi National Force (MNF) Headquarters. In addition, the wearing of rank stars aids interaction with Iraqi military hierarchy and politicians—all of whom understand the star structure.

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate has been made of the number of non-state militia operating in (a) Al Basra, (b) Al Muthanna, (c) Dhi Qar and (d) Maysan province in Iraq. [70934]

Des Browne: Two main militias are known to operate in Multi-National Division (South-East): these are SCIRI's Badr Organisation and Muqtada al-Sadr's Jaysh al-Mahdi (JAM), each with a significant following. There are a number of other militia groups with much smaller membership and influence.

Iraq/Afghanistan

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the technical capability of the weapons being used by insurgents against coalition forces in (a) Iraq and (b) Afghanistan; and if he will make a statement. [71908]

Des Browne: Coalition forces continuously monitor and assess the full range of weapons used by insurgents in both Iraq and Afghanistan. Our assessments, including predictions of how the threat might evolve, influence the conduct of military operations as well as equipment countermeasures.

Project Delivery Skills

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of levels of project delivery skills within his Department. [71491]

Mr. Ingram: The December 2005 defence industrial strategy (DIS) white paper recognised the need to address shortages of project, programme management and acquisition leadership skills. Seven specific skills areas within the acquisition organisations have been identified for attention; leadership, programme management, project management, commercial management, procurement, logistics, science and technology management and resource management. senior professionals have been appointed as 'skills champions' for each of these areas and will undertake an assessment of the levels of skills currently available in these areas. Their work will include an assessment of skills shortfalls linked directly to MOD's business needs, and of the likely causes of shortfalls, including problems relating to recruitment, retention and development. This work will be completed by the end of May 2006 and will form the basis of urgent action to train and develop our workforce.

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Departmental Estate

Mr. Amess: To ask the Leader of the House what (a) land and (b) property his Department (i) leases and (ii) leased in (A) 1979, (B) 1983, (C) 1987, (D) 1992 and (E) 1997 in (1) the Southend West constituency, (2) Essex, (3) Hertfordshire and (4) the Metropolitan Police area of London. [72101]

Mr. Straw: None. During the periods mentioned, the Office of the Leader of the House of Commons occupied space in the Metropolitan Police area of London belonging to the Cabinet Office, under a Memorandum of Terms of Occupation.

The Office of the Leader of the House of Commons was not responsible for the lease of this building.

Joint Committees

Mr. Amess: To ask the Leader of the House if he will make it his policy not to table a motion for a Joint Committee on a draft Bill until the draft Bill has been published; and if he will make a statement. [71978]

Mr. Straw: Motions to establish a Joint Committee on a draft Bill are occasionally tabled ahead of the publication of the draft Bill in cases where it is understood that this would assist the Committee. It has been indicated in the past that Joint Committees have found it helpful to have been established ahead of the publication of the draft Bill, to enable them to undertake preparatory work. I refer the hon. Member to paragraph 35 of the First Report of the Liaison Committee of session 2004-05 (HC 419).

Parliamentary Recalls

Mr. Amess: To ask the Leader of the House on which occasions the House has been recalled in each session since 1976; and for what reason the House was recalled in each case. [72452]

Mr. Straw: Recalls of the House, under what is now Standing Order No. 13, since 1976 have been as follows:

	Occasion
2002
24 September	Iraq and Weapons of Mass Destruction
3 April	Death of Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth the Queen Mother
2001
14 September	International terrorism and attacks in the USA
4 October
8 October
1998
2-3 September	Omagh Bomb: Criminal Justice (Terrorism and Conspiracy) Bill
1995

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Information Technology

Chris Huhne: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission how much was spent on information technology (IT) sourced from outside the House in each of the last five years; who is responsible for such projects in the House service; and what IT (a) expertise and (b) qualifications they possess. [71765]

Nick Harvey: The cash expenditure from the administration estimate on externally-sourced IT equipment purchase and maintenance, and corporate system development during the last four years has been:

£000

	2002-03	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06
IT equipment	2,657	2,554	639	1,150
IT maintenance	1,995	1,955	2,022	3,542
Software	467	431	683	65
System development	2,216	3,421	4,989	3,632
Total	7,335	8,360	8,333	8,389

Figures for 2001-02 are not readily available following the replacement of the financial accounting systems in October 2003.

The Commission is not responsible for expenditure on Members' IT equipment. However, I understand that the cash costs of this have been:

	Members' IT equipment (£000)
2002-03	1,230
2003-04	792
2004-05	725
2005-06	2,094

Prior to 2006 responsibility for information technology projects rested with the particular Department concerned. Cross-departmental projects, or projects which involved both Houses, were managed by projects boards established by the Board of Management. The project boards used external expertise to advise on and support the projects, and the procurement of this expertise was subject to a tender process for each project. Overall supervision was provided by a board, including Members with extensive experience in IT project management.

Since January 2006, a single service (PICT) has been established to manage IT projects and service contracts for both Houses. Project activity will be supervised by the management boards of both Houses through a joint board.

Parliamentary ICT staff are given appropriate training and a number have relevant qualifications, though details of these are not held centrally. PICT is currently in the process of adopting an approach to staff competence, training and development pioneered by the British Computer Society.

Meat and Poultry

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission which company supplies the House with meat and poultry; and what steps are taken to ensure that its chickens are not fed on soya grown in the Amazon rainforest (a) on illegally deforested land and (b) with use of slavery. [72330]

Nick Harvey: The Refreshment Department retains three suppliers of fresh meat and poultry products: Billfields Food Co Ltd., Nigel Fredericks Catering Butchers and Russell Hume Ltd. Neither Nigel Fredericks nor Russell Hume supply soya-fed chicken to the House of Commons. The Billfields Food Company is unable to guarantee that chickens supplied to the House of Commons are not reared on feeds containing soya, nor are they able to give an absolute assurance about the region of origin of soya that may be present in the animal feeds used by their suppliers.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission what the cost to the House was of processing written questions in each of the last three years. [72544]

Nick Harvey: Readily available printing and publishing costs cover both oral and written questions. We estimate the part of these costs attributable to written questions in each of the last three years to have been:

2003-04	1,620,900
2004-05	1,350,300
2005-06	1,463,900

This does not include the costs of electronic publishing, which cannot easily be disaggregated.

Staff costs for 2005-06 are estimated at £841,900, on the basis of the proportion of time spent on written questions by the staff involved, using 2005-06 pay rates at the midpoint of each scale, including employer's national insurance contributions and employer's pension contributions. Costs of accommodation, lighting, heating, etc. are not included. Estimates of staff costs for earlier years could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

This gives a total for 2005-06 of £2,305,800. This does not include the subsequent printing of the answers in the Official Report, indexing and entering on databases, nor the costs to the House of Commons Service of answering written questions addressed to me, representing the Commission.

Private Sector Fund Recipients

Chris Huhne: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission if he will list the 10 non-public sector entities that have received the largest total sum of payments from the House in each of the last five years. [71767]

Nick Harvey: Details of individual financial transactions are only retained for the last three years. The 10 non-public sector entities that have received the largest total sum of payments since 2003-04 are:

2003-04	£ £000
The Stationery Office	10,147

Vote Office Print Unit

Mr. Amess: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission what the retail price per issue was of (a) the daily, (b) the weekly and (c) the bound edition of the Official Report in each year since 1988; and how many copies were sold. [71972]

Nick Harvey: Pricing and sales of House of Lords publications are not a matter for the Commission. Pricing and sales of House of Commons publications became a matter for the Commission only in November 1996, when the Stationery Office was privatised. Complete records of copies sold are available only back to 1999. The price and sales information available for the publications requested is as follows:

Official Report: Daily Part

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Bangladesh

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what measures he is taking to assist Bangladesh in tackling arsenic poisoning in its water supply. [72501]

Mr. Thomas: Arsenic contamination in Bangladesh's water supply is naturally occurring, and mainly affects shallow tube wells. DFID is currently providing £1 million to the Government of Bangladesh's (GoB) Arsenic Policy Support Unit to ensure that arsenic contamination is addressed as part of the GoB's safe drinking water policy. A new programme is being developed in conjunction with the GoB and the World Bank to prepare a groundwater management strategy, which will promote and enable greater use of deep tube wells which are uncontaminated by arsenic.

In addition, DFID is providing £15 million to the Advancing Sustainable Environmental Health (ASEH) programme in Bangladesh, implemented by WaterAid. ASEH has provided a rigorous and effective system for testing and monitoring arsenic in all new groundwater supplies provided since 2002. ASEH also provides information and support to enable communities to access arsenic free water supplies.

DFID is also planning to contribute up to £40 million to the GoB/UNICEF Sanitation, Hygiene, Education and Water Supply—Bangladesh (SHEWA-B) programme. SHEWA-B includes a significant arsenic mitigation component, and will target almost 4,000 villages (6,400,000 people) where over 80 per cent. of tube wells are affected.

Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the extent to which the sixth round of grants by the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria will receive adequate funding from the international community. [72514]

Mr. Thomas: The Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria has estimated that it will need approximately US$1 billion for round six. Currently only US$46 million is available. The Global Fund needs significantly more funding from existing and potential donors to ensure that the sixth round of new grants is approved and fully funded in 2006. This will be a challenge for the Global Fund. The UK will continue to work with the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria to encourage other donors including the EU, the private sector and oil rich countries to increase their support to the Global Fund.

The UK provides very generous support to the Global Fund. We doubled our pledge for 2006 and 2007 to £100 million in each year. The Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria is only one part of the UK's contribution to tackling AIDS. We are committed to spend at least £1.5 billion between 2005-06 and 2007-08 on the global AIDS response.

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps his Department is taking to encourage (a) other countries and (b) private sector donors to contribute funding to the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria. [72515]

Mr. Thomas: The UK strongly supports the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria and has committed £359 million to the fund for 2002-08, including £100 million for 2006 and the same for 2007. The UK is meeting its "fair share" of support to the Global Fund and we need to ensure that other donors including the private sector contribute their "fair share".

We are encouraging other donors in our bilateral discussions to contribute to the Global Fund. We will continue to lobby the G8 for extra funds. We are also encouraging the G8 Finance Ministers meeting in June to take stock of existing Global Fund commitments in order to agree additional finance for 2006 and 2007 at the St. Petersburg Summit. We will also continue using our influence with the private sector, Oil Rich States and the EC.

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will increase his Department's contribution to the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria. [72516]

Mr. Thomas: The UK provided very generous support to the Global Fund Replenishment in 2005 and has doubled its pledge for 2006 and 2007 to £100 million in each year. This means that our overall share of support for the Global Fund at around 5.1 per cent. is consistent with our support over the 2001-05 period. The UK is meeting its "fair share" and other donors need to do the same; we are encouraging them to do so.

The UK has no further plans at the moment to increase its contribution to the Global Fund. The Global Fund is only one part of our contribution to tackling AIDS; the UK accounted for 20 per cent. of all direct bilateral donor commitments to the fight against AIDS in 2004[1]. We are committed to spend at least £1.5 billion on the global AIDS response in the three years from 2005-06 to 2007-08. Our direct support goes to 39 different countries.

Home Working

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many people in his Department have been enabled to work from home in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [67996]

Mr. Thomas: DFID does not keep records of the number of home workers.

However, DFID operates a 'one machine' policy under which each member of staff elects to be equipped with either a desktop computer or, subject to the approval of their Head of Department, a laptop computer. The laptop option enables staff to work from home or at other remote locations while travelling on behalf of the Department. At 31 March, 1,678 staff had been issued with laptops.

DFID is committed to improving work/life balance, values diversity and accommodates a wide range of different work patterns including the use of home working. DFID's policy is set out both in the Staff Handbook, which is available to all staff electronically, and in a booklet "Flexible Working", which is given to staff on their arrival.

Information Technology

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the (a) originally estimated, (b) most recently estimated and (c) outturn cost was in each of the five largest information technology contracts agreed with outside suppliers over the last five years. [71769]

Mr. Thomas: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Chipping Barnet (Mrs. Villiers) on 20 January 2006, Official Report, column 1642W, for the figures for the three largest IT projects over the last five years.

DFID has also let a number of small IT related contracts. However, our central records do not distinguish IT contracts, so provision of details for these contracts would incur disproportionate costs.

Millennium Development Goals

Mark Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps his Department is taking to ensure that the millennium development goal for universal primary education is met by 2015. [72376]

Mr. Thomas: DFID plans to spend £1.4 billion on education from 2005-08. This support helps countries to invest in teacher training and salaries, purchase text books and construct new schools and classrooms. DFID plans to further increase its support and aims to spend approximately £8.5 billion in support of education over the next ten years. This long-term commitment will provide governments with predictable funding against which they can prepare ambitious 10 year investment plans to achieve the millennium development goal (MDG) for universal primary education.

More information on DFID's work on universal primary education, including DFID's work in specific countries, is included in the DFID departmental report 2006 which is available in the Libraries of the House.

Overseas Development Agency

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the expenditure of the Overseas Development Agency was in (a) 2004 and (b) 2005, broken down by (i) staffing, (ii) accommodation and departmental offices, (iii) travel expenses, (iv) development project funding and (v) other expenditure. [69992]

Hilary Benn: DFID's expenditure for 2004-05 and 2005-06 was as follows:

£000

Expenditure	2004-05	2005-06
Staffing	93,700	101,096
Accommodation and departmental offices	27,851	28,842
Travel expenses	13,337	12,646
Bilateral funding	[1]2,145,000	[1]2,321,000
Other expenditure	[1]3,265,000 (less the above)	[1]3,750,000 (less the above)

[1] Rounded to the nearest million.

Notes:

1. Staff costs include wages and salaries, social security costs and other pension costs for permanently employed staff, Ministers, special advisers and "other", which include costs for seconded officers and those on fixed term contracts. The figures for 2005-06 are provisional, as final outturn figures are not yet available.
2. Accommodation and departmental office costs include rent, rates utilities and maintenance costs.
3. The figures for travel reflect all domestic and overseas travel for Ministers, advisers and officials, which include the costs of accommodation and subsistence.
4. Bilateral funding includes all forms of direct assistance. The 2005-06 figures are provisional, as final outturn figures are not yet available.
5. Other spend represents both administration costs and programme costs, not covered by the previous headings, examples of which would be staff training—on the administration expenditure and multilateral contributions on programme expenditure.

Private Office Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what percentage of his private office staff is (a) male, (b) female and (c) disabled. [69021]

Mr. Thomas: The following table shows the percentage of current DFID private office staff by gender and those who had declared a disability. Declaration of a disability is voluntary.

	Number
Total	8
Males	2
Male (percentage)	25
Females	6
Female (percentage)	75
Staff with declared disability	0

Protectionism

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what progress has been made in reducing the impact of protectionist trade policies on poor countries; and if he will make a statement. [69532]

Mr. Thomas: In recent years there has been a good deal of progress in reducing protectionist trade policies which impact on poor countries. Within the EU for example, agricultural import tariffs declined by an average of 36 per cent. between 1995 and 2000. Our current projections are that once the reforms to the Common Agricultural Policy agreed in 2003 have worked through, EU reliance on export subsidies will have reduced by approximately 65 per cent. compared with 1997.

But there is still much to be done outside the EU as well as within, which is why the UK supports an ambitious outcome to the current round of World Trade Organisation (WTO) negotiations in areas such as agriculture, industrial products and services, with meaningful special and differential treatment for developing countries built in. It also includes the elimination of export subsidies and other equivalent measures by 2013, which was agreed at the Hong Kong ministerial meeting in December. Time is running out for such an ambitious outcome to the current WTO negotiations, and discussions between the key players have intensified since the Hong Kong meeting to try to narrow the gaps that still remain, and reach a consensus on a balanced package of agreements across the main negotiating areas.

Tsunami Evaluation Coalition

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development when the Tsunami Evaluation Coalition's report will be published. [71542]

Mr. Thomas: The Tsunami Evaluation Coalition, a group of UN relief agencies, non-government organisations, the Red Cross/Red Crescent movement and other donors, will publish its report on 14 July 2006, in both London and Geneva.

TRANSPORT

Channel Tunnel

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent discussions he has had with (a) the French police, (b) Kent police and (c) Eurotunnel regarding security in the channel tunnel. [72353]

Derek Twigg: The Secretary of State has not had reason to discuss security issues with any of the named parties recently. However, Department for Transport officials meet with these organisations regularly at various fora including the Intergovernmental Commission, its Joint Security Committee, the channel tunnel operational sub-group of the National Rail Security Committee and the Multi-Agency Threat and Risk Assessment (MATRA) group at Eurotunnel. Officials also have regular contact and discussions in the course of routine security monitoring activities.

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what security equipment is in place to scan (a) freight traffic and (b) passengers on Eurotunnel. [72355]

Derek Twigg: While I cannot publicly disclose the details of the security equipment, or how it is deployed at the channel tunnel, to avoid its potential compromise, I can confirm that, among other measures, x-ray equipment and explosive detection technology is in place to screen freight at the Eurotunnel site at Cheriton. A range of security measures is in place in respect of passengers, their luggage, and their vehicles including explosive trace detection, manual searching and under-vehicle video.

Consultants

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the relationship between his Department's expenditure on external consultants and efficiency gains; and if he will make a statement. [71428]

Gillian Merron [holding answer 17 May 2006]: External consultants have only been used in support of the Department's efficiency programme to provide expertise that is not available in-house. The use of external consultants is assessed on a case by case basis in terms of the value that can be added by their skills and expertise and the potential benefits.

Cycling

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps his Department is taking to ensure that all children have the opportunity to undertake the cycle proficiency training scheme and test. [71828]

Derek Twigg: The responsibility for delivering cycle training in schools rests with individual local highway authorities.

We have with the help of over 20 road safety and cycling organisations including ROSPA, the CTC, local authorities and Cycling England developed an improved new child cycle training standard to replace the old style cycle proficiency test.

To support the new standard we have through our advisory body Cycling England awarded over £1 million to support capacity building in cycle training. Grants and bursaries are available for trainers and training centres to teach the new standards together with a national training helpline.

Cycling England is also funding jointly with the bicycle industry cycle training through their 'Bike It' initiative which delivers additional funding for cycle training, cycle parking at schools and helps schools implement their school travel plans on cycling.

Lamp Posts

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many lamp posts on motorways and trunk roads in each region of England have reached the end of their recommended lifespan. [71994]

Dr. Ladyman: The number of lamp posts on motorways and trunk roads, for which the Highways Agency (HA) is responsible, that have reached the end of their recommended lifespan, is given in the following table:

Region	Number
North	5,326
West Midlands	3,296
East and East Midlands	5,266
South West	1,270
South East	9,021

The numbers contained in the table are as accurate as possible.

Further details are contained in a table which has been placed in the House of Commons Library.

It should be noted that where a lighting column is beyond its estimated lifespan it does not necessarily mean that it is dangerous. By using careful maintenance, the practical life of a column can be extended. The HA employs a robust maintenance strategy.

M60

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress has been made in resolving the flooding problems on the M60 motorway between Denton and Hollinwood, Oldham. [72650]

Dr. Ladyman: The Highways Agency's initial works pilot to re-profile a section of the affected carriageway to improve surface water drainage was originally planned for spring 2006. The design is currently being finalised, and to avoid conflict with other works, this work is now programmed for summer 2006, with the aim of undertaking the remaining work in 2007.

Manchester Metrolink

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to make an announcement concerning the funding for the Manchester Metrolink extension to Ashton-Under-Lyne. [72653]

Derek Twigg: An announcement will be made in due course, once we have completed our consideration of Greater Manchester Passenger Transport Executive's business case.

Milton Keynes South Midlands Growth Area

Peter Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment has been made by (a) his Department and (b) the Highways Agency of (i) projected traffic volumes into and out of the West Midlands and (ii) the improvements that would be needed as a consequence of the development of the Milton Keynes South Midlands growth area. [72984]

Dr. Ladyman: The Highways Agency has commissioned consultants to study the future capacity and operational performance of the M6 between junction 4 and the M1 at junction 19, and the A46 between junction 2 of M6 and the A46/A45 Tollbar End junction to the East of Coventry. The anticipated traffic growth resulting from the additional development expected in the Milton Keynes South Midlands growth area will be taken into account in the traffic modelling for this scheme.

Peter Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will improve junction 19 of the M1 to improve traffic flows between the Milton Keynes South Midlands growth area and the West Midlands region. [73066]

Dr. Ladyman: A scheme to improve junction 19 of the M1 was incorporated into the Government's Targeted Programme of Improvements [TPI] in February 2003.

The improvement scheme will allow for all traffic movements to and from the M1, M6 and A14, by providing an elevated four level junction. The improvement will reduce congestion, long tailbacks and accident risks on all three routes.

Subject to funding and the successful completion of statutory procedures, construction is programmed to start in late 2007/early 2008 with completion in 2010.

Peter Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what local transport infrastructure improvements are being considered in consequence of an enlarged travel to work area for the Milton Keynes South Midlands growth area as indicated in its development plans. [73067]

Dr. Ladyman: The Milton Keynes South Midlands Sub Regional Strategy, published in March 2005, provides strategic guidance on the scale, location and timing of development and associated transport infrastructure to 2021. It is for local authorities in the growth area (and on its boundaries) to consider and bring forward proposals for local transport infrastructure through their Local Transport Plans. Those plans should be informed by the Sub-Regional Strategy.

Motoring Revenues

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimates he has made of the total revenue from (a) motoring taxes, (b) road tolls and (c) fees paid to the Government by motorists in each of the past 10 years. [72082]

Dr. Ladyman: On (a), motoring taxes are a matter for the Chancellor.

On (b), the Government only receive income from one undertaking—the Dartford-Thurrock River Crossing. Income from tolls at other statutory tolled undertakings is retained by the operator. For information about the revenue from the Dartford-Thurrock River Crossing, I refer to the answers given to the hon. Members for Leicester East (Keith Vaz) on 14 February 2006, Official Report, column 1884W and Gravesham (Mr. Holloway) on 20 April 2006, Official Report, columns 752-53W.

On (c), figures for fee income are set out in the following table.

£ million

Service	1996-97	1997-98	1998-99	1999-2000	2000-01	2001-02	2002-03	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06[1]

[1] Provisional.

Notes:

1. From 1990-2000 the driving licence fee includes duplicate licence fees.
2. From 2003-04 the vehicle licence fee includes the fee for duplicate registration documents.
3. Motorcycle compulsory basic training figures for 1996-97 are estimates because fee income was not recorded separately for that year.

Network Rail

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) the relationship is between Network Rail Infrastructure Finance and Network Rail Infrastructure Limited; [72468]

(2) how much of the debt issuance programme of Network Rail Infrastructure Finance has been (a) authorised and (b) issued or drawn down; [72469]

(3) what the relationship is between Network Rail and Network Rail Infrastructure Finance (NRIF); whether NRIF is a subsidiary of Network Rail; and how much of NRIF is owned by Network Rail; [72470]

(4) what the total value is of property assets owned by Network Rail. [72471]

Derek Twigg: These questions are for Network Rail and I have asked them to reply directly to the hon. Member.

Railways

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will examine the merits of options for introducing a rail discount scheme for people without cars. [71894]

Derek Twigg: There are a number of discount schemes already offered on rail: the Young Person's, Senior, Family and Disabled railcards and, in the South East, the Network Card. There are also group travel discounts available for some journeys. There are no specific plans to examine further schemes at this stage.

Road Pricing Policies (Greater Manchester)

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has had from (a) local authorities and (b) the passenger transport executive in Greater Manchester concerning (i) congestion charging and (ii) road pricing policies; and if he will make a statement. [72651]

Dr. Ladyman: In October 2005 the Association of Greater Manchester Authorities and the Greater Manchester Passenger Transport Authority and Executive applied to the Department for Transport for Transport

Innovation Fund development funding. The application was for funding to assist in the development of their corridor partnership approach and a demand management toolkit involving definition of the circumstances in which increasingly hard-edged measures, such as road pricing, will need to be deployed.

My right hon. Friend the former Secretary of State announced on 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 3WS, that the authorities of Greater Manchester were one of seven areas that had been awarded funding.

Road Safety

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many bridges on the strategic road network do not meet safety standards for the level of traffic they carry; and how many would not meet the standards at projected traffic levels for (a) 2016 and (b) 2026 levels. [71831]

Dr. Ladyman: There are no bridges on the strategic road network, for which the Highways Agency is responsible, that do not meet safety standards for the level of traffic they carry.

Bridges on the strategic road network are managed to safely carry loading from permissible vehicles covered by The Road Vehicles (Construction & Use) Regulations 1986 and The Road Vehicles (Authorised Weight) Regulations 1998. For a particular bridge, the traffic loading is derived by considering the effects of the most severe combination of permissible vehicles that it can accommodate. Currently, there are approximately 18 bridges on the strategic network with weight restrictions.

A regime of regular inspections, assessments and renewals is in place to ensure that bridges continue to safely accommodate the traffic on the network.

As there are no known proposals to increase permissible vehicle weights the traffic loading will be safe in the future.

Road Traffic Regulations

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the operation of the Road Traffic (Parking Adjudicators) (London) Regulations 1993; what recent representations he has received about the operation of these regulations; if he will place in the Library copies of such representations; and whether he has any plans (a) to amend and (b) to repeal these regulations. [69144]

Gillian Merron: Regulations to enact the parking provisions in part 6 of the Traffic Management Act 2004 will go to public consultation later this year. When those regulations are enacted the Road Traffic (Parking Adjudicators) (London) Regulations 1993 will be repealed. The Department expects to receive comments on the draft new regulations following the public consultation. The Department frequently receives letters from members of the public about the parking adjudication service but have received none recently that are specifically about these regulations.

Road Use

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the total combined mileage of (a) vehicles and (b) cars travelling on roads in the UK in each of the past 10 years. [72083]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department makes estimates for Great Britain only. Estimated mileages for each year from 1995 to 2004, the latest year available, were published in the annual statistical bulletin "Road Traffic Statistics: 2004". The bulletin was published on 7 July 2005 on the DfT website and a copy placed in the House of Commons Library.

PRIME MINISTER

Energy Review

Lynne Jones: To ask the Prime Minister what account he took of the DTI Energy Review, "Our Energy Challenge—Securing clean, affordable energy for the long term", in formulating the contents of his speech to the Confederation of British Industry on 16 May 2006. [72820]

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Prime Minister when he received the first draft of the Energy Review; and if he will make a statement. [73126]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Members to the press briefings given by my official spokesman on 16 and 17 May, copies of which are available on the No. 10 website.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

UK/Venezuelan Relations

12. David Taylor To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make a statement on UK-Venezuelan relations. [72688]

Mr. Hoon: We have an active relationship with Venezuela. We work together in several areas of shared interest, including counter-narcotics and energy. We also have an important commercial relationship. Venezuela is the third biggest market for the UK in Latin America. Our policy is to maintain constructive engagement; we have much to gain from working together.

Middle East

13. Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make a statement on the middle east peace process. [72689]

Dr. Howells: We welcome both Israeli Prime Minister Olmert's and Palestinian President Abbas' commitment to the Roadmap and negotiations. It is important that both sides take steps to move the peace process forward.

We remain committed to the principles of a negotiated solution based on the relevant Security Council resolutions and international law. We continue to work towards a just, viable and lasting peace.

The Government are extremely dismayed, however, by the recent spate of killings in what appears to be an escalating battle between Hamas and Fatah militias for control of the streets in Gaza. That kind of internecine conflict is the last thing the middle east peace process requires.

Iran

14. Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions she has had with the US about Iran. [72690]

Margaret Beckett: I discussed Iran's nuclear programme with my US, Russian, Chinese, French and German counterparts when we met in New York on 8 and 9 May. We agreed that it was essential that Iran should meet the requirements of the International Atomic Energy Agency Board and the Security Council, including fully suspending all enrichment-related and reprocessing activities. We will continue to work closely with our EU partners, the US, Russia, China and others to ensure that Iran meets its obligations.

17. Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she had on Iran with her US and EU counterparts during her recent visit to New York. [72693]

Margaret Beckett: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Cardiff, North (Mrs Julie Morgan) today (UIN 72690).

18. Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make a statement on the steps the UK is taking to ensure Iran does not acquire nuclear weapons. [72694]
